

DUE DATE SLIPGOVT. COLLEGE, LIBRARY*KOTA (Ra.)

Students can retain library books only for two weeks at the most.

BORROWER'S No.	DUE DATE	SIGNATURE

ALL INDIA REPORTER

[Registrar of Newspapers for India—R. N. 1753/57]

Editor: S. APPU RAO, B.A., B.L., ADVOCATE (Madras).

57]

1970 JUNE

[Part 678

CONTENTS

Commencement of Acts ...	1	Calcutta ...	225—272
Table Case Law ...	1	Delhi ...	113—128
Original Table ...	1—4	Gujarat ...	113—128
Select Index of Reports ...	4—42	Jammu & Kashmir ...	81—96
of Cases Overruled Reversed etc. ...	43—46	Kerala ...	129—160
Narrative Table ...	46—47	Madhya Pradesh ...	97—128
Annual ...	81—96	Madras ...	209—256
Supreme Court ...	801—1024	Manipur ...	33—48
U. S. Supreme Court ...	33—48	Mysore ...	145—160
Varanasi ...	305—352	Orissa ...	97—112
Andhra Pradesh ...	209—240	Patna ...	161—208
Assam & Nagaland ...	65—80	Punjab and Haryana ...	241—288
Bombay ...	193—240	Rajasthan ...	113—128
		Tripura ...	33—48

Published by The All India Reporter Ltd., Regd. Office—Medows House, Nagindas Master Road, Fort-BOMBAY.

Press for correspondence:—

All India Reporter Ltd., (Post Box No. 56), NAGPUR.

REPORTERS

Supreme Court of India

Shri Surjit Singh Chadha, Advocate,
Supreme Court of India.

Allahabad

Shri A. D. Prabhakar, M.A., LL.B., Advocate.

LUCKNOW BENCH

Shri Kashi Prasad Sakseena, M.A., LL.B., Advocate.

Andhra Pradesh

Shri P. Sitarama Raju, B.A., B.L., Advocate.

Shri M. Ranga Raju, B.A., B.L., Advocate.

Assam & Nagaland

Shri Nagendra Mohan Ganguly, Advocate, Gauhati.

Bombay

Shri K. J. Kale, B.A., LL.B., Advocate.

Calcutta

Shri Subodh Chandra Basak, M.A., LL.B., Advocate.

Shri H. N. Ghosh, M.A., LL.B., Bar-at-law.

Shri Aniya Lal Chatterji, Advocate.

Shri Gauri Prasad Mukherji, Advocate.

Shri Janendra Coomarr Dutt, Advocate,
Supreme Court of India.

Delhi

Shri Surjit Singh Chadha, Advocate,
Supreme Court of India.

HIMACHAL PRADESH BENCH

Shri A. C. Mehta, B.A., LL.B., D. G. P., Advocate, Supreme Court of India.

Goa

Shri Shridhar Tambe, Advocate.

Gujarat

Shri Damodar Khimchand Shah, B.Sc., LL.B., Advocate.

Jammu & Kashmir

JAMMU

Shri Bakshi Ishwar Singh, Advocate,
Supreme Court of India.

Kerala

Shri K. V. B. Shenoi, B.A., B.L., Advocate.

Shri E. A. Nayar, M.A., (Madr.), B.L., Hons. (Oxon), Bar-at-law.

Madhya Pradesh

A. — JABALPUR

Shri A. N. Mukherjee, Advocate.

B. — GWALIOR

Shri G. S. Garg, Advocate.

C. — INDORE

Shri M. P. Avadhooti, B.Sc., LL.B., Advocate.

Madras

Shri C. R. Krishna Rao, B.A., B.L., Advocate.

Manipur

Shri Kojam Bohini Kumar Singh, Advocate, Imphal.

Mysore

Shri G. S. Ullal, M.A., B.L., Advocate,
Supreme Court.

Shri Anant V. Albal, Advocate,
Supreme Court.

Orissa

Shri Jagat Bandhu Kar, B.A., B.L., Advocate.

Patna

Shri Subhi Kumar Mazumdar, Advocate.

Punjab and Haryana

Shri Brij Mohan Khanna, Advocate.

Rajasthan

Shri Manakmal Singhvi, Advocate.

Tripura

Shri Monoranjan Chaudhury, M.A., B.L.,
Advocate.

COMMENCEMENT OF AN ACT OF PARLIAMENT (or its provision)

Assam Reorganisation (Meghalaya) Act, 1969 (55 of 1969), S. 1 (2) — Appointment of date — All the provisions of the said Act (other than those which have already been brought into force) shall come into force on 2-4-1970. Gaz. of India, 24-3-1970, Pt. II-S 3 (i), Ext. p. 375.

Registration of Births and Deaths Act, 1969 (18 of 1969), S. 1 (3) — Appointed date under — Provisions of the said Act shall come into force on 1-4-1970 in the following areas, namely:— 1. The whole State of Assam except (i) the district of United Khasi and Jaintia Hills excluding the areas comprised within limits of Shillong Municipality and Shillong Cantonment; (ii) entire district of Garo Hills; (iii) entire district of United Miker and North Cachar Hills and (iv) entire district of Mizo Hills; and 2. The whole State of West Bengal, except, (i) the area comprised within limits of Calcutta Corporation; (ii) area comprised within limits of Howrah Municipality; (iii) Fort William; and (iv) area comprised within limits of Cantonments of Barrackpore, Lobong and Jalapabar. Gaz. of India, 25-3-1970, Pt. II-S. 3 (i), Ext. p. 377.

Rice-Milling Industry (Regulation) Amendment Act, 1968 (29 of 1968), S. 1 (3) — Appointed date under — Provisions of the said Act shall come into force on 1-5-1970. Gaz. of India, 4-4-1970, Pt. II-S. 3 (i), p. 1230

NOTABLE CASE LAW

Arbitration

1. Whether an award given under the Arbitration Act on a private reference requires registration under S. 17(1)(b) of the Registration Act, if the award effects partition of immovable property exceeding the value of Rs. 100/-? (Yes)

AIR 1970 SC 833

Constitutional Law

2. Whether a person against whom an enquiry is made by a Customs Officer and evidence collected under S. 171-A of the Sea Customs Act, 1878 is a person accused of any offence within the meaning of Art. 20(3) of the Constitution of India? (No)

AIR 1970 SC 940

Criminal Procedure Code

3. Whether the documents referred to in S. 173(4), Cr. P. C. can be made available to accused, when case is instituted on private complaint? (No)

AIR 1970 SC 962

Essential Commodities

4. If sugar damaged by fire is re-processed before release for sale, does it become 'fresh' sugar for sugar control legislation? (No)

AIR 1970 Delhi 122 (FB)

Essential Commodities (contd.)

5. If damaged sugar contains more than 90% sucrose, can the Central Govt. issue directions for its re-processing before releasing it under Sugar Control Legislation? (No)

AIR 1970 Delhi 122 (FB)

Evidence

6. Whether officer of Customs is a police officer within the meaning of S. 25 of the Evidence Act? (No)

AIR 1970 SC 941

Rent Control Legislation

7. Can the State Government under S. 7(F) of the U. P. (Temporary) Control of Rent & Eviction Act (3 of 1947) revoke permission to sue granted for eviction after suit for eviction has been instituted? (No)

AIR 1970 SC 971

Tenancy Laws

8. What is the effect of amendment of S. 38(7) of the Bombay Tenancy and Agricultural Lands (Vidarbha Region) Act, 1958 by Act 44 of 1963? Whether the word 'partition' in that section includes all kinds of partition? Is the decision in 1966 Mah LJ 289 good law? See Head Note.

AIR 1970 Bom. 232 (Pt. A) (FB)

NOMINAL TABLE

Accountant General, Kerala v. State of Kerala

Ker 158 (C N 26) (FB)

(June) 1970 Indexes/1

Administrator General of West Bengal v. Kumar Purnendu Nath Tagore

Cal 231

- Agra Electric Supply Co., Ltd.
v. Labour Court, Meerut
SC 806 (C N 171)
- Ahmed Sahib v. Commissioner of
Police, Madras
Mad 220 (C N 57)
- Alamohan Das v. State of West
Beogal
SC 863 (C N 187)
- Allauddin M. v. P. S. Lakshminarayanan
Mad 247 (C N 66)
- Amalgamated Electricity Co. Ltd.
v. Kutubuddin Rafesaheb Chancha
Mys 155 (C N 37)
- Amarjit Singh v. State
Punj 270 (C N 40)
- Amar Singh v. Jagdish
Punj 276 (C N 39)
- Arunachalam Asari S. v. Sivan
Perumal Asari
Mad 226 (C N 59)
- Ashoka Construction Co. v. Union of India
Assam 73 (C N 15)
- Assistant Collector of Customs,
Bombay v. L. R. Melwani
SC 962 (C N 193)
- B. M. Ramalingappa v. State of Mysore
Mys. 160 (C N 39)
- Ballabhdas Mathuradas Lakhani v
Municipal Committee, Malkapur
SC 1002 (C N 209)
- Barindra Kumar Chakraborty v.
Ramesh Chandra Dev
Tripura 35 (C N 7)
- Bhagwan Das v. Paras Nath
SC 971 (C N 198)
- Bhagwan Dass v. S. Rajdev Singh
SC 986 (C N 203)
- Bhondoo v. Udatoo
All 307 (C N 48)
- Bihar Co-operative Motor Vehicles
Insurance Society Ltd. v. Rameshwar Raut
Pat 172 (C N 20)
- Bikrama Singh v. State of U. P.
All 344 (C N 52) (FB)
- Brahma Suraiiah K. v. Lakshmi-narayana
SC 816 (C N 175)
- Brij Lal v. Tulsi
Delhi 116 (C N 27)
- Byrappa v. S. Mani
Mys 152 (C N 35)
- Chanambam Modhu Singh v.
Yunnam Ningthemjao Singh
Manipur 34 (C N 101)
- Chandrakant Ramrao v. Punde
Bom 221 (C N 33)
- Chandrasekharan J. v. G. Rosaline
Pushpamoni
Mad 211 (C N 55) (SB)
- Chintamani Das v. State
Orissa 100 (C N 37)
- Chitnis D. W. v. Asstt. Collector of Customs, Bombay: See SC 910
(C N 193)
- Clarence Brandenburg v. State of Ohio
USSC 45 (C N 7)
- Conugunta Subbarayudu v. Eluri
Brahmanandan
Andh Pra 211 (C N 31)
- Dar G. M. v. State
J & K 90 (C N 17)
- Dattatraya Shankarbhut v. Collector of Sholapur
SC 850 (C N 184)
- Dendendra Nath v. Dwijendra Nath
Cal 255 (C N 53)
- Delhi Cloth and General Mills Co.
Ltd. v. Workmen
SC 919 (C N 192)
- Dewan Singh v. Champat Singh
SC 967 (C N 196)
- Dharmiah P. v. Govt. A. P.
Andh Pra 236 (C N 36)
- Digambar Panda v. Additional
District Magistrate, Dhenkanal
Orissa 110 (C N 39)
- Dindayal v. Rajaram
SC 1019 (C N 213)
- Dnyanu Hariha v. State of Maharashtra
SC 979 (C N 200)
- East India Construction Co. (P)
Ltd. v. Union of India
Cal 243 (C N 49)
- Fatakin D. A. v. Asstt. Collector of Customs, Bombay: See SC 910
(C N 193)
- Fulzorla Dasi v. Tarubala Bose
Cal 240 (C N 47)
- Ganesh Dass Maha Singh v.
Kishan Chand
Punj 272 (C N 37)
- Ganga Prasad v. State of Bihar
SC 989 (C N 205)
- Garment Cleaning Works v.
D. M. Aney
Bom 209 (C N 36)
- George Cornelius A. v. Elizabeth
Dopit Samadanam
Mad 240 (C N 63)
- Gunwant Kaur v. Municipal Committee, Bhatinda
SC 802 (C N 170)
- Gurmukh Singh v. State of Punjab
Punj 282 (C N 41) (FB)
- Hajilal Mohammad Bidi Works,
Allahabad v. State of U.P.
All 330 (C N 51) (FB)
- Hardeep Singh Inder Singh v.
Dalip Kaur
Punj 284 (C N 42)
- Hardial Singh v. Director of Consolidation of Holdings, Punjab, Jullundur
Punj 261 (C N 35) (FB)
- Haribhau Shinde v. F. H. Lala
Industrial Tribunal, Bombay
Bom 213 (C N 37)
- Hari Sao v. State of Bihar
SC 843 (C N 182)
- Hindustan Construction Co. Ltd.
v. Assessing Authority
J & K 85 (C N 16)
- Imperial Tobacco Co. of India Ltd.
v. State of Bihar
Pat 193 (C N 31)
- Ishwari Khetan Sugar Mills Pvt.
Ltd. v. Union of India
Delhi 122 (C N 29) (FB)
- Jagannath Prasad v. Chandrawati
All 309 (C N 49) (FB)
- Jagat Chandra Marak v. Ulfat Ali
Bhuiya
Tripura 43 (C N 10)

- Jaykumar Jain v. Om Prakash
 Madh Pra 119 (C N 25)
- Jethmal Bothra v. Bherudhan Parakh
 Tripura 40 (C N 9)
- Joint Registrar of Co-operative Societies, Madras v. P. S. Raja-gopal Naidu SC 992 (C N 206)
- Joint Registrar of Co-operative Societies, Madras v. P. S. Raja-gopal Naidu Mad 212 (C N 56) (FB)
- Jyotish Chandra v. Meera
 Cal 266 (C N 54)
- Kacharu Baban v. State of Maharashtra Bom 205 (C N 35)
- Kamal Mukharji v. Union of India
 Cal 250 (C N 51)
- Kamath H. V. v. Gopal Swarup
 Pathak SC 819 (C N 176)
- Kame B. C. v. Nemi Chand Jain
 SC 981 (C N 201)
- Kantilal Takhatmal v. State
 Bom 225 (C N 39)
- Kapur Kaur v. Kishan Singh
 Punj 270 (C N 36)
- Kaushalya Devi v. K. L. Bansal
 SC 838 (C N 180)
- Keshab Chandra Das v. Sriram
 Chandra Das Assam 75 (C N 16)
- Khanna C. P. v. V. K. Kalghatgi
 Bom 201 (C N 34)
- Kotah Match Factory, Kotah v.
 State of Rajasthan Raj 118 (C N 28)
- Kurien P. M. v. P. S. Raghavan
 Ker 142 (C N 25)
- Laisangthem Chaoba Singh v.
 Thongam Ningol Yumnam
 Ongbi Ketuki Devi Manipur 47 (C N 14)
- Mackertich C. v. Steuart & Co., Ltd.
 SC 839 (C N 181)
- Madan Mohan Lal v. State of Punjab
 SC 1006 (C N 210)
- Madhava Nayak K. v. Popular
 Bank Ltd. Ker 131 (C N 23)
- Madhya Pradesh Industries Ltd. v.
 Income-tax Officer SC 1011 (C N 211)
- Mahi Singh v. Chunka
 Delhi 114 (C N 26)
- Mahomed Abdus Samad v. Mahboobunnisa Begum Andh Pra 210 (C N 30)
- Management, Fertilizer Corporation of India Ltd. v. Workmen
 SC 867 (C N 188)
- Managements of Tea Gardens of Assam v. Presiding Officer, Industrial Tribunal Assam,
 Gauhati Assam 70 (C N 14)
- Manjunatta George v. Government of Manipur Manipur 40 (C N 12)
- Manmool Bhutoria v. State of West Bengal Cal 253 (C N 52)
- Maturi Umamaheswara Rao v.
 Pendyala Venkatrayudu
 Andh Pra 225 (C N 34)
- Meenakshi Ammal v. Somasundara Nadar Mad 242 (C N 64)
- Mehta V. S. In re Andh Pra 234 (C N 35)
- Mohan Lal v. Mohun Ram
 SC 1022 (C N 214)
- Motibhai Fulabhai Patel and Co.
 v. R. Prasad, Collector of Central Excise, Baroda SC 829 (C N 178)
- Motor Workers Union v. Rayapwaddi Apparao Andh Pra 220 (C N 33)
- Muthuraj Koilpillai v. Esther
 Victoria Kannammal Mad 237 (C N 62)
- N. G. E. F. Ltd., Byappanahalli
 v. Industrial Tribunal Mys 149 (C N 34)
- Nainsingh v. Koonwarjee
 SC 997 (C N 207)
- Paras Ram v. Union of India
 Delhi 119 (C N 28)
- Pritish Kumar v. Prosanto Kumar
 Cal 236 (C N 46)
- Punamchand Ramlalji v. Asstt.
 Collector of Customs, Bombay: See
 SC 940 (C N 193)
- Punyananda Avadhut v. State
 Cal 241 (C N 48)
- Pushkar v. State of West Bengal
 SC 852 (C N 185)
- Pyarchand Kesarimal Porwal Bidi
 Factory v. Onkar Laxman Thenge
 SC 823 (C N 177)
- R. R. Engineering Co. v. Zila
 Parishad, Bareilly All 316 (C N 50) (FB)
- Rabindra Nath v. Calcutta Dock
 Labour Board Cal 227 (C N 43)
- Radhabai v. State of Maharashtra
 Bom 232 (C N 40) (FB)
- Radha Krishna v. Purnanand Sharma
 Manipur 37 (C N 11)
- Raghavareddi G. v. Government of A. P. Andh Pra 217 (C N 32)
- Rajpal Singh v. Jai Singh
 SC 1015 (C N 212)
- Ramanujam Press v. Regional
 Provident Fund Commissioner
 Madras Mad 224 (C N 58)
- Ramesh Chandra v. State of West Bengal SC 940 (C N 193)
- Ram Gopal v. Alladia SC 970 (C N 197)
- Ram Kirpal Bhagat v. State of Bihar
 SC 951 (C N 194)
- Ramnarayan v. State of Madhya
 Pradesh Madh Pra 102 (C N 23)
- Ramnarayan Dhan Singh v.
 Anandilal Ratanlal Mahajan
 Madh Pra 110 (C N 24) (FB)
- Ramnik Lal Kothari v. Government of India Pat 189 (C N 17)
- Ratanlal v. Regional Transport
 Authority, Bikaner Region
 Raj 125

Ratilal Shakarabhai v. State of Gujarat	SC 984 (C N 202)	Sudhir Kumar v. Commissioner of Police, Calcutta	SC 814 (C N 174)
Rukmini Raman Singh v. Herdeo Mandal	Pat 207 (C N 32)	Sukamal Kanti v. Shoulmari Ashram	Cal 248 (C N 50)
Samharu v. Dharamraj Pandey	All 350 (C N 53) (FB)	Sunder Lal v. State of Punjab	Punj 241 (C N 34) (FB)
Sangat Singh v. Ch. Perma Nand Bahl	SC 812 (C N 173)	Suranjan Kanjilal v. Malati Dutt	Cal 229 (C N 44)
Sanwermal Agarwalla v. Benoy Krishna Mukherjee	Pat 167 (C N 27)	Tarapore and Co., Madras v. M/s. V/O Tractoroexport Moscow	SC 891 (C N 190)
Saraswathamma v. Bhadramma	Mys 157 (C N 38)	Thomas K. C. v. R. L. Gadcock	Pat 163 (C N 26)
Saroj Chanda v. Union of India	Tripura 37 (C N 8)	Tilokchand Motichand v. Commissioner of Sales Tax, Bombay	SC 898 (C N 191)
Satish Kumar v. Surinder Kumar	SC 833 (C N 179)	Tipper Chand v. Matu Ram	Punj 273 (C N 38)
Second Gift Officer, Mangalore v. D. H. Hazareth	SC 993 (C N 208)	Tractoroexport Moscow v. Tarapore & Co., Madras; See SC 891 (C N 190).
Shashibhushan Prasad v. Babuaji Rai	SC 809 (C N 172)	Union of India v. Abdul Manaf	Manipur 44 (C N 13)
Sheik Ghulam v. State of Jammu and Kashmir	J & K 94 (C N 18)	Vallabh Das v. Dr. Madanlal	SC 937 (C N 204)
Siddalingappa M. v. T. Nataraj	Mys 154 (C N 36)	Varuvel Nadar M. v. A. Varuvel Nadar	Mad 232 (C N 60)
Siddanna Apparao Patil v. State of Maharashtra	SC 977 (C N 199)	Veeramal v. Krishnan	Mad 244 (C N 65)
Sobharam Jokhiram v. Union of India	Pat 162 (C N 29)	Vanguard Insurance Co. Ltd., Madras v. Chinnammal	Mad 236 (C N 61)
Somnath Berman v. Dr. S. P. Raju	SC 846 (C N 183)	Vora Mulla Taherali Mulla Akbaralli v. Manoranjan Barua	Guj 122 (C N 18)
South India Corporation (Agencies) Private Ltd., Madras v. State Trading Corporation of India Ltd., Cochin	Ker 138 (C N 24)	Workmen, Indian Leaf Tobacco Development Co., Ltd., Guntur v. Management of Indian Leaf Tobacco Development Co. Ltd., Guntur	SC 860 (C N 186)
Sridharan R. v. Commissioner of Wealth Tax, Madras	Mad 249 (C N 67)	Workmen of Fire Brigade Section of the Municipal Committee, Faridabad v. K. L. Gosain	Punj 287 (C N 43)
State v. Balaram Singh	Orissa 107 (C N 38)	Workmen of Shri Bajrang Jute Mills Ltd. v. Employers of Shri Bajrang Jute Mills Ltd.	SC 878 (C N 189)
State v. Shantilal Vallabhadas Pandya	Bom 240 (C N 41)	Zatia v. State of Assam	Assam 80 (C N 17)
State of Madhya Pradesh v. Tulsiram	Madh Pra 123 (C N 26)
State of Mysore v. Alexander Misquith	SC 1024 (C N 215)
State of West Bengal v. Kalyani Chowdhury	Cal 225 (C N 42)

SUBJECT INDEX

Andhra Pradesh Motor Vehicles Rules (1964)

—R. 195 (1) — Filing of application by aggrieved party beyond period of limitation does not fetter Government's power to act suo motu under S. 64-A of Motor Vehicles Act (1930) — See Motor Vehicles Act (1939), S. 64-A Andh Pra 220 (C N 33)

Andhra Pradesh Motor Vehicles Rules (1969)

—R. 212 (1) (iv) (a) — Grant of stage carriage permit — Applicant must have place of business at either terminus of

A. P. MOTOR VEHICLES RULES (contd.) the route applied for — Whether applicant has such place of business — Relevant date to be taken into consideration is date on which application is made—Rule does not contemplate that applicant should have a valid permit on date when application is considered by Regional Transport Authority — Writ Petn. No. 1732 of 1966, D/-1-12-1966 (A. P.) Reversed Andh Pra 217 A (C N 32)

Andhra Pradesh Public Employment (Requirement as to Residence) Rules, 1959 See under Civil Services.

Arbitration Act (10 of 1940)

—Ss. 8 (1) (b), 8 (1) (a), 9 and 20 — Arbitrator refusing to act — Appointment of two arbitrators by General Manager of Railway, as contemplated by arbitration agreement — After entering upon reference, refusal by one to continue as arbitrator — Agreement not providing that vacancy should not be filled in — Held, S. 8 (1) (b) was attracted and not S. 8 (1) (a), 9 or 20 — Court was competent to appoint arbitrator in vacancy caused and not General Manager. Cal 243 (C N 49)

—S. 9—Section does not apply to cases where arbitrators are not appointed by respective parties — See Arbitration Act (1940), S. 8 (1) (b) Cal 243 (C N 49)

—Ss. 13, 30 — Powers in making award — Failure to give reasons or mere error in decision — Not a ground for setting it aside Madh Pra 119 C (C N 25)

—Ss. 14, 17 and Sch. 1, R. 7 — Reference to arbitration by parties — Arbitration without intervention of Court — Award not made rule of Court—Binding effect on parties — Extent of — Private award effecting partition of immovable property worth more than Rs. 100 — Registration of award before making it rule of Court is necessary — AIR 1958 Pat 252 (FB) and AIR 1968 Punj and Har 204 (FB), Overruled — Registration Act (1908), S. 17 (1) (b) SC 833 (C N 179)

—Ss. 16, 30 — Power to remit award—Exercise of discretion by Court — Discretion is to be exercised on substantially same grounds as will justify setting aside of award — Award bad in toto, bad portion not severable from rest of it — One of parties apprehensive that arbitrator might not approach question with fresh mind — Discretion is to be exercised in favour of setting aside award rather than remit it Madh Pra 119 D (C N 25)

—S. 17 — Reference to arbitration by parties — Arbitration without intervention of Court — Award not made rule of Court — Binding effect on parties — Extent of—Private award effecting partition of immovable property worth more than Rs. 100 — Registration of award before making it rule of Court is necessary — See Arbitration Act (1940), S. 14 SC 833 (C N 179)

—S. 17 — Composite order — Court refusing to set aside award and also passing decree in terms of award — Appeal under S. 39 (1) (vi) is still maintainable — See Arbitration Act (1940), S. 39 Madh Pra 119 A (C N 5)

—S. 20 — Not applicable where reference has already commenced—See Arbitration Act (1940), S. 8 (1) (b) Cal 243 (C N 49)

—S. 30 — Misconduct of arbitrators — Arbitrators deciding dispute on their personal knowledge — Agreement between parties not empowering them to do so—Award vitiated SC 967 B (C N 196)

Arbitration Act (1940) (contd.)

—S. 30 — Powers in making award — Failure to give reasons or mere error in decision — Not a ground for setting it aside — See Arbitration Act (1940), S. 13 Madh Pra 119 C (C N 25)

—S. 30 — Power to remit award—Exercise of discretion by Court — Discretion is to be exercised on substantially same grounds as will justify setting aside of award — Award bad in toto, bad portion not severable from rest of it — One of parties apprehensive that arbitrator might not approach question with fresh mind — Discretion is to be exercised in favour of setting aside award rather than remit it—See Arbitration Act (1940), S. 16 Madh Pra 119 D (C N 25)

—S. 33 — Application under S. 33 need not be in any particular form Assam 73 (C N 15)

—Ss. 39, 17 — Composite order—Court refusing to set aside award and also passing decree in terms of award — Appeal under S. 39 (1) (vi) is still maintainable Madh Pra 119 A (C N 25)

—S. 41 (b) — Power and jurisdiction of Court to appoint receiver or to pass interim injunction Cal 255 (C N 53)

—Sch. 1, R. 7 — Reference to arbitration by parties — Arbitration without intervention of Court — Award not made rule of Court — Binding effect on parties—Private award effecting partition of immovable property worth more than Rs. 100—Registration of award before making it rule of Court is necessary — See Arbitration Act (1940), S. 14 SC 833 (C N 179)

Arms Act (54 of 1959)

—S. 17 — Order under, revoking licence — Order passed without giving the licensee an opportunity to show cause — Order liable to be quashed being in violation of principle of natural justice, even though Section makes no specific provision for hearing party — AIR 1969 Assam and Nagaland 50 (FB) and AIR 1954 Raj 264 and AIR 1960 Madh Pra 157, Dissented from Orissa 110 C (C N 39)

—S. 17 (3) (b) — Revocation of licence under — Revoking Authority relying on police report, coming to the conclusion that licensee is rowdy element and threatened to kill some of his opponents with the gun and also suspecting his complicity in some arson cases — Authority stating that it is undesirable to permit licensee to hold gun in view of his "anti-social activities" — Expression "anti-social activities" clearly includes threat to the security of public peace and public safety — Authority's order cannot be said not containing the reasons in support of his satisfaction within the meaning of S. 17 Orissa 110 A (C N 39)

Banker and Customer

—Letter of credit — See Banking Act (1949), S. 6.

Banking Regulation Act (10 of 1949)

—S. 6 — International trade — Irrevocable letters of credit — Nature of—Mechanism of such letter is of great importance in international trade — Courts should refrain from interfering — (Specific Relief Act (1963), S. 38) — (Constitution of India, Sch. VII, List 1, Item 41) — Applications Nos. 1760 and 2455 of 1967 (in C. S. No. 118 of 1967), D/-12-4-1969 (Mad.), Reversed SC 891 A (C N 190)

—S. 45-11 — Scope — Section has not been artistically drafted — See Companies Act (1956), S. 543 Ker 131 C (C N 23)

—S. 45-H — Scope and applicability—Provisions apply to misapplication of Bank's funds — (The question whether S. 45-H covers only the cases covered by S. 543 (1) (a) of the Companies Act, 1956, and does not cover the cases contemplated by clause (1)(b) thereof left open

Ker 131 D (C N 23)

Bengal Criminal Law Amendment (Special Courts) Act (21 of 1949)

—S. 4(1) — Offence under S. 5(2) of Prevention of Corruption Act (1947) — Offence is one prescribed under Cl. 7 of the Schedule — Case can be tried only by Special Court and not by ordinary Criminal Court, by virtue of S. 4(1) — See Prevention of Corruption Act (1947), S. 5(2)

Cal 253 (C N 52)

—Cl. 7 of the Schedule — Offence under S. 5 (2) of Prevention of Corruption Act (1947) — Offence is one prescribed under Cl. 7 of the Schedule — Case can be tried only by Special Court and not by ordinary Criminal Court, by virtue of S. 4 (1) — See Prevention of Corruption Act (1947), S. 5 (2)

Cal 253 (C N 52)

Bengal Municipal Act (15 of 1932)

See under Municipalities.

Bihar Land Reforms Act (30 of 1950)

See under Tenancy Laws.

Bihar Money-lenders (Regulation of Transactions) Act (7 of 1939)

See under Debt Laws.

Bombay Administration of Estates Regulation (8 of 1827)

—S. 10 — Agricultural land — Occupant not known to be living — Intestate property — District Judge merely acting on report of revenue authorities appointing administrator and directing him to take possession of lands in question — Proclamation neither issued as required by S. 10 nor published in gazette — Non-compliance of provisions of S. 10 — Order of District Judge held null and void

Bom 205 A (C N 35)

—S. 10 — Bombay Land Revenue Code (5 of 1879), S. 72 — Agricultural lands — Tenants in possession — Person shown as occupant in record of rights, a Hindu, dying or presumed to be dead intestate — Government's right to take possession of property under S. 29, Hindu Succession

Bombay Administration of Estates Regulation (contd.)

Act — Effect of S. 72, Bombay Land Revenue Code — Section 72 being a proviso contained in special legislation overrides general provisions of S. 10 of Regulation (8 of 1827)—Order of District Judge appointing administrator and directing him to take possession of lands, based merely on report of revenue authorities, held null and void — (Hindu Succession Act (1956), S. 29) Bom 205 B (C N 35)

Bombay Land Revenue Code (5 of 1879)

—S. 72 — Agricultural lands — Tenants in possession — Person shown as occupant in record of rights, a Hindu, dying or presumed to be dead intestate — Effect of S. 72, Bombay Land Revenue Code—S. 72 being a provision contained in special legislation overrides general provisions of S. 10 of Regulation (8 of 1827) — Orders of District Judge appointing administrator and directing him to take possession of lands, based merely on report of revenue authorities held null and void — See Bombay Administration of Estates Regulation (8 of 1827), S. 10

Bom 205 B (C N 35)

Bombay Village Panchayats Act (3 of 1950)

See under Panchayats.

Bombay Tenancy and Agricultural Lands (Vidarbha Region) Act (90 of 1958)

See under Tenancy Laws.

Calcutta High Court Civil Rules and Orders

See under High Court Rules and Orders.

Calcutta High Court (Original Side) Rules

See under High Court Rules and Orders.

Calcutta Thika Tenancy Act (2 of 1949)

See under Tenancy Laws.

Central Excise Rules (1944)

—R. 40 — Construction of — Unlawful mixing of duty-paid tobacco with non-duty-paid tobacco — Confiscation of mixture — So much of mixture representing non-duty-paid tobacco can only be confiscated—AIR 1961 Bom 48, Overruled — (Civil P. C., 1908), Preamble — Interpretation of Statutes) SC 829 (C N 178)

C. P. and Berar Industrial Disputes Settlement Act (23 of 1947)

—S. 16 — Contract Act (1872), S. 73 — Contract of service — Incidents of—Services of employee lent to third person — Original employment does not cease — Third person cannot dismiss employee.

SC 823 (C N 177)

C. P. and Berar Municipalities Act (53 of 1922)

See under Municipalities

C. P. Tenancy Act (1 of 1920)

See under Tenancy Laws

City Civil Courts Act (West Bengal Act 21 of 1953)

—S 5 (4) and Sch. I, Item No. 10 (ii)—Jurisdiction of City Civil Court — Calcutta Dock Labour Board, a statutory Corporation — Suit against, by registered dock workers for wrongful dismissal — City Civil Court can try it — It is not a suit relating to 'management' of Corporation within Sch. I, Item 10 (ii) — Expression 'management' refers to internal management of Board as distinguished from acts of management of scheme under Section 3, Dock Workers (Regulation of Employment) Act Cal 227 (C N 43)

—Sch. I, Item No. 10 (ii) — Jurisdiction of City Civil Court — Calcutta Dock Labour Board a statutory Corporation — Suit against, by registered Dock Workers for wrongful dismissal — City Civil Court can try it — It is not a suit relating to 'management' of Corporation within Sch. I, Item 10 (ii) — Expression 'management' refers to internal management of Board as distinguished from acts of management of scheme under S. 3, Dock Workers (Regulation of Employment) Act — See City Civil Courts Act (West Bengal Act 21 of 1953), S. 5 (4) Cal 227 (C N 43)

Civil Procedure Code (5 of 1908)

—Preamble — Judicial precedents — Revenue Tribunal is bound to follow decision of its own High Court

Bom 232 B (C N 40) (FB)

—Preamble — Interpretation of Statutes — Penal provision — Construction of — See Central Excise Rules (1944), R. 40

SC 829 (C N 178)

—Preamble — Interpretation of Statutes — Rent Control legislation — Defective drafting — Intention of Legislature — Rule of construction — Grammatical construction to be preferred to all other rules of construction, to find out intention of Legislature SC 971 B (C N 198)

—Preamble — Interpretation of Statutes — Intention of Legislature — Interpretation of — Sec Houses and Rents — U. P. (Temporary) Control of Rent and Eviction Act (3 of 1943), S. 3

All 309 D (C N 49) (FB)

—Preamble — Interpretation of Statutes — Duty of Court — Intention of Legislature to be gathered only from words used in the Statute — It is only in case of some doubts extraneous aids such as Statement of Objects and Reasons and previous history of Legislation can be taken

Bom 232 C (C N 40) (FB)

—Preamble — Interpretation of Statutes — Fiscal Statutes—Rule of construction — Word 'sale' in S. 2 (1) of J. and K. General Sales Tax Act, not given extended meaning J. and K 85 D (C N 16)

—Preamble — Interpretation of Statutes — Title of an Act — Use of, in interpreting other provisions of the Act

Mad 212 A (C N 56) (FB)

Civil P. C. (contd.)

—Preamble — Interpretation of Statutes — Taxing statutes — Mode of interpretation Mad 249 G (C N 67)

—Preamble — Interpretation of Statutes — Precise and unambiguous words should be interpreted in their natural and ordinary sense — Intention of Legislature is best gathered from words used by it—Legislature must be presumed to have used the words in a rule or section deliberately and with a view to achieve some objective — A construction which will leave without effect any part of the language of statute should normally be avoided

Tripura 40 B (C N 9)

—Preamble — Precedents — Supreme Court decisions — See Constitution of India, Art. 141

—S. 9 — Auction of evacuee property—Acceptance of bid — Attornment by tenant to purchaser — Suit for ejectment of tenant — No evidence led to indicate that title did not pass to purchaser — Proviso to S. 3 and not S. 3 (a) is attracted — Civil Court is barred from entertaining suit — Decision of Delhi High Court Reversed — See Houses and Rents — Delhi Rent Control Act (59 of 1958), S. 3 (a)

SC 812 (C N 173)

—S. 9 — Stay order under S. 5 of U. P. Act (5 of 1954) — Notification under S. 4, U. P. Act (5 of 1954), during pendency of civil appeal — Fact of notification brought to notice of Court — Appellate Court holding that S. 5 did not apply to facts of case and deciding appeal — Decision allowed to become final between parties — Decree passed by Civil Court, held, was not a nullity — Assumption of jurisdiction by erroneous decision of jurisdictional facts can be set aside in appeal or revision — Even under S. 49 of U. P. Act 5 of 1954 jurisdiction of Civil Court is not absolutely barred — Sec Tenancy Laws — U. P. Consolidation of Holdings Act (5 of 1954), S. 5 (as it stood in the year 1961)

All 344 (C N 52) (FB)

—S. 9 — Company Court has no exclusive jurisdiction in matters falling outside Companies Act such as suits on contracts or mortgage bonds executed by companies — See Companies Act (1956), S. 10

Andh Pra 225 A (C N 34)

—Ss. 11, 96 and Order 22, Rules 3 and 4 — Res judicata between co-defendants—Settlement of land in favour of plaintiff as tenant from deity — Suit by plaintiff for declaration of title and possession of land annexed to their land by alluvion — Deity impleaded only as pro forma defendant — Dismissal of suit — First appeal to High Court impleading deity as pro forma respondent — Dismissal of appeal against deity for failure to pay cost of guardian ad litem appointed by Court for deity — Dismissal of entire appeal not proper — No

Civil P. C. (contd.)

inconsistent decree would result

SC 809 (C N 172)

—S. 11 — Principles of res judicata — Writ petition before High Court dismissed not on merits — Subsequent writ on same grounds and on same facts before Supreme Court is not barred — See Constitution of India, Article 32 SC 893 (C N 191)

—S. 11 — Partition suit — Co-defendants — Plaintiff clearly recognizing co-defendant M's right to suit properties and, therefore, co-defendant remaining ex parte — Another suit, filed at same time by other co-defendant claiming share in property recognized as of M in plaintiff without impleading M, also tried together. Held, M' who was not aware of contentions raised by co-defendant and who, therefore, had no opportunity to contest that claim could not be said to be prevented by principle of res judicata in contesting that claim in fresh suit — Defendant in partition suit could not be deemed as a rule to be aware of possibility that other co-defendants would claim partition of their share whenever partition suit is instituted — AIR 1941 Pat 83, Dissent from — (Hindu Law — Partition suit) Mad 232 (C N 60)

—S. 47 — Decree passed by Court in ejectment suit in terms of compromise, without satisfying itself if the grounds for eviction existed — Decree is in contravention of S 13 and a nullity and cannot be executed — See Houses and Rents—Delhi and Ajmer Rent Control Act (38 of 1952), S. 13 SC 838 (C N 180)

—S. 64 — An alienation of an attached property is void only against all claims enforceable under the attachment and not against other claims

Mys 152 B (C N 35)

—S. 80 — Amendment of plaint introducing discordance between facts alleged in notice under S. 80 and those pleaded in the plaint — Although relief may be the same plaintiff has to be rejected under O. 7, R. 11 — Service agreement between President of former Manipur State and plaintiff — Ratification of agreement by successor the Union of India not mentioned in notice under Section 80 — Subsequent amendment introducing fact of ratification cannot be allowed — See Civil P. C. (1908), O. 6, R. 17 Manipur 44 (C N 13)

—S. 96 — Settlement of land in favour of plaintiff as tenants from deity — Suit by plaintiff for title and declaration of possession of land annexed to land by alluvion — Deity impleaded as pro forma defendant — Dismissal of suit — First appeal to High Court impleading deity as respondent — Dismissal of appeal against deity for failure to pay cost of guardian ad litem appointed by Court for deity — Dismissal of entire appeal — Validity — See Civil P. C. (1908), S. 11 SC 809 (C N 172)

Civil P. C. (contd.)

—S. 96 — New case — Suit against State of Rajasthan for recovery of certain amount due against former State of Kotah — Claim based on fresh agreement arrived at between parties on 18-11-1950 — Plaintiff not coming with positive assertion that his claim is based on recognition by Rajasthan State of past liability or erstwhile Kotah State — No issue on the point framed by Trial Court — At appellate stage, plaintiff cannot be allowed to raise his claim upon plea never put forward by him in course of trial Raj 118 C (C N 28)

—Ss. 100-101 — New point — Point not raised in written statement — Cannot be allowed to be raised SC 839 C (C N 181)

—Ss. 100-101 — Decree for arrears of rent, mesne profits and ejectment — Death of tenant thereafter — Competency of his heirs to file appeal — Decree, whether can be set aside in its entirety — See Civil P. C. (1908), S. 146

—S. 100 — All 309 B (C N 49) (FB) — Finding of fact based on evidence — Binding on second appellate Court Mad 226 A (C N 59)

—Ss. 100, 101 — Mining lease — Mortgage of leased property — Mortgage decree creating charge on mortgaged property — Question as to effect on lease because of the provisions of the Bihar Land Reforms Act — Question being purely a question of law can be raised for the first time in appeal Pat 167 E (C N 27)

—S. 107 — Injunction — Relief is discretionary — Discretion used in a judicial and not in a capricious manner — High Court will not interfere — Wrongful use of discretion by Lower Court — Burden of proof is on the appellant — See Civil P. C. (1908), O. 39, R. 1

—Ss. 107, 149, O. 7, R. 11 — Appeal — Time for payment of deficit court-fee — Order 7, Rule 11 does not apply to appeals — Power to extend time available under S. 149 but not by virtue of S. 107

—S. 105(2) — See Civil P. C. (1908), O. 41, R. 23

—S. 105(2) — Review of remand order falling under Section 105(2) in exercise of inherent power is erroneous. Decision of Madh Pra High Court, Reversed

—S. 112 — Practice of Supreme Court — See Constitution of India, Art. 136 SC 977 D (C N 207)

—S. 115 — Assumption of jurisdiction by erroneous decision of jurisdictional facts can be set aside in appeal or revision — See Tenancy Laws — U. P. Consolidation of Holdings Act (5 of 1954), S. 5 (as it stood in the year 1961) SC 987 A (C N 204)

—S. 115 — Court exercising jurisdiction under S. 115 cannot correct errors of fact All 344 (C N 52) (FB) Assam 73 B (C N 15)

Civil P. C. (contd.)

—S. 115, Order 6, Rule 17, Order 29, Rule 1 — Order refusing application for amendment at very late stage raising technical plea (competency to sue under O. 29, Rule 1) — No material irregularity

Ker 138 E (C N 24)

—S. 115 (c) — Expressions "Illegally" and "Material irregularity" — Meaning — Interference permissible only if Subordinate Court has committed some breach of a provision of law or some error of procedure

Manipur 34 (C N 10)

—S. 115 (e) — Illegal or irregular exercise of jurisdiction — Trial Court not consolidating two similar suits — It is only error in exercise of jurisdiction — Cl. (c) is not attracted — AIR 1939 Pat 30 and AIR 1933 Pat 61, Diss.

Tripura 35 (C N 7)

—Ss. 146, 100-101 — Decree for arrears of rent, mesne profits and ejectment — Death of tenant thereafter — Competency of his heirs to file appeal — Decree, whether can be set aside in its entirety — Houses and Rents — U. P. (Temporary) Control of Rent and Eviction Act (3 of 1947), S. 3

All 309 B (C N 49) (FB)

—S. 146, O. 22, R. 10 and O. 23, R. 3 — Scope of — Settlee pendente lite of one of items of suit property not coming on record as party to suit — Application by settlee to be brought on record in appeal — On next day appellant and settlor filing compromise memo — Settlee can take benefit of Section 146 — Filing of compromise memo is no bar to entertaining application or inquiry into its merits — Application can be entertained under Section 146 notwithstanding that the truth and validity of settlement was disputed — (1951) 2 Mad LJ 26, Overruled

Andh Pra 211 A (C N 31)

—S. 149 — Appeal — Time for payment of deficit Court fee — O. 7, R. 11 does not apply to appeals — Power to extend time available under S. 149 but not by virtue of Sec. 107 — See Civil P. C. (1908), S. 107

Punj 273 A (C N 38)

—S. 151 — Inherent powers — Court cannot make use of Section where a party had his remedy provided elsewhere in the Code and he neglected to avail himself of the same — Power cannot be exercised as an appellate power — Review of remand order, failing under Sec. 105 (2), in exercise of inherent power is erroneous. Decision of Madh Pra High Court. Reversed SC 997 B (C N 207)

—S. 151, O. 1, R. 10, O. 22 R. 10 and O. 41, R. 20 — R. 20 is not exhaustive — Inherent powers can be exercised in adding parties to appeals

Andh Pra 211 B (C N 31)

—S. 151, O. 9, R. 13 and O. 43, R. 1 (d) — Application to set aside ex parte decree dismissed for default — Remedy by way of appeal is not illusory — Appellant can

Civil P. C. (contd.)

canvass that there was sufficient cause for non-appearance when application was called on for hearing — High Court would not ordinarily exercise its inherent powers to set aside order when remedy of appeal is not availed of except in exceptional cases

Cal 229 B (C N 44)

—S. 151 — Proceeding under Calcutta Thika Tenancy Act, 1949 — Application by tenant for review of ejectment order dismissed for default — Tenant filing application under S. 151 for setting aside order of dismissal — Held though order was appealable, scope of appeal was limited and point of absence could not usually be considered in appeal and, therefore, in the circumstances application under S. 151 was competent — (1964) 68 Cal WN 1064, Not Foll.

Cal 240 (C N 47)

—O. 1, R. 3 — Lease and subsequent sale of property — Suit for pre-emption — Plaintiff disputing the genuineness of the lease, alleging that lease and sale are part of the same transaction — Lessee can be joined as co-defendant with the vendor and vendees

Punj 276 (C N 39)

—O. 1, R. 10 — O. 41, R. 20 is not exhaustive — Inherent powers can be exercised in adding parties to appeals — See Civil P. C. (1908), S. 151

Andh Pra 211 B (C N 31)

—O. 1, R. 10 — No addition of parties after limitation — See Motor Vehicles Act (1939), S. 110A

Pat 172 D (C N 28)

—O. 6, R. 14 — Pleadings in a suit by or against a Corporation — Signature and verification — Authority to sign a plaint on behalf of a Company — Applicability of O. 6, R. 14 — Affidavit, necessity of — See Civil P. C. (1908), O. 29, R. 1

Ker 138 D (C N 24)

—O. 6, R. 17, O. 29, R. 1 — Suit by Corporation — Amendment of written statement sought after evidence of plaintiff was taken, for raising objection to competency of, Company's Officer to sue — Amendment sought held purely technical and of no substance and should be refused

Ker 138 A (C N 24)

—O. 6, R. 17 — Amendment of pleading — Delay no ground for refusal — Exceptions

Ker 138 B (C N 24)

—O. 6, R. 17 — Order refusing application for amendment at very late stage raising technical plea — Revision — No material irregularity — See Civil P. C. (1908), S. 115

Ker 138 E (C N 24)

—O. 6, R. 17, O. 7, R. 10 — Amendment of plaint — Amendment if allowed likely to result in deprivation of jurisdiction of Court — Amendment should be allowed and plaint to be retained or returned after examining pecuniary jurisdiction of Court

Mad 247 (C N 66)

—O. 6, R. 17; O. 7, R. 11 and S. 80 — Amendment of plaint introducing discordance between facts alleged in notice under

Civil P. C. (contd.)

S. 80 and those pleaded in the plaint — Although relief may be the same plaint has to be rejected under O. 7, R. 11 — Service agreement between President of former Manipur State and plaintiff — Ratification of agreement by successor the Union of India not mentioned in notice under S. 80 — Subsequent amendment introducing fact of ratification cannot be allowed

Manipur 44 (C N 13)
—O. 6, R. 17 — No amendment to pre-judice rights accrued to opposite party — See Motor Vehicles Act (1939), S. 110-C

Pat 172 C (C N 2)
—O. 7, R. 7 — Trial Court can mould relief and grant decree as required by merits of case — Appellate Court has the same powers — See Civil P. C. (1908), O. 41, R. 33 All 307 B (C N 48)

—O. 7, R. 10 — Amendment of plaint — Amendment if allowed likely to result in deprivation of jurisdiction of Court — Amendment should be allowed and plaint to be retained or returned after examining pecuniary jurisdiction of Court — See Civil P. C. (1908), O. 6, R. 17

Mad 247 (C N 66)
—O. 7, R. 11 — Total want of cause of action — Dismissal of plaint on that ground, when permissible

All 309 C (C N 49) (FB)
—O. 7, R. 11 — Amendment of plaint introducing discordance between facts alleged in notice under S. 80 and those pleaded in the plaint — Although relief may be the same plaint has to be rejected under O. 7, R. 11 — Service agreement between President of former Manipur State and plaintiff — Ratification of agreement by successor the Union of India not mentioned in notice under S. 80 — Subsequent amendment introducing fact of ratification cannot be allowed — See Civil P. C. (1908), O. 6 R. 17

Manipur 44 (C N 13)
—O. 7, R. 11 — Appeal — Time for payment of deficit Court-fee — O. 7, R. 11 does not apply to appeals — Power to extend time available under S. 149 but not by virtue of Sec. 107 — See Civil P. C. (1908), S. 107 Punj 273 A (C N 3)

—O. 8, R. 5 — Admissions
Ker 138 C (C N 24)
—O. 9 (Gen.) — Rules 35 and 35-A of Chap. X of Original Side Rules of Calcutta High Court — Distinction between pointed out — Suit filed on Original Side — Dismissal for non-prosecution — Application for recalling and setting aside order — O. 9, Civil P. C. has no application

Cal 231 A (C N 45)
—O. 9, R. 13 and O. 43, R. 1 (d) — Application to set aside ex parte decree dismissed for default — Order is appealable under O. 43, R. 1 (d)

Cal 229 A (C N 41)
—O. 9, R. 13 — Application to set aside ex parte Decree dismissed for default

Civil P. C. (contd.)

— Remedy by way of appeal is not illusory — Appellant can canvass that there was sufficient cause for non-appearance when application was called on for hearing — High Court would not ordinarily exercise its inherent powers to set aside order when remedy of appeal is not availed of except in exceptional cases — See Civil P. C. (1908), S. 151 Cal 220 B (C N 44)

—O. 20, R. 12 — Ascertainment of mesne profits — Suit for declaration of title, for possession and for mesne profits — Held, mesne profits had to be ascertained separately on petition under O. 20, R. 12 on obtaining possession — See Specific Relief Act (1877), S. 42.

Tripura 43 F (C N 10)
—O. 21, R. 1 — Decree against tenant for arrears of rent — Service of notice under S. 3 of U. P. Act 3 of 1917 by landlord — Deposit of decretal amount in Court under O. 21, R. 1 — Amounts to payment to landlord — See Houses and Rents — U. P. (Temporary) Control of Rent and Eviction Act (3 of 1917), S. 3

All 309 A (C N 49) (FB)
—O. 21, R. 57 — The expression "where any property has been attached in execution of a decree" — Interpretation of — Attachment before judgment — Becomes attachment in an execution — Execution application — Dismissal for decree-holder's default — Attachment before judgment ceases to subsist — (Civil Procedure Code (1908), Order 38, Rule 11)

Mys 152 A (C N 35)
—O. 21, R. 61 — Money due to judgment-debtor on attached bills — Money in possession of Government in trust for judgment-debtor — Claimant not in possession of such money — His claim to money should be disallowed

Tripura 40 A (C N 9)
—O. 22, R. 3 — Settlement of land in favour of plaintiff as tenants from deity — Suit by plaintiff for title and declaration of possession of land annexed to land by alluvion — Deity impleaded as pro forma defendant — Dismissal of suit — First appeal to High Court impleading deity as respondent — Dismissal of appeal against deity for failure to pay cost of guardian ad litem appointed by Court for deity — Dismissal of entire appeal — Validity. — See Civil P. C. (1908), S. 11

SC 809 (C N 172)
—O. 22, R. 4 — Settlement of land in favour of plaintiff as tenants from deity — Suit by plaintiff for title and declaration of possession of land annexed to land by alluvion — Deity impleaded as pro forma defendant — Dismissal of suit — First appeal to High Court impleading deity as respondent — Dismissal of appeal against deity for failure to pay cost of guardian ad litem appointed by Court for deity — Dismissal of entire

Civil P. C. (contd.)

appeal — Validity See Civil P. C. (1908), S. 11 SC 809 (C N 172)

—O. 22, R. 4 read with R. 11 — Appeal — Abatement of — Death of one of respondents — Application to bring legal representative on record made after 90 days — Delay not satisfactorily explained — Appeal abates Punj 273 B (C N 38)

—O. 22, R. 10 — Scope of — Settlee pendente lite of one of items of suit property not coming on record as party to suit — Application by settlee to be brought on record in appeal — On next day appellant and settlor filing compromise memo — Settlee can take benefit of S. 146 — (1951) 2 Mad LJ 26, Overruled — See Civil P. C. (1908), S. 146

Andh Pra 211 A (C N 31)
—O. 22, R. 10 — O. 41, R. 20 is not exhaustive — Inherent powers can be exercised in adding parties to appeals — See Civil P. C. (1908), S. 151

Andh Pra 211 B (C N 31)
—O. 23, R. 1 — "Same subject matter" — Meaning — Cause of action and relief claimed in the two suits must be same SC 987 (C N 204)

—O. 23, R. 1 — Withdrawal of suit — Right of withdrawal and right of withdrawal with liberty to file fresh suit — Distinction — Application under sub-rule (2) — Conversion of into an application under sub-rule (1) — Not permissible

Mys 155 (C N 37)
—O. 23, R. 3 — Scope of — Settlee pendente lite of one of items of suit property not coming on record as party to suit — Application by settlee to be brought on record in appeal — On next day appellant and settlor filing compromise memo — Settlee can take benefit of S. 146 — Filing of compromise memo as no bar to entertaining application or inquiry into its merits — Application can be entertained under Section 146 notwithstanding that the truth and validity of settlement was disputed—(1951) 2 Mad LJ 26, Overruled — See Civil P. C. (1908), S. 146

Andh Pra 211 A (C N 31)
—O. 29, R. 1 — Suit by Corporation — Amendment of written statement for raising objection to competency of Company's Officer to sue — Amendment held purely technical and of no substance — See Civil P. C. (1908), O. 6, R. 17

Ker 138 A (C N 24)
—Order 29, R. 1 and Order 6, Rule 14 — Order 29, Rule 1 not mandatory — Pleadings in a suit by or against a Corporation — Signature and verification — Authority to sign a plaint on behalf of a Company — Applicability of Order 6, Rule 14 — Affidavit, necessity of

Ker 138 D (C N 24)
—O. 29, R. 1 — Order refusing application for amendment at very late stage raising technical plea — Revision — No

Civil P. C. (contd.)

material irregularity — See Civil P. C. (1908), S. 115 Ker 138 E (C N 24)
—O. 38, R. 11 — Attachment before judgment — Becomes attachment in execution — No fresh attachment necessary — See Civil P. C. (1908), O. 21, R. 57

Mys 152 (C N 35)
—O. 39, R. 1, S. 107 — Injunction — Relief is discretionary — Discretion used in a judicial and not in a capricious manner — High Court will not interfere — Wrongful use of discretion by Lower Court — Burden of proof is on the appellant

Manipur 37 A (C N 11)
—O. 39, R. 1 — Injunction — Grant of — Considerations which weigh with the Court stated Manipur 37 B (C N 11)
—O. 39, R. 1 — Injunction — Grant of — Court must be satisfied that prima facie case has been made out

Manipur 37 C (C N 11)
—O. 41, R. 5 (3) (c) — Rule is mandatory — What it provides is that order on application cannot be made under security is filed and not that application itself would not be maintainable

Andh Pra 210 (C N 30)
—O. 41, R. 20 — R. 20 is not exhaustive — Inherent powers can be exercised in adding parties to appeals — See Civil P. C. (1908), Sec. 151

Andh Pra 211 A (C N 31)
—O. 41, R. 23 — Remand of case by Appellate Court — Order of remand is appealable under Order 43 — Order not appealed against — Its correctness is no more open to examination in view of Section 105(2) — Review of remand order in exercise of inherent power is erroneous. Decision of Madh Pra High Court. Reversed SC 997 A (C N 207)

—O. 41, R. 23 — Case sent back to first appellate Court to dispose of appeal on merits — Court of first appeal is competent to rehear entire matter

Assam 75 A (C N 16)
—O. 41, R. 33, O. 7, R. 7 — Trial Court can mould relief and grant decree as required by merits of case — Appellate Court has the same powers

All 307 B (C N 48)
—O. 43, R. 1 (d) — Application to set aside ex parte decree dismissed for default — Order is appealable under O. 43, R. 1 (d) — See Civil P. C. (1908), O. 9, R. 13 Cal 229 A (C N 44)

—O. 43, R. 1 (d) — Application to set aside ex parte Decree dismissed for default — Remedy by way of appeal is not illusory — Appellant can canvass that there was sufficient cause for non-appearance when application was called on for hearing — See Civil P. C. (1908), S. 151

Cal 229 B (C N 44)
—O. 47, R. 1 — Suit dismissed for non-prosecution — Application for recalling and reviewing order filed within 30 days of

Civil P. C. (contd.)

date of Order is not barred by limitation under Art. 124, Limitation Act — Even if application for review is not in the prescribed form that is not fatal to its maintainability — (Limitation Act (1963), Article 124) — Cal 231 C (C N 45)

—O. 47, Rr. 1 and 4, Proviso (b) — Grounds for review — Review on ground of discovery of new matter — Strict proof required by proviso (b) to R. 4 — Dismissal of suit for non-prosecution — Review — Plaintiff alleging his inability to place before Court certain facts owing to death of his solicitor — Review allowed on ground of any other sufficient reason — Cal 231 D (C N 45)

—O. 47, R. 4, Proviso (b) — Review on ground of discovery of new matter — Strict proof as required by proviso essential — See Civil P. C. (1908), O. 47, R. 1 — Cal 231 D (C N 45)

CIVIL SERVICES

—Andhra Pradesh Public Employment (Requirement as to Residence) Rules, 1959

—S. 3 and the Andhra Pradesh Employment (Requirement as to Residence) Rules, 1959, framed thereunder are ultra vires the power of Parliament under Art. 16 (3) and violates Art. 16 (1) and (2) of Constitution — See Civil Services — Public Employment (Requirement as to Residence) Act (1957), S. 3 — Andhra Pra 236 A (C N 36)

—Civil Services Classification (Control and Appeals) Rules

—Rules 49 and 56 — Mere non-promotion to selection post without any disciplinary action does not amount to penalty within R. 49 — No appeal lies under R. 56 — Cal 225 B (C N 42)

—R. 56 — Mere non-promotion to selection post without any disciplinary action does not amount to penalty within R. 49 — No appeal lies under R. 56 — See Civil Services — Civil Services (Classification Control and Appeals) Rules, R. 49 — Cal 225 B (C N 42)

—Jammu and Kashmir Civil Service (Classification, Control and Appeal) Rules (1956)

—R. 14 (1) — Creation of temporary post of Administrative Officer — Held, R. 14 (1) was not attracted — See Civil Services — Jammu and Kashmir Civil Service (Classification, Control and Appeal) Rules (1956), R. 16 (2) — J and K 90 B (C N 17)

—Rr. 16 (2), 14 (1), 24 and 25 — Creation of temporary post of Administrative Officer — Held, R. 16 (2) was attracted and not R. 14 (1) and while filling that post question of juniority or seniority covered by R. 24 or 25 was not relevant — Scope of R. 16 (2) indicated — J and K 90 B (C N 17)

—R. 24 — Creation of temporary post of Administrative Officer — Held, while filling that post question of juniority or

Civil Services — J. and K. Civil Service (Classification, Control and Appeal) Rules (contd.)

seniority covered by R. 24 was not relevant — See Civil Services — Jammu and Kashmir Civil Service (Classification, Control and Appeal) Rules (1956), R. 16 (2) — J and K 90 B (C N 17)

—R. 25 — Creation of temporary post of Administrative Officer — Held, while filling that post question of juniority or seniority covered by R. 25 was not relevant — See Civil Services — Jammu and Kashmir Civil Service (Classification, Control and Appeal) Rules (1956), R. 16 (2) — J and K 90 B (C N 17)

—Kashmir Civil Services (Classification, Control and Appeal) Rules

—R. 52, Note 6 (added by Govt. Notification No. SRO 38 dated 11-2-66) in exercise of power under S. 124 of the Jammu and Kashmir State Constitution — Articles of Association of Jammu and Kashmir Industries do not contain such power — (Constitution of Jammu and Kashmir, Section 124) — (Jammu and Kashmir Industries Limited — Memorandum of Articles of Association, Arts. 89 and 73 (5)) — J and K 94 C (C N 18)

—R. 52, Note 6 (added by Government Notification No. S.R.O. 38 dated 11-2-66) and Art. 207 — Notification and Note 6 to R. 52 held, invalid — Notification violated S. 126 of the J and K State Constitution — Also violative of Articles 311 (2), 14 and 16 of the Constitution of India — (J and K Government Notification No. SRO. 38, dated 11-2-66) — (Constitution of Jammu and Kashmir, S. 126) — (Constitution of India, Articles 311 (2), 14, and 16) — J and K 94 D (C N 18)

—Public Employment (Requirement as to Residence) Act (44 of 1957)

—S. 3 — Section 3 and the Andhra Pradesh Public Employment (Requirement as to Residence) Rules, 1959, framed thereunder, are ultra vires the power of Parliament under Article 16 (3) and violates Art. 16 (1) and (2) of the Constitution — Constitution of India, Art. 16 (1), (2) and (3) — Andhra Pra 236 A (C N 36)

—S. 3 — Validity of — Delegation of power under — Amounts to abdication of legislative function by Parliament — Constitution of India, Articles 16 (3) and 245 — Andhra Pra 236 B (C N 36)

—Punjab Government Services (War Amendment) Rules (1943)

—R. 3 — Appointment of persons rendering war service on temporary basis — Appointment cannot be regarded as one under R. 3 — See Government of India Act (1935), S. 241 (1) (b) — Punjab 241 A (C N 34) (FB)

—R. 3 — Confirmation of Government servant owing to wrong interpretation of rules — Government can revise its decision at subsequent stage when mistake comes to

Punjab Government Services (War Amendment) Rules (contd.)

its notice — See Constitution of India, Art. 311 — Punjab 241 B (C N 34) (FB)

—R. 4 — Interpretation — Rule 6 Forms integral part of entire set of rules and cannot be singled out for taking benefit under — See Government of India Act (1935), Section 241 (1) (b)

Punj 241 A (C N 34) (FB)

—R. 5 — Interpretation — R. 6 Forms integral part of entire set of rules and cannot be singled out for taking benefit under — See Government of India Act (1935), Section 241 (1) (b)

Punj 241 A (C N 34) (FB)

—R. 6 — Interpretation — R. 6 Forms integral part of entire set of rules and cannot be singled out for taking benefit under — Appointment of persons rendering war service on temporary basis — Appointment cannot be regarded as one under R. 3 — Appointees cannot avail of benefit of R. 6 for fixation of his seniority — See Government of India Act (1935), Sec. 241 (1) (b)

Punj 241 A (C N 34) (FB)

—R. 7 — Interpretation — R. 6 Forms integral part of entire set of rules and cannot be singled out for taking benefit under — See Government of India Act (1935), Section 241 (1) (b)

Punj 241 A (C N 34) (FB)

—R. 8 — Interpretation — R. 6 Forms integral part of entire set of rules and cannot be singled out for taking benefit under — See Government of India Act (1935), Section 241 (1) (b)

Punj 241 A (C N 34) (FB)

Civil Services Classification (Control, and Appeal) Rules

See under Civil Services.

Companies Act (1 of 1956)

—S. 10 — Company Court has no exclusive jurisdiction in matters falling outside Companies Act such as suits on contracts or mortgage bonds executed by companies — (Civil P. C. (1908), S. 9)

Andh Pra 225 A (C N 34)

—S. 26 — Articles of Association of the Fertilizer Corporation of India Ltd. — Arts. 67 and 110 — Effect — Exercise of powers of the Board of Directors of the Company held was subject to directives by President of India — Company held bound to implement Circular of Central Government dated 26-12-1965 — Company held bound to pay ex gratia payment of bonus to workers — SC 867 A (C N 188)

—S. 125 — Specific charge and floating charge — Distinction between — (T. P. Act (1882), S. 100)

Andh Pra 225 B (C N 34)

—S. 125 — Mortgage of property by company — Mortgage not registered under section — Purchase of mortgaged property in execution of money decree against Company — Suit by mortgagee for realisation of mortgage debt — Purchaser cannot contend that mortgage was nullity and not enforceable against him

Companies Act (contd.)

Andh Pra 225 C (C N 34)

—S. 543 — Scope and applicability — Liability under section — It must first be shown that person proceeded against has been guilty of misapplication, etc. — Section covers breach of trust by negligence

Ker 131 A (C N 23)

—S. 543 — Misapplication of capital resulting in loss — Meaning of — Declaration of dividend contrary to provisions of Memorandum of Articles of Association — Held, it was case of such misapplication

Ker 131 B (C N 23)

—S. 543 — Misapplication of capital of company resulting in loss — Burden of proof — Once Liquidator shows that there was declaration of dividend resulting in misapplication, burden shifts on to directors to show that it was not actually paid — (Evidence Act (1872), Ss. 101-104) — (Banking Companies Act (1949), S. 45-H)

Ker 131 C (C N 23)

—S. 543 — Provisions of S. 45-H, Banking Companies Act, apply to misapplication of Bank's funds — The question whether S. 45-11 covers only the cases covered by S. 543 (1) (a) of the Companies Act, 1956, and does not cover the cases contemplated by Clause (1) (b) thereof left open — See Banking Companies Act (1949), S. 45-H

Ker 131 D (C N 23)

Constitution of America (First Amendment and Fourteenth Amendment)

—Case from America — State is not permitted to forbid or prescribe advocacy of use of force or of law violation except where such advocacy is directed to incite or produce imminent lawless action and is likely to incite or produce such action — See Constitution of India, Art. 19(1)(a)

USSC 45 (C N 7)

Constitution of India

—Art. 14 — Provisions of Ss. 91 and 96 Maharashtra Co-operative Societies Act and Rules under not violative of Arts. 14 and 19 — See Co-operative Societies — Maharashtra Co-operative Societies Act (24 of 1961), S. 91

Bom 201 A (C N 34)

—Arts. 14, 16(1) — Posts of Upper Division Assistant and Junior Stenographer having same pay — Posts, in practice, classed together for further promotions — Non-statutory Rules subsequently framed making differentiation between those posts for purpose of promotion — Retrospective application of the Rules to employee appointed before the Rules are promulgated will be in contravention of Arts. 14 and 16(1). Cal 250 A (C N 51)

Constitution of India (contd.)

—Art. 14 — Provisions of S 101, Sch. 1 Entry 3 and Rule 92 of Himachal Pradesh Co-operative Society Rules are discriminatory and violate provisions of Art. 14 of the Constitution — See Himachal Pradesh Co-operative Societies Act (13 of 1956), S. 101

Delhi 119 (C N 28)

—Art. 14 — See Civil Services — Kashmir Civil Services (Classification, Control and Appeal) Rules, R. 52 Note 6

J & K 94 D (C N 18)

—Art. 14 — See Constitution of India, Art. 226

Ker 142 E (C N 25)

—Art. 14 — Rules under Art. 309 proviso framed by Governor of Mysore R. 3 — Termination of service of local candidates in Motor Transport Department as a result of selection made by State Recruitment Committee — Selection quashed by High Court as invalid — Regulation of service of all local candidates continuing in service under R. 3 — Petitioner refused benefit of R. 3 — Discrimination — Direction for regularisation of services of petitioner given under Art. 226 — See Constitution of India Art. 309 Proviso

Mys 160 (C N 39)

—Art. 16 — See Civil Services — Kashmir Civil Services (Classification, Control and Appeal) Rules, R. 52 Note 6

J & K 94 D (C N 18)

—Art. 16 (1), (2) and (3) — Section 4 and the Andhra Pradesh Public Employment (Requirement as to Residence) Rules, 1969, framed thereunder are ultra vires the power of Parliament under Art. 16(3) and violates Art. 16(1) and (2) of Constitution — See Civil Services — Public Employment (Requirement as to Residence) Act (1957), S. 3

Andh Pra 236 A (C N 36)

—Art. 16(1) — Posts of Upper Division Assistant and Junior Stenographer having same pay — Posts, in practice, classed together for further promotions — Non-statutory Rules subsequently framed making differentiation between those posts for purpose of promotion — Retrospective application of the Rules to employee appointed before the Rules are promulgated will be in contravention of Arts. 14 and 16(1) — See Constitution of India, Art. 14

Cal 250 A (C N 51)

—Art. 16(1) — Posts of Upper Division Assistant and Junior Stenographer having same pay classed together, in practice, for further promotions — Confirmed Lower Division Assistant promoted as Junior Stenographer — Subsequent non-statutory Rules making differentiation between posts of Upper Division Assistant and Junior Stenographer for the purpose of promotion, erroneously applied retrospectively to such employee — Employees only right under Art. 16(1), is to be considered for promotion equally

Constitution of India (contd.)

with Upper Division Clerks without being affected by those Rules — Court cannot issue direction to promote that employee unless there is any statutory rule which gives him right to be promoted — See Constitution of India, Art. 226

Cal 250 B (C N 51)

—Art. 16(3) — Validity of — Delegation of Power under — Amounts to abdication of Legislative function by Parliament — See Civil Services — Public Employment (Requirement as to Residence) Act (1957), S. 3

Andh Pra 236 B (C N 36)

—Art. 19 — See Constitution of India, Art. 226

Ker 142 E (C N 25)

—Art. 19(1) — Freedom of the press — Must be used with discretion

Madh Pra 102 C (C N 23)

—Art. 19(1), (2) — Freedom of press — Limitations

Madh Pra 102 A (C N 23)

—Art. 19(2) — The expression "in the interest of" — Meaning of

Madh Pra 102 B (C N 23)

—Art. 19(2) — Freedom of press — Restrictions upon — Reasonableness — Test stated

Madh Pra 102 D (C N 23)

—Art. 19(2) — The restrictions imposed by S. 12, M. P. Public Security Act — Reasonableness — See M. P. Public Security Act (25 of 1959), S. 12

Madh Pra 102 E (C N 23)

—Art. 19(1) (a) — Case from America — State is not permitted to forbid or prescribe advocacy of use of force or of law violation except where such advocacy is directed to incite or produce imminent lawless action and is likely to incite or produce such action — Whitney v. California, (1927) 274 US 357 = 71 L Ed 1095 = 47 S Ct 641, Overruled — (Constitution of America, First Amendment and Fourteenth Amendment)

USSC 45 (C N 7)

—Art. 19(1) (a) and (2) — Order under S. 12 M. P. Public Security Act totally prohibiting sale, distribution or circulation of paper — Order is violative of Art. 19(1) (a) and (2) — See Public Safety — M. P. Public Security Act (25 of 1959), S. 12

Madh Pra 102 L (C N 23)

—Art. 19 (1) (1) — Provisions of Ss. 91 and 96 Maharashtra Co-operative Societies Act and Rules under not violative of Arts. 14 and 19 — See Co-operative Societies — Maharashtra Co-operative Societies Act (24 of 1961), S. 91

Bom 201 A (C N 34)

—Art. 20 (2) — Criminal P. C. (1898), Section 403 — Rule of autre fois acquit and issue estoppel rule — When can be invoked — Criminal prosecution of accused for smuggling — Not barred by earlier proceedings against him under Sea Customs Act — Sea Customs Act (1878), S. 167 (5)

SC 962 A (C N 195)

Constitution of India (contd.)

—Art. 20 (2) — Separate proceedings under S. 500, Penal Code over same publication against same accused — Maintainability — It is bad and improper and may lead on to double jeopardy.

Cal 248 C (C N 50)

—Art. 20 (3) — "Accused of any offence" — Person against whom enquiry is held under Section 171-A, Sea Customs Act (1878) is not a person accused of any offence — AIR 1956 Cal 253 and AIR 1958 Cal 682, Overruled

SC 941 C (C N 193)

—Art. 20 (3) — "Accused of any offence" — Statement made under Ss. 107 and 108 of Customs Act (1962) — Statement not by person accused of any offence

SC 940 E (C N 193)

—Art. 22 — Preventive detention — Satisfaction of detaining authority — Subjective and not objective and hence not justiciable — Validity of detention can, however, be challenged on ground of mala fides or that grounds supplied are irrelevant or vague — See Public Safety— Preventive Detention Act (1950), S. 3(1) (a) and (2)

SC 852 A (C N 185)

—Art. 22(5) — Order of preventive detention — Grounds supplied to detenu containing valid and invalid grounds — Order of detention is illegal — It is not possible to guage in such cases to what extent bad reasons operated on mind of detaining authority — See Public Safety — Preventive Detention Act (1950), S. 3

SC 852 C (C N 185)

—Arts. 22 (5) and 32 — Order of preventive detention — One of grounds extremely vague and not giving sufficient particulars — Constitutional guarantee is infringed — Detention is illegal

SC 852 D (C N 185)

—Art. 32 — Order of preventive detention — Grounds supplied to detenu containing valid and invalid grounds— Order of detention is illegal — It is not possible to guage in such cases to what extent bad reasons operated on mind of detaining authority — See Public Safety — Preventive Detention Act (1950), S. 3

SC 852 C (C N 185)

—Art. 32 — Order of preventive detention — One of grounds extremely vague and not giving sufficient particulars — Constitutional guarantee is infringed — Detention is illegal — See Constitution of India, Art. 22(5)

SC 852 D (C N 185)

—Art. 32 — Instances of self-restraint of Supreme Court under Article 32 — Existence of other ordinary remedy — Delay — No rules of limitation — Exercise of power under Article is discretionary — State cannot put fetters on Court's powers — Payment under mistake of law — Recovery of, under Section 72 Contract Act — Limitation Act prescribes limitation on grounds of public policy which has to be respected in enforcement of fundamental right — Section 12-A (4), Bombay Sales Tax Act (1946) declared invalid in 1964 — Payment towards tax made in 1959 and 1960 — Petition for recovery made 6 months after declaration of invalidity of Section 12-A (4) — Petition held barred — Limitation Act (1963), Article 24 — Contract Act (1872), Sec. 72 — Civil P. C. (1908), Section 11 — Previous petition under Article 226 dismissed not on merits — Subsequent petition under Article 32 is not barred

Constitution of India (contd.)

SC 898 (C N 191)

—Art. 133 — Interim orders of Court — Interference with, by Supreme Court

SC 891 B (C N 190)

—Art. 133 (1) — Application for special leave to appeal to Supreme Court under Art. 133 (1) — Limitation — Application for copy of judgment filed by party on 18th April 1968 — Copy prepared by office of Court on May 23, 1968 — Party not collecting copy on that date for want of funds — Copy collected thereafter on August 27, 1968 — Party held not entitled to add the whole period up to August 27, 1968 to the normal period of limitation prescribed under Art. 132 of Limitation Act — It could only add period between date of its application and date of preparation of copy by office of Court — See Limitation Act (1963), S. 12(3)

Punj 282 A (C N 41) (FB)

—Art. 136 — Registered agreement between landlord and defendant entered in the year 1911 before amendment of Section 107, T. P. Act in 1929 and signed by defendant only — Landlord thereby permitting defendant to construct house on suit property — Recital not to evict defendant or his descendants so long as they pay rent regularly — Defendant constructing house on suit property accordingly and paying rent regularly — Suit for eviction by landlord — Breach of any terms of agreement not established — High Court holding that defendant being licensee could not be evicted — Appeal against — Interference under Article 136 being discretionary Supreme Court refused to interfere — Easements Act (1882), S. 60

SC 970 (C N 197)

—Art. 136 — Appeal by special leave — Powers of Supreme Court — Dismissal of appeal under Section 410 in limine by High Court by using single word even though it raised substantial and arguable points — Dismissal is improper — Order set aside and appeal remanded for rehearing according to law

SC 977 B (C N 199)

—Art. 136 — Practice — Finding of fact — Supreme Court ordinarily does not interfere with concurrent finding of fact

Constitution of India (contd.)

arrived at by Trial Court and High Court — (Civil P. C. (1908), Section 112)

SC 987 A (C N 204)

— Art. 136 — Appeal by special leave — Exercise of special and discretionary jurisdiction — Question involving validity of statute no longer in operation — Claim not substantial — Appeal dismissed without considering merits

SC 1021 (C N 215)

— Art. 141 — Supreme Court decision is binding on High Court — It cannot be ignored on ground that relevant provision was not brought to the notice of the Supreme Court

SC 1002 C (C N 209)

— Arts. 226 and 227 — Disputed questions of fact can be determined

SC 802 B (C N 170)

— Art. 226 — Dismissal of petition in limine — Consideration

SC 802 C (C N 170)

— Art. 226 — Criminal prosecution — Delay in filing complaint — No ground by itself in dismissing complaint — Delay can be considered in arriving at final verdict — Criminal P. C. (1898), S. 190

SC 962 B (C N 193)

— Art. 226 — Writ jurisdiction — High Court will not act as Court of Appeal

SC 992 B (C N 206)

— Art. 226 — Writ petition challenging jurisdiction of Income-tax Officer to issue notice under Section 34(1) (a) Income-tax Act on ground that officer had no reason to believe — Assertion not controverted by filing affidavit or production of relevant material by Income-tax Officer — Proceedings quashed as being without jurisdiction — Order of Bombay High Court (Nag. Bench), Reversed

SC 1011 A (C N 211)

— Art. 226 — Writ of certiorari — Jurisdiction of High Court to issue — Decision of competent authorities based on misconstruction of provision of law and not on erroneous finding of fact — Writ can be issued

Andh Pra 217 B (C N 32)

— Art. 226 — Satisfaction of Governor — So long as Governor acted in good faith his satisfaction cannot be determined by Court by any objective test and inquired into by it — See Constitution of India, Art 311(2) Proviso (c)

Assam 80 A (C N 17)

— Art. 226 — Mandamus — Statutory Tribunal — No mandamus to compel it to exercise jurisdiction which it does not possess

Cal 225 A (C N 42)

— Arts. 226, 16 (1) — Posts of Upper Division Assistant and Junior Stenographer having same pay classed together, in practice, for further promotions — Confirmed Lower Division Assistant promoted as Junior Stenographer — Subsequent non-

Constitution of India (contd.)

statutory Rules, making differentiation between posts of Upper Division Assistant and Junior Stenographer for the purpose of promotion, erroneously applied retrospectively to such employee — Employee's only right under Art. 16 (1), is to be considered for promotion equally with Upper Division Clerks without being affected by those Rules — Court cannot issue direction to promote that employee unless there is any statutory rule which gives him right to be promoted

Cal 250 B (C N 51)

— Art. 226 — Infructuous writ — Appointment of R to post X — Writ petition to quash order of appointment — Petition dismissed — Appeal — During pendency of appeal, abolition of post X and appointment of R to post Y with higher scale of pay — Held, nothing could be adjudicated upon appointment of R to Y post as it would be introducing totally new case — When R did not hold post X after its abolition, writ, even if issued, would be infructuous and meaningless — (Constitution of Jammu and Kashmir (1956), S. 103) — (Letters Patent (Cal.) Cl 15)

J & K 90 A (C N 17)

— Arts. 226 and 311 — Affidavit in support of petition — Petitioners claiming rights as permanent employees — No categorical denial by Government — Civil lists and departmental budget showing their names — Petitioners' claim upheld

J & K 94 A (C N 18)

— Art. 226 — Parties to a writ petition — Government transferring some of its departments to an incorporated company — Employees challenging Government's action in altering their service conditions — Chairman of the Company also impleaded — Held, no writ could issue against him

J & K 94 B (C N 18)

— Art. 226 — Natural justice — Malpractice by candidate at examination — Enquiry — Candidate told in precise terms what charge against him was — Circumstances appearing against him put to him and explanation obtained — Procedure followed in enquiry was as laid down at his instance in writ petition filed by him challenging order of detention passed against him by Principal — College Council was to consider report of enquiry officer, an officer of candidate's choice, and to pass appropriate order — Composition of College Council, which included Principal, was disclosed to him — Procedure agreed upon did not require either that copy of enquiry officer's report should be provided to candidate and he be heard by College Council or that he should be given legal assistance — Held tribunal was only contractual domestic tribunal and there was more than sufficient compliance with principles of natural justice

Ker 142 B (C N 25)

Constitution of India (contd.)

—Art. 226 — Natural justice — It cannot be presumed that person who has once decided matter without due hearing would have such bias in favour of his decision as not to be capable of reaching fair decision after due hearing

Ker 142 C (C N 25)

—Art. 226 — Natural justice — Requirements of — Requirements would vary with circumstances of each case — Test as to whether there has been violation would be to consider what would be reaction of fair minded person of ordinary sense and sensibility who has been informed of all that has happened — Test elaborately explained

Ker 142 D (C N 25)

—Arts. 226, 14, 19 — Natural justice — It is not fundamental right under the Constitution, though its non-observance may result in contravention of fundamental rights

Ker 142 E (C N 25)

—Art. 226 — Natural justice — Natural justice 'unbound' is as bad as its being kept out of bounds

Ker 142 F (C N 25)

—Art. 226 — Bias — When one out of many, is biased, decision of collective body is not necessarily voided

Ker 142 G (C N 25)

—Art. 226 — Bias — Enquiry by quasi-judicial tribunal — 'Interest' as an objectionable factor is secondary in importance in case of quasi-judicial tribunals, a consequence of rule of necessity

Ker 142 H (C N 25)

—Art. 226 — Bias — Enquiry by quasi-judicial tribunal—Mere likelihood of bias stemming out of official association with the cause is insufficient

Ker 142 I (C N 25)

—Art. 226 — Bias — 'Real likelihood' test or 'instinctive opposition' approach is true one and any insignificant and remote interest will be insufficient to invalidate enquiry by quasi-judicial tribunal

Ker 142 J (C N 25)

—Art. 226 — Natural justice. — Requirements of — Applicability of principles of waiver and consent

Ker 142 K (C N 25)

—Art. 226 — Natural justice — Enquiry by domestic tribunal — Need for a 'two-tier hearing' is creature of Art. 311 and not necessarily of natural justice — Law is indulgent to domestic tribunals, depending on variety of factors

Ker 142 L (C N 25)

—Art. 226 — Natural justice — Fair hearing — How far fair hearing involves right to counsel is at least debatable and cannot be taken for granted in view of AIR 1960 SC 914 & 1961 (2) Lab LJ 417 (SC) & AIR 1967 SC 361, (Quare)

Ker 142 M (C N 25)

—Art. 226 — Interference with finding of fact of Domestic Tribunal — Absence of evidence — What is

Ker 142 N (C N 25)

Constitution of India (contd.)

—Art. 226 — Rules under Art. 309 proviso framed by Governor of Mysore R. 3 — Termination of service of local candidates in Motor Transport Department as a result of selection made by State Recruitment Committee — Selection quashed by High Court is invalid — Regulation of services of all local candidates continuing in service under Rule 3 — Petitioner refused benefit of Rule 3 — Discrimination — Direction for regularisation of services of petitioner given under Art. 226 — See Constitution of India, Art. 309, Proviso

Mys 160 (C N 39)

—Art. 226 — Revocation of licence under Arms Act — Speaking order passed by revoking authority — Appeal against revocation dismissed — Appellate order cannot be interfered with in writ petition merely on the ground it does not furnish any reasons for upholding revoking authority's order

Orissa 110 B (C N 39)

—Art. 226 — Order under Section 17 of Arms Act revoking licence — Order passed without giving the licensee an opportunity to show cause — Order liable to be quashed being in violation of principle of natural justice, even though section makes no specific provision for hearing party — See Arms Act (1959), S. 17

Orissa 110 C (C N 39)

—Art. 226 — Petitioner an employee of Sainik Schools society registered under Societies Registration Act — Dismissal by Principal of the School of the Society — Petitioner not holding any civil post — Principal also an employee of that Society — Remedy of writ against the Principal, held, not an appropriate remedy — (Societies Registration Act (1860), S. 3)

Pat 163 C (C N 26)

—Art. 226 — Principles of natural justice — Order of Central Government under Section 30, Mines and Minerals (Regulation and Development) Act (1957) — Opportunity of having his say in the matter not given to person aggrieved — Effect — See Mines and Minerals (Regulation and Development) Act (1957), S. 30

Pat 189 (C N 30)

—Art. 226 — Delay and laches — Order under Section 292 of Tripura State Municipal Act superseding Commissioners — Order not challenged under the provisions of the Act within period of limitation prescribed — Order held, could not be challenged even by writ petition — (Municipalities — Tripura State Municipal Act (2 of 1349 T. E.), Section 292) — (Limitation Act (1908), Art. 120) — (Municipalities — Bengal Municipal Act (15 of 1932), S. 553)

Tripura 37 A (C N 8)

—Art. 226 — Who can file writ petition — Mandamus and Certiorari — Order superseding Municipal Commissioners under Bengal Municipal Act and Tripura State Municipal Act — Aggrieved party concerned is Commissioner and not the Municipal voter — Voter can, however, pray for holding of general election — (Municipalities — (Bengal Municipal Act (15 of 1932), S. 553 — (Municipalities — Tripura State Municipal Act (2 of 1949 T. E.), Section 292)

Constitution of India (contd.)

Tripura 37 C (C N 8)

—Art. 227 — Disputed questions of fact can be determined — See Constitution of India, Art. 226 SC 802 B (C N 170)

—Art. 227 — Maharashtra Co-operative Societies Act (24 of 1961), Section 91 — Petition under Art. 227 before any order made under Section 91 — Question whether reference made by Society is dispute within Act — Matter held would be properly decided under Act and not under Art. 227 Bom 201 B (C N 34)

—Art. 245 — Overlapping entries — Pith and substance rule to be applied

SC 999 A (C N 208)

—Art. 245 — Validity of — Delegation of power under — Amounts to abdication of Legislative function by Parliament — See Civil Services — Public Employment (Requirement as to Residence) Act (1957), Section 3 Andh Pra 238 B (C N 36)

—Art. 246 (as applicable to Jammu and Kashmir) — Jammu and Kashmir State Constitution, Section 5 — Powers of State Legislature of Jammu and Kashmir — Limitations on — It has power to enact law for taxing not only sales simpliciter but also sales indivisible in character

J & K 85 A (C N 16)

—Art. 248 and Sch. VII, List I, Entry 97 — Subject-matter not covered by any of the entries in any of the Lists — It belongs exclusively to Parliament

SC 999 B (C N 208)

—Art. 248, Sch. VII, List I, Entry 97 — Gift Tax Act (1958), is validly made by Parliament. AIR 1962 Mys 269, Reversed

SC 999 D (C N 208)

—Art. 276 — See Government of India

Act (1935), S. 142-A

—Art. 276 (2) — Municipality collecting tax in excess of amount permitted by Article 276 — Suit for refund is maintainable. ILR (1967) Bom 443 (FB), Reversed

SC 1002 A (C N 209)

—Art. 276 (2), Proviso — Notification increasing tax after enacting of S. 142-A of Government of India Act, 1935, ineffective, is not revived under proviso to Article 276 (2). ILR (1967) Bom 443 (FB), Reversed

SC 1002 F (C N 209)

—Arts. 276 (2), Proviso and 277 — U. P. District Boards Act (10 of 1922), S. 105 — U. P. Zilla Parishad and Kshettra Samitis Act (33 of 1961), S. 270 (a) — Imposition of circumstance and property tax by District Board — Continuation of its levy by Zilla Parishad is valid — Maximum amount of tax can exceed Rs. 250

All 316 B (C N 50) (FB)

Constitution of India (contd.)

—Art. 276 (2), Proviso — Imposition of tax by Government agency before Constitution — Its continuance after Constitution by same agency, whether necessary

All 316 C (C N 50) (FB)

—Art. 277 — Imposition of circumstance and property tax by District Board — Continuation of its levy by Zilla Parishad is valid — Maximum amount of tax can exceed Rs. 250 — See Constitution of India, Art. 276 (2), Proviso

All 316 D (C N 50) (FB)

—Art. 277 — Words "same purpose" appearing in Art. 277 — Meaning

All 316 D (C N 50) (FB)

—Art. 295 — Recognition of claim made against former Indian States by successor State or Union — Proof of

Raj 118 B (C N 28)

—Art. 299 — Scope — Article rules out implied contract between Government and a person

Raj 118 A (C N 28)

—Art. 299 — Recording of minutes of discussion between private party and State Minister — It does not suggest that a valid agreement has been arrived at between private party and State in accordance with Art. 299 — See Contract Act (1872), S. 2

Raj 118 E (C N 20)

—Art. 299 — Claim for compensation under Section 70 of Contract Act is not founded upon contract but upon quasi-contract — Fact that contract has not been made as required by Art. 299 is not material — See Contract Act (1872), Section 70

Raj 118 F (C N 28)

—Art. 309, Proviso, Art. 226 and Article 14 — Rules under Art. 309, Proviso, framed by Governor of Mysore, Rule 3 — Termination of service of local candidates in Motor Transport Department as a result of selection made by State Recruitment Committee — Selection quashed by High Court as invalid — Regularisation of services of all local candidates continuing in service under Rule 3 — Discrimination — Direction for regularisation of services of petitioner given under Art. 226

Mys 160 (C N 39)

—Art. 311 — Affidavit in support of petition — Petitioners claiming rights as permanent employees — No categorical denial by Government — Civil lists and departmental budget showing their names — Petitioner's claim upheld — See Constitution of India, Art. 266

J & K 94 A (C N 18)

—Art. 311 — See Constitution of India, Art. 226

Ker 142 L (C N 25)

—Art. 311 — Person serving under registered society is an employee of society under control of the Board of Governors — His service conditions are regulated by rules and regulations framed by Society — He must be deemed to hold post under the Society and not to hold any civil post

Constitution of India (contd.)

either under the Union or State — Protection under Art. 311, cannot be claimed — See Societies Registration Act (1860), Section 6 Pat 163 B (C N 26)

—Art. 311 — Confirmation of Government servant owing to wrong interpretation of Punjab Government Service (War) Amendment Rules (1943) — Government can revise its decision at subsequent stage when mistake comes to its notice — Consequent reduction of servant does not amount to reduction in rank Punj 241 B (C N 34) (FB)

—Arts. 311 (2), Proviso (c) and 226 — Satisfaction of Governor — So long as Governor acted in good faith his satisfaction cannot be determined by Court by any objective test and inquired into by it Assam 80 A (C N 17)

—Art. 311 (2) Proviso (c) (after Constitution 15th Amendment) — Mere reference to proviso in Governor's order and inappropriate application of old clause and proviso cannot show that satisfaction of Governor was obtained as contemplated by statute Assam 80 B (C N 17)

—Art. 311 (2) — See Civil Services — Kashmir Civil Services (Classification, Control and Appeal) Rules, R. 52, Note 6 J & K 94 D (C N 18)

—Art. 372 — Existing Law — Scheduled area — Laws in other parts of India would not be existing Laws

SC 951 E (C N 194)
—Fifth Schedule Cl. 5 (2) — Power to apply laws under—Not synonymous with conditional or delegated legislations SC 951 D (C N 194)

—Fifth Schedule, Cl. 5 (2) (3) — "May make regulations" — Power to make regulations embraces power to apply laws SC 951 C (C N 194)

—Sch. VII, List 1, Item 41 — International trade — Irrevocable letters of credit — Nature of — See Banking Regulation Act (1949), S. 6

SC 891 A (C N 190)
—Sch. VII, List I, Entry 97 — Gift Tax Act 1958, is validly made by Parliament — See Constitution of India, Art. 248

—Sch. VII, List I, Entry 97 — See Constitution of India, Art. 248 SC 999 B (C N 208)

—Sch. VII, List I, Entry 97 — See Constitution of India, Art. 248 SC 999 D (C N 208)

—Sch. VII, List 2, Entry 49 — Gift Tax Act (1958) does not fall under Entry 49. AIR 1962 Mys 269, Reversed

SC 999 E (C N 208)
—Sch. 7, List 2, Entry 54 — Words "tax on sale or purchase of goods" — Words do not embrace individual contract of sale J & K 85 B (C N 16)

Constitution of Jammu & Kashmir (1956)

—S. 103 — See Constitution of India, Art. 226

Constitution of Jammu & Kashmir (contd.)

—S. 124 — Exercise of power under Section 124 of the Jammu and Kashmir State Constitution — Articles of Association of Jammu and Kashmir Industries do not contain such power — See Civil Services — Kashmir Civil Services (Classification, Control and Appeal) Rules, R. 52 J & K 94 C (C N 18)

—S. 126 — See Civil Services — Kashmir Civil Services (Classification, Control and Appeal) Rules, R. 52, Note 6 J & K 94 D (C N 18)

Contract Act (9 of 1872)

—S. 2 — Recording of minutes of discussion between private party and State Minister — It does not suggest that a valid agreement has been arrived at between private party and the State in accordance with Art. 299 of Constitution — (Constitution of India, Article 299)

Raj 118 E (C N 28)
—S. 10 — Construction of contract — Intention is to be gathered from relevant terms of contract and not from subsequent conduct of parties

Madh Pra 119 E (C N 25)

—Ss. 23, 151 — Launderer's liability — Clause on receipt stipulating that launderer shall incur no liability in respect of any damage — Validity — No question of public policy is involved but minimum duty of care imposed upon all bailees under Section 151 cannot be avoided by inserting such a clause — Breach of that duty clothes party affected with right to recover damages commensurate with consequences Mys 154 (C N 36)

—S. 70 — Scope and applicability — Conditions precedent — Claim for compensation under Section 70 is not founded upon contract but upon quasi-contract or restitution — Fact that contract has not been made as required by Art. 299 is not material — (Constitution of India, Article 299) Raj 118 F (C N 28)

—S. 72 — Payment under mistake of law — Recovery of — Payment of tax under law — Law later on declared ultra vires — Payment is not under mistake of law — See Constitution of India, Art. 32 SC 898 (C N 191)

—S. 72 — Refund of tax illegally collected — Suit for, is maintainable — ILR (1967) Bom 443 (FB), Reversed SC 1002 B (C N 209)

—S. 73 — Contract of Service — Incidents of — Services of employee lent to third person — Original employment does not cease — Third person cannot dismiss employee — See C. P. and Berar Industrial Disputes Settlement Act (1947), Section 16 SC 823 (C N 177)

—S. 74 — Earnest money — Not same as part payment of consideration—(Words and Phrases — Earnest money) Madh Pra 119 B (C N 25)

Contract Act (contd.)

—S. 151 — Launderer's liability — Clause on receipt stipulating that launderer shall incur no liability in respect of any damage — Validity — No question of public policy is involved but minimum duty of care imposed upon all bailees under Section 151 cannot be avoided by inserting such a clause — Breach of that duty clothes party affected with right to recover damages commensurate with consequences — See Contract Act (1872), Section 23 Mys 154 (C N 36)

CO-OPERATIVE SOCIETIES

—Himachal Pradesh Co-operative Societies Act (13 of 1956)

—S. 101 and Sch. 1, Entry 3 — Himachal Pradesh Co-operative Societies Rules (1960), R. 92 — Provisions are discriminatory and violate provisions of Art. 14 of the Constitution — (Constitution of India, Art. 14) Delhi 119 (C N 28)

—Sch. 1, Entry 3 — The provisions read with Section 101 of the Act are discriminatory and violate provisions of Art. 14 of the Constitution — See Himachal Pradesh Co-operative Societies Act (13 of 1956), S. 101 Delhi 119 (C N 28)

—Himachal Pradesh Co-operative Societies Rules (1960)

—R. 92 — Provisions are discriminatory and violate provisions of Art. 14 of the Constitution — See Himachal Pradesh Co-operative Societies Act (13 of 1956), Section 101 Delhi 119 (C N 28)

—Madras Co-operative Societies Act (53 of 1961)

—S. 72 — Supersession of society — Writ against — High Court will not act as court of appeal and re-appraise facts SC 992 C (C N 206)

—S. 72 — Interpretation — Use of Title of Act — See Civil P. C. (1908), Pre. Mad 212 A (C N 56) (FB)

—S. 72 — Supersession of committee — Subjective satisfaction of Registrar necessary — Inquiry and inspection of society essential Mad 212 B (C N 56) (FB)

—S. 72 — Supersession of committee — Committee functioning could be superseded though the irregularities were committed by members of earlier committee — W. A. No. 113 of 1969 (Mad), Overruled Mad 212 C (C N 56) (FB)

—S. 72 (1) — Supersession of society under Section 71 — Recourse to Sections 64 to 67 need not be taken — Madras High Court decision, Reversed SC 992 A (C N 206)

—Maharashtra Co-operative Societies Act (24 of 1961)

—Ss. 91 and 96 — Rules framed under Sections — Constitution of India, Arts. 14, 19 (1) (f) — Provisions of Sections 91 and 96 and Rules under not violative of Articles 14 and 19 Bom 201 A (C N 34)

Co-op. Societies — Maha. Co-op. Societies Act (contd.)

—S. 91 — Petition under Art. 227 before any order made under Section 91 — Question whether reference made by Society is dispute within Act — Matter held would be properly decided under Act and not under Art. 227 — See Constitution of India, Art. 227

Bom 201 B (C N 34)

—S. 96 — Provisions of Sections 91 and 96 and Rules under not violative of Articles 14 and 19 — See Co-operative Societies — Maharashtra Co-operative Societies Act (24 of 1961), Section 91

Bom 201 A (C N 34)

COURT-FEES AND SUITS VALUATIONS

—Court-fees Act (7 of 1870)

—S. 19-H — Scope — Succession of steps and events in probate proceeding Cal 236 A (C N 46)

—S. 19-1 — Application for probate or letters of administration — Section does not prevent Court from hearing application — It only prevents it from making order granting probate until court-fees have been paid, AIR 1955 Pat 362, Dissent, from Cal 236 B (C N 46)

Criminal Law Amendment Act (46 of 1952)

—S. 8 (3) — Trial under — Provisions of Section 517 (3), Criminal P. C. apply — Section 8 (3) of Criminal Law Amendment Act (1952) does not render them inapplicable — See Prevention of Corruption Act (1947), S. 5 (3) Manipur 40 B (C N 12)

Criminal Procedure Code (5 of 1898)

—S. 4 (1) (f) — Offence under Sec. 26, Municipal Act — Arrest without warrant — Offence is cognizable — See Municipalities — Maharashtra Municipalities Act (40 of 1965), S. 26 Bom 240 (C N 41)

—S. 94 — Case instituted on private complaint — Documents referred in Section 173 (4) cannot be made available to accused by resorting to Section 94 — See Criminal P. C. (1898), S. 190 (1)

SC 962 C (C N 195)

—S. 94 — Revision — Summoning of documents — Matter is within discretion of trial Court — Interference in revision — Propriety — See Criminal P. C. (1898), Section 439 SC 962 D (C N 195)

—S. 133 — Court's duty to conduct preliminary enquiry in cases where the respondent denies existence of public right on reliable evidence — See Criminal P. C. (1898), S. 139-A Pat 207 (C N 32)

—S. 137 — Court's duty to conduct preliminary enquiry in cases where the respondent denies existence of public right on reliable evidence — See Criminal P. C. (1898), S. 139-A Pat 207 (C N 32)

—S. 138 — Court's duty to conduct preliminary enquiry in cases where the respondent denies existence of public right

Criminal P. C. (contd.)

on reliable evidence — See Criminal P. C. (1898), S. 139-A Pat 207 (C N 32)
— Ss. 139-A, 133, 137 and 138 — Court's duty to conduct preliminary enquiry in cases where the respondent denies existence of public right on reliable evidence

Pat 207 (C N 32)

— S. 155 (2) — Raid by police with intention to detect cognizable offence under Rule 131-B of Defence of India Rules — Submission of report by police for offence under Section 134, Customs Act — Permission under Section 137, Customs Act obtained — Magistrate can take cognizance — Report under Section 173 can be treated as complaint under Section 190 (1) (b) — No evasion of Section 155 (2) — See Criminal P. C. (1898), S. 190 (1)

Bom 225 (C N 39)

— S. 159 — Investigation of cognizable offence already taken up by police — Magistrate cannot direct police to stop investigation and order Magisterial enquiry — Observation in (1963) 29 Cut LT 164, Diss. from Orissa 107 (C N 38)

— S. 162 — Section safeguards right of private complainant — See Criminal P. C. (1898), S. 190 (1) SC 962 C (C N 195)

— S. 164 — Charge under S. 302/149 and Section 120-B, I. P. C. — Statement by accused under Sec. 164, Criminal P. C. — Accused exculpating himself but only admitting his presence at the place of occurrence — It can only be treated as admission of the fact of his presence — Statement does not amount to confession and what is stated by accused against co-accused cannot be used as evidence against other co-accused — See Evidence Act (1872), S. 17 Orissa 100 B (C N 37)

— S. 173 — Case instituted on private complaint — Documents referred in Section 173 (4) cannot be made available to accused — See Criminal P. C. (1898), Section 190 (1) SC 962 C (C N 195)

— S. 173 — Raid by police with intention to detect cognizable offence under R. 131-B of Defence of India Rules — Submission of report by police for offence under Section 134, Customs Act — Permission under Section 137, Customs Act obtained — Magistrate can take cognizance — Report under Section 173 can be treated as complaint under S. 190 (1) (b) — See Criminal P. C. (1898), S. 190 (1) Bom 225 (C N 39)

— S. 190 — Criminal prosecution — Delay in filing complaint — No ground by itself in dismissing complaint — Delay can be considered in arriving at final verdict — See Constitution of India, Article 226 SC 962 B (C N 195)

— Ss. 190 (1), 173, 94, 251-A, 162 — Case instituted on private complaint — Documents referred in Section 173 (4) cannot be made available to accused. 69 Bom LR 421, Reversed SC 962 C (C N 195)

Criminal P. C. (contd.)

— Ss. 190 (1), 252, 251-A, 173 and 155 (2) — Raid by Police with intention to detect cognizable offence under Rule 131-B of Defence of India Rules — Submission of report by Police for offence under Section 134, Customs Act — Permission under Section 137 of Customs Act obtained — Magistrate can take cognizance — Report under Section 173 can be treated as complaint under Section 190 (1) (b) — No evasion of Section 155 (2)

Bom 225 (C N 39)

— S. 190 (1) (b) — Offence under Section 26 is cognizable — Complaint by Chief Officer under Section 296 is not necessary for taking cognizance — See Municipalities — Maharashtra Municipalities Act (40 of 1965), S. 26

Bom 240 (C N 41)

— S. 198 — "Person aggrieved by such offence" — Institution of proceedings under Section 500, Penal Code on complaint alleging defamation of Ashram — Complaint filed by member of Ashram — Complainant not being a "person aggrieved" cognizance taken under Section 198 is improper and vitiates proceedings

Cal 248 A (C N 50)

— S. 207-A — Revision against order of commitment — Interference when justified — See Criminal P. C. (1898), S. 439

SC 863 A (C N 187)

— Ss. 207-A, 209 — Enquiry preparatory to commitment — Object — Accused when can be discharged

SC 863 B (C N 187)

— S. 209 — Principle under — Applicable to cases instituted on police report — See Criminal P. C. (1898), S. 207-A

SC 863 B (C N 187)

— S. 209 — Duty of Magistrate in committal proceeding — He should sift the evidence only to see if prima facie case is made out — He should not himself assume jurisdiction of Sessions Court

SC 1015 (C N 212)

— S. 209 — No reasonable possibility of conviction — Discharge of accused

Punj 272 (C N 37)

— S. 251-A — Case instituted on private complaint — Documents referred in Section 173 (4) cannot be made available to accused — See Criminal P. C. (1898), Section 190 (1) SC 962 C (C N 195)

— S. 251-A — Submission of report under Section 173, Criminal P. C. in respect of non-cognizable offence — Magistrate taking cognizance by treating report as complaint — Procedure under S. 252 is to be followed and not under S. 251-A — See Criminal P. C. (1898), S. 190 (1)

Bom 225 (C N 39)

— S. 252 — Submission of report under Section 173, Criminal P. C. in respect of non-cognizable offence — Magistrate taking cognizance by treating report as complaint — Procedure under Section 252 is to be followed and not under S. 251-A —

Criminal P. C. (contd.)

See Criminal P. C. (1898), S. 190 (1)

(Born 225 (C N 39)

—S. 270 (e) — Public Prosecutor not available to conduct case before Sessions Judge — Case transferred to other District — See Criminal P. C. (1898), Section 526 (1) Cal 241 C (C N 48)

—S. 403 — Rule of autre fois acquit and issue estoppel rule — When can be invoked — Criminal prosecution of accused for smuggling — Not barred by earlier proceedings against him under Sea Customs Act — See Constitution of India, Art. 20 (2) SC 962 A (C N 195)

—S. 410 — Appeals under, from sentence of Sessions Court — Substantial and arguable points raised — High Court should not dismiss appeal in limine — Right of self-defence is arguable and substantial point — (Penal Code (1860), Section 97) — Judgment of Bombay High Court, D/- 26-6-1967, Reversed SC 979 A (C N 200)

—S. 421 — Summary dismissal of appeal — Appeal under Section 410 from sentence of Court of Session — Discretion of High Court — Principles — Substantial and arguable points — Illustrations SC 977 A (C N 199)

—Ss. 439, 207-A — Revision against order of commitment — Interference when justified SC 863 A (C N 187)

—Ss. 439, 94 — Revision — Summoning of documents — Matter is within discretion of trial Court — Interference in revision — Property, 69 Bbm LR 421, Reversed SC 962 D (C N 195)

—S. 439 — Essential Services Maintenance Ordinance (1968), Ss. 4, 5 — Complaints, against strikers for offences under Sections 4, 5, by persons as officers of Central Government and not to vindicate any personal grievance — Prosecution by police — Consent to withdraw cases granted to Public Prosecutors in spite of opposition by complainants — Revision application by complainants, held maintainable — In a matter of public importance, High Court can exercise its powers of revision suo motu and in such cases locus standi of person bringing matter to notice of High Court would be of no consequence Ker 158 B (C N 26) (FB)

—S. 488 — Application under — Notice sent by registered post — Returned — Endorsement of refusal by husband — Attempt of service by affixture to husband's house — Return of notice — Endorsement — There was no such residence and husband doing business at other places — No attempt to serve notice at those places — Ex parte order against husband — Application by husband to set aside the order — Application beyond 3 months from the date of order — Prayer for extension of period of limitation — Held period could be extended under Section 5

Criminal P. C. (contd.)

Limitation Act under the circumstances — See Limitation Act (1963), S. 5

Mad 242 C (C N 64)

—S. 488 (6) — Application under — Ex parte order — Procedure for service of summons under Sections 68 to 71 not followed — Good ground to set aside ex parte orders — But ex parte order not invalid — Application to set aside the order — Bar of limitation of three months applies, 1963 Mad LJ (Cri) 597 & AIR 1963 Mys 239, Dissented.

Mad 242 A (C N 64)

—S. 494 — Withdrawal of prosecution — Power must be exercised by Public Prosecutor in the light of his own judgment and not at dictation of some other authority, however, high — Grounds for withdrawal, stated — Consent of Court, when can be given indicated — Prosecution against strikers for offences under Essential Services Maintenance Ordinance, 1968 — Application by Public Prosecutor for consent to withdraw cases — State Government's order mentioned as one of grounds — State Government's order disclosing no legitimate ground — Consent refused — Object of Ordinance pointed out Ker 158 A (C N 26) (FB)

—S. 517 (3) — Trial under — Provisions of Section 517 (3), Criminal P. C. apply — Section 8 (3) of Criminal Law Amendment Act (1952) does not render them inapplicable — See Prevention of Corruption Act (1947), S. 5 (3)

Manipur 40 B (C N 12)

—S. 523 (1) — Person entitled to possession — Determination of — Test is not mere possession of property at time of seizure but as to who is entitled to lawful possession Mad 220 (C N 57)

—S. 526 — Mistake in heading of application — Application intended to be one under Section 526 (1) (e) stated to be by mistake as one under Section 526 (1) (a) — High Court can still pass appropriate order for transfer Cal 241 A (C N 48)

—Ss. 526 (1), 270 (e) — Grounds of transfer — Expedient for the ends of justice — No Public Prosecutor available to conduct prosecution before Sessions Judge — Furthermore one of accused who was at time of incident Local Block Development Officer, continuing as Sub-Deputy Collector at that place — Though accused had nothing to do with Sessions Judge hearing case witnesses would be people of locality where accused was Block Development Officer at relevant time and was still officer where trial was to be held — Held it would be expedient for ends of justice that trial should be held elsewhere though that meant inconvenience to accused who had already engaged lawyers and paid their fees Cal 241 C (C N 48)

—S. 526 (3) — 'Party interested' — Meaning of — Person who lodges F.I.R.

Criminal P. C. (contd.)

is 'party interested' in case prosecuted by State — AIR 1920 Pat 836 & AIR 1953 All 698, Dissent. from — Even assuming that such person is not competent to make application under Section 526, there is no bar to make order of transfer if High Court is otherwise satisfied that facts and circumstances of case justify such transfer
Cal 241 B (C N 48)

Custom (Punjab)

—Adoption — Kangra district — Customary adoption does not exclude from its fold the adoption of a married man, particularly amongst Dehra tribes

Delhi 116 A (C N 27)

—Ancestral property — Alienation — Right to challenge — Gift in favour of adopted sons, the next male descendants, and others with their consent — Collaterals of the adopters in the fourth degree cannot challenge its validity

Delhi 116 B (C N 27)

Customs Act (52 of 1962)

—S. 107 — Statement under — Statement not by person accused of any offence within Art. 20 (3) of the Constitution of India — See Constitution of India, Art. 20 (3) SC 941 E (C N 193)

—S. 108 — Statement under — Statement not by person accused of any offence within Art. 20 (3) of the Constitution of India — See Constitution of India, Art. 20 (3) SC 941 E (C N 193)

—S. 135 — Raid by police with intention to detect cognizable offence under Rule 131-B of Defence of India Rules — Submission of report by police for offence under Section 134, Customs Act — Permission under Section 137, Customs Act obtained — Magistrate can take cognizance — Report under Section 173 can be treated as complaint under S. 190 (1) (b) — No evasion of S. 155 (2) — See Criminal P. C. (1898), S. 190 (1)

Bom 225 (C N 39)

—S. 137 — Raid by police with intention to detect cognizable offence under Rule 131-B of Defence of India Rules — Submission of report by police for offence under Section 134, Customs Act — Permission under Section 137, Customs Act obtained — Magistrate can take cognizance — Report under Section 173 can be treated as complaint under Section 190 (1) (b) — No evasion of Sec. 155 (2) — See Criminal P. C. (1898), S. 190 (1)

Bom 225 (C N 39)

DEBT LAWS

—Bihar Money-lenders (Regulation of Transactions) Act (7 of 1939)

—Ss. 2 (f), 4 — Loan — Definition of — Lessee unable to pay salami amount — Lessee mortgaging the lease property — Mortgage deed executed in favour of lessor —

Debt Laws — Bihar Money-lenders (Regulation of Transactions) Act (contd.)

Transaction is not 'loan' within the meaning of the section — Provisions of S. 4 not attracted

Pat 167 C (C N 27)

—S. 4 — Registration as money-lender — Provisions not applicable where money-lending is casual — Professional money-lenders — Test of

Pat 167 A (C N 27)

—S. 4 — Maintainability of suit without registration — Onus to prove is on plaintiff

Pat 167 B (C N 27)

—S. 4 — Loan — Definition of — Lessee unable to pay salami amount — Lessee mortgaging the lease property — Mortgage deed executed in favour of lessor — Transaction is not 'loan' within the meaning of the section — Provisions of S. 4 not attracted — See Debt Laws—Bihar Money-lenders (Regulation of Transactions) Act (7 of 1939), S. 2 (f) Pat 167 C (C N 27)

Defence of India Rules (1962)

—R. 131-B — Raid by police with intention to detect cognizable offence under R. 131-B of Defence of India Rules — Submission of report by police for offence under Section 134, Customs Act — Permission under S. 137, Customs Act, obtained — Magistrate can take cognizance — Report under S. 173 can be treated as complaint under S. 190 (1) (b) — No evasion of Section 155 (2) — See Criminal P. C. (1898), Section 190 (1) Bom 225 (C N 39)

Delhi and Ajmer Rent Control Act (38 of 1952)

See under Houses and Rents.

Delhi Rent Control Act (59 of 1958)

See under Houses and Rents.

Divorce Act (4 of 1869)

—Ss. 7 and 10 — Petition for divorce on ground that respondent was not heard of for more than seven years — Petition not maintainable

Mad 240 (C N 63)

—S. 10 — Desertion — What amounts to — Constructive desertion — See Special Marriage Act (1954), S. 27 (b)

Cal 266 D (C N 54)

—S. 10 — Cruelty — Legal cruelty — What amounts to, stated — See Special Marriage Act (1954), S. 27 (d)

Cal 266 E (C N 54)

—S. 10 — Adultery — Must be proved beyond reasonable doubt and not merely on balance of probability — See Special Marriage Act (1954), S. 27

Cal 266 E (C N 54)

—S. 10 — Pregnancy per alium prior to marriage — Not ground for dissolution of marriage

Mad 211 (C N 55) (SB)

—S. 10 — Petition for divorce on ground that respondent was not heard of for more than seven years — Petition not maintainable — See Divorce Act (1869), S. 7

Mad 240 (C N 63)

Divorce Act (contd.)

—S. 14 — Divorce proceedings by wife — Delay of 21 months held not unnecessary — See Special Marriage Act (1954), S. 34 (1) (c) Cal 266 E (C N 54)

—S. 18 — Divorce petition by wife under Special Marriage Act — Relief as in petition is available to respondent husband only on compliance with provisions of Special Marriage Act (Calcutta High Court) Rules (1955) incorporated in Civil Rules and Orders, Vol. I, as R. 340-A — Relief is not available at appellate stage — See Special Marriage Act (1954), S. 35 Cal 266 C (C N 54)

—Ss. 18 and 19 — 'Impotency', meaning of — Disability arising from mental or moral causes is sufficient — Due to wife's mental disease the husband could not at the time of marriage and on the date he instituted suit, have sexual intercourse with the wife — Decree declaring marriage as null and void, held, could be granted Mad 237 (C N 62)

—S. 19 — 'Impotency', meaning of — Disability arising from mental or moral cause is sufficient — See Divorce Act (1869), S. 18 Mad 237 (C N 62)

Dock Workers (Regulation of Employment) Act (9 of 1948)

—S. 3 — Administering one of the objects of scheme under S. 3 is not same thing as management of Board itself — See City Civil Court Act (W. B. Act 21 of 1953), S. 5 (4) Cal 227 (C N 43)

—S. 3-B — Administering one of the objects of scheme under S. 3 is not same thing as management of Board itself — See City Civil Court Act (W. B. Act 21 of 1953), S. 4 (4) Cal 227 (C N 43)

Easements Act (5 of 1882)

—S. 1 — Applicability — Act not applicable to certain area — Still principles incorporated in the provisions of the Act can be applied All 307 A (C N 48)

—S. 7 — Riparian rights — Water from spring only source of drinking water for the residents of a village — Construction of tank and pipe at the spring for taking water to the village for that purpose — Construction causing no obstruction to the supply of water from that spring which flows downstream — Construction cannot be objected to by the residents of village at lower level who have only seasonal right to take water from that stream for irrigating their land Delhi 114 (C N 26)

—S. 60 — Registered agreement between landlord and defendant entered in the year 1911 and signed by defendant only — Landlord thereby permitting defendant to construct house on suit property — Recital not to evict defendant or his descendants so long as they pay rent regularly — Defendant constructing house on suit property accordingly and paying rent regularly — Suit for eviction by landlord — Breach of any terms of agreement not established — High Court holding that defendant being licensee could not be evicted — Appeal against — Interference under Art. 136 being discretionary, Supreme Court refused to interfere — See Constitution of India, Art. 136 SC 970 (C N 197)

Easements Act (contd.)

East Punjab Holdings (Consolidation and Prevention of Fragmentation) Act (50 of 1948)

See under Tenancy Laws.

EDUCATION—Kerala University Act (14 of 1957)

—S. 19, read with S. 26 — Ordinances under — They have nothing to do with internal affairs of affiliated colleges, such as, examinations held by them, even if incidental result be detention in University Course — (Obiter) Ker 142 A (C N 25)

Employees' Provident Funds Act (19 of 1952)

—S. 1 (3) (a) — Employees' Provident Funds Scheme (1952), Cl. 26 — S. 1 (3) (a) — Expression "in which 20 or more persons are employed" — Meaning of — Employment of 20 or more persons even for a period of one day in a year is sufficient to attract the provisions of the Act — Meaning of the section is not controlled by Cl. 26 of the Scheme Mad 224 A (C N 58)

—S. 5 — Employees' Provident Funds Scheme, Cl. 39 — Administrative charges — Communication sent to employer stating that provisions of the Act and scheme are applicable to his establishment from the date the establishment was found employing 22 persons during inspection — Administrative charges can be collected from the employer even for the period earlier to the date of communication, from the date when the scheme became applicable to the establishment Mad 224 B (C N 58)

—S. 7-A — Provisions of the Act and scheme applied to an establishment — Commissioner by communication asking the Collector to collect certain amount from employer by way of contribution and administrative charges — Employer not given opportunity to represent his case before determining the amount mentioned in the communication — The communication cannot stand being in violation of sub-section (3) of S. 7-A Mad 224 C (C N 58)

Employees' Provident Funds Scheme (1952)

—Cl. 26 — S. 1 (3) (a) — Expression "in which 20 or more persons are employed" — Meaning of — Employment of 20 or more persons even for a period of one day in a year is sufficient to attract the provisions of the Act — Meaning of the section is not controlled by Cl. 26 of the Employees' Provident Funds Scheme (contd.)

Scheme — See Employees' Provident Funds Act (1952), S. 1 (3) (a)

Mad 224 A (C N 58)

—Cl. 39 — Administrative charges — Communication sent to employer stating that provisions of the Act and scheme are applicable to his establishment from the date the establishment was found employing 22 persons during inspection—Administrative charges can be collected from the employer even for the period earlier to the date of communication, from the date when the Scheme became applicable to the establishment — See Employees' Provident Funds Act (1952), S. 5

Mad 224 B (C N 58)

Essential Commodities Act (10 of 1955)

—Ss. 2 (3), 3 (3-C) (as amended in 1967)—Sugar produced in 1966-67 damaged by fire and reprocessed in 1967-68 — Reprocessed sugar does not become fresh sugar produced in 1967-68 — S. 3 (3) does not apply — Portion of damaged unprocessed sugar containing more than 90 per cent sucrose — No power in Central Government to give directions for its reprocess—It is imperative on Central Government to fix price for its release

Delhi 122 (C N 29) (FB)

—S. 3 (3-C) — Sugar produced in 1966-67 damaged by fire and reprocessed in 1967-68 — Reprocessed sugar is not fresh sugar but continues to be sugar produced in 1966-67, to justify its release at the rates fixed for that year — S. 3 (3) does not apply — Portion of damaged unprocessed sugar containing more than 90 per cent sucrose — No power in Central Government to give directions for its reprocess — It is imperative on Central Government to fix price for its release — See Essential Commodities Act (1955) (as amended in 1967), S. 2 (3)

Delhi 122 (C N 29) (FB)

—S. 7 — Conviction under — Propriety — Dealer charged for storing foodgrains without entering in stock register — Seizure of stock-book and other registers — Delay in filing complaint — Conviction of accused mainly on ground of tampering with record while in possession of Supply Officer — Failure to prove that tampering was in interest of dealer or made at his instance — Other records not proving prosecution case — Held, conviction was improper— Decision of Patna High Court, Reversed SC 989 (C N 205)

Essential Services Maintenance Ordinance (1968)

—S. 4 — Complaints against strikers for offences under Ss. 4, 5, by persons as officers of Central Government and not to indicate any personal grievance — Prosecution by Police — Consent to withdraw cases granted to Public Prosecutors in spite of opposition by complainants — Revision application by complainants, held, maintainable — In a matter of public importance, High Court can exercise its powers of revision suo motu and in such cases locus standi of person bringing matter to notice of High Court would be of no consequence— See Criminal P. C. (1898), S. 439

Essential Services Maintenance Ordinance (contd.)

Ker 158 B (C N 26) (FB)

—S. 5 — Complaints against strikers for offences under Ss. 4, 5, by persons as officers of Central Government and not to indicate any personal grievance — Prosecution by Police — Consent to withdraw cases granted to Public Prosecutors in spite of opposition by complainants — Revision application by complainants, held, maintainable — In a matter of public importance, High Court can exercise its powers of revision suo motu and in such cases locus standi of person bringing matter to notice of High Court would be of no consequence— See Criminal P. C. (1898), S. 439

Ker 158 B (C N 26) (FB)

Evidence Act (1 of 1872)

—S. 5 — Credibility of witness

Orissa 100 C (C N 37)

—S. 5 — Evidence of past events—Witnesses cannot be expected to speak to details of events which happened several years before they give their evidence

Tripura 43 (C N 10)

—Ss. 17, 18 and 30 — Charge under Section 302/149 and Section 120-B, I.P.C. — Statement by accused under Section 164, Cr. P. C. — Accused exculpating himself but only admitting his presence at the place of occurrence — It can only be treated as admission of the fact of his presence — Statement does not amount to confession and what is stated by accused against co-accused cannot be used as evidence against other co-accused Orissa 100 B (C N 37)

—S. 18 — Charge under S. 302/149 and S. 120-B, I. P. C. — Statement by accused under S. 164, Cr. P. C. — Accused exculpating himself but only admitting his presence at the place of occurrence — It can only be treated as admission of the fact of his presence — Statement does not amount to confession and what is stated by accused against co-accused cannot be used as evidence against other co-accused — See Evidence Act (1872), S. 17

Orissa 100 B (C N 37)

—S. 25 — Police officer who is—Officer of Customs is not Police officer

SC 940 B (C N 193)

—S. 25 — Police officer — Customs officer acting under Customs Act of 1962 — Not a Police officer SC 940 D (C N 193)

—S. 30 — Charge under S. 302/149 and S. 120-B, I. P. C. — Statement by accused under S. 164, Cr. P. C. — Accused exculpating himself but only admitting his presence at the place of occurrence — It can only be treated as admission of the fact of his presence — Statement does not amount to confession and what is stated by accused against co-accused cannot be used as evidence against other co-accused — See Evidence Act (1872), S. 17

Evidence Act (contd.)

Orissa 100 B (C N 37)

—S. 32 (3) — Applicability — Clause applies to statements against pecuniary or proprietary interest of person making it or when, if true, would expose him to prosecution — Statement by another person that he had lent money to the accused is not relevant under S. 32 (3)

Manipur 40 C (C N 12)

—S. 33 — Applicability — Requirements — Right and opportunity to cross-examine — Effective exercise of right not necessary — Opportunity is sufficient — AIR 1925 Oudh 726, Diss. from

Orissa 100 A (C N 37)

—Ss. 101-104 — Plea of benami referring to sham transaction — Want of consideration for transaction must be established by party pleading — See Transfer of Property Act (1882), S. 53

Assam 75 B (C N 16)

—Ss. 101-104 — Misapplication of capital of company resulting in loss — Once Liquidator shows that there was declaration of dividend resulting in misapplication — Burden shifts on to directors to show that it was not actually paid — See Companies Act (1956), S. 543 — Ker 131 C (C N 23)

—S. 106 — Consignment booked at owner's risk rate — Damages to goods in transit — Responsibility of Railway — Negligence on the part of Railway Administration or its servant must be proved — Disclosure as to how consignment was dealt with in course of transit — Railway is not bound to disclose where Cls. (a) and (b) of 74-D are not applicable — No disclosure sought for by plaintiff — Adverse inference cannot be drawn against Railway — See Railways Act (1890) (before its amendment by Act 39 of 1961), S. 74-C (3) — Pat 182 B (C N 29)

—S. 114 — Consignment booked at owner's risk rate — Damages to goods in transit — Responsibility of Railway — Negligence on the part of Railway Administration or its servant must be proved — Disclosure as to how consignment was dealt with in course of transit — Railway is not bound to disclose where Cls. (a) and (b) of 74-D are not applicable — No disclosure sought for by plaintiff — Adverse inference cannot be drawn against Railway — See Railways Act (1890) (before its amendment by Act 39 of 1961), S. 74-C (3) — Pat 182 B (C N 29)

—S. 114 — Entries in record of rights — Presumption that they are correct is rebuttable — Tripura 43 C (C N 10)

—S. 123 — Document which embodies minutes of discussion between private party and State Minister — State can claim privilege under Section 123 — Expression

Evidence Act (contd.)

"affairs of the State" — Meaning — (Words and Phrases — "Affairs of the State")

Raj 118 D (C N 28)

—S. 133 — Approver's testimony and its corroboration — Earlier statement of approver to police — Omission in such statement does not necessarily render his evidence unreliable

SC 1006 (C N 210)

—S. 154 — Fact that witness has become hostile — Fact to be established by eliciting information giving indication of hostility

Mys 157 A (C N 38)

Expenditure Tax Act (29 of 1957)

—S. 3 — Hindu undivided family — Assessee a separated member of Hindu undivided family marrying with Australian lady under Special Marriage Act — Son born out of such wedlock — Assessee is entitled to claim status of Hindu undivided family for purposes of assessment — See Income-tax Act (1922), S. 3

Mad 249 D (C N 07)

Factories Act (63 of 1948)

—S. 106 — Period of three months — It means period of three calendar months

Andh Pra 234 A (C N 35)

—S. 106 — "Within three months of the date" — It means within three calendar months after the commission of offence came to knowledge of the Inspector

Andh Pra 234 B (C N 35)

General Clauses Act (10 of 1897)

—S. 3 (35) — Period of three months — It means period of three calendar months — See Factories Act (1948), S. 106

Andh Pra 234 A (C N 35)

—S. 9 (1) — "Within three months of the date" — "Of" means "after" — See Factories Act (1948), S. 106

Andh Pra 234 B (C N 35)

Gift Tax Act (18 of 1958)

—Preamble — Act is validly made by Parliament. AIR 1962 Mys 269, Reversed

SC 999 C (C N 208)

Government of India Act (1035) (26 Geo. V and 1 Edw. VIII, C. 2)

—S. 92 — Applicability — Section 92 ceased to exist after repeal of the Government of India Act, 1935 by Article 395 of the Constitution

SC 951 B (C N 104)

—S. 142-A (2) — See Constitution of India, Art. 276(2)

—S. 142-A — Bale and Bhoja tax by Municipality by notification of 1912 — Enhancement of tax in 1940 after incorporation of S. 142-A in Govt. of India Act 1935 — Notification held not saved — Collection of tax illegal — See Municipalities — C. P. & Berar Municipalities Act (53 of 1922), S. 48(2)

SC 1002 D (C N 209)

—S. 142-A — Notification of 1912 levying tax, in existence when Section 142-A came to be incorporated in Act — Notification after incorporation of Sec. 142-A under C. P. & Berar Municipalities Act (1922) enhancing tax held not saved by Section 142-A (2). ILR (1967) Bom 443. (FB), Reversed SC 1002 E (C N 209)

Government of India Act (contd.)

—S. 241 (1) (b) — Rules under — Punjab Government Service (War) Amendment Rules (1943), Rr. 3, 6, 4, 5, 7 and 8 — Interpretation — Rule 6 forms integral part of entire set of rules and cannot be singled out for taking benefit under — Appointment of persons rendering war service on temporary basis — Appointment cannot be regarded as one under R. 3 — Appointee cannot avail of benefit of R. 6 for fixation of his seniority

Punj 241 A (C N 34) (FB)

HIGH COURT RULES AND ORDERS

—Calcutta High Court Civil Rules and Orders

—Vol. I, R. 340-A — Divorce petition by wife — Respondent husband, when entitled to relief which wife prays for — Special Marriage Act (Calcutta High Court) Rules (1955) — See Special Marriage Act (1954), S. 35 Cal 266 C (C N 54)

—Calcutta High Court (Original Side) Rules

—Chap. X, R. 35 — Distinction between Rr. 35 and 35-A and O. 9, Civil P. C., pointed out — See Civil P. C. (1908), O. 9 (Gen.) Cal 231 A (C N 45)

—Chap. X, Rr. 35 and 35-A — Order dismissing suit for non-prosecution drawn up, signed and perfected — Absence of notice to plaintiff is merely an irregularity and does not affect validity of Order—Court has no power to recall Order

Cal 231 B (C N 45)

—Chap. X, R. 35-A—Distinction between Rr. 35 and 35-A and O. 9, Civil P. C., pointed out — See Civil P. C. (1908), O. 9 (Gen.) Cal 231 A (C N 45)

—Chap. X, R. 35-A — See High Court Rules and Orders — Calcutta High Court Rules (Original Side), Chap. X, R. 35

Cal 231 B (C N 45)

Himachal Pradesh Abolition of Big Landed Estates and Land Reforms Act (15 of 1954)

See under Tenancy Laws

Himachal Pradesh Co-operative Societies
Act (13 of 1956)

See under Co-operative Societies.

Himachal Pradesh Co-operative Societies
Rules (1960)

See under Co-operative Societies.

Hindu Adoptions and Maintenance Act (78
of 1956)

—S. 2, Explan. 2(b) — 'Hindu' — Con-
ferment of status of Hindu on a child one

Hindu Adoptions and Maintenance Act
(contd.)

of whose parents is a Hindu — See Hindu
Succession Act (1956), S. 2, Explan. (b)

Mad 249 C (C N 67)

—S. 18 (2) (d) — B was first and C was second wife of one A — B's claim of separate maintenance from A will accrue to her only if second marriage between A and C was valid one Mys 157 B (C N 38)

—S. 19 (2) — "Coparcenary property"—
Meaning of Punj 270 A (C N 36)

—S. 28 — Suit by widowed daughter-in-law for maintenance — Father-in-law gifting his entire land to his daughter after filing of suit — Gift gratuitous—Daughter is liable to pay maintenance

Punj 270 B (C N 36)

Hindu Law

—Joint family — Coparcenary property
— Meaning of — See Hindu Adoptions and Maintenance Act (1956), S. 19 (2)

Punj 270 A (C N 36)

—Joint family — History of the origin and growth of joint family status as refined by judicial precedents and statutory enactments traced Mad 249 A (C N 67)

—Joint family — Members — Marriage between member of twice born community and a Christian woman under Special Marriage Act is valid in law — Son born out of such wedlock being legitimate son can claim status of being a member of joint family of which his father is the head

Mad 249 B (C N 67)

—Partition suit — Defendants' right to suit property recognized in plaintiff—Defendant remaining ex parte — Claim by other co-defendant prejudicial to interest of defendant admitted — Decision cannot operate against defendant as res judicata—See Civil P. C. (1908), S. 11

Mad 232 (C N 60)

Hindu Minority and Guardianship Act (32 of 1956)

—S. 2, Explan. 2(b) — 'Hindu' — Con-
ferment of status of Hindu on a child one
of whose parents is a Hindu — See Hindu
Succession Act (1956), S. 2, Explan. (b)

Mad 249 C (C N 67)

Hindu Marriage Act (25 of 1955)

—S. 2, Explan. (b) — 'Hindu' — Confer-ment of status of Hindu on a child one of whose parents is a Hindu — See Hindu
Succession Act (1956), S. 2, Explan. (b)

Mad 249 C (C N 67)

—S. 9 — Wife withdrawing from society of husband along with children — Husband's petition for restitution of conjugal rights — Wife has to prove reasonable cause as contemplated by S. 9 (2)—Failure to prove — Husband entitled to decree

Punj 284 (C N 42)

—S. 10 — Desertion — What amounts to — Constructive desertion — See Special Marriage Act (1954), S. 27 (b)

Cal 266 D (C N 54)

Hindu Marriage Act (contd.)

—S. 10 — Cruelty — Legal cruelty — What amounts to, stated — See Special Marriage Act (1954), S. 27 (D)

Cal 266 E (C N 54)

—S. 10 — Adultery — Must be proved beyond reasonable doubt and not merely on balance of probability — See Special Marriage Act (1954), S. 27

Cal 266 F (C N 54)

—S. 13 — Divorce petition by wife under Special Marriage Act — Relief as in petition is available to respondent husband only on compliance with provisions of Special Marriage Act (Calcutta High Court) Rules (1955), incorporated in Civil Rules and Orders, Vol. 1 as R. 340-A — Relief is not available at appellate stage — See Special Marriage Act (1954), S. 35

Cal 266 C (C N 54)

—S. 23 — Divorce proceedings by wife — Delay of 21 months held not unnecessary — See Special Marriage Act (1954), S. 34 (1) (c)

Cal 266 B (C N 54)

Hindu Succession Act (30 of 1956)

—S. 2, Explan. (b) — 'Hindu' — Conferment of status of Hindu on a child one of whose parents is a Hindu — (Hindu Marriage Act (1955), S. 2, Explan. (b)) — (Hindu Adoptions and Maintenance Act (1956), S. 2, Explan. 2(b)) — Hindu Minority and Guardianship Act (1956), S. 2, Explan. 2(b)

Mad 249 C (C N 67)

—S. 5 — Section does not injure Hindu parent married under Act from treating his legitimate son as an undivided member of Hindu joint family

Mad 249 F (C N 67)

—S. 14 (1) — Widow in possession as trespasser — She cannot be said to be "possessed of" property

SC 1019 A (C N 213)

—S. 29 — Agricultural lands — Tenants in possession — Person shown as occupant in record of rights, a Hindu, dying or presumed to be dead intestate — Government's right to take possession of property under Section 29, Hindu Succession Act — See Bombay Administration of Estates Regulation (8 of 1927), S. 10

Bom 205 B (C N 35)

HOUSES AND RENTS

—Delhi and Ajmer Rent Control Act (39 of 1952)

—S. 13 — Decree passed by Court in ejectment suit in terms of compromise, without satisfying itself if the grounds for eviction existed — Decree is in contravention of Section 13 and a nullity and cannot be executed — (Civil P. C. (1908), S. 47)

SC 838 (C N 180)

—Delhi Rent Control Act (59 of 1959)

—S. 3(a) and S. 3, Proviso — Auction of evacuee property — Acceptance of bid — Attornment by tenant to purchaser — Suit for ejectment of tenant — No evidence led to indicate that title did not pass to purchaser — Proviso to Section 3 and not Section 3 (a) is attracted — Civil Court is barred from entertaining suit — Decision of Delhi High Court Reversed — Civil P. C. (1908), S. 9

Houses and Rents — Delhi Rent Control Act (contd.)

SC 812 (C N 173)

—S. 39 (2) — Second appeal — Substantial question of law — Rent Controller and Rent Control Tribunal holding, on consideration of relevant terms of agreement between the tenant and third party and on oral evidence that there was sub-letting by the tenant in favour of the third party — On that finding no question of law much less a substantial question of law, arose

SC 986 (C N 203)

—M. P. Accommodation Control Act (41 of 1961)

—S. 13 (1), (5) and (6) — When tenant can get benefit of protection against eviction — Default in payment of rent — Suit for ejectment — Failure to deposit arrears of rent within one month from service of writ of summons — Subsequent payment can be of any avail only if on application made by tenant Court extends time

SC 981 (C N 201)

—U. P. (Temporary) Control of Rent and Eviction Act (3 of 1917),

—St. 3 and 7-F — Restrictions on evictions — Permission to sue — Power to revoke, of Commissioner and State Government — Power of State Government is exhausted once suit for eviction is instituted

SC 971 A (C N 199)

—S. 3 — Payment of arrears of rent — Modes of — Decree against tenant for arrears of rent — Service of notice under S. 3 by landlord — Deposit of decretal amount in Court under O. 21, R. 1, Civil P. C. — Amounts to payment to landlord

All 309 A (C N 49) (FB)

—S. 3 — Decree for arrears of rent, mesne profits and ejectment — Death of tenant thereafter — Competency of his heirs to file appeal — Decree, whether can be set aside in its entirety — See Civil P. C. (1908), S. 146

All 309 B (C N 49) (FB)

—S. 3 — Scope — Prohibition under S. 3 to file suit — Its effect on right of landlord to determine tenancy — Transfer of Property Act (1882), S. 111 — Civil P. C. (1908), Preamble — Interpretation of Statutes

All 309 D (C N 49) (FB)

—S. 7-F — See Houses and Rents — U. P. (Temporary) Control of Rent and Eviction Act (1917), S. 3

SC 971 A (C N 199)

Imports and Exports (Control) Act (18 of 1917)

—S. 3 (2) — "All the provisions of that Act shall have effect accordingly" — Not

Imports and Exports Control Act (contd.)
merely Section 19 of Sea Customs Act (1878) but all relevant provisions of that Act will apply SC 951 A (C N 194)

—S. 3 (2) — Prohibited goods — Cloves are deemed to be prohibited goods SC 951 F (C N 194)

Income-tax Act (II of 1922)

—S. 3 — Hindu undivided family — Assessee, separated member of Hindu undivided family marrying with Austrian lady under Special Marriage Act — Son born out of such wedlock — Assessee is entitled to claim status of Hindu undivided family for purposes of assessment Mad 249 D (C N 67)

—S. 34 (1) (a) — See Constitution of India, Arts. 226 & 227

—S. 34 (1) (a) — No proceeding by Income-tax Officer before issuing notice under, to enable him to form the necessary belief — No jurisdiction to proceed under Section 34 (1) (a) SC 1011 B (C N 211)

Industrial Disputes Act (14 of 1947)

—S. 2 (g) (ii) — Municipal Corporation is as much employer as private person and juristic persons are also covered by expression "employer" — See Industrial Disputes Act (1947), S. 2 (j) Punj 287 (C N 43)

—S. 2 (j) — See Minimum Wages Act (1948), S. 27 Pat 193 A (C N 31)

—S. 2 (j), 2 (g) (ii) — Fire Brigade service maintained by Municipal Committee is 'service' and also 'undertaking' within meaning of S. 2 (j) Punj 287 (C N 43)

—S. 2 (p) — Pendency of industrial dispute — Settlement arrived at between employer and employee referred to Tribunal — Settlement cannot cease to be a settlement within meaning of S. 2 (p) — See Industrial Disputes Act (1947), S. 19 Bom 209 (C N 36)

—S. 2 (rr), Third Sch. Item I—Wages—Fair wages—Fixation of—Considerations — Central Wage Board for Jute industry — Held, Board had not followed the essential pre-requisites of deciding wage structure SC 878 (C N 189)

—S. 9-A — Provisions of Sections 9-A and 33 are only procedural and do not create extra or new right in favour of employer — Conditions of service settled by award — Termination of award by Union of workmen and dispute referred to industrial Tribunal — Notice under Section 9-A served by employer — Application for permission under Section 33 to Tribunal — Maintainability — See Industrial Disputes Act (1947), Section 33 Bom 213 (C N 37)

—S. 10 — Reference not referring to fixing of age of superannuation — Tribunal is incompetent to do so SC 919 D (C N 192)

Industrial Disputes Act (contd.)

—S. 10 — Provisions of Sections 9-A and 33 are only procedural and do not create extra or new right in favour of employer — Conditions of service settled by award — Termination of award by Union of workmen and dispute referred to industrial Tribunal — Notice under Section 9-A served by employer — Application for permission under Section 33 to Tribunal — Maintainability — See Industrial Disputes Act (1947), Section 33 Bom 213 (C N 37)

—S. 10 (1) (d) — Industrial Tribunal — Powers to entertain reference — Decision by Compy to close down some of its depots — Tribunal cannot interfere with it — Retrenchment whether justified can, however, be considered SC 860 (C N 186)

—S. 15 — Duty of Tribunal stated SC 919 G (C N 192)

—Ss. 19, 2 (p) — Pendency of industrial dispute — Settlement can be arrived at between employer and employee — Award based on such settlement will operate for such period as is agreed upon Bom 209 (C N 36)

—S. 19 (6) — Provisions of Sections 9-A and 33 are only procedural and do not create extra or new right in favour of employer — Conditions of service settled by award — Termination of award by Union of workmen and dispute referred to industrial Tribunal — Notice under Section 9-A served by employer — Application for permission under Section 33 to Tribunal — Maintainability — See Industrial Disputes Act (1947), Section 33 Bom 213 (C N 37)

—S. 24 — Right to strike — Strike held unjustified — Award of Industrial Tribunal Punjab in Reference No. 44 of 1966, Reversed SC 867 B (C N 188)

—Ss. 33, 9-A, 10 and 19 (6) — Provisions of Sections 9-A and 33 are only procedural and do not create extra or new right in favour of employer — Conditions of service settled by award — Termination of award by Union of workmen and dispute referred to industrial Tribunal — Notice, under Section 9-A served by employer — Application for permission under Section 33 to Tribunal — Maintainability Bom 213 (C N 37)

—S. 33-C — Application under Section 6-H (2) of U. P. Industrial Disputes Act (28 of 1947) — Dismissal for default of appearance — Order of dismissal not covered by Rule 16 (1) — Second application claiming identical relief is maintainable without following procedure laid down in R. 16 (2) — See Industrial Disputes Act (28 of 1947), Section 6-H (2) SC 806 (C N 171)

—Sch. 3, Item 1 — See Industrial Disputes Act (1947), Section 2 (rr) SC 878 (C N 189)

—Third Sch., Item 5 — Gratuity — Agreement between management of company and workmen — Held, Industrial tribunal was not incompetent to grant gratuity if the company acquired financial stability SC 919 A (C N 192)

Industrial Disputes Act (contd.)

—Third Schedule, Item 5 — Gratuity — Region-cum-industry principle or unitwise basis can be adopted according to requirements of each case SC 919 B (C N 192)

—Third Sch., Item 5 — Gratuity — Gratuity scheme can be effective though not accompanied by the fixation of the age of superannuation for the workmen in the industry SC 919 C (C N 192)

—Third Sch., Item 5 — Gratuity — Object of SC 919 E (C N 192)

—Third Sch., Item 5 — Gratuity — Whether should be computed not on the consolidated wage but only on basic wage — (1957) 2 Lab LJ 426 (LATI-Bom). Overruled; Award of Industrial Tribunal, Delhi in I. D. No. 70 of 1958, D/- 30-6-1968, Reversed SC 919 F (C N 192)

—Third Sch., Item 5 — Gratuity — Conditions for grant of, stated SC 919 H (C N 192)

—Third Sch., Item 5 — Gratuity — Termination of employment on ground of misconduct — When gratuity should be granted SC 919 I (C N 192)

—Third Sch., Item 5 — Gratuity — Voluntary retirement — Qualifying length of service for voluntary retirement should be 10 years SC 919 J (C N 192)

—Third Sch., Item 5 — Gratuity — Badli workmen — Period of work SC 919 K (C N 192)

—Third Sch., Item 5 — Gratuity — Scheme — Expression 'average of the basic wage' — Meaning SC 919 L (C N 192)

—Third Sch., Item 5 — Gratuity — Reference in 1958 — Award by Tribunal given effect to from 1-1-1961 — Held, giving the scheme effect before January 1, 1964, might rake up cases in which the workmen had left the establishments many years ago — It would not be conducive to industrial peace to allow such questions to be raised after long delay SC 919 M (C N 192)

—Third Sch., Item 5 — Gratuity — Uniformity in fixation of gratuity — Duty of legislature SC 919 N (C N 192)

—Sch. 3, Item 5 — Payment made as bonus to labour of various tea companies according to agreement — Payment, however, not related to profits of individual establishment — Payment is not bonus within meaning of formula evolved by Bombay Full Bench in (1950) 2 Lab LJ 1247 (LATI-Bom) and could be deducted from gross profits for purpose of calculating profit for payment of bonus to other members of staff Assam 70 (C N 14)

Industrial Disputes Rules (1947)

—Rr. 16 (1) and 16 (2) — Application under Section 6-II (2) of U. P. Industrial

Industrial Disputes Act (contd.)

Disputes Act (28 of 1947) — Dismissal of, for default of appearance — Order of dismissal not covered by Rule 16 (1) — Second application claiming identical relief is maintainable without following procedure laid down in R. 16 (2)—See (U.P.) Industrial Disputes Act (28 of 1947), S. 6-II (2) SC 806 (C N 171)

Industrial Employment (Standing Orders) Act (20 of 1946)

—S. 6 (2) — Appellate authority certifying the very standing order which it had rejected — Authority also failing to prescribe the procedure in the matter of several classes of leave and as to who should grant it — Order held suffered from material omissions — Application under Section 11 (2) competent and had to be decided by the authority — Section 6 (2) and Item 5 of the First Schedule impose a duty on the authority — See Industrial Employment (Standing Orders) Act (1946), Section 11 (2) Mys 149 (C N 34)

—Ss. 11 (2), 6 (2) and Item 5 of Sch. I — Appellate authority certifying the very standing order which it had rejected — Authority also failing to prescribe the procedure in the matter of several classes of leave and as to who should grant it — Order held suffered from material omissions — Application under Section 11 (2) competent and had to be decided by the authority — Section 6 (2) and Item 5 of the First Schedule impose a duty on the authority Mys 149 (C N 34)

—Item 5 of Sch. I — Appellate authority certifying the very standing order which it had rejected — Authority also failing to prescribe the procedure in the matter of several classes of leave and as to who should grant it — Order held suffered from material omissions — Application under Section 11 (2) competent and had to be decided by the authority — Section 6 (2) and Item 5 of the First Schedule impose a duty on the authority — See Industrial Employment (Standing Orders) Act (1946), Section 11 (2) Mys 149 (C N 34)

Issue estoppel

—Doctrine of — See Constitution of India, Article 20 (2)

Jammu and Kashmir Civil Services (Classification Control and Appeal) Rules, 1956
See under Civil Services.

Jammu and Kashmir General Sales Tax Act (20 of 1962)

See under Sales Tax.

Jammu and Kashmir Industries Ltd.; Memorandum of Articles of Association

—Art. 73 (5) — In exercise of power under Section 124 of the Jammu and Kashmir State Constitution — Articles of Association of Jammu and Kashmir Indus-

Jammu and Kashmir Industries Ltd.; Memorandum of Articles of Association (contd.) — tries do not contain such power — See Civil Services — Kashmir Civil Services (Classification, Control and Appeal) Rules, Rule 52 J & K 94 C (C N 18)

—Article 89 — Exercise of power under Section 124 of the Jammu and Kashmir State Constitution — Articles of Association of Jammu and Kashmir Industries do not contain such power — See Civil Services — Kashmir Civil Services (Classification, Control and Appeal) Rules, Rule 52 J & K 94 C (C N 18)

Jammu and Kashmir State Constitution

—S. 5 — Powers of State Legislature of Jammu and Kashmir — Limitations on — It has power to enact law for taxing not only sales simpliciter but also sales indivisible in character — See Constitution of India, Article 246 (as applicable to Jammu and Kashmir) J & K 85 A (C N 16)

—S. 124 — See Civil Services — Kashmir Civil Services (Classification, Control and Appeal) Rules, Rule 52, Note 6 J & K 94 C (C N 18)

Kashmir Civil Services (Classification, Control and Appeal) Rules

See under Civil Services.

Kerala University Act (14 of 1957)

See under Education.

Land Acquisition Act (1 of 1894)

—S. 3 (f) (Guj) — Housing scheme for section of public may also be for public purpose SC 984 C (C N 202)

—Ss. 4, 6 and 5-A and 17 (4) — Notification seeking to acquire certain land without demarcation — Objections alleging that notification did not show correct demarcation and that different landholders had no opportunity to file objections — Collector's order stating that collector was satisfied that land demarcated corresponded to the area notified — Order under Section 17 (4) not passed — Writ petition dismissed in limine on ground that High Court could not go into disputed question of fact — Order held, was bad — Decision of Punjab H. C., Reversed SC 802 A (C N 170)

—S. 5-A — Notification seeking to acquire certain land without demarcation — Objections alleging that notification did not show correct demarcation and that different landholders had no opportunity to file objections — Collector's order stating that collector was satisfied that land demarcated corresponded to the area notified — Order under Section 17 (4) not passed — Writ petition dismissed in limine on ground that High Court could not go into disputed question of fact — Order held bad — See Land Acquisition Act (1894), Section 4 SC 802 A (C N 170)

—S. 6 — Notification under — Contention that Government acted blindly SC 984 D (C N 202)

Land Acquisition Act (contd.)

—S. 6 — Notification seeking to acquire certain land without demarcation — Objections alleging that notification did not show correct demarcation and that different landholders had no opportunity to file objections — Collector's order stating that collector was satisfied that the land demarcated corresponded to the area notified — Order under Section 17 (4) not passed — Writ Petition dismissed in limine on ground that High Court could not go into disputed question of fact — Order held bad — See Land Acquisition Act (1894), S. 4 SC 802 A (C N 170)

—S. 6 (3) — Declaration under S. 6 — Conclusive evidence that land in question is needed for a public purpose SC 984 B (C N 202)

—S. 17 (4) — Notification seeking to acquire certain land without demarcation — Objections alleging that notification did not show correct demarcation and that different landholders had no opportunity to file objections — Collector's order stating that collector was satisfied that land demarcated corresponded to the area notified — Order under Section 17 (4) not passed — Writ Petition dismissed in limine on ground that High Court could not go into disputed question of fact — Order held bad — See Land Acquisition Act (1894), Section 4 SC 802 A (C N 170)

—S. 40 — Acquisition for housing scheme prepared by registered co-operative body — Acquisition is for "public purpose" — Substantial sum paid by State towards compensation — There is sufficient compliance with Sections 40 to 42 SC 984 A (C N 202)

—S. 54 — Appeal to Supreme Court — Interference with valuation made by High Court — Normal rule — Decision of Bombay High Court, Reversed SC 850 (C N 184)

Letters of credit

See Banking Regulation Act (1949), S. 6.

Letters Patent (Cal.)

—Cl. 15 — New point — Appointment of R to post X — Writ petition to quash order of appointment — Petition dismissed — Appeal — During pendency of appeal, abolition of post X and appointment of R to post Y with higher scale of pay — Held, nothing could be adjudicated upon appointment of R to Y post as it would be introducing totally new case for Jammu and Kashmir High Court — See Constitution of India, Art. 226 J and K 90 A (C N 17)

Limitation Act (9 of 1908)

—S. 28 — Applies also to suits to which limitation is provided in other Acts SC 1019 B (C N 213)

—Art. 120 — Delay and laches — Order under S. 292 of Tripura State Muni-

Limitation Act (1908) (contd.)

Principal Act superseding Commissioners — Order not challenged under the provisions of the Act within period of limitation prescribed — Order, held, could not be challenged even by writ petition — See Constitution of India, Art. 226

Tripura 37 A (C N 8)

—Art. 120 — Right to sue when accrues — Adverse entry in record of rights — Right of affected party to sue accrues on date of infringement of his right on basis of such entry and not on date of knowledge of entry

Tripura 43 D (C N 10)

—Art. 132 — Mortgage for term certain with default clause — Money does not become due within meaning of Article 132 until both mortgagor's right to redeem and mortgagor's right to enforce his security has accrued — Mortgagor cannot take advantage of his own default and contend that suit must be filed within 12 years from default — Suit filed within twelve years from date fixed for redemption is in time

Andh Pra 225 D (C N 31)

—Art. 142 — C. P. Tenancy Act (I of 1920 since repealed), Section 104, Sch 11, Art. 1 — Widow in possession of property of deceased protected tenant as trespasser — Claim by plaintiffs after her death as reversioners is not barred though their claim as dispossessed tenants is barred under Tenancy Act

SC 1019 D (C N 213)

—Art. 142 — Possession of notes — For determining possession, question of payment of rent for notes is crucial — It is not material through whom or in whose name payment is made

Tripura 43 A (C N 10)

—Art. 142 — Applicability — Where plaintiff pleads possession and dispossession, Article is applicable

Tripura 43 E (C N 10)

—Art. 158 — Setting aside of award — No proof that notice of filing of award into Court was given to defendant — Objection by defendant to the award cannot be rejected on ground of limitation

SC 967 A (C N 196)

Limitation Act (36 of 1963)

—Preamble — Construction — Provisions must receive construction which language in its plain meaning imports

Madh Pra 110 B (C N 24) (FB)

—S. 5 — Starting point of limitation — Date of order — Means date of knowledge of that order

Mad 242 B (C N 64)

—S. 5 — Application under S. 488, Criminal P. C. — Summons sent by registered post — Endorsement on notice that it was refused by the husband — Later service by affixture to the house of the husband attempted — Notice returned — Endorsement that there was no such residence and husband doing business at other places — No attempt to serve notice at those places — Order on application passed ex parte — Application by husband to set aside ex parte

Limitation Act (1908) (contd.)

order — Application beyond three months from the date of the order — Period of limitation could be extended under S. 5

Mad 242 C (C N 64)

—S. 5 and Art. 132 — Application by party for leave to appeal under Art. 133 of Constitution — Application filed beyond limitation — Plea of non-availability of amount for obtaining copy of judgment prepared to the knowledge of party alleged — Party held not entitled to benefit of S. 5 or special latitude

Punj 282 B (C N 41) (FB)

—S. 12 (3) and Art. 132 — Application for special leave to appeal to Supreme Court under Art. 133 (1) of Constitution — Limitation — Application for copy of judgment filed by party on 18th April, 1968 — Copy prepared by office of Court on May 23, 1968 — Party not collecting copy on that date for want of funds — Copy collected thereafter on August 27, 1968 — Party held, was not entitled to add the whole period up to August 27, 1968 to the normal period of limitation under Art. 132 — It could only add the period between date of its application and date of preparation of copy by office of Court

Punj 282 A (C N 41) (FB)

—S. 15 — Word 'execution' embraces all appropriate means by which decree is executed — Injunction partially staying execution — Effect is to prolong the life of whole decree — Civil M. A. 76 of 1959, D/-9-2-1962, Reversed

Madh Pra 110 A (C N 24) (FB)

—Art. 24 — Suit for money paid under law which was later declared ultra vires — Payment is not under mistake of law — See Constitution of India, Art. 32

SC 893 (C N 191)

—Art. 124 — See Civil Procedure Code (1908), O. 47, R. 1

Cal 231 C (C N 45)

—Art. 132 — Application for special leave to appeal to Supreme Court under Art. 133 (1) — Limitation — Application for copy of judgment filed by party on 18th April 1968 — Copy prepared by office of Court on May 23, 1968 — Party not collecting copy on that date for want of funds — Copy collected thereafter on August 27, 1968 — Party held not entitled to add the whole period up to August 27, 1968 to the normal period of limitation prescribed under Art. 132 — It could only add the period between date of its application and date of preparation of copy by office of Court — See Limitation Act (1963), S. 12 (3)

Punj 282 A (C N 41) (FB)

—Art. 132 — Application by party for special leave to appeal under Art. 133 of Constitution — Application filed beyond limitation — Plea of non-availability of amount for obtaining copy of judgment prepared to the knowledge of party alleged — Party held not entitled to benefit of S. 5 or special latitude — See Limitation Act (1963), S. 5

Punj 282 B (C N 41) (FB)

M. B. Abolition of Jagirs Act (28 of 1951)
See under Tenancy Laws

M. P. Accommodation Control Act (41 of 1961)
See under Houses and Rents

Madhya Pradesh Public Security Act (25 of 1959)
See under Public Safety.

Madras Co-operative Societies Act (53 of 1961)
See under Co-operative Societies.

Maharashtra Co-operative Societies Act (24 of 1961)
See under Co-operative Societies.

Maharashtra Municipalities Act (40 of 1965)
See under Municipalities.

Maharashtra Panchayat Samitis (Registration of Voters and Conduct of Election) Rules (1962)
See under Panchayats.

Mineral Concession Rules (1949)

—R. 37 — Rules under Section 5 of Mines and Minerals (Regulation and Development) Act (1948) — Mining lease — Lease created in 1950, in violation of R. 37 — Validity — 1948 Act repealed by 1957 Act — Rules made under 1948 Act deemed to have been made in 1957 Act — Provisions of 1957 Act do not lay down that such lease shall be void altogether — Lease will not be void and ineffective — See Mines and Minerals (Regulation and Development) Act (1948), S. 4

Pat 167 D (C N 27)

—R. 48 — Rules under Section 5 — Mining lease — Lease created in 1950, in violation of R. 37 — Validity — 1948 Act repealed by 1957 Act — Rules made under 1948 Act deemed to have been made in 1957 Act — Provisions of 1957 Act do not lay down that such lease shall be void altogether — Lease will not be void and ineffective — See Mines and Minerals (Regulation and Development) Act (1948), Section 4

Pat 167 D (C N 27)

Mineral Concession Rules (1960)

—R. 54 — Order of Central Government under Section 30 of Mines and Minerals (Regulation and Development) Act (1957) — Order must be based upon record of the case — See Mines and Minerals (Regulation and Development) Act (1957), S. 30

Pat 189 (C N 30)

—R. 55 (3), (4) — Order of Central Government under Section 30 of Mines and Minerals (Regulation and Development) Act (1957) — Order must be based upon record of the case — See Mines and Minerals (Regulation and Development) Act (1957), S. 30

Pat 189 (C N 30)

(June) 1970 Indexes/3

Mines and Minerals (Regulation and Development) Act (53 of 1948)

—Ss. 4, 5 — Rules under Section 5 — Mineral Concession Rules (1949), Rr. 37 and 48 — Mines and Minerals (Regulation and Development) Act (1957), Section 4 — Mining lease — Lease created in 1950, in violation of Rule 37 — Validity — 1948 Act repealed by 1957 Act — Rules made under 1948 Act deemed to have been made in 1957 Act — Provisions of 1957 Act do not lay down that such lease shall be void altogether — Lease will not be void and ineffective — Pat 167 D (C N 27)

—S. 5 — Mineral Concession Rules (1949) framed under Section 5 — Mining lease — Lease created in 1950, in violation of R. 27 — Validity — 1948 Act repealed by 1957 Act — Rules made under 1948 Act deemed to have been made in 1957 Act — Provisions of 1957 Act do not lay down that such lease shall be void altogether — Lease will not be void and ineffective — See Mines and Minerals (Regulation and Development) Act (1948), Section 4

Pat 167 D (C N 27)

Mines and Minerals (Regulation and Development) Act (67 of 1957)

—S. 4 — Mineral Concession Rules framed under Section 5 of Mines and Minerals (Regulation and Development) Act (1948) — Mining lease — Lease created in 1950, in violation of Rule 37 — Validity — 1948 Act repealed by 1957 Act — Rules made under 1948 Act deemed to have been made in 1957 Act — Provisions of 1957 Act do not lay down that such lease shall be void altogether — Lease will not be void and ineffective — See Mines and Minerals (Regulation and Development) Act (1948), S. 4

Pat 167 D (C N 27)

—S. 5 (2) — Power of Central Government under — Has to be exercised in accordance with principles of natural justice — See Mines and Minerals (Regulation and Development) Act (1957), S. 30

Pat 189 (C N 30)

—Ss. 30 and 5 (2) — Mineral Concession Rules (1960), Rr. 54 and 55 (3), (4) — Power of revision of Central Government under Section 30 — Is a quasi-judicial power — Order must be based upon record of the case — Revision application rejected on ground of not forming part of record — Opportunity of having his say in the matter not given to petitioner — Order held was illegal even assuming it to have been passed under S. 5 (2)

Pat 189 (C N 30)

Minimum Wages Act (11 of 1948)

—Preamble — See Minimum Wages Act (1948), S. 27

Pat 193 A (C N 31)

—S. 2 (h) — 'Wages' — Term has a composite meaning which will include all remunerations contemplated by the Act

Minimum Wages Act (contd.)

read with R. 23 of Bihar Minimum Wages Rules Pat 193 C (C N 31)

—S. 3 (1) (a) and (b) — Notification issued under Cl. (b) purporting to review the rates — No rates previously fixed in respect of the employment — Although notification ought to be issued under Cl. (a), it is only a technical error not defeating its validity Pat 193 B (C N 31)

—S. 12 (1) — Employer paying much higher total rates of wages cannot come within the mischief of S. 12

Pat 193 D (C N 31)

—S. 26 (2-A) — 'Is of the opinion' — Process of forming opinion is open to limited scrutiny of Court — Refusal to grant exemption to printing section of a Cigarette Manufacturing Company — Existence of a conciliation agreement under which Company was paying wages much higher than prescribed minimum not taken into account — Refusal to grant exemption, held was illegal

Pat 193 E (C N 31)

—S. 27 and Preamble — 'Schedule Employment' — Meaning — Words do not mean 'industry' or 'undertaking' or 'establishment' Pat 193 A (C N 31)

Motor Vehicles Act (4 of 1939)

—Ss. 44 (3) (b), 45, 63 and 64-A — Resolution by State Transport Authority taking upon itself functions of Regional Transport Authority in relation to inter-statal route — Does not go counter to scheme of Ss. 44, 45 and 63

Raj 125 (C N 29)

—S. 45 — Resolution by State Transport Authority taking upon itself functions of Regional Transport Authority in relation to inter-statal route — Does not go counter to scheme of Ss. 44, 45 and 63 — See Motor Vehicles Act (1939), S. 44 (3) (b)

Raj 125 (C N 29)

—S. 63 — Resolution by State Transport Authority taking upon itself functions of Regional Transport Authority in relation to inter-statal route — Does not go counter to scheme of Ss. 44, 45 and 63 — See Motor Vehicles Act (1939), S. 44 (3) (b)

Raj 125 (C N 29)

—S. 64-A — Andhra Pradesh Motor Vehicles Rules (1964), R. 195 (1) — Power of Government to correct orders and proceedings of lower authorities — Filing of unmaintainable application by aggrieved party does not fetter Government's power to act suo motu — Use of word 'or' between 'of its own motion' and 'on application made to it' shows that Government can act in either case — Rule 195(1) only prescribes limitation for filing of petition by aggrieved party

Andh Pra 220 (C N 33)

—S. 64-A — Revision — State Transport Authority taking upon itself functions of Regional Transport Authority —

Motor Vehicles Act (contd.)

Effect — See Motor Vehicles Act (1939), S. 44(3) (b) Raj 125 (C N 29)

—S. 95 — Words "contract of employment" — Meaning

Mad 236 (C N 61)

—S. 96(2) and S. 110-A — Claim for compensation before Motor Accidents Claims Tribunal — Insurer impleaded as party whether can raise defence apart from those specified in S. 96(2) and plead that there was no negligence of driver of vehicle — (Quaere)

Pat 172 E (C N 28)

—S. 110 — Tribunal when constituted is a question of fact — Notification constituting Tribunal — Cancellation by subsequent unpublished notification — First notification remains effective — See Motor Vehicles Act (1939), S. 110-F

Pat 172 A (C N 28)

—S. 110-A (3) — Application for compensation filed within limitation of sixty days of occurrence but no action taken for two years due to absence of Rules under S. 111-A — Tribunal's direction to file fresh application in proper form according to rules framed — Filing of fresh application in accordance with direction must be deemed to be by way of amendment so as to preclude bar of limitation

Pat 172 B (C N 28)

—Ss. 110-A and 110-C — Claim petition under S. 110-A filed by one of legal representatives of deceased — Other legal representatives who are also entitled to share in compensation ought not to be added as parties to petition after expiry of limitation prescribed by S. 110-A (3) — Petitioner is entitled to get entire compensation if he has applied as karta of joint Hindu family — (Civil P. C. (1908), O. 1, R. 10)

Pat 172 D (C N 28)

—S. 110-A — See Motor Vehicles Act (1939), S. 96(2)

Pat 172 E (C N 28)

—S. 110-B — Award of Tribunal — Award disallowing claim against owner of vehicle but holding that insurer who was made party to application in accordance with rules was liable — Award only means that the sum awarded has to be actually paid by insurer and not owner — No error in Award

Pat 172 F (C N 28)

—S. 110-C — Power of Claims Tribunal to allow amendment of pleadings — Tribunal should not allow amendment of claim petition for enhancing original claim after expiry of limitation so as to prejudice right accrued to opposite party — (Civil P. C. (1908), O. 6, R. 17)

Pat 172 C (C N 28)

—S. 110-C — Claim petition under S. 110-A filed by one of legal representatives of deceased — Other legal representatives who are also entitled to share in compensation ought not to be added

Motor Vehicles Act (contd.)

as parties to petition after expiry of limitation prescribed by S. 110-A(3) — Petitioner is entitled to get entire compensation if he has applied as karta of joint Hindu family — See Motor Vehicles Act (1939), S. 110-A

Pat 172 D (C N 28)

—S. 110-D — Award of compensation by Claims Tribunal — Appeal — Appellate court is ordinarily disinclined to reverse findings of Tribunal as to amount of compensation unless it involved a question of principle — It will not interfere unless Tribunal applies a wrong principle of law or misdirects itself or amount awarded is too low or too high

Pat 172 G (C N 28)

—S. 110-D — Award of compensation has to be just and reasonable — Principles for determining laid down in 1941 AC 157, Reiterated — Accident resulting in death of claimant's mother aged 55 years and daughter aged 4 years — Held, that in the circumstances of case Rs. 3000 and Rs. 2000 should be awarded on account of death of mother and daughter respectively

Pat 172 H (C N 28)

—Ss. 110-F and 110 — Jurisdiction of Claims Tribunal — Claims arising before its constitution cannot be entertained — Tribunal when constituted is a question of fact — Notification constituting Tribunal — Cancellation by subsequent unpublished notification — First notification remains effective — Objection to jurisdiction of Tribunal to entertain claim subsequently accruing — Onus of proof

Pat 172 A (C N 28)

MUNICIPALITIES

—Bengal Municipal Act (15 of 1932)

—S. 24 (1) — First General election to the municipality under the Act — Government has the statutory right to fix date as suits its convenience — Court cannot direct holding of such elections fixing a date therefor

Tripura 37 D (C N 3)

—S. 553 — Delay and laches — Order under S. 292 of Tripura State Municipal Act superseding Commissioners — Order not challenged under the provisions of the Act within period of limitation prescribed — Order held, could not be challenged even by writ petition — See Constitution of India, Art. 226

Tripura 37 A (C N 8)

—S. 553 — Order of supersession under S. 553 — Consequences of, mentioned in S. 554 — See Municipalities — Bengal Municipal Act (15 of 1932), S. 554

Tripura 37 B (C N 8)

—S. 553 — Who can file writ petition — Mandamus and Certiorari — Order superseding Municipal Commissioners under Bengal Municipal Act and Tripura

Municipalities — Bengal Municipal Act (contd.)

State Municipal Act — Aggrieved party concerned is Commissioner and not the Municipal voter — Voter can however pray for holding of general election — See Constitution of India, Art. 226

Tripura 37 C (C N 8)

—Ss. 554 and 553 — Order of supersession under S. 553 — Consequences of, mentioned in S. 554

Tripura 37 B (C N 8)

—C. P. & Berar Municipalities Act (53 of 1922)

—S. 48 (2) — "Bale and Boja" tax by Municipality by Notification of 1912 — Enhancement of tax in 1940 beyond prescribed limits after incorporation of Section 142-A in Government of India Act, 1935 — Notification held not saved by proviso to Section 142-A — Notification is ineffective and is not revived under proviso to Article 276 (2) — Rate of tax prescribed by 1912 Notification alone could be enforced — Collection of tax at enhanced rate is illegal — ILR (1967) Bom 443 (FB), Reversed

SC 1002 D (C N 209)

—Maharashtra Municipalities Act (40 of 1965)

—Ss. 26, 296, 27, 305 — Offence under S. 26 is cognizable — Complaint by Municipal Chief Officer under S. 296 is not necessary for taking cognizance — Criminal P. C. (1898), Sections 4(1)(f), 190(1)(b)

Bom 240 (C N 41)

—S. 27 — Offence under, is cognizable — See Municipalities — Maharashtra Municipalities Act (40 of 1965), S. 26

Bom 240 (C N 41)

—S. 296 — Offence under S. 26 is cognizable — Complaint by Chief Officer under S. 296 is not necessary for taking cognizance — See Municipalities — Maharashtra Municipalities Act (40 of 1965), S. 26

Bom 240 (C N 41)

—S. 305 — Power of police officer to arrest any person under Municipal Act — See Municipalities — Maharashtra Municipalities Act (40 of 1965), S. 26

Bom 240 (C N 41)

—Tripura State Municipal Act (2 of 1949 T. E.)

—S. 292 — Delay and laches — Order under S. 292 of Tripura State Municipal Act superseding Commissioners — Order not challenged under the provisions of the Act within period of limitation prescribed — Order held, could not be challenged even by writ petition — See Constitution of India, Art. 226

Tripura 37 A (C N 8)

—S. 292 — Who can file writ petition — Mandamus and Certiorari — Order superseding municipal Commissioners under Bengal Municipal Act and Tripura State Municipal Act — Aggrieved party

Municipalities — Tripura State Municipal Act (contd.)
 concerned is Commissioner and not the Municipal voter — Voter can however pray for holding of general election — See Constitution of India, Art. 226
 Tripura 37 C (C N 8)

Mysore Village Panchayats and Local Boards Act (10 of 1959)

See under Panchayats

PANCHAYATS

—Bombay Village Panchayats Act, 1958 (3 of 1959)

—S. 40 — Maharashtra Panchayat Samitis (Registration of Voters and Conduct of Election), Rules (1962), Rr 3 and 4 — Deletion of names of voters from voters' list on ground that they have ceased to be members of Panchayat under S. 40(1) (b) — Question of cessation of membership not decided by authority prescribed under S. 40(2) — Held deletion of names was illegal
 Bom 221 (C N 38)

—Maharashtra Panchayat Samitis (Registration of Voters and Conduct of Election) Rules (1962)

—R. 3 — Deletion of names of voters from voters' list on ground that they have ceased to be members of Panchayat under S. 40(1)(b) — Question of cessation of membership not decided by authority prescribed under S. 40(2) — Held, that deletion of names was illegal — See Panchayats — Bombay Village Panchayats Act (1958) (3 of 1959), S. 40

Bom 221 (C N 38)

—R. 4 — Deletion of names of voters from voters' list on ground that they have ceased to be members of Panchayat under S. 40(1)(b) — Question of cessation of membership not decided by authority prescribed under S. 40(2) — Held, that deletion of names was illegal — See Panchayats — Bombay Village Panchayats Act (1958) (3 of 1959), S. 40

Bom 221 (C N 38)

—Mysore Village Panchayats and Local Boards Act (10 of 1959)

—S. 220 — Commission of an offence under — Private complaint is not maintainable in view of Rule 16 of Mysore Panchayat Secretaries' Powers and Duties Rules, 1961 — 1966 (1) Mys LJ 494, Reversed
 SC 816 (C N 175)

—U. P. Zilla Parishad and Kshetra Samities Act (33 of 1961)

—S. 270(a) — Imposition of circumstance and property tax by District Board — Continuation of its levy by Zilla Parishad is valid — See Constitution of India, Art. 276(2) Proviso

All 316 B (C N 50) (FB)

Penal Code (45 of 1860)

—S. 97 — See Criminal P. C. (1893)

S. 410 SC 979 A (C N 200)

—S. 97 — Right of self-defence — Nature of SC 979 B (C N 200)

—S. 300 Exception I — Grave and sudden provocation

Punj 279 (C N 40)

—S. 304 Part I — Grave and sudden provocation — See Penal Code (1860), S. 300

Punj 279 (C N 40)

—Ss. 415 and 420 — Inducing Station Master to make out Railway Receipt — Railway Receipt made out stating that consignment was said to contain 251 bags of chillies with letters L/U endorsed meaning that responsibility for loading and unloading vested with consignor — Wagons found to contain only 197 bags of chaff — Charge of cheating Station Master, held could not be established, as railway did not incur any additional liability by the false representation that consignment contained 251 bags and the issue of the railway receipt therefor was not likely to cause any damage or harm to the railway. No question of cheating the railway or the Station Master therefore arose — Decision of Patna High Court, Reversed

SC 843 (C N 182)

—S. 420 — Inducing Station Master to make out Railway Receipt — Railway receipt made out stating that consignment was said to contain 251 bags of chillies with letters L/U endorsed meaning that responsibility for loading and unloading vested with consignor — Wagons found to contain only 107 bags chaff — Charge of cheating Station Master, held could not be established — See Penal Code (1860), S. 415

SC 843 (C N 182)

—Ss. 499-500, Expl. 2 — Imputation concerning class or collection of individuals — Allegation as to defamation of Ashram in complaint filed by member of Ashram — Action not maintainable as Ashram is an indeterminate body

Cal 248 B (C N 50)

—Ss. 499-500 — See Constitution of India, Art. 20(2)

Cal 248 C (C N 50)

Precedents

—Revenue Tribunal is bound to follow decision of its own High Court — See Civil P. C. (1908), Pre

Presidential and Vice-Presidential Elections Act (31 of 1952)

—Ss. 5, 21 — Rules under Presidential and Vice-Presidential Elections Rules, 1952, Rules 4, 5 and 6 — Nomination Papers must be presented in person either by the candidate or proposer or the seconder — Presentation by post is not a proper presentation

SC 819 (C N 176)

Presidential and Vice-Presidential Elections Act (contd.)

—S. 21 — Nomination papers must be presented in person either by the candidate or proposer or the seconder — Presentation by post is not a proper presentation — See Presidential and Vice-Presidential Election Act (1952), S. 5
SC 819 (C N 176)

Presidential and Vice-Presidential Election Rules, 1952

—R. 4 — Nomination papers must be presented in person either by the candidate or proposer or the seconder — Presentation by post is not a proper presentation — See Presidential and Vice-Presidential Election Act (1952), S. 5
SC 819 (C N 176)

—R. 5 — Nomination papers must be presented in person either by the candidate or proposer or the seconder — Presentation by post is not a proper presentation — See Presidential and Vice-Presidential Election Act (1952), S. 5
SC 819 (C N 176)

—R. 6 — Nomination papers must be presented in person either by the candidate or proposer or the seconder — Presentation by post is not a proper presentation — See Presidential and Vice-Presidential Election Act (1952), S. 5
SC 819 (C N 176)

Prevention of Corruption Act (2 of 1947)

—S. 5(2) — Bengal Criminal Law Amendment (Special Courts) Act (21 of 1949), S. 4(1) and Cl. 7 of the Schedule — Military Officer charged with an offence under S. 5(2) of Corruption Act — Notification made by State Government allotting the case to Special Court under Act (21 of 1949) — Accused ceasing to be public officer at the time of issue of notification — Offence being one prescribed under Cl. 7 of Schedule to the Special Courts Act case can be tried only by special Court and not by ordinary Criminal Court by virtue of S. 4(1)
Cal 253 (C N 52)

—S. 5(3) — Accused has to satisfactorily account — Plausible explanation is not sufficient

Manipur 40 A (C N 12)
—S. 5(3) — Trial under — Provisions of S. 517 (3) Criminal P. C. apply — S. 8(3) of Criminal Law Amendment Act (1952) does not render them inapplicable
Manipur 40 B (C N 12)

Prevention of Food Adulteration Act (37 of 1954)

—S. 13(2) — Delay in launching prosecution — Evidentiary value of certificate of Public Analyst not reduced — Accused however is prejudiced. AIR 1965 Madh Pra 180 held, partly overruled by AIR 1967 SC 970
Madh Pra 123 A (C N 26)

Prevention of Food Adulteration Rules, 1955

—R. 20 — Failure to add preservative in prescribed quantity — Conviction of accused can be challenged
Madh Pra 123 B (C N 26)

Preventive Detention Act (4 of 1950)

See under Public Safety

Public Employment (Requirement as to Residence) Act (44 of 1957)

See under Civil Services

PUBLIC SAFETY

—Madhya Pradesh Public Security Act (25 of 1959)

—S. 12 — The restrictions imposed by the section on the freedom of the press are reasonable and constitutional
Madh Pra 102 E (C N 23)

—S. 12 — Action under, against 'Swadesh' daily — Satisfaction of the State Government to make the order — Action not for political reasons — Political ideology of paper different from Government — Action taken next day after the Assembly session ended — Action cannot be called mala fide Madh Pra 102 F (C N 23)

—S. 12 — Action under — Action based on certain news-item published in the paper after communal disturbances ended — Action for prevention and not for punishment — Criminal proceedings against the paper in respect of the matter pending — Held, the order was not unjustifiable on that ground
Madh Pra 102 G (C N 23)

—S. 12 — Order under — Sale, distribution or circulation of the paper totally prohibited — Order held excessive and arbitrary
Madh Pra 102 L (C N 23)

—S. 12 (1) (i) — Newspapers already printed within the State — Clause applies Madh Pra 102 I (C N 23)

—S. 12 (1), Clauses (i) and (ii) — Distinction between — Expression "such matter" — Meaning of Madh Pra 102 J (C N 23)

—S. 12 (5) — Power under — Extent of Madh Pra 102 H (C N 23)

—S. 12(5) — Under sub-section (5) of the Section High Court has power to modify an order of the State Government and make it appropriate having regard to the particular facts of the case
Madh Pra 102 K (C N 23)

—Preventive Detention Act (4 of 1950)

—Ss. 3 and 7 — Order of preventive detention — Grounds supplied to detenu containing valid and invalid grounds — Order of detention is illegal — It is not possible to gauge in such cases to what extent bad reasons operated on mind of detaining authority — (Constitution of India, Articles 22 (5) and 32)

Public Safety — Preventive Detention Act (contd.)

SC 852 C (C N 185)

—S. 3 (1) — 'Public order', meaning of — Detention can be ordered to prevent subversion of public order but not in aid of maintenance of law and order

SC 852 B (C N 185)

—S. 3 (1) (a) and (2) — Preventive detention — Satisfaction of detaining authority — Subjective and not objective, and hence not justiciable — Validity of detention can, however, be challenged on ground of mala fides or that grounds supplied are irrelevant or vague — (Constitution of India, Article 22)

SC 852 A (C N 185)

—S. 3 (1) (a) (ii) — Detention under — Grounds for — Incidents mentioned in, not amounting to anything more than commission of certain breaches of law — They can be said prejudicial to "law and order" and not prejudicial to maintenance of "public order" or subversive of "public order" — Detention is illegal

SC 814 (C N 174)

—S. 7 — Order of detention — Grounds supplied to detenu containing valid and invalid grounds — Order of detention is illegal — It is not possible to gauge in such cases to what extent bad reasons operated on mind of detaining authority — See Public Safety — Preventive Detention Act (1950), S. 3

SC 852 C (C N 185)

Punjab Pre-emption Act (1 of 1913)

—S. 21 — Lease and subsequent sale of property — Suit for pre-emption — Plaintiff disputing the genuineness of the lease, alleging that lease and sale are part of the same transaction — Lessee can be joined as co-defendant with the vendor and vendors under O. 1, R. 3, A. 1, R. 3 P. C. — See Civil P. C. (1908), O. 1, R. 3

Punjab 276 (C N 39)

Punjab Government Services (War) Amendment Rules (1913)

See under Civil Services

Railways Act (9 of 1890)

—S. 74-A (Before its amendment by Act 39 of 1961) — No recording of defective packing in forwarding note — Section is not applicable — Inapplicability of the section will not debar Railway from proving that the goods were defectively packed

Pat 182 A (C N 29)

—Ss. 74-C, 74-D — Negligence on the part of Railway administration — Proof of — Consignment of tins of coconut oil — Rule 132 of Standing Order requiring wagons containing coconut oil to be affixed with a label "not to be loose shunted" — Failure to comply with, will amount to negligence. AIR 1964 Andh Pra 172, Dissented from

Railways Act (contd.)

Pat 182 C (C N 29)

—Ss. 74-C (3), 74-D — Consignment booked at owner's risk rate — Damages to goods in transit — Responsibility of Railway — Negligence on the part of Railway administration or its servant must be proved — Disclosure as to how consignment was dealt with in course of transit — Railway is not bound to disclose where Cls. (a) and (b) of S. 74-D are not applicable

Pat 122 B (C N 29)

—S. 74-D — Consignment booked at owner's risk rate — Damages to goods in transit — Responsibility of Railway — Negligence on the part of Railway administration or its servant must be proved — Disclosure as to how consignment was dealt with in course of transit — Railway is not bound to disclose where Cls. (a) & (b) of S. 74-D are not applicable — See Railways Act (1890) (Before its amendment by Act 39 of 1961), S. 74-C (3)

Pat 182 B (C N 29)

—S. 74-D — Negligence on the part of Railway administration — Proof of — Consignment of tins of coconut oil — Rule 132 of Standing Order requiring wagons containing coconut oil to be affixed with a label "not to be loose shunted" — Failure to comply with, will amount to negligence — See Railways Act (1890) (Before its amendment by Act 39 of 1961), S. 74-C

Pat 162 C (C N 29)

Registration Act (16 of 1908)

—S. 17 (1) (b) — Creation of rights under a document — Registration is necessary — Rights whether enforceable is immaterial — See Arbitration Act (1940), S. 14

SC 833 (C N 179)

—S. 23 — Registration of document — Delay till the last date of limitation — Does not amount to negligence of transferee

Mad 226 E (C N 59)

—S. 47 — Registration of a deed — Operation of deed — From date of its execution — See Transfer of Property Act (1882), S. 46

Mad 226 C (C N 59)

—S. 49 — Lease — Non-registration of — Document can be used as proof of nature of possession

Assam 75 C (C N 16)

—S. 49 — Unregistered mortgage — Registered sale — Registration of mortgage deed within time allowed by registration law — Operation of mortgage — From date of its execution — Gets priority over subsequent sale under S. 48, T. P. Act — S. 49, Registration Act, does not apply — See Transfer of Property Act (1882), S. 43

Mad 226 C (C N

Registration Act (contd.)

—S. 72 — Non-appearance of executant to admit execution before Sub-Registrar — Denial of execution cannot be presumed — Sub-Registrar refusing to register document on that ground — Appeal under S. 72 to Registrar to get document registered is maintainable

Manipur 47 (C N 14)

SALES TAX

—Jammu and Kashmir General Sales Tax Act (20 of 1962)

—Ss. 2 (1), 4 — Scope of Section 2 (1) — Indivisible contract does not fall within Section 2 (1) and is not chargeable to tax J & K 85 C (C N 16)

—S. 2(1) — Word "sale" in S. 2(1) of J. & K. General Sales Tax Act is not given extended meaning — See Civil P. C. (1908), Pre.

J & K 85 D (C N 16)

—S. 4 — Indivisible contract does not fall within S. 2(1) and is not chargeable to tax — See Sales Tax — Jammu and Kashmir General Sales Tax Act (20 of 1962), S. 2(1)

J & K 85 C (C N 16)

—U. P. Sales Tax Act (15 of 1948)

—S. 8 (1-A) — Scope — For recovery of interest under the section — Sales Tax Officer not required to make assessment order in respect of interest and issue a notice of demand in respect of interest — 1968 All LJ 970, Overruled

All 330 (C N 51) (FB)

Sea Customs Act (8 of 1878)

—S. 6 — Officers appointed under Land Customs Act (1924) are treated as Customs Officers SC 951 G (C N 194)

—S. 167 (8) — Criminal prosecution of accused for smuggling — Not barred by earlier proceedings against him under Sea Customs Act — See Constitution of India, Art. 20 (2)

SC 962 A (C N 195)

—S. 171-A — Statement under — Admissibility must be adjudged in the light of taint attaching thereto at the time of statement SC 940 A (C N 193)

—S. 171-A — Person against whom enquiry is held under S. 171-A is not a person accused of any offence within Article 20(3) of the Constitution of India — See Constitution of India, Art. 20(3)

SC 941 C (C N 193)

—S. 178-A — Burden of proof — In the absence of special notification under Section 178-A specifying goods to which the section applies, the onus of proof under that section cannot be placed on persons whose goods are seized for violation of other provisions of the Sea Customs Act, 1878

SC 951 H (C N 194)

Societies Registration Act (21 of 1860)

—S. 3 — Society registered under the Act. — Legal character of — It enjoys the status of legal entity apart from the members constituting it — It can sue and be sued — See Societies Registration Act (1860), S. 6 Pat 163 A (C N 26)

—S. 3 — Petitioner an employee of registered Society — Dismissal by Principal of the School of the Society — Petitioner not holding any civil post — Principal also an employee of that Society — Remedy of writ against the Principal, held, not an appropriate remedy — See Constitution of India, Art. 226

Pat 163 C (C N 26)

—Ss. 6, 8 and 3 — Society registered under the Act — Legal character of — It enjoys the status of legal entity apart from the members constituting it — It can sue and be sued

Pat 163 A (C N 26)

—S. 6 — Constitution of India, Art. 311 — Registered society — Can sue and be sued — Person serving under registered society is an employee of society under control of the Board of Governors — His service conditions are regulated by rules and regulations framed by Society — He must be deemed to hold post under the Society and not to hold any civil post either under the Union or State — Protection under Art. 311, cannot be claimed

Pat 163 B (C N 26)

—S. 8 — Society registered under the Act — Legal character of — It enjoys the status of legal entity apart from the members constituting it — It can sue and be sued — See Societies Registration Act (1860), S. 6 Pat 163 A (C N 26)

Special Marriage Act (43 of 1954)

—S. 21 — Section does not affect or alter joint family structure between person married under Act and his son

Mad 249 E (C N 67)

—S. 27 — Adultery on the part of wife — Must be proved beyond reasonable doubt and not merely on balance of probability — (Divorce Act (1869), S. 10) — (Hindu Marriage Act (1955), S. 13)

Cal 266 F (C N 54)

—S. 27 (b) — Desertion — What amounts to — Constructive desertion — Desertion has to be proved beyond reasonable doubt — (Divorce Act (1869), S. 10) — (Hindu Marriage Act (1955), S. 10)

Cal 266 D (C N 54)

—S. 27 (d) — Cruelty — Legal cruelty — What amounts to, stated — (Divorce Act (1869), Section 10) — (Hindu Marriage Act (1955), Section 10)

Cal 266 E (C N 54)

—S. 34 (1) (c) — Divorce proceedings by wife — Delay of 21 months — Reason that her sister was to be married and settled and the avoidance of scandal of a divorce — No acquiescence in marital offences of husband — Delay held not unnecessary and improper — (Divorce Act (1869), S. 14) — (Hindu Marriage Act (1955), S. 23)

Special Marriage Act (confd.)

Cal 266 B (C N 54)

—S. 35 — Divorce petition by wife — Relief as in petition is available to respondent husband only on compliance with provisions of Special Marriage Act (Calcutta High Court) Rules (1955) incorporated in Civil Rules and Orders, Vol. 1 as Rule 340-A — Relief is not available at appellate stage — (Divorce Act (1869), S. 15) — (Hindu Marriage Act (1955), S. 13)

Cal 266 C (C N 54)

—S. 51 (1) (a) — Marriage solemnised under repealed Act of 1872 is deemed to have been solemnised under 1954 Act — Divorce proceedings are governed by 1954 Act

Cal 266 A (C N 54)

Specific Relief Act (1 of 1877)

—S. 42 — Ascertainment of mesne profits — Suit for declaration of title, for possession and for mesne profits — Held, mesne profits had to be ascertained separately on petition under O. 20, R. 12 of Civil P. C. on obtaining possession — (Civil P. C. (1908), O. 20, R. 12)

Tripura 43 F (C N 10)

Specific Relief Act (47 of 1963)

—S. 9 — Action for ejectment against trespasser — Prior possession of plaintiff is sufficient title notwithstanding that suit is brought more than six months after dispossession. (1883) ILR 9 Cal 130 & (1890) ILR 17 Cal 256 & (1899) ILR 26 Cal 579, Overruled

SC 846 (C N 183)

—S. 38 — International trade — Irrevocable letters of credit — Courts should refrain from interfering with mechanism of such letter — See Banking Regulation Act (1949), S. 6

SC 891 A (C N 190)

TENANCY LAWS—Bihar Land Reforms Act (30 of 1950)

—Ss. 4, 10 — Mining lease — Lease property mortgaged — Vesting of estates in State under Section 4 — Effect of, on lease — Old lease comes to an end and new statutory lease comes into effect — Remedy of mortgagee is not to enforce mortgage bond but to follow compensation

Pat 167 F (C N 27)

—S. 10 — Mining lease — Lease property mortgaged — Vesting of estates in State under S. 4 — Effect of, on lease — Old lease comes to an end and new statutory lease comes into effect — Remedy of mortgagee is not to enforce mortgage bond but to follow compensation — See Bihar Land Reforms Act (30 of 1950), S. 4

Pat 167 F (C N 27)

Tenancy Laws (confd.)

—Bombay Tenancy and Agricultural Lands (Vidarbha Region) Act (99 of 1958) (as amended by Act 44 of 1963)

—S. 38 (7) — "Acquired any land by transfer or partition" — Interpretation of — Words 'acquire' and 'partition', meaning of — Partitions of every kind are now included within ambit of S. 38 (7) — AIR 1966 Bom 194, Overruled

Bom 232 A (C N 40) (FB)

—S. 38 (7) — As amended by Act 44 of 1963 — Scope and effect of amendment in doubt and actively disputed — Court can legitimately look to Statement of Objects and Reasons in making that amendment

Bom 232 D (C N 40) (FB)

—Calcutta Thika Tenancy Act (2 of 1949)

—Application by tenant for review of ejectment order dismissed for default — Tenant filing application under S. 151 for setting aside order of dismissal — Held, though order was appealable, scope of appeal was limited and point of absence could not usually be considered in appeal and, therefore, application under S. 151 was competent. 68 Cal WN 1064, Not foll.

— See Civil P. C. (1900), S. 151

Cal 240 (C N 47)

—C. P. Tenancy Act (1 of 1920)

—S. 104 — See Limitation Act (1908), Art. 142

SC 1019 D (C N 213)

—Sch. 2, Art. 1 — Suit not as tenant but as reversioner — Article 1 does not apply

SC 1019 C (C N 213)

—Sch. II, Art. 1 — See Limitation Act (1908), Art. 142

SC 1019 D (C N 213)

—East Punjab Holdings (Consolidation and Prevention of Fragmentation) Act (50 of 1948)

—S. 42 — Additional Director can amend and vary scheme in case of single right-holder — Procedure to be followed indicated. Civil Writ No. 1928 of 1963, D/- 11-3-1964 (Punjab), Civil Writ No. 1728 of 1963, D/- 7-1-1965 (Punjab), 1965 Cur LJ 807 (FB) (Punjab); Civil Writ No. 1057 of 1963, D/- 12-11-1965 (Punjab); Civil Writ No. 1551 of 1964, D/- 12-5-1966 (Punjab); Civil Writ No. 659 of 1965, D/- 25-5-1966 (Punjab) and Obiter in AIR 1968 Punjab 10 (FB), Overruled

Punjab 261 (C N 35) (FB)

—Himachal Pradesh Abolition of Big Landed Estates and Land Reforms Act (15 of 1951)

—S. 11 (2) — Right of tenant of acquisition of proprietary rights in the land — Protection to minor landlord under Section 11 (2) — Held on facts, as not available

SC 1022 A (C N 214)

—S. 11 (2) — Protection to minor landlord having no other means of livelihood against right of tenant of acquisition of proprietary rights in the land — Whether the statutory right of maintenance of a

Tenancy Laws — Himachal Pradesh Abolition of Big Landed Estates and Land Reforms Act (contd.)

minor under Hindu Adoptions and Maintenance Act (1956) can or cannot be treated as a means of livelihood — (Quaere)

SC 1022 B (C N 214)

—M. B. Abolition of Jagirs Act (28 of 1951)

—S. 8 — Suit for declaration of title and for possession by Jagirdar — Commencement of Act during pendency of suit — Plaintiff does not lose his rights in suit properties — Although suit properties vest in State the plaintiff is entitled to compensation if he is proved to have been owner of suit properties on the day of commencement of the Act — (Case remanded to High Court with direction that State be impleaded and rights of all parties be decided in accordance with law.) Decision of Madh Pra High Court, Reversed

SC 997 C (C N 207)

—U. P. Consolidation of Holdings Act (5 of 1954)

—S. 4 — Stay order under S. 5 — Notification under S. 4 during pendency of civil appeal — Fact of notification brought to notice of Court — Appellate Court holding that S. 5 did not apply to facts of case and deciding appeal — Decision allowed to become final between parties — Decree passed by Civil Court held was not a nullity — See Tenancy Laws — U.P. Consolidation of Holdings Act (5 of 1954), S. 5 (as it stood in the year 1961)

All 344 (C N 52) (FB)

—S. 5 (as it stood in the year 1961) — Section 4 and S. 49 (as amended upto 1958) — Scope of S. 5 — Effect of stay order under S. 5 — Notification under S. 4 during pendency of civil appeal — Fact of notification brought to notice of Court — Appellate Court holding that S. 5 did not apply to facts of case and deciding appeal — Decision allowed to become final between parties — Decree passed by Civil Court held was not a nullity — Assumption of jurisdiction by erroneous decision of jurisdictional facts can be set aside in appeal or revision — Even under S. 49, jurisdiction of Civil Court is not absolutely barred — (Civil P. C. (1908), Ss. 9 and 115)

All 344 (C N 52) (FB)

—S. 49 (as amended upto 1958) — Under S. 49 jurisdiction of Civil Court is not absolutely barred — See Tenancy Laws — U.P. Consolidation of Holdings Act (5 of 1954), S. 5 (as it stood in the year 1961)

All 344 (C N 52) (FB)

—U. P. Zamindari Abolition and Land Reforms Act 1950 (1 of 1951)

—S. 18 — Expression "mortgagee" in S. 21 (1) (d) — Not confined to valid mortgages only — See Tenancy Laws —

Tenancy Laws — U. P. Zamindari Abolition and Land Reforms Act (contd.)

U. P. Zamindari Abolition and Land Reforms Act 1950 (1 of 1951), S. 21(1)(d)

All 350 (C N 53) (FB)

—S. 19 — Expression "mortgagee" in S. 21 (1) (d) — Not confined to valid mortgages only — See Tenancy Laws — U.P. Zamindari Abolition and Land Reforms Act 1950 (1 of 1951), S. 21(1)(d)

All 350 (C N 53) (FB)

—Ss. 21 (1) (d), 18 and 19 — Expression "mortgagee" in S. 21 (1) (d) — Not confined to valid mortgages only — 1963 RD 288 & 1964 RD 410 & 1965 RD 23 & AIR 1965 All 504 & AIR 1955 NUC (All) 4171 & F.A.F.O. No. 227 of 1966, D/- 9-12-1968 (All) & 1968 RD 456, Overruled

All 350 (C N 53) (FB)

Tort — Damages

See Motor Vehicles Act (1939), S. 110-D

Transfer of Property Act (4 of 1882)

—S. 3— Demand of title deeds— Right of purchaser — Title deeds with prior unregistered mortgagee — Purchaser not making demand — Purchaser is negligent — Cannot be said to be without notice of prior mortgage — See Transfer of Property Act (1882), S. 55(3)

Mad 226 B (C N 59)

—S. 48 — Unregistered mortgage followed by registered sale — Subsequent registration of prior mortgage deed within time allowed by registration law — Mortgage operates from date of execution under S. 47 of Registration Act — Mortgagee gets priority over the subsequent sale under S. 48, T. P. Act — S. 49, Registration Act, does not apply — (Registration Act (1908), Ss. 47 and 49)

Mad 226 C (C N 59)

—Ss. 48, 78 — Principle underlying S. 78 — Applies to sales also — Prior mortgagee guilty of fraud, etc. — Will be postponed after subsequent vendee

Mad 226 D (C N 59)

—S. 52 — Settlee pendente lite of one of items of suit property not coming on record as party to suit — Application by settlee to be brought on record in appeal — Settlee can take benefit of S. 146 — See Civil P. C. (1908), S. 146

Andh Pra 211 A (C N 31)

—S. 53 — Plea of benami referring to sham transaction — Want of consideration for transaction must be established by party pleading— (Evidence Act (1872), Ss. 101, 104)

Assam 75 B (C N 16)

—S. 53-A — Scope — Provisions do not confer any right on transferee to claim possession or any other right in property — Transferee has a right only to plead estoppel to protect his possession against transferor

Gui 122 (C N 18)

Transfer of Property Act (contd.)

—Ss. 55(3) and 3 — Demand of title deeds — Rights of purchaser — Title deeds with prior unregistered mortgage — Purchaser not making demand — Purchaser is guilty of gross negligence — Cannot be said to be without notice of prior mortgage Mad 226 B (C N 59)

—S. 78 — Principle under the section — Applies to sales also — See Transfer of Property Act (1882), S. 48

Mad 226 D (C N 59)

—S. 91(a) — Suit filed on prior mortgage without impleading puisne mortgagee — Execution of the decree obtained — Purchaser is entitled to redeem the puisne mortgagee Mad 244 (C N 65)

—S. 100 — Specific charge and floating charge — Distinction between — See Companies Act (1956), S. 125

Andh Pra 225 B (C N 34)

—S. 106 — Premises let out to partners of partnership firm carrying on business as coach builders under registered lease — Partners entering into agreement with company to sell entire business along with general assets and lease-hold properties — Company entering into possession of lease-hold premises — Object of company to carry on trade or business of coach and carriage builders and to buy, sell, import, manufacture, repair, let on hire, otherwise deal in carriages and vehicles of every description — Separate deed of transfer of premises in favour of company not executed — Lessor treating company as monthly tenant — Failure of Company to prove that lease was dominantly for manufacture purpose — Tenancy was monthly and terminable by 15 days' notice. AIR 1963 Cal 198, Reversed SC 839 A (C N 181)

—S. 106 — Whether for applying the presumption under Section 106 the test is exclusiveness of manufacturing purpose. (Quaere) SC 839 B (C N 181)

—S. 111 — Prohibition under S. 3 of U. P. Act 3 of 1947 — Prohibition is not against determination of tenancy — See Houses and Rents — U.P. (Temporary) Control of Rent and Eviction Act (3 of 1947), S. 3 All 309 D (C N 49) (FB)

Tripura State Municipal Act (2 of 1919 T. E.)

See under Municipalities

U. P. Consolidation of Holdings Act (5 of 1954)

See under Tenancy Laws

U. P. Industrial Disputes Act (28 of 1947)

—S. 6-H (2) — U. P. Industrial Disputes Rules (1957), Rules 16 (1) and 16 (2) — Application under Section 6-H (2) — Dismissal of, for default of appearance — Order of dismissal not covered by R. 16(1) — Second application claiming identical

U. P. Industrial Disputes Act (contd.)

relief is maintainable without following procedure laid down in R. 16 (2) SC 806 (C N 171)

U. P. District Boards Act (10 of 1922)

—S. 108 — Circumstance and property tax imposed under — Nature of All 316 A (C N 50) (FB)

—S. 108 — Imposition of circumstance and property tax by District Board — Continuation of its levy by Zilla Parishad is valid — See Constitution of India, Art. 276 (2) Proviso

All 316 B (C N 50) (FB)

U. P. Sales Tax Act (15 of 1948)

See under Sales Tax

U. P. (Temporary) Control of Rent and Eviction Act (3 of 1947)

See under Houses and Rents

U. P. Zamindari Abolition and Land Reforms Act (1 of 1951)

See under Tenancy Laws

U. P. Zilla Parishad and Kshetra Samities Act (33 of 1961)

See under Panchayats

Wealth Tax Act (27 of 1937)

—S. 3 — Hindu undivided family — Assessee separated member of Hindu undivided family marrying with Australian lady under Special Marriage Act — Son born out of such wedlock — Assessee is entitled to claim status of Hindu undivided family for purposes of assessment — See Income Tax Act (1922), S. 3 Mad 240 D (C N 67)

Words & Phrases

—'Acquire' — Meaning of — See Tenancy Laws — Bombay Tenancy and Agricultural Lands (Vidarbha Region) Act (99 of 1958 as amended by Act 44 of 1963) S. 32 (7) Bom 222 A (C N 40) (FB)

—'Affairs of the State' — Meaning — See Evidence Act (1872), S. 123

Raj 118 D (C N 28)

—'Coparcenary property' — Meaning of — See Hindu Adoptions and Maintenance Act (1956) Puni 270 A (C N 36)

—'Direct' means command — See Criminal P. C. (1898), S. 159

Orissa 107 (C N 38)

—'Of' — Meaning of the word 'of' in 'within three months of the date' — 'Of' means 'after' — See Factories Act (1918), S. 106 Andh Pra 231 B (C N 35)

—'Partition' — Meaning of — See Tenancy Laws — Bombay Tenancy and Agricultural Lands (Vidarbha Region) Act (99 of 1958 as amended by Act 44 of 1963), S. 32 (7)

Bom 232 A (C N 40) (FB)

SUBJECTWISE LIST OF CASES OVERRULED, REVERSED AND DISSENTED FROM, ETC. IN A. I. R. 1970 JUNE

DISS.=Dissented from in; NOT F.=Not followed in; OVER.=Overruled in;
REVERS.=Reversed in

Andhra Pradesh Motor Vehicles Rules (1969)

—R. 212 (1) (iv) (a) — (66) W. P. No. 1732 of 1966, D/-1-12-1966 (AP) — Revers.
AIR 1970 Andh Pra 217 A (C N 32).

Arbitration Act (10 of 1940)

—S. 14 — AIR 1958 Pat 252 (FB) — Over.
AIR 1970 SC 833 (C N 179).

—S. 14 — AIR 1968 Punj 204 (FB) —
Over. AIR 1970 SC 833 (C N 179).

—S. 17 — AIR 1958 Pat 252 (FB) —
Over. AIR 1970 SC 833 (C N 179).

—S. 17 — AIR 1968 Punj 204 (FB) —
Over. AIR 1970 SC 833 (C N 179).

—Sch. 1, R. 7 — AIR 1958 Pat 252 (FB) —
Over. AIR 1970 SC 833 (C N 179).

—Sch. 1, R. 7 — AIR 1968 Punj 204 (FB)
— Over. AIR 1970 SC 833 (C N 179).

Arms Act (54 of 1959)

—S. 17 — AIR 1969 Assam 50 (FB) —
Diss. AIR 1970 Orissa 110 C (C N 39).

—S. 17 — AIR 1960 Madh Pra 157 —
Diss. AIR 1970 Orissa 110 C (C N 39).

—S. 17 — AIR 1954 Raj 264 — Diss. AIR
1970 Orissa 110 C (C N 39).

Banking Regulation Act (10 of 1949)

—S. 6 — ('68) Applns. Nos. 1760 and 2455 of 1967 (in C. S. No. 118 of 1967), D/-12-4-
1968 (Mad) — Revers. AIR 1970 SC 891
A (C N 190).

Central Excise Rules (1944)

—R. 40 — AIR 1961 Bom 48 — Over. AIR
1970 SC 829 (C N 178).

Civil Procedure Code (5 of 1908)

—S. 11 — AIR 1941 Pat 83 — Diss. AIR
1970 Mad 232 (C N 60).

—S. 107 — AIR 1957 Pat 111 — Not F.
AIR 1970 Punj 273 A (C N 38).

—S. 115 — AIR 1939 Pat 30 — Diss. AIR
1970 Tripura 35 (C N 37).

—S. 115 (c) — AIR 1933 Pat 61 — Diss.
AIR 1970 Tri 36 (C N 37).

—S. 146 — (1951) 2 Mad LJ 26 — Over.
AIR 1970 Andh Pra 211 A (C N 31).

—S. 149 — AIR 1957 Pat 111 — Not F.
AIR 1970 Punj 273 A (C N 38).

—S. 151 — (1964) 68 Cal WN 1064 —
Not F. AIR 1970 Cal 240 (C N 47).

—O. 7, R. 11 — AIR 1957 Pat 111 —
Not F. AIR 1970 Punj 273 A (C N 38).

—O. 22, R. 10 — (1951) 2 Mad LJ 26
— Over. AIR 1970 Andh Pra 211 A
(C N 31).

—O. 23, R. 3 — (1951) 2 Mad LJ 26 —
Over. AIR 1970 Andh Pra 211 A (C N 31).

Constitution of India

—Art. 19 (1) (a) — (1927) 274 US 357 —
Over. AIR 1970 USSC 45 (C N 7).

—Art. 20 (3) — AIR 1956 Cal 253 — Over.
AIR 1970 SC 941 C (C N 193).

—Art. 20 (3) — AIR 1958 Cal 682 — Over.
AIR 1970 SC 941 C (C N 193).

—Art. 248 — AIR 1962 Mys 269 — Revers.
AIR 1970 SC 999 D (C N 208).

Constitution of India (contd.)

—Art. 276 (2) — ILR (1967) Bom 443
(FB) — Revers. AIR 1970 SC 1002 A
(C N 209).

—Art. 276 (2) — ILR (1967) Bom 443
(FB) — Revers. AIR 1970 SC 1002 F
(C N 209).

—Sch. VII, List I, Entry 97 — AIR 1962
Mys 269 — Revers. AIR 1970 SC 999 D
(C N 208).

—Sch. VII, List II, Entry 49 — AIR 1962
Mys 269 — Revers. AIR 1970 SC 999 E
(C N 208).

Contract Act (1872)

—S. 72 — ILR (1967) Bom 443 (FB) —
Revers. AIR 1970 SC 1002 B (C N 209).

CO-OPERATIVE SOCIETIES

—Madras Co-operative Societies Act (53 of 1961)

—S. 72 — ('69) W. A. No. 113 of 1969;
(Mad) — Over. AIR 1970 Mad 212 C
(C N 56) (FB).

COURT-FEES & SUITS VALUATIONS

—Court-fees Act (7 of 1870)

—S. 19-I — AIR 1955 Pat 362 — Diss.
AIR 1970 Cal 236 B (C N 46).

Criminal Procedure Code (5 of 1898)

—S. 159 — (1963) 29 Cut LT 164 — Diss.
AIR 1970 Orissa 107 (C N 38).

—S. 488 (6) — 1963 Mad LJ (Cri) 597 —
Diss. AIR 1970 Mad 242 A (C N 64).

—S. 488 (6) — AIR 1963 Mys 239 — Diss.
AIR 1970 Mad 242 A (C N 64).

—S. 526 (3) — AIR 1953 All 698 — Diss.
AIR 1970 Cal 241 B (C N 48).

—S. 526 (3) — AIR 1920 Pat 836 — Diss.
AIR 1970 Cal 241 B (C N 48).

Evidence Act (1 of 1872)

—S. 33 — AIR 1925 Oudh 726 — Diss.
AIR 1970 Orissa 100 A (C N 37).

Gift Tax Act (1958)

—Pre. — AIR 1962 Mys 269 — Revers.
AIR 1970 SC 999 C (C N 208).

Government of India Act (1935)

—S. 142-A — ILR (1967) Bom 443 (FB) —
Revers. AIR 1970 SC 1002 E (C N 209).

Industrial Disputes Act (14 of 1947)

—S. 24 — ('67) Ref. No. 44 of 1966, D/-
8-12-1967 (Ind., Tri., Punj.) — Revers.
AIR 1970 SC 867 B (C N 188).

—Sch. 3, Item 5 — (1957) 2 Lab LJ 426
(Lati. Bom.) — Over. AIR 1970 SC 919
F (C N 192).

—Sch. 3, Item 5 — ('66) I. D. No. 70 of 1958, D/- 30-6-1966 (Ind., Tri., Delhi) —
Revers. AIR 1970 SC 919 F (C N 192).

Limitation Act (36 of 1963)

—S. 15 — ('62) C. M. A. No. 76 of 1959,
D/-9-2-1962 (MP) — Revers. AIR 1970
Madh Pra 110 A (C N 24) (FB).

MUNICIPALITIES

—C. P. and Berar Municipalities Act (53 of 1922)

—S. 48 — 1LR (1967) Bom 443 (FB) — Revers. AIR 1970 SC 1002 D (C N 209).

PANCHAYATS

—Mysore Village Panchayats and Local Boards Act (10 of 1959)

—S. 220 — (1966) 1 Mys LJ 494 — Revers. AIR 1970 SC 816 (C N 175).

Prevention of Food Adulteration Act (37 of 1954)

—S. 13 (2) — AIR 1965 Madh Pra 180 — Held Partly Overruled by AIR 1967 SC 970 as interpreted. AIR 1970 Madh Pra 123 A (C N 26).

Railways Act (9 of 1890)

—S. 74-C (Before its amendment by Act 39 of 1961) — AIR 1964 Andh Pra 172 — Diss. AIR 1970 Pat 182 C (C N 29).

—S. 74-D — AIR 1964 Andh Pra 172 — Diss. AIR 1970 Pat 182 C (C N 29).

SALES TAX

—U. P. Sales Tax Act (15 of 1918)

—S. 8 (1-A) — 1968 All LJ 970 — Over. AIR 1970 All 330 (C N 51) (FB).

Specific Relief Act (47 of 1963)

—S. 9 — (1883) 9 Cal 130 — Over. AIR 1970 SC 846 (C N 183).

—S. 9 — (1890) 1LR 17 Cal 256 — Over. AIR 1970 SC 846 (C N 183).

—S. 9 — (1899) 1LR 26 Cal 579 — Over. AIR 1970 SC 846 (C N 183).

TENANCY LAWS

—Bombay Tenancy and Agricultural Lands (Vidarbha Region) Act (99 of 1958)

—S. 38 (7) (as amended by Act 44 of 1963) — AIR 1966 Bom 194 — Over. AIR 1970 Bom 232 A (C N 40) (FB).

—East Punjab Holdings (Consolidation and Prevention of Fragmentation) Act (50 of 1948)

—S. 42 — ('64) C. W. No. 1928 of 1963, D/- 11-3-1964 (Punj) — Over. AIR 1970 Punj 261 (C N 35) (FB).

—S. 42 — 1965 Cur LJ 807 (FB) (Punj) — Over. AIR 1970 Punj 261 (C N 35) (FB).

—S. 42 — ('65) C. W. No. 1057 of 1963, D/- 12-11-1965 (Punj) — Over. AIR 1970 Punj 261 (C N 35) (FB).

—S. 42 — ('65) C. W. No. 1728 of 1963 (Punj) — Over. AIR 1970 Punj 261 (C N 35) (FB).

—S. 42 — ('66) C. W. No. 659 of 1965, D/- 25-5-1966 (Punj) — Over. AIR 1970 Punj 261 (C N 35) (FB).

Tenancy Laws — East Punjab Holdings (Consolidation and Prevention of Fragmentation) Act (contd.)

—S. 42 — ('66) C. W. No. 1551 of 1964, D/- 12-5-1966 (Punj) — Over. AIR 1970 Punj 261 (C N 35) (FB).

—S. 42 — AIR 1968 Punj 10 (FB) — Over. AIR 1970 Punj 261 (C N 35) (FB)

—U. P. Zamindari Abolition and Land Reforms Act (1950) (I of 1951)

—S. 18 — AIR 1955 NUC (All) 4171 — Over. AIR 1970 All 350 (C N 53) (FB).

—S. 18 — 1963 RD 288 (All) — Over. AIR 1970 All 350 (C N 53) (FB).

—S. 18 — 1964 RD 410 (All) — Over. AIR 1970 All 350 (C N 53) (FB).

—S. 18 — AIR 1965 All 504 — Over. AIR 1970 All 350 (C N 53) (FB).

—S. 18 — 1965 RD 23 (All) — Over. AIR 1970 All 350 (C N 53) (FB).

—S. 18 — 1968 RD 456 (All) — Over. AIR 1970 All 350 (C N 53) (FB).

—S. 18 — (1968) F. A. F. O. No. 227 of 1966, D/- 9-12-1968 (All) — Over. AIR 1970 All 350 (C N 53) (FB).

—S. 19 — AIR 1955 NUC (All) 4171 — Over. AIR 1970 All 350 (C N 53) (FB).

—S. 10 — 1963 RD 288 (All) — Over. AIR 1970 All 350 (C N 53) (FB).

—S. 19 — 1964 RD 410 (All) — Over. AIR 1970 All 350 (C N 53) (FB).

—S. 19 — AIR 1965 All 504 — Over. AIR 1970 All 350 (C N 53) (FB).

—S. 19 — 1965 RD 23 (All) — Over. AIR 1970 All 350 (C N 53) (FB).

—S. 19 — 1968 RD 456 (All) — Over. AIR 1970 All 350 (C N 53) (FB).

—S. 19 — (1968) F. A. F. O. No. 227 of 1966, D/- 9-12-1968 (All) — Over. AIR 1970 All 350 (C N 53) (FB).

—S. 21 (1) (d) — AIR 1955 NUC (All) 4171 — Over. AIR 1970 All 350 (C N 53) (FB).

—S. 21 (1) (d) — 1963 RD 288 (All) — Over. AIR 1970 All 350 (C N 53) (FB).

—S. 21 (1) (d) — 1964 RD 410 (All) — Over. AIR 1970 All 350 (C N 53) (FB).

—S. 21 (1) (d) — AIR 1965 All 504 — Over. AIR 1970 All 350 (C N 53) (FB).

—S. 21(1) (d) — 1965 RD 23 (All) — Over. AIR 1970 All 350 (C N 53) (FB).

—S. 21 (1) (d) — 1968 RD 456 (All) — Over. AIR 1970 All 350 (C N 53) (FB).

—S. 21 (1) (d) — (1968) F. A. F. O. No. 227 of 1966, D/- 9-12-1968 (All) — Over. AIR 1970 All 350 (C N 53) (FB).

Transfer of Property Act (4 of 1882)

—S. 106 — AIR 1963 Cal 198 — Revers. AIR 1970 SC 839 A (C N 181).

COURTWISE LIST OF CASES OVERRULED, REVERSED AND DISSENTED FROM ETC. IN A. I. R. 1970 JUNE

DISS.=Dissented from in; NOT F.=Not followed in; OVER.=Overruled in;
REVERS.=Reversed in

U. S. SUPREME COURT

(1927) 274 US 357 = 71 Law Ed 1095 =
47 S Ct 641, Whitney v. California —
Over. AIR 1970 USSC 45 (C N 7).

ALLAHABAD

AIR 1925 Oudh 726 = 26 Cri LJ 1236,
Sarju Singh v. Emperor — Diss. AIR
1970 Orissa 100 A (C N 37).

AIR 1953 All 698 = 1953 Cri LJ 1553,
Sri Krishna v. Bajinath — Diss. AIR
1970 Cal 241 B (C N 48).

AIR 1955 NUC (All) 4171, *Judhisther
Prasad v. Shanti Prasad Shukla* —
Over. AIR 1970 All 350 (C N 53)
(FB).

1963 RD 288 (All), *Hamid Hussain v. R. N.
Mallah* — Over. AIR 1970 All 350
(C N 53) (FB).

1964 RD 410 (All), Harkhoo v. Bindesh-war — Over. AIR 1970 All 350 (C N 53) (FB).

AIR 1965 All 504 = 1965 All LJ 255, *Jagat
Narain v. Laljee* — Over. AIR 1970
All 350 (C N 53) (FB).

1965 RD 23 (All), *Bodhan v. Bhundal
Singh* — Over. AIR 1970 All 350
(C N 53) (FB).

1968 All LJ 970 = 23 STC 423, *Beni Ram
Mool Chand v. Sales Tax Officer,
Fatehgarh* — Over. AIR 1970 All 330
(C N 51) (FB).

1968 RD 456 (All), *Sri Ram Sakal Singh
v. Dy. Director of Consolidation* —
Over. AIR 1970 All 350 (C N 53)
(FB).

(1968) F. A. F. O. No. 227 of 1966, D/-
9-12-1968 (All), Budhu Ahir v. Budhram Komhar — Over. AIR 1970 All
350 (C N 53) (FB).

ANDHRA PRADESH

AIR 1964 Andh Pra 172, *Union of India
v. Eastern Match Co.* — Diss. AIR
1970 Pat 182 C (C N 29).

('66) Writ Petn. No. 1732 of 1966, D/-
1-12-1966 (AP) — Revers. AIR 1970
Andh Pra 217 A (C N 32).

ASSAM

AIR 1969 Assam & Nagaland 50 (FB),
Hassan Ali v. Commr. Plains Division
— Diss. AIR 1970 Orissa 110 C (C N 39).

BOMBAY

(1957) 2 Lab LJ 426 (LATI Bom), Raja-lakshmi Mill Ltd. v. Their Workmen
— Over. AIR 1970 SC 919 F (C N 192).

AIR 1961 Bom 48 = 62 Bom LR 634, M/s.
Valimohomad Gulamhusain Sonawala and Co. v. C. T. A. Pillai — Over.
AIR 1970 SC 829 (C N 178).

AIR 1966 Bom 194 = 1966 Mah LJ 289,
Salubai v. Chandu — Over. AIR 1970
Bom 232 A (C N 40) (FB).

Bombay (contd.)

ILR (1967) Bom 443 (FB), Municipal Committee of Malkapur v. Ballabhdas Mathuradas Lakhani — Revers.
AIR 1970 SC 1002 A, B, D, E, F
(C N 209).

CALCUTTA

(1883) ILR 9 Cal 130 = 11 Cal LR 393,
*Devi Churn Baido v. Issur Chunder
Manjee* — Over. AIR 1970 SC 846
(C N 183).

(1890) ILR 17 Cal 256, Parmeshur Chowdhry v. Brij Lal Chowdhry — Over.
AIR 1970 SC 846 (C N 183).

(1899) ILR 26 Cal 579 = 3 Cal WN 568,
*Nisa Chand Gaita v. Kanchiram
Bagani* — Over. AIR 1970 SC 846
(C N 183).

AIR 1956 Cal 253 = 60 Cal WN 67, Calcutta Motor and Cycle Co. v. Collector of Customs — Over. AIR 1970
SC 941 C (C N 193).

AIR 1958 Cal 682 = 1958 Cri LJ 1469,
*Collector of Customs v. Calcutta
Motor Cycle and Co.* — Over. AIR
1970 SC 941 C (C N 193).

AIR 1963 Cal 198, *Steuart and Co. Ltd. v.
Mackertich* — Revers. AIR 1970 SC
839 A (C N 181).

(1964) 68 Cal WN 1064, *Sibani Rani Dutta
v. Balaichandra Dutta* — Not F. AIR
1970 Cal 240 (C N 47).

DELHI

('66) I D No. 70 of 1958, D/- 30-6-1966
(Ind Tri. Delhi) — Revers. AIR 1970
SC 919 F (C N 192).

MADHYA PRADESH

AIR 1960 Madh Pra 157 = 1960 Cri LJ
613, *Moti Miyan v. Commr. of Indore
Division* — Diss. AIR 1970 Orissa
110 C (C N 39).

('62) C.M.A. No. 76 of 1959, D/- 9-2-1962
(M.P.) — Revers. AIR 1970 Madh
Pra 110 A (C N 24) (FB).

AIR 1965 Madh Pra 180 = (1965) 2 Cri
LJ 220, Municipal Corporation, Gwalior v. Kishan Swaroop — Held partly overruled by AIR 1967 SC 970 as interpreted AIR 1970 Madh Pra
123 A (C N 26).

MADRAS

(1951) 2 Mad LJ 26, *Dorai Kannu Asari
v. Nataraja Chetty* — Over. AIR
1970 Andh Pra 211 A (C N 31).

1963 Mad LJ (Cri) 597 = 1962 Ker LT
526, Raghavan Unnithan v. Vijayamma — Diss. AIR 1970 Mad 242 A
(C N 64).

(1968) Applications Nos. 1760 and 2455 of 1967 (in C. S. No. 118 of 1967), D/-
12-4-1968 (Mad) — Revers. AIR
1970 SC 891 A (C N 190).

Madras (contd.)

(1969) W. A. No. 113 of 1969 (Mad) — Over. AIR 1970 Mad 212 C (C N 56) (FB).

MYSORE

AIR 1962 Mys 263, D. H. Nazareth v. Second Gift Tax Officer — Revers. AIR 1970 SC 999 C, D, E (C N 208).
AIR 1963 Mys 239 = 1964 Mad LJ (Cri) 110, State v. Bhimrao — Diss. AIR 1970 Mad 242 A (C N 64).
(1966) 1 Mys LJ 491, Brahmasuriah v. Laxminarayana — Revers. AIR 1970 SC 816 (C N 175).

ORISSA

(1963) 29 Cal LT 164 = 1LR (1962) Cut 830, Kashinath Misra v. Achyutananda Das — Diss. AIR 1970 Orissa 107 (C N 38).

PATNA

AIR 1920 Pat 836 = 20 Cri LJ 648, Jamuna Kanth Jha v. Rudra Kumar Jha — Diss. AIR 1970 Cal 241 B (C N 48).
AIR 1933 Pat 61 = 13 Pat LT 726, H. Hamid v. M. Abdul Ghanl — Diss. AIR 1970 Pat 35 (C N 37).
AIR 1939 Pat 30 = 5 BR 21, Ramavilar Prasad v. Satdeo Lal — Diss. AIR 1970 Tripura 35 (C N 37).
AIR 1941 Pat 83 = 1LR 19 Pat 669, Harihar Prasad v. Narsingh Prasad — Diss. AIR 1970 Mad 232 (C N 60).
AIR 1955 Pat 362 = 1LR 34 Pat 203, Mundrika Prasad Singh v. Msl. Kachnar Kaur — Diss. AIR 1970 Cal 236 B (C N 46).
AIR 1957 Pat 111 = 1956 BLJR 302, Mahabir Ram v. Kapildeo Pathak — Not F. AIR 1970 Punj 273 A (C N 38).
AIR 1958 Pat 252 = 1LR 37 Pat 252 (FB).

Patna (contd.)

Sheonarainlal v. Rameshwari Devi — Over. AIR 1970 SC 833 (C N 179)

PUNJAB

(1964) Civil Writ No. 1928 of 1963, D/- 11-3-1964 (Punj), Rursingh v. Director of Consolidation of Holdings, Punjab — Over. AIR 1970 Punj 251 (C N 35) (FB).
1965 Cur LJ 807 = 68 Pun LR 124 (FB), Hans Raj v. Shri Jaspal Singh — Over. AIR 1970 Punj 261 (C N 35) (FR).
(1965) Civil Writ No. 1057 of 1963, D/- 12-11-1965 (Punj), Jai Kishan Singh v. State of Punjab — Over. AIR 1970 Punj 261 (C N 35) (FB).
(1965) Civil Writ No. 1728 of 1963, D/- 7-1-1965 (Punj), Karnail Singh v. Addl. Director of Consolidation of Holdings, Patiala — Over. AIR 1970 Punj 261 (C N 35) (FB).
(1966) Civil Writ No. 659 of 1965, D/- 5-1966 (Punj), Ram Singh v. Punjab Govt. — Over. AIR 1970 Punj 261 (C N 35) (FB).
(1966) Civil Writ No. 1551 of 1961, D/- 12-5-1966 = 1LR (1967) 1 Punj 555, Rattil Ram v. State of Punjab — Over. AIR 1970 Punj 201 (C N 35) (FR).
(1967) Ref. No. 44 of 1966, D/- 8-12-1967 (Ind Tri-Punj) — Revers. AIR 1970 SC 867 B (C N 188).
AIR 1968 Punj 10 = 69 Pun LR 833 (FB), Mange v. Addl. Director, Consolidation of Holdings — Over. AIR 1970 Punj 261 (C N 35) (FB).
AIR 1968 Punj 204 = 1LR (1967) 1 Pun 622 (FB), Sardool Singh v. Harl Singh — Over. AIR 1970 SC 833 (C N 179).

RAJASTHAN

AIR 1954 Raj 264 = 1051 Cri LJ 167, Kishore Singh v. State of Rajasthan — Diss. AIR 1970 Orissa 110 (C N 39).

COMPARATIVE TABLE

(10-5-1970)

A. I. R. 1970 June — Other Journals

AIR-1970 Supreme Court	AIR 1970 Supreme Court	AIR 1970 Supreme Court	AIR 1970 Supreme Court
AIR 802 (1969) 2 B C W 11 921 1970 All LJ 178 1970 B L J 252 808 (1969) 1 S C O 215 (1970) 1 Lab LJ 21 20 Pac L R 147 (1969) 2 Um N P 668 (1970) 1 S C J 441 (1970) 1 S C A 270 (1969) 2 S C B 613 (1969) 2 S C R 971 (1970) 1 S C A 279 (1970) 1 S C J 442 912 914 (1970) 1 B C W B 303 (1970) 1 B C C 143	AIR 816 (1969) 1 S C O 178 1970 S. Cri R 123 (1970) 1 S C W R 552 (1970) 1 S C J 451 (1969) 2 S C B 935 (1970) 1 S C O 143 (1969) 2 Um N P 157 20 Pac L R 140 (1970) 1 S C A 276 (1969) 2 S C B 272 (1969) 2 Um N P 520 (1970) 1 S C A 244 (1969) 2 S C R 280 (1969) 2 Um N P 121 (1969) 2 S C R 244 (1970) 1 S C A 306	AIR 833con (1970) 1 B C J 522 833 (1969) 1 B C W R 58 (1969) 1 B C C 197 (1969) 2 S C J 145 (1969) 21 Pun L R ID 252 1969 Pac C R 705 1969 Ben C J 352 (1969) 2 S C R 1018 839 1969 Ben C R 1023 843 1969 Pat L J B (S C) 1031 1970 S C D 233 (1969) 2 S C W B 810 ... (1969) 1 B C C 10	AIR 832con 1970 B C Cri R 113 (1969) 2 Um N P 215 (1969) 2 S C R 235 (1969) 2 Um N P 170 (1970) 1 B C W B 161 (1970) 1 S C J 443 (1970) 1 Lab LJ 313 (1969) 2 S C B 278 (1969) 2 S C P 211 (1969) 2 Um N P 475 (1970) 1 S C W B 217 867 (1969) 2 S C R 754 879 20 Pac L R 222

AIR 1970 Supreme Court		AIR 1970 Allahabad		AIR 1970 Dilli		AIR 1970 Madras
AIR	Other Journals	AIR	Other Journals	AIR	Other Journals	AIR	Other Journals
(1969) 2 Um N P	567	330 (FB)	...	116	...	83 Mad L W 4	...
(1969) 2 S C R 593	...	344 1969 All W R	(HC) 410	119	...	247 (1969) 2 Mad L J	239
(1969) 1 S C W R	169	(FB) 1969 All L J 748	...	122(FB)	...	62 Mad L W 440	...
(1969) 1 S L C 233	...	350 1969 All W R	(HC) 714	AIR 1970 Gujarat		73 I T R 360	...
(1969) 2 S C R 920	...	(FB) 1969 All L J 943	...	AIR	Other Journals	AIR 1970 Manipur
(1969) 1 S C C 110	...	AIR 1970 Andhra Pradesh		122 ILR (1969) Gu 286	10 Guj L R 950	AIR	Other Journals
(1970) 1 S C W R	537	AIR	Other Journals	AIR 1970 Jammu and Kashmir		34	...
25 S T O 269	...	210	...	AIR	Other Journals	37	...
(1969) 2 S C R 824	...	211 (1969) 2 Andh W R 436	...	85 1969 Kash L J 360	90 1970 Ser L R 1	40	...
36 F J R 247	...	217	...	94	...	41	...
(1969) 2 Lab L J	755	220 (1970) 1 Andh W R	161	AIR 1970 Kerala		47	...
(1969) 2 Um N P	504	225 (1969) 1 Andh W R	139	AIR	Other Journals	AIR 1970 Mysore
50 Fac L R 176	...	1969 Com L J 124	...	85 1969 Ker L J 129	39 Com Cas 717	149	...
(1969) 2 S C R 307	...	(1970) 1 Andh L T	36	138 ILR (1969) 1 Ker	283	142 (1969) 2 Mys L J	465
(1969) 2 Um N P	401	234 (1969) 2 Andh W R	2	1969 Ker L J 222	1969 Ker L R 418	154	...
(1969) 2 S C R 461	...	1969 Mad L J (Cri)	538	142 ILR (1969) 1 Ker	76	155 (1969) 2 Mys L J	522
(1969) 1 SCWR 29	...	236	...	1969 Ker L R 232	1969 Ker L J 243	157	...
1969 S C D 274	...	AIR 1970 Assam		1969 Ker L J 253	1969 Ker L T 253	160	...
(1969) 2 Um N P	379	AIR	Other Journals	158 1969 Ker L T 669	(FB) ILR (1969) 2 Ker	AIR 1970 Orissa
(1969) 2 S C R 438	...	70 Assam L R (1969)	Assam 148	1969 Ker L J 705	1969 Mad L J (Cri)	AIR	Other Journals
1970 Ren C J 104	...	20 Fac L R 42	...	1969 Mad L J 798	...	100	...
1970 S C D 274	...	73 Assam L R (1969)	(Assam) 234	AIR 1970 Madhya Pradesh		107	...
1968 All W R (HC)	713	75	...	AIR	Other Journals	110	...
1969 S C D 207	...	80 Assam L R (1969)	Assam 192	102 1962 M P W R 792	1969 M P L J 845	AIR 1970 Patna
(1969) 2 Um N P	189	AIR 1970 Bombay		1569 Jab L J 1046	1970 M P L J 80	AIR	Other Journals
(1969) 2 S C R 297	...	AIR	Other Journals	110 1970 M P W R 66	1970 Jab L J 125	163 1969 Pat L J R 438	...
(1970) 1 S C W R	495	201	...	(FB) 1970 M P L J 80	1970 M P W R 168	167 1969 B L J R 942	...
1970 S C D 336	...	205 71 Bom L R 663	1970 Maha L J 138	119 1969 M P W R 908	1969 M P L J 931	169 1969 B L J R 950	...
(1970) 1 S C W R	577	209 71 Bom L R 843	1970 Maha L J 318	123 1970 M P L J 177	1970 M P W R 168	172 1969 B L J R 919	...
981	...	213 72 Bom LR 192	1970 Maha L J 343	AIR 1970 Madras		162 1969 A C J 405	...
984	...	221 72 Bom L R 89	1970 Maha L J 343	AIR	Other Journals	169 1969 Pat L J R 399	...
986	...	225 70 Bom L R 767	1969 Maha L J 193	211 (1969) 2 Mad L J	(SB) 607	169 1969 B L J R 871	...
987	...	ILR (1969) Bom	1172	212 (1970) 1 Mad L J	178	193 1968 B L J R 685	...
989	...	252 1969 Maha L J	933	(FB) 78 Mad L W 98	1969 Mad L W	207 1969 A C J 405	...
992	...	(FB) 1970 Mah L J 257	...	220 78 Mad L W 98	(Cri) 61	162 1969 Pat L J R 399	...
997	...	AIR 1970 Calcutta		224 36 F J R 170	(1969) 2 Mad L J	169 1968 B L J R 871	...
999	...	AIR	Other Journals	228 (1969) 2 Mad L J	530	193 1969 Pat L J R 329	...
1002	...	225 74 Cal W N 313	...	82 Mad L W 732	1970) 1 Mad L J	1970 B L J R 199	...
1006	...	229	...	82 Mad L W 551	(1970) 1 Mad L J	AIR 1970 Punjab
1011	...	231	...	232 82 Mad L W 551	(1970) 1 Mad L J	AIR	Other Journals
1015	...	236 74 Cal W N 272	...	212 (1970) 1 Mad L J	178	241 1970 Ser L R 59	...
1019	...	240	...	(FB) 78 Mad L W 98	1969 Mad L W	(FB) ILR (1970) 1 Panj	429
1022	...	241	...	220 78 Mad L W 98	(Cri) 61	261 1970 Pan L J 121	...
1024	...	243	...	224 36 F J R 170	(1969) 2 Mad L J	(FB) 72 Pun L R 167	...
AIR 1970 U S S C		248	...	228 (1969) 2 Mad L J	530	1970 Rev L R 108	...
USSC	Other Journals	250	...	82 Mad L W 732	1970) 1 Mad L J	270	...
45 (1969) 23 Law Ed	2nd 430	253 74 Cal W N 465	...	82 Mad L W 551	(1970) 1 Mad L J	272	...
AIR 1970 Allahabad		255	...	232 82 Mad L W 551	(1970) 1 Mad L J	273	...
AIR	Other Journals	266	...	236 1969 A C J 226	83 Mad L W 47	276 72 Fun L R 105	...
307 1970 All W R	(HC) 158	AIR 1970 Delhi		237 83 Mad L W 53	(FB) (1970. 1 Mad L J	279 1970 Cur L J 96	...
309 1969 All L J 881	(HC) 720	AIR	Other Journals	240 83 Mad L W 63	1969 Mad L W	282 1970 Cur L J 127	...
(FB) 1969 All W R	1969 Ben C R 972	114	...	242 1969 Mad L W	(Cri) 264	(FB) 72 Pun L R 227	...
1969 Ren C J 1054	...	AIR 1970 Tripura		244 (1969) 2 Mad L J	477	284 1969 Cur L J 961	...
316 1969 All W R	(HC) 534	AIR	Other Journals	83 Mad L W 63	1969 Mad L W	72 Pun L R 50	...
(FB) 1969 All L J 829	...	114	...	242 1969 Mad L W	(Cri) 264	1969 Cur L J 746	...
						36 F J R 365	...
						AIR 1970 Rajasthan
						AIR	Other Journals
						118 ILR (1969) 19 Raj	461
						125	...
						AIR 1970 Tripura
						AIR	Other Journals
						35	...
						37	...
						40	...
						43	...

THE ENGLISH AND INDIAN LAW OF TORTS

BY

RATANLAL RANCHHODDAS, B.A., LL.B.

Advocate (O. S.) Bombay High Court

AND

DHIRAJLAL KESHAVLAL THAKORE, B.A.,

Barrister-at-Law

Nineteenth Edition

Demi 8vo

Pages 682

Price Rs. 12.00

This edition has undergone a thorough and careful revision. Many portions have been re-written and re-cast in the light of important decisions laying down new principles and still more important statutory changes in common law. The case-law has been brought down to date. Not a single English or Indian case of any importance on the law of Torts has been omitted. The book not only meets the needs of the students of law for a handy text-book but will be useful to the Bench and the Bar as a reliable work of ready reference for an up-to-date statement of the law on the subject.

Some Opinions on earlier editions.

Lord Herschell (Lord High Chancellor of England): — "Wherever I have tested it, the statement of the law appears very accurate and clear."

Lord Russell of Killowen (Lord Chief Justice of England): — "It seems to me to be carefully done and to be well arranged. The principles are lucidly explained."

Sir A. L. Smith (Master of the Rolls, England): — "I had occasion not long since to refer to it in relation to the liability of owners of property to passers-by, and I found all the cases relating thereto well collected together which was of great utility to me."

Sir Lawrence Jenkins (Chief Justice, Bombay High Court): — "On looking to that part of your book on Torts which deals with a subject full of difficulty I find it treated in a way which leads me to believe that the whole book must have been written with great care and sound judgment."

Sir Rash Behari Ghose: — "Your work evinces much learning and research."

The Law Journal (London): — "The Authors have evidently brought learning and industry to their task, and the result is a work which, we have no doubt, will be highly appreciated by practitioners in India."

The Juridical Review (Edinburgh): — "The book furnishes a systematic examination and statement of the principles of the English common law and of the Indian case law. The merits of its first edition have been appreciated ever since its publication. In its well arranged chapters the practitioner will find all that a text-book can give, clearly and tersely set forth, scrupulously vouched, while for scientific jurist it has peculiar interest."

The Irish Law Times (Dublin): — "By the present work the learned authors have undoubtedly supplied a long-felt desideratum—the lucid exposition and methodical arrangement of the principles of the English common law so far as the same are embodied in Indian case-law."

The Harvard Law Review (America): — "The work is more comprehensive than many other text-books on the subject."

The Columbia Law Review (America): — "This is a very interesting and instructive book. It is especially instructive by reason of its full and careful statement of Indian case-law; while the greater part of the text is devoted to the exposition of English common law principles."

The Times (London): — "A work of much learning."

Apply to: —

THE BOMBAY LAW REPORTER (Private) LTD.,

"KRISHNA MAHAL", 63, MARINE DRIVE, BOMBAY 20

RECENT AGENCY PUBLICATIONS

ARCHBOLD, J. F. : Pleading, Evidence & Practice in Criminal Cases, 37th Edn.	1969	157.50
AL BAHARNA HUSAIN, M. : The Legal Status of the Arabian Gulf States : A Study of their Treaty Relations & International Problems	1968	54.00
BARRELL : Legal Cases for Teachers	1970	90.00
BEAN & LOCKWOOD : Rating Valuation Practice, 6th Edn.	1969	90.00
British International Law Cases, Vol. VII		226.80
Vols. I to VI also available. Price on request
BOT, B. R. : Non-Recognition & Treaty Relations	1968	68.25
BOWETT, D. W. : Law of International Institutions 2nd Edn.	1970	67.60
	(Paper)	36.00
CHITTY : On Contract, 2 Vols., 23rd Edn.	1968	283.50
CLERK & LINDSELL : On Torts, 13th Edn.	1969	207.90
DIAMOND, A. S. : Instalment Credit	1970	79.20
DRAKE, C. D. : An Outline of Labour Law	1969	40.50
	(Paper)	16.20
EHRENZWEIG, A. A. : Private International Law	1967	73.50
ELLIOTT & WOOD : A Casebook on Criminal Law	1969	81.00
	(Paper)	37.80
FRANCK, R. M. : Casebook on Comparative Constitutional Process	1969	69.75
GAL, G. : Space Law	1969	79.80
GRAVESON, R. H. : Conflict of Laws, 6th Edn.	1969	81.00
	(Paper)	43.20
GREEN, A. W. : Political Integration by Jurisprudence	1969	199.50
GRUNDY, M. : Tax and the Family Business, 4th Edn.	1970	30.80
GOWER, L. C. B. : Principles of Modern Company Law, 3rd Edn.	1969	90.00
HANBURY, H. Q. : Modern Equity, 9th Edn.	1969	108.00
	(Paper)	63.00
JOSEPH, C. : Nationality and Diplomatic Protection	1969	58.80
KEEBLE : Principles & Practice of Town & Country Planning, 4th Edn.	1969	99.00
LADOR-LEDERER, J. J. : International Group Protection	1968	109.20
LASKIN, B. : British Tradition in Canadian Law (Hamlyn Lectures)	1969	31.50
LEE, L. T. : China and International Agreements	1969	52.50
MACKINTOSH, J. P. : The British Cabinet, 2nd Edn.	1969	49.50
	(Paper)	22.50
McWHINNEY, E. : International Law and World Revolution	1967	25.20
McWHINNEY & BRADLEY (Ed.) : New Frontiers in Space Law	1969	39.90
McWHINNEY & BRADLEY (Ed.) : The Freedom of the Air	1968	54.80
Manual of the Council of Europe - Its Structure, Functions & Achievements (Edited)	1970	99.00
MALTE, N. M. : Aero Space Law	1969	99.00
MAXWELL, P. B. : Interpretation of Statutes, 12th Edn. Special Indian Price	(Paper) 1969	40.00
	(Hardbound)	70.20
MEGARRY, R. E. : A Manual of Real Property, 4th Edn.	1969	81.00
	(Paper)	45.00
McLEAN & WOOD : Criminal Justice & the Treatment of Offenders	1969	56.70
MORRISON, C. : The Developing European Law of Human Rights	1967	50.40
NAPLEY, D. : Technique of Persuasion	1970	27.00
NWOCUGU, F. I. : The Legal Problems of Foreign Investment in Developing Countries	1965	40.50
PANHUY, H. F. & OTHERS (Ed) : International Organisation and Integration	1968	147.00
PALMER, SIR F. : Company Law, 21st Edn.	1968	189.00
	Supplement	18.00
PHIPSON, S. L. : Law of Evidence, 11th Edn.	1970	175.50
POTTER & MONROE : Tax Planning with Precedents, 6th Edn.	1970	90.00
ROBINSON, J. : International Law and Organisation	1967	136.50
ROBERTSON, A. H. : Human Rights in National & International Law	1968	63.00
ROSENNE, S. : The Law and Practice of the International Court, 2 Vols.	1965	168.00
SCHLESINGER, R. B. : Formation of Contracts, 2 Vols.	1968	270.00
SMITH & THOMAS : A Casebook on Contract, 4th Edn.	1969	81.00
SMITH, D. D. : International Tele-communication Control	1969	61.95
Supreme Court Practice, 2 Vols.	1970	288.00
VERZIJL, J. J. W. : International Law in Historical Perspective	1969	131.25
Vol. I General Subjects	1969	136.50
Vol. II International Persons	1968	288.80
VERZIJL, J. H. W. : The Jurisprudence of the World Court, 2 Vols.	1969	85.50
WALLACE, I. N. D. : Building & Civil Engineering Standard Forms	1968	189.00
WILLIAMS : On Bankruptcy, 18th Edn.	1967	56.70
WORTLEY, B. A. : Jurisprudence	1969	58.80
YEMIN, F. : Legislative Powers in the United Nations & Specialized Agencies

N. M. TRIPATHI PRIVATE LIMITED

LAW PUBLISHERS & BOOKSELLERS

163, Samaldas Gandhi Marg,

BOMBAY-2,

(June) 1970 Indexes 4/(1).

Latest and Selected Law Books

1. Sethi : Police Acts (Central & States)	2nd Ed.	1970	20.00
2. Sethi : Hindu Succession Act	4th Ed.	1970	15.00
3. Singhal : Civil Court Practice and Procedure		1970	25.00
4. Dagga : Hundred Years Calendar (1901-2000)		1970	20.00
5. Singhal : Damages & Compensation		1970	40.00
6. Chaturvedi : Natural and Social Justice		1970	25.00
7. Aiyer : Contempt of Court, Parliament and Public Servants	4th Ed.	1970	20.00
9. Bindra : Interpretation of Statutes	5th Ed.	1970	40.00
9. Hardless : Handwriting and Thumb-Prints Identification and Forensic Science (with Blocks & Illustrations)		1970	25.00
10. Beotra : Law of Forest (Central & States)	3rd Ed.	1970	25.00
11. J. P. Bhatnagar : Essential Commodities Act (with Central Orders)	2nd Ed.	1969	25.00
12. Consul : Law of Foreigners Citizenship and Passport (with Rules, Notifications, Orders and Allied Laws)	9nd Ed.	1969	20.00
13. Mitter : Defamation and Molestation Prosecution	5th Ed.	1969	19.50
14. Venkiah : Law of Prints & Impressions (Finger, Thumb, Palm, Foot, etc.)		1969	12.50
15. Sastri and Bagga : Criminal Manual, Major Acts (I. P. C., Cr. P. C., and Evidence Act)		1969	15.00
16. Sastri and Bagga : Hindi Criminal Manual, Major Acts (I. P. C., Cr. P. C. and Evidence Act)		1969	15.00
17. Sethi : Prevention of Food Adulteration Act & Rules (Central & States)	8th Ed.	1969	25.00
18. Woodroffe and Amcer All : Criminal Evidence (1955 Ed. with Supplement)		1969	35.00
19. Aiyer : Law relating to Sessions Trial (1950 Ed. with Supp.)	2nd Ed.	1969	50.00
20. Mitter : Defamation and Molestation Prosecution (Civil & Criminal)	5th Ed.	1969	12.50
21. Agrawal : Law of Municipal Corporation		1969	25.00
22. Chandak : Law of Notices (with model forms)		1969	15.00
23. Yearly Supreme Court Digest, 1968		1969	15.00
24. Woodroffe & Amcer All : Law of Evidence, 4 Vols.	12th Ed.	1968-69	100.00
25. Bannerjee : Law of Specific Reliefs (T. L. L.)	4th Ed.	1967	40.00
26. Umrigar : Journalists & the Law		1969	25.50
27. Anand : Law of Compromises (1965 Ed. with Supp.)	2nd Ed.	1969	13.50
28. Aiyer : Manual of Law Terms and Phrases	8th Ed.	1969	20.00
29. Bindra : Pleadings and Practice (with about 300 Model Forms)	3rd Ed.	1969	20.00
30. Dagga : Labour Manual (containing Labour Acts and Rules)		1969	20.00
31. Bagga : Constitution of India	3rd Ed.	1969	8.00
32. Manchanda : Law and Practice of Divorce	3rd Ed.	1968	50.00
33. Gopalakrishna : Hindu Adoptions and Maintenance Act	3rd Ed.	1969	12.50
34. Chandak : Gift Tax Act & Rules		1968	50.00
35. Dr. Nayyar : All Round Ready Reckoner	3rd Ed.	1968	15.00
36. Alfred Ayres : Employees' Misconduct (as Cause for Discipline and Dismissals in India and Commonwealth)		1968	35.00
37. Iyengar : Copyright Act	2nd Ed.	1968	35.00
38. Krishnamurti : Police Diaries, Statements, Reports, Investigation and Arrest	2nd Ed.	1968	22.50
39. Rao : Law of Negligence		1968	30.00
40. Varshney : Bribery and Corruption (1963 Ed. with Supp.)	2nd Ed.	1968	15.00
41. Yearly Supreme Court Digest, 1967		1968	15.00
42. Dhameja : Registration Act (with States Fees & Amendments)		1968	27.50
43. Das : Arbitration Act	3rd Ed.	1968	35.00
44. Subrahmanyan : Guardians and Wards Act, Majority Act & Law of Minors		1968	50.00
45. S. Row : Negotiable Instruments Act	5th Ed.	1968	25.00
46. Subrahmanyan : Law of Minors		1968	10.00
47. Sastri : Co-operative Societies in India (Central & States) in 2 Vols.	2nd Ed.	1968	60.00
48. Bannerjee : Law of Execution		1968	50.00
49. Chandak : Law of Costs, Accounts and Valuation		1968	30.00
50. Subrahmanyan and Singhal : Contract Act in 2 Vols.		1968	60.00
51. Pillay : Law of Receivers (1954 Ed. with Supp.)	2nd Ed.	1968	25.00
52. Ram and Dev : Provincial Small Cause Courts Act (1964 Ed. with Supp.)		1968	15.00
53. Sastri : Societies Registration Act (Central & States) (1964 Ed. with Supp.)	4th Edn.	1968	10.00
54. Sastri : Succession Certificate (1964 Ed. with Supp.)	3rd Edn.	1967	5.00

Place your orders with :

LAW BOOK COMPANY

Gardar Patel Marg, Post Box No. 4,

ALLAHABAD-1.

RECENT LEGAL PUBLICATIONS

INDIAN ELECTRICITY RULES, 1956, By N. Bharucha

(Incorporating amendments including those made by the Indian Electricity (Amendment) Rules, 1965)

The Bombay Presidency Association has published the above commentary on the Indian Electricity Rules, 1956, (as amended upto 1965). It not only analyses the Rules, bringing out the legal requirements with case-law on relevant aspects, but gives the reader copious information on the current Codes of Practice adopted in India and U. K. on subjects covered by the Rules, Relevant Indian and British Standards on various Rules are cited.

1966

648 pp.

Rs. 40-00

THE BOMBAY PUBLIC TRUSTS ACT, 1950, By K. N. Shah

(Applicable to Maharashtra and Gujarat)

This fourth edition of the book, revised and enlarged and brought up-to-date, contains the above Act, as amended to date, together with Rules and Notifications.

1970

4th Edn.

Royal 8vo

800 pp.

Rs. 38-00

PUBLIC SERVICE LAW THROUGH THE CASES By Madan Bhatia

This book is not meant to be a commentary on Service Law, and no commentary on the subject could be very helpful. Real guidance can be derived from the study of application of settled principles of Law of Courts to different set of circumstances. The book will serve as a useful guide in this regard to members of the legal profession as well as public servants.

1969

Royal 8vo

524 pp.

Rs. 30.00

CHEQUES IN LAW AND PRACTICE By M. S. Parthasarathy

The book presents the legal principles and established banking practices governing cheque transactions in India. Numerous Indian and foreign decisions are cited. The book will be highly useful to bankers, lawyers and businessmen, and as an informative text book to students.

1969

Demy 8vo

435 pp.

Rs. 25.00

ADMINISTRATIVE LAW By S. Rajagopalan

Administrative Law has now come to occupy a vital place in jurisprudence—an emergent reality in the legal systems of the countries wedded to the observance of the Rule of Law. Crammed with references and information, each subject is dealt with in the light of its history and evolution in India and various foreign countries.

1969

Demy 8vo

462 pp.

Rs. 25.00

THE FRAMING OF INDIA'S CONSTITUTION, Edited by B. Shiva Rao (in 5 Vols.)

In these 5 volumes is unfolded the fascinating story of the framing of India's Constitution by the Constituent Assembly, through all the rapid changes that the country experienced at the end of World War II.

1968

Set : Rs. 300.00

De luxe Edn. Rs. 350.00

MUSLIM LAW By F. B. Tyabji, 4th Edn. By Muhsin Taryibji

Since the last edition, about 30 years ago, great changes have taken place—Political, Legal and Social. British India became independent and the sub-continent was partitioned into two countries—India and Pakistan. This new edition which contains changes since 30 years ago should supply a long-felt need not only by courts and legal practitioners but also by researchers in Muslim Law.

1968

4th Edn.

Royal 8vo

1122 pp.

Rs. 50.00

JUST RELEASED

- | | | |
|---|------|-------|
| 1. PRINCIPLES OF HINDU LAW, by D. F. Mulla, 13th edn. 1966, reprinted | 1970 | 26.00 |
| 2. SOLUTIONS TO PROBLEMS IN LAW EXAMINATIONS, by Inamidar & Prabhu (2 vols.) — Book I, Rs. 12.00. Book II, Rs. 7.00 | 1969 | |
| 3. SHINGNE'S SUMMARY OF SALMOND'S JURISPRUDENCE, 2nd edn. by A. K. Sarkar | 1970 | 9.50 |

TO BE RELEASED SHORTLY

- | | | |
|--|------|-------|
| 1. COMMON LAW IN INDIA, by M. O. Setalvad (Hamlyn Lectures), 2nd edn. (Indian) | 1970 | 11.00 |
| 2. ADMINISTRATIVE LAW IN INDIA, by S. P. Sathe | 1970 | 25.00 |

N. M. TRIPATHI PRIVATE LIMITED

Law Publishers : 164, Samaldas Gandhi Marg, Bombay-2. : Booksellers

JUST OUT

JUST OUT

MUKHERJEE on HINDU LAW OF RELIGIOUS & CHARITABLE TRUSTS (T.L.L.)Revised by Hon'ble Mr. Justice P. B. Mukharji.

This well known Tagore Law Lecture of Dr. B. K. Mukherjee needs no introduction. The Law applied to-day in dealing with religious and charitable trusts of Hindus is to a large extent Judge-made law based upon the principles of Equity law in England and Customs and Usages of our country. These lectures are primarily based upon judicial decisions both English and Indian.

Thoroughly revised and brought up-to-date in the light of major decisions of Indian and English Courts, Taxation of Hindu Religious and Charitable Trust has also been dealt with. Almost all major relevant Acts included in the Appendix. Indispensable to the Bench and the Bar.

3rd Edition

1970

Price Rs. 40.00

JUST OUT

JUST OUT

J. A. ParksPRINCIPLES & PRACTICE OF VALUATIONS—LAND and BUILDINGSRevised by B. P. Chatterjee, Govt. Advocate, Calcutta Improvement Trust.*

This book has not only been revised but portions have been re-written and even added to where necessary. A standard book on valuations in India.

There is no other book of its kind in the country and no pains have been spared by the editor to make the work indispensable to Valuers, Estate Agents, Lawyers and even Judges.

4th Edition

1970

Price Rs. 25.00

CO-OWNERSHIP AND PARTITION By S. D. Mitra, Advocate.

The book contains full and complete statement of law and procedure. It is in two parts. The one regarding Co-ownership deals with the incidents and different forms thereof as also mutual relations between co-owners inter se and relations with third persons. In the other part the subject of partition has been dealt with exhaustively, clearly and systematically. The Partition Act has been incorporated and the provisions thereof have been thoroughly discussed and defects therein have been pointed out. All recent development of the law and decisions thereon have been noticed.

3rd Edition

1969

Price Rs. 20.00

CRIMINAL LAW PRACTICE By R. C. Verma, Civil & Asst. Sessions Judge.

SPECIAL FEATURES:—(1) Case law upto May 1969, (2) All the matter needed for a fair trial and qualitative judgments, arranged topic-wise, (3) Value and manner of appreciation of criminal evidence of witness, circumstantial evidence, confession, discovery evidence, dying declaration, F. I. R. Identification evidence and Medical evidence, (4) Defences open to accused and their proof given in a separate chapter and in separate columns in other chapters, (5) Irregularities of investigation, (6) Case law on salient provisions of Criminal Procedure Code and Evidence Act. (7) Exhaustive index at the end.

Indispensable for public prosecutors and lawyers practising in Criminal Courts.

Edition

1969

Price Rs. 15.00

DUTT ON CONTRACT By B. C. Mitra, Bar-at-Law.

This edition is fully revised, up-to-date and comprehensive within the prescribed compass, and will be a boon to all who are badly pressed for time and yet have to be familiar with the last word in Case-law on the subject. In short, this is an indispensable edition, incorporating admirably a wealth of information presented in the editor's inimitable, condensed and lucid style.

4th Edition

1969

Price Rs. 55.00

THE MARINE INSURANCE ACT, 1923 By A. K. Bhattacharjee, Bar-at-Law.

Fully annotated with up-to date case laws. The English and the Indian Laws are studied comparatively and section-wise. Marine, the mother of Insurance, is thoroughly analysed, discussed and the basis of all insurance laws examined in the light of Judge-made law which forms the foundation of the statute. The legal, the commercial and also the executive aspects of Marine Insurance as to the practical application in day-to-day affairs of business have been exhaustively dealt with. Facts of decided cases and the principles of law applied thereto as stated in the treatise, will help greatly in solving problems with which readers are faced. Table of cases and the General Index of subjects treated in the Book are complete and comprehensive.

Edition

1969

Price Rs. 14.00

EASTERN LAW HOUSE PRIVATE LTD.LAW PUBLISHERS AND BOOKSELLERS

54, Ganesh Chunder Avenue,

CALCUTTA-13.

TELEPHONE : 23113

TELEGRAMS : "EXPERT, NAGPUR"

For Expert Opinion & Evidence

CONSULT :

C. T. BHANAGAY

TRAINED IN ENGLAND

F.A. F.Sc., B.A., LL.B., F.R.M.S. (LONDON)

CONSULTANT TO GOVERNMENT OF RAJASTHAN

HANDWRITING, FINGER-PRINTS AND BALLISTICS EXPERT AND CRIMINOLOGIST

Ramdaspath, NAGPUR-1.

Asst. Examiner deputed to photograph documents when required. IN URGENT MATTERS Mr. BHANAGAY can examine documents in court and give evidence on the following day. Questions for cross-examination or notes for arguments with relevant extracts of authorities can be supplied.

INDIAN INSTITUTE OF CRIMINOLOGY
RAMDASPETH, NAGPUR-1

OFFERS POSTAL COURSE IN

- (1) DISPUTED DOCUMENTS AND HANDWRITING
 (2) FINGER PRINTS (3) FIRE ARMS (FORENSIC BALLISTICS)

The Course includes lessons in Forensic Photography, Case studies, Expert law and Practicals. Details on payment of Rupees two by money order only.

Phone 31861

Grams 'Documents' Indore City.

C. T. SARWATE, B.A., LL.B., F.R.M.S. (LONDON)

Additional Govt. Examiner of Questioned Documents to MADHYA PRADESH and Consultant to Govt. of RAJASTHAN.

HANDWRITING, FINGER-PRINTS AND FIRE-ARMS EXPERT.

Consult him on all matters pertaining to Hand-writing, Finger-Prints, Inks, Paper Seal impressions, Fire-Arms etc. Cross-examination of experts undertaken.

Office photographer can be sent on request to take photographs in Court.

Charges are reasonable.

Office & Residence :

4, Mal-Godown Road,
Naya Pura, INDORE.

Branch Office :

1968, Wright Town
JABALPUR Phone : 2520*Consult :*

PARMESHWAR DAYAL, M.A.
DOCUMENT EXAMINER. 37 Yrs. in practice.

& Anil Kumar Mathur,

ASSOCIATE DOCUMENT EXAMINER

FORGERY DETECTION BUREAU

OFFICE : Meadows House, Meadows St., Fort, BOMBAY-1. Phone : 251088.

RESIDENCE : 1/5 Kazi Blocks, near Bandra Talkies, Swami Vivekanand Rd., Bandra, BOMBAY-50. Phone : 533785.

Phone : 3441

(A. I. FORGED Document Investigation Bureau) SIMLA-3.
(1930-1970)

Tels : Document Houses,

For Detecting FORGERIES in IMPORTANT WILLS,
PARTNERSHIPS, AGREEMENTS, DEEDS, PRONOTES, etc.,
Refer to:—SENIOR CONSULTS., on EXAMINATION of QUESTIONED DOCUMENTS, INKS & PAPER
ANALYSTS

Dr. BAWA R. SINGH, Ph. D., Gold Medallist,
F.R.M.S., M.R.P.S. (Great Britain), etc.,

& Senior Associate BAWA J. SINGH,
Gold Medallist F.R.M.S., M.R.P.S. (London),

SPECIALISTS in AUTHENTICATED Cross-Examinations on Document Examiners.

"also accept IMPORTANT Private Criminal and Civil Cases".

40 Years' SUCCESSFUL Experience.

Questioned Document Examiner's Houses, SIMLA-3.

Phone Resi. : 441281

Phone Office : { 297261
256786

GAJJAR & GAJJAR

Handwriting Experts Trained in U.S.A.

T. J. Gajjar, B.A., Harvard Associate in Police Science (U.S.A.)
Founder Expert of the Handwriting Branch of the Former Bombay State. (31 years of experience)

H. T. Gajjar, n.sc. (nom.), Trained at Police Training Centre of Indiana University and Identification Lab. of Post Office Dept. Washington D. C. (U.S.A.)

35, Dalai Street, Examiner Press Building, Fort, BOMBAY 1.

Residence : — 11/12 Jimmy Chambers, Parel Station Road, BOMBAY 12.

7/2 South Tukoganj,
INDORE

Phone : 5432

Office : — C-84, Shivad House,
Prithviraj Road, JAIPUR-1 (Raj)

Phone : 74636

A. N. Ganorkar

B.A., LL.B., F.R.M.S. (London), F.A.S.C. (U.S.A.)

EXAMINER OF QUESTIONED DOCUMENTS, FINGER-PRINTS

HANDWRITING AND FIRE ARMS EXPERT,

CONSULTANT TO THE GOVERNMENT OF RAJASTHAN.

THE ONLY EXPERT

TRAINED IN ENGLAND & AMERICA

Consult him on all problems regarding Questioned Documents Cross-Examinations of the Document Experts and Firearms Experts undertaken.

Terms Reasonable

: :

Correspondence Invited

JUST PUBLISHED : 4th Enlarged & Revised Edition : 233 ILLUSTRATIONS IDENTIFICATION OF HANDWRITING &
CROSS EXAMINATION OF EXPERTS

Price Rs. 32.50

by M. K. MEHTA, Examiner, Questioned Documents,

Book your orders with the Publishers :

M/s N. M. TRIPATHI, (P.) Ltd., Law Booksellers, 164, Samaldas Gandhi Marg, BOMBAY-2.

DISPUTED DOCUMENTS?

Phone : 261149

Consult :

M. K. MEHTA,

Examiner, Questioned Documents,

Associate Expert :—MADHUSUDAN MEHTA

4091, Nai Sarak (New Name : Amir Chand Marg), DELHI-6.

Author of : IDENTIFICATION OF HANDWRITING & CROSS-EXAMINATION OF EXPERTS. (On the approved list of the High Courts of Allahabad, Calcutta, Cuttack & Patna). 4th Ed. : Price : Rs. 32.50

IDENTIFICATION OF THUMB IMPRESSIONS & CROSS-EXAMINATION OF FINGERPRINT EXPERTS. (On the approved list of the High Courts of Allahabad & Jodhpur). (2nd Ed.) : Price : Rs. 15.00

Various Courts throughout India send original papers to M. K. MEHTA & MADHU SUDAN MEHTA for opinion.

NOW FEW COPIES LEFT

COMMENTARY ON
THE ESSENTIAL COMMODITIES ACT, 1958
(Act X of 1955)

By S. N. SHARMA, Advocate.

Special Features :—

1. Act brought upto 31st August, 1968.
2. Exhaustive case law digested upto 30th June, 1968.
3. Immensely useful to the Bench & Bar and to those administering the law.

1968 EDITION — Nicely printed and Fine Get-up-Covering 250 pages.

Price — Rs. 12.50

Postage & Packing Rs. 3.00 Extra

ANAND MUDRANALAYA

P. O. : Sahibganj (S. P.) Bihar.

FOR DISPUTED DOCUMENTS &
FINGER PRINT CASES

CONSULT :

T. P. PATIL, B.A., LL.B. (Trained in England)
DOCUMENT EXAMINER

Bombay Office :

READYMONEY MANSION

3rd floor, 43, Veer Nariman Road,
 Fort, BOMBAY-1. Phone : 252646

Akola Office :

"NEELIMA,"

Jathar Peth Road, AKOLA, (M. S.)

Tel. : 339

Grams : "EXPERT JAIPUR"

Telephone : 72135

AGAIN AT YOUR SERVICE

Prof. B. B. Kashyap

B.A. (Hons.), LL.B. (Delhi), M.L.A.I. (U.S.A.), F.R.M.S. (London)

HANDWRITING & FINGERPRINT EXPERT

Recently visited New Scotland Yard of London and various Forensic Science Laboratories of 16 countries of Europe, Africa and Asia, i.e. England, Denmark, Norway, Sweden, Finland, Holland, Belgium, France, West-Germany, Switzerland, Italy, Greece, Nepal, U. A. R. Iran and Afghanistan, where Kashyap had gone to attend two International Conferences, advanced study and lecture tour.

Chitaranjan Marg, C-Scheme, Jaipur-1. (Raj)

Grams: Forgery

Phone: 71182

*Consult on all disputed DocumentsK. S. RAMAMURTI*HAND-WRITING AND DOCUMENT EXPERT(of 40 years standing)*

8, III Main Road, Gandhi Nagar, Adyar, MADRAS-20.

Hand-writing Expert evidence reviewed, Instructions for cross-examination of any expert on technical Lines can be had.Quality

as a

DOCUMENT EXAMINERfor a BETTER Future, STATUS & SUCCESSFUL CAREER OF SECURITY
VERY VALUABLE GENERAL TRAINING COURSECOLLEGE OF DOCUMENTS SPECIALISTS(Established : 1930)Re-started after partition of the CountryProspectus for Postage stamps of only eighty-five paise.QUESTIONED DOCUMENT EXAMINER'S HOUSE, SIMLA-3.*CLASSIFIED ADVERTISEMENTS

Phone No. : 33132 Telegrams : 'Documents'

Nagpur-4.

CONSULTSENIORMOST GOVT. EXPERT*M. B. DIXIT, M.A., LL.B.

Govt. Examiner of Questioned Documents M. P.

CAN SEND PHOTOGRAPHER48, Mecosabagh, NAGPUR-4.

Phone No. 5562

*For Fingerprints, Type, or anything about a Contested Document CONSULTH. L. BADHWAR*EXAMINER OF QUESTIONED DOCUMENTS.*31 Sir Hukamchand Bhawan, Nasla Road (near Janta Hotel) INDORE (M. P.)Consulted by Govt. — Experiences over 22 years.For problems in Hand-writing, Finger-Prints and disputed Fire-armsContact :Sri A. S. NANDA, M.A.Haghat Nagar, Cottage Hotel Building, SAHARANPUR or Near Jai Hind Cinema
(U. P.) LUCKNOW

Phone : 3741

Phone : 29612

between 7 to 9 A. M.

ADVOCATE*Please refer your Forgery,Thumb-impression & Criminology cases toJ. BAWA,

F.R.M.S. (England), M.R.P.S. (London)

The Mall, Document Houses, SIMLA-3*Write for postal-course on Forgery,Thumb-impression etc.,*

JOURNAL SECTION

1970 JUNE

THE IMPACT OF LICENSING ON VARIOUS TRADES

(By : V. B. AWASTHI, LL.M., Lecturer, Faculty of Law, Lucknow University.)

Article 19 under the title 'Right to Freedom' confers seven freedoms on all citizens which have been described as 'vital rights inherent in each man'. Freedom to carry on any occupation, trade or business is one among these vital rights.

2. Absolute or unrestricted individual rights do not and cannot exist in any modern State. The Constitution of India, is no exception to this rule which acknowledges that liberty has to be curtailed in order to be effectively possessed by adjusting the conflicting interests of the individual and of the society.

3. The regulation of trade or business usually takes the form of initial requirement of obtaining a licence or permit to start a particular trade or business. This is also sometimes referred as obtaining a permit e. g. Section 12 of Motor Vehicles Act, 1939 provides that no motor vehicle shall be used for carrying passengers or goods without obtaining a permit. A distinction is at times drawn between a permit and a licence. The Madras High Court in C. S. S. Motor Service v. State of Madras (1) has held that permit is the result of a confirmation of an administrative authority having an absolute discretion to grant or refuse a permit while licence is to be issued by imposing appropriate conditions for the conduct of business. The Court there sought to limit the use of the word 'permit' to cases where it depends upon the sweet will of the Government to allow a certain activity to be carried on so that when the freedom of trade and profession is guaranteed by the Constitution, the Government is not free to deny its exercise. All that it can do is that it can impose appropriate conditions on the utilization of such freedom by way of insisting upon obtaining of licenses. At the same time if the condition for granting licence is unreasonable, it will be held violative of the guarantee. (2) Thus it is reasonable to conclude that it has not been left to the arbitrary discretion of the Government to authorize or refuse, as it wills, the carrying of any business activity. Permit in the sense, as used by the Madras High Court, has no place in the scheme of things envisaged by the Constitution.

4. It appears that there has not been a proper realization of the change that the Constitution has striven to bring in the "status of trade or business activity of an individual". In a Travancore case (3) the High Court refused to recognise any fundamental right in the matter of obtaining temporary permits for plying stage carriages for hire. In another case (4) the Court refused to interfere with the order of the regional transport authority renewing the stage carriage permits held by the applicant on the ground that the applicant had no right to obtain a permit. The Madras High Court (5) went to the extent of observing that no person can claim it as a matter of fundamental right that he is entitled to a particular quota or license.

5. These and similar observations of the Courts are likely to be misinterpreted as a denial of the right to carry on a business. The proper approach is to begin with the assumption that every person is entitled to carry on a business as a matter of right unless he is disqualified in any way, as for example, in Gounder's case, AIR 1955 Mad 699 the real reason for refusing a quota was that the applicant was a defaulter in payment of his income-tax and failed to supply an income-tax clearance certificate. If thus viewed, the denial of the license was reasonable but to say that the person had no initial right to enter into that business, is to do away with the provisions of Art. 19 (1) (g) altogether.

6. In this context we should also avoid confusion between the right to carry on a trade and the right to enjoy a particular privilege from the Government, for the reason, that the word 'license' has been indiscriminately used to denote both the grant of a privilege as well as the permission to exercise the freedom to trade as for example in an Assam case (6) the petitioner's claim that he had a right to obtain a license from a Municipal Board

3. S. Sankara Subramony v. State, AIR 1952 Trav-Co 260.

4. J. M. T. Union v. State, AIR 1955 Sau 57.

5. N. Dasai Gounder and Co. v. Dy. Chief Controller, AIR 1955 Mad 699.

6. Mahboob Khan v. Dy. Commr., AIR 1953 Assam 145.

1. AIR 1953 Mad 279.

2. Shukla, V. N. : 'Constitution of India' p. 73.

for collecting tolls on behalf of the Board, from a newly constructed market, was turned down by the Court on the ground that the petitioner had no right to license in such cases where the license is in the nature of grant of special privilege by an owner to an agent and has nothing to do with the freedom of business. Similarly in D. L. D. W. Association v. State of W. B. (7) the claim of deed writers for the exclusive privilege to perform their functions in the registration office was denied on the ground that the government are the owners of the premises and may allow anyone to do anything, subject to any conditions. The word 'license' thus ought to be restricted to such cases only where the act is in the nature of initial permission to start a business or professional activity. The power of the State to regulate business by licensing is exercised in four different ways:—

(1) The State may issue or refuse a license.

(2) It may impose conditions prescribing the mode in which the business is to be carried on or by adding condition to the grant of the license.

(3) By cancelling the license in case the license holder does not conform to the conditions so laid down.

(4) The power to grant or refuse license is usually required to be delegated to an officer, body or authority, designed or constituted by the government for that purpose. Such delegation is generally made by the rules and the regulations prescribing the limits and procedure for the exercise of such powers. Where the standards for the exercise of such powers are not clearly laid down, the exercise of power is bad and is labelled as arbitrary as for example in Dwarka Prasad v. State of U. P. (8) the Supreme Court held the power to grant, refuse or cancel licenses arbitrary, as no rules, principles and directions for its exercise were laid down. Besides if the Court finds that the discretion conferred is unfettered and final without any provision of appeal or review, it shall hold it invalid. (9) e. g., though rikshaw-pulling is barbarous yet it must be conceded that a person has a right to do so and the authorities cannot refuse license on this ground only. (10) Similarly the power delegated by the Central Government to the State Government to cancel all or any licenses under Section 15 (b) of the Arms Act (11) and by State Government to District Municipalities under S. 249 of the Municipalities Act (12) without laying down any guidance or safeguards for its exercise, was held to be bad. The legislation in such matters, therefore, must be unambiguous, laying down with sufficient clarity its intended intention; otherwise an action on an indefinite criterion is bound to be arbitrary (13).

7. The basic requirement in the exercise of discretion is that there must be a rule for guidance which may deter the authority from making 'any' directions at any stage. (14) Thus in Hussain Ali v. Durgah Committee (15) the Court struck down S. 11 (f) of the Durgah Committee Act on the ground that the power of the Committee to regulate the privileges of Khadims was an unreasonable restriction on their right to carry on profession for the Act laid down no guidance on the point of granting or refusing a license in the matter. Likewise a bye-law authorizing the Executive Officer to grant or refuse licenses to rikshaws in his absolute discretion (16) or an order of the Municipal Board fixing the maximum limit of rikshaws in contravention of the byelaws (17) cannot be reasonable restriction in the absence of any rules or principles which could even remotely be taken to control the acts. In this reference it may also be noted that since it is not possible for the legislature to provide for all contingencies and some discretion has to be left to the licensing authority, the abuse of power should not be lightly assumed. If an act makes the grant of licenses the general rule and the two circumstances in which it may be refused are clearly defined, it cannot be said to be arbitrary. (18) So also is the case with the power which is regulated by the Statute and entrusted to a non-political body like Reserve Bank which

11. Kishori Lal v. Dy. Commr., Kamrup, AIR 1955 Assam 181.

12. Mahomed Ebrahim v. Municipal Commr., Ootacamund, AIR 1956 Mad. 181.

13. Kamdev Club v. State of Punjab, AIR 1957 Punj. 20.

14. Mohd. Ismail v. District Magistrate, AIR 1957 AH 487.

15. AIR 1957 Raj 177.

16. Lachnow Municipality v. Iqbal Singh, AIR 1953 AH 823.

17. Iqbal Singh v. Municipal Board, AIR 1953 AH 186.

18. Babulal Gupta v. Cantt. Board, AIR 1961 Madh-Pr 351.

7. AIR 1953 Cal 121.

8. AIR 1954 SC 274.

9. Banwari Lal Kapurthala v. Cloth Controller, AIR 1954 Pat 325.

10. Satyajit Banerjee v. Commr. of Police Calcutta, AIR 1954 Cal 417.

regulates the credit of the country and is to be exercised after prescribed investigation of a quasi-judicial character.(19)

8. The nature of trade may sometimes also be material in the exercise of discretion. There can be nothing arbitrary in granting discretion to an excise officer to determine whether a person is an addict and to increase or decrease his quota according to his will. The reasonableness of noxious trades is to be judged by standards entirely different from other trades.(20)

9. In judging the reasonableness, all the attendant circumstances must be taken into consideration and one cannot dissociate the actual contents of it from the manner of its imposition or the mode of putting them into practice. Thus the President of a Municipal Board can validly refuse the sanction for the construction of a house if he feels that such a construction shall affect the interests of the residents of the locality or that the adequate provision has not been made to prevent overcrowding or for laying out.(21) Similarly the refusal of a license to a pawn broker on the ground that he is a bad character or that his shop is frequented by bad characters is reasonable because a pawn-broker's trade afforded facilities for the disposal of stolen property and he is in a position to dictate terms to the poor and needy.(22)

10. In determining the persons entitled to obtain a licence, the conditions which have been prescribed must be such as are germane to the objects with which they have been laid down. The restrictions imposed for obtaining a license to make dangerous substances like explosives(23) or for running an eating house(24) are reasonable considerations in the interest of general public. If the policy of an Act is to provide for public safety, convenience and health in a particular area, a refusal to grant a license for running a rice or flour mill in that area is well justifiable.(25) Similarly the requirement of a license for a prize competition(26) and the payment of a due tax as a condition precedent for the grant of a motor permit(27) were held to be valid restrictions for the former was with an object to protect the poor man who may part with his hard earned income in pursuit of some hypothetical gain and the latter to keep roads in proper condition.

11. Public interest is always supreme and no restriction which subverts it can be said to be harsh or excessive. If the R. T. A.(28) is vested with the authority to consider the proposed services' effect on the continuance of existing services and maintenance of standards of comforts and amenities or to limit the number of carriages on a particular route in the interest of general public,(29-30) the vesting is not arbitrary. But this does not mean that the consideration may go to the extent of violating other fundamental principles of the Constitution e.g. in Ghouse Miah v. RTA, Cuddapah,(31) the consideration for the grant of the license that the applicant must not have his main or branch office at the route or reside beyond five miles from the route, was held to be unreasonable for it made a discrimination based on place of residence. However, an order giving preference to those whose renewals were refused can be valid because a preference to experienced operators is a relevant consideration and hence constitutional.(32)

12. Consideration of the public interest has, thus, been the supreme factor in granting or refusing a license. In a Madras case(33) the High Court allowed a writ appeal on the principle that in declining to grant a license, the local body is entitled to take into consideration the fact that the property had been acquired by Eminent Domain for a wholly different purpose, that the petitioner will presumably have no further legal right to continue in possession of that property. This was held to be a consideration of mere animosity or hostility to a private party.

13. The power to impose a condition upon the exercise of the right should not

19. Sajjan Bank v. Reserve Bank of India, AIR 1961 Mad 8.

20. Arjan Das Duggal v. State of Punjab, AIR 1958 Panj 400.

21. Mulaim Chand v. Municipal Committee, AIR 1957 Madh-Pra 50.

22. Keval Chand v. State of Madras, AIR 1956 Mad 514.

23. Alahnoor v. District Magistrate, Chittorgarh, AIR 1956 Raj 153.

24. Kishan Chand Arora v. Commissioner of Police, AIR 1959 Cal 123=1959 Cri L J 180.

25. Naina Mohd. v. T. P. Board, AIR 1956 Mad 289.

26. State of Bombay v. RMDC, AIR 1956 Bom 1.

27. Krishnan v. Seey. RTA, AIR 1956 Andhra 129.

28. Malik Ram v. RTA, AIR 1955 Raj 142 (FB).

29-30. Kulwant Singh v. A. A. of S. T. Authority, AIR 1957 Raj 237; Transport Dev. Co. v. Bus Association, AIR 1956 Vin-Pra 25.

31. AIR 1963 Andh Pra 283.

32. Tulsi Ram Agarwal v. R. T. O. Dhanba, 1962 Pat 57.

33. The Executive Officer Bhavani Panchs M. K. Mani Iyer, AIR 1967 Mad 89 at p.

be left in the hands of an officer without formulation of proper standards for determination of conditions which should be reasonably put upon the exercise of such occupation. The conditions for the grant of license should not be so vague as to make their compliance an impossibility.(34) There should not be an unjustifiable interference with the licensees' right as for example a condition attached to a cinematograph license that the applicant shall exhibit at least 2,000 feet of approved film at the commencement of each performance after paying the required hire was treated by the Supreme Court(35) an unreasonable restriction, for there was no guide to the discretion of the government. But where the conditions prescribed a maximum of 2,000 feet or limited(36) the number of shows and prohibited any person below 18 years in morning and late night shows unless accompanied by guardians(37) the conditions are not arbitrary on the ground of considerations of health, safety and public morality.

13. The authority imposing the conditions must not act subjectively and therefore if the Commissioner imposed a reasonable security on a registered dealer or on an applicant for registration under S. 7 (4) (a) of the Bengal Finance (Sales Tax) Act of 1941(38) or refused a license for running a cinema on the reasons given by him,(39) the power cannot be arbitrary for the test for 'good and sufficient reasons' is objective and not subjective.

15. The conditions may also at times take the form of a fee. According to the spirit of Cl. (6) of Art. 19, the licensing power being a restriction upon the freedom or right to carry on a business must be reasonably exercised and our Supreme Court, in this connection, has observed(40) that since the imposition of a license fee operates as a restriction because unless it is paid the person cannot carry on a business, its reasonableness can be put to challenge.

16. A license fee is different from a license tax.(41) In fact charges are levied either for purposes of regulation or for purposes of revenue or both. If the primary object of the charge is to regulate or restrain, it is a license fee but if, on the other hand, the primary object is to produce revenue, it is a license tax. The courts usually do not interfere simply on the ground of hardships but they certainly do so if the quantum is such as to make the carrying on the business impossible.(42) Moreover, the object of license fee is to reimburse the Government for any expenditure made by it in respect of the business or matter intended to be regulated, and so where it is proportionately sufficient to keep a track of dealings, it is reasonable,(43) but where the enhancement of fee is far in excess of the expenditure incurred by the government on the maintenance of the checking staff, it is bound to constitute an unreasonable restriction.(44)

17. Since the license fee is a requisite condition for obtaining a license in certain trade, its non-payment may validly lead to the cancellation of license. The cancellation is one of the coercive methods to enforce collection of dues.(45)

Cancellation :

18. The power to cancel a license is required to be exercised for good reasons and the principles and the standards, guiding the authority exercising such power, must be laid in advance. It should not be in any case left to the sweet will of an authority otherwise it shall be discriminatory and offend Art. 19 (1) (g).(46) The ways and means must be concretely suggested. An order cancelling a license to store hides and skins(47) cannot be sustained merely on the ground that the odour emanating from it is a nuisance and health-hazard. Any order passed on extraneous considerations as are not germane to the exercise of power, is unreasonable within the meaning of Art. 19 (1) (g) of the Constitution of India.(48) The

41. Gopi Pershad v. State of Punjab, AIR 1957 Punj 45.

42. Liberty Cinema v. Commr. of Cal Corpns., AIR 1959 Cal. 45.

43. Gurusah Naidu v. State of Madras, AIR 1953 Mad 158.

44. Vardachari v. State of Madras, AIR 1952 Mad 764.

45. M. A. Rahman v. State of A. P., AIR 1951 SC 1471.

46. R. J. Singh v. Electrical Inspector, AIR 1960 All 87.

47. Afshooned Amanulla v. District Municipality, AIR 1953 Ker 80.

48. Eriabha Khanna v. State of Punjab, AIR 1961 Punj 32.

34. Asit Ranjan v. Dock Labour Board, AIR 1961 Cal 355.

35. Sheshadri v. District Magistrate Tanjore, AIR 1954 SC 747.

36. M. A. Baig v. State of Andh-Pra, AIR 1951 Andh-Pra 126.

37. O. R. Sharma v. State of U. P., AIR 1961 All 600.

38. D. P. Khatian v. C. T. Officer, AIR 1956 Cal 596.

39. Ranchore Lal Ji v. Rev. Dev. Commr., Sambalpur AIR 1950 Orissa 89.

40. Mohd. Yasin v. Town Area Committee, Jalalabad, 1952 B C N 572 = AIR 1952 B C 115.

person affected by such cancellation must also be given a reasonable opportunity for hearing and in the absence of any such opportunity, the cancellation is bound to be null and void.(49)

19. But where the cancellation takes place in accordance with the principles and standards already laid down, the courts have no say as for example in Karam Chand Thapar v. State of Bihar(50) Regulation 48 of the Coal-mines Regulations providing for a public enquiry by Central Government and obtaining Court's recommendation before cancelling or suspending a license was held valid for it laid down sufficient principles and standards for the guidance of the rule-making authority. The regulation required the Government to apply its mind to the enquiry report and the recommendations of the Court before taking any action. Similarly, in another case (51) the Supreme Court upheld the cancellation order made on ground of fraud, because the licensee was given an opportunity for hearing and to explain his conduct in the matter.

20. The right to import any goods is only an incident of the fundamental right to carry on business which belongs to every citizen.(52) But for the Imports Control Order, 1955 a licensee has a right to import steel goods. The violation of the terms of a license can attract the penalty of only the cancellation of the license. The licensee cannot be denied any rights or privileges with respect to the Iron and Steel business apart from import business. The granting of licenses and the remedies for the violation of the terms of such licenses are governed by provisions of that Order and they cannot be substituted by any non-statutory action of the Government.

Procedure:

21. The authority which seeks to alter the conditions of the license or cancel or refuse to renew license held by a person, is required to act judicially and must give a proper hearing to the affected party. Hearing implies that there should be a reasonable notice, an opportunity to show cause which includes the right to be heard orally and produce evidence and that the decision should be based upon proper reasons. An order which does not provide for an opportunity of hearing is bad.(53) Besides where the opinion of the licensing authority is conclusive and no higher authority is prescribed to look into the case, an order so made is invalid for it may make a scheme as practically nugatory.(54)

22. An order refusing to renew a license must contain the reasons for such refusal. The absence of any reasons shall make the renewal dependent on subjective satisfaction and therefore invalid (55). The provisions of appeal may sometimes be implied in the spirit of the Act and where it is so done, the power is not unguarded as for example the Patna High Court upheld S. 6 (6) of the Bihar Mica Act (56) which empowered the Controller to alter the particulars of any license in the absence of any express provision of appeal. The Court held that the provision of appeal, though not expressly given, must be implied and deemed to be incorporated in the provisions of the section where the Government has been given the power to revise the proceedings or entertain and hear an appeal (57), the power is not arbitrary.

23. At times it has been observed that the licensing authority so examines its powers as to create a monopoly in favour of a particular person. The action is invalid unless there be a right of appeal against such action or where the attendant circumstances are exceptional in character: as for instance in a Supreme Court case (58), the petitioner contended that the canalization of imports of soda ash through two importer stockists is the grant of monopoly and offends against Art. 19 (1) (g). The Court rejecting the contention held that in modern times the export and import policy of any democratic State is bound to be flexible. The needs of the country, the position of foreign exchange, the need to protect national industries and all other relevant considerations have to be examined by the Government. Since the Government found the importers of soda ash resorting to mal-practices, leading to speculation and violent fluctuations in prices of the commodity, national interest made it their

49. Amolak Chand Murlidhar v. S. D. O. Shirsagar, AIR 1962 Assam 80.

50. AIR 1958 Pat 378.

51. Fed Co (P) Ltd. v. Bilgrami, AIR 1960 S C 415.

52. Ram Krishna v. Union of India, AIR 1969 Cal. 18.

53. Madan Lal v. State of Rajasthan, AIR 1953 Raj 162=1953 Cri L 1283.

54. Amir Chand v. State of U. P., AIR 1956 All 562 =1956 Cri L J 1141.

55. Shambhu Nath & Sons Ltd. v. State of Punjab, AIR 1959 Punj 525.

56. Srikant Lal v. State of Bihar, AIR 1959 Pat 496.

57. George v. Municipal Commr., AIR 1957 Trav Co. 249.

58. Bhatnagar & Co. Ltd. v. Union of India, AIR 1957 S C 478.

duty to intervene and regulate the distribution of the commodity in a suitable manner. But where the Act contemplated exercise of licensing power by a body and instead it granted a monopoly to a particular person, it thereby deprived itself of the power to grant licenses. The action in such cases is invalid (59).

24. The licensing authority must also act within the four walls of the grant of power for in case its action is not covered by the terms of the grant, the exercise is held ultra vires: as for example in a Supreme Court case (60) the petitioner challenged the condition imposed on his license that he shall purchase tendu leaves from contractors only and from none else. The Court held the condition invalid as it was not authorized and supported by the Act itself. The maxim delegatus non potest delegare has its application in the field of licensing also. In Ganpatl Singhji v. State of Ajmer (61) the District Magistrate refused to permit the appellant to hold fair on his land on which he had been holding it earlier on the ground that permits for fair shall be granted only to local bodies and not to individuals. The Court held that the delegation of authority to District Magistrate is ultra vires for the regulation gives this power to Commissioner who cannot further delegate it to District Magistrate. Furthermore, the regulation assumes the individual right to hold fair and merely imposes certain conditions in respect of sanitation etc. The right to hold fair came within the purview of Article 19 (1) (g).

Presumption of Constitutionality

25. At times the validity of a licensing provision is sought to be put by the Court upon a presumption of constitutionality. There have come only two examples to light where the High Court of M. P. has sought to do so. In Banta Singh v. State, (62) the petitioner challenged validity of Rule 49A of the C. P. & Berar M. V. Rules which provided for a preference to viable units in matters of grants of permits, other things being equal. The Court held the rule as subserving the purpose of the Act. It is open to Government to create standards of efficiency with a view to achieve reasonable public comfort and inconvenience in matter connected with public utilities. Prescription of a limit is a matter for the Government and the Court will not interfere unless it is unreasonable or unrelated to public purpose. With a bias in favour of the constitutionality of a provision, the rule was valid.

26. In the other case (63) the Court turning down the challenge of the petitioner that the requirement under Section 18 (a) (iii) to display the formula or the ingredients of a patent or proprietary medicine offended Article 19 (1) (g) contended that in a welfare State, the legislative powers are exercised to subserve the ultimate objective. The requirement was reasonable in view of protection of public from fraud or deceit and providing for preservation and safety of its health, morals and general welfare. There is a presumption of constitutionality and the challenger must prove otherwise. If the legislature thought it fit that the disclosure shall be made to the world at large, the Court cannot sit in judgment upon it. In this connection it must be pointed out that the presumption of constitutionality must not be relied upon to sustain an infringement of a fundamental right. As pointed out by the Supreme Court in Sagor Ahmad v. State of U. P. (64) the onus of proof in the cases where the State seeks to detract from the freedom of a citizen lies upon the State and not upon the person whose freedom has been restricted. It appears that in the two aforesaid cases, this was not brought to the notice of the Court and the cases, therefore, must be treated as exceptional in character.

27. Thus we see that the power of the Government to control the individuals in matter of trade or business etc. by licensing appears to be of a very wide amplitude and variety. It is humbly suggested that it shall be more conducive to the basic objective of the Constitution if the powers of licensing are at least exercised on a uniform pattern which makes provision for proper hearing and opportunities to the affected persons. It is necessary that there should be a uniformity of process, at least something on the lines of the Federal Administrative Procedure Act (1946) with suitable variations which might be more conducive to a better administration of this system.

59. Bowther v. Pampraty Panchayat, AIR 1957 Trav Co 2=1957 Cri L J 105

60. Hamid Raza v. State of M. P., AIR 1960 SC 931.

61. AIR 1955 SC 178.

62. AIR 1958 Madh Pra. 193.

63. E. L. Chaturvedi v. State of Madhya Pradesh, AIR 1960 Madh Pra 259=1960 Cri L J 1614.

64. AIR 1954 SC 729.

BAR COUNCIL NEWS

We have received the following communication from the Secretary, Bar Council of India, New Delhi.

THE BAR COUNCIL OF INDIA

St. B. C. 16/1970.
Cir. L. E. No. 1/1970.

Dated 20th April, 1970.

From:

A. N. Veeraraghavan, B.A., B.L.,
Secretary, Bar Council of India,
AB/21, Mathura Road, Facing
Supreme Court Bldg., New Delhi-1

To,

1. The Secretaries of all State Bar Councils.
2. The Registrars of all Universities having the Law Faculty, with 2 copies for the Vice-Chancellor and the Dean, Faculty of Law.

Subject: Recognition of Law Degrees under section 24 (1) (c) (iii) of the Advocates Act, 1961, for purposes of enrolment as Advocates.

Sir,

I am to communicate to you the following Resolution passed by the Bar Council of India on the above subject, at its meeting dated 19th April, 1970:

"Resolution No. 59/1970:

In exercise of the powers conferred under Section 24 (1) (c) (iii) of the Advocates Act, 1961, it is hereby resolved that till a notification by the Bar Council of India to the contrary, with reference to the degree in Law of all or any particular University having a Law Faculty—

(1) a degree in law obtained from any of the Universities which fulfils the requirements of Rule 11 in Part III.A of the Rules of the Council reproduced in Annexure at the end of this Resolution, and

(2) a degree in law obtained from any of the Universities in India by any person who has commenced his course of instruction in law, in or after the 1st term of the academic year 1967-68, after undergoing such course of instruction for a period of 3 years by actual attendance at college shall be deemed to be recognised for purposes of enrolment as advocate.

PROVIDED, however, that the degree was obtained in compliance with Rule 1 of the Rules of the Council in Part III-A.

Explanation: With reference to the following Universities the figure "1967-68" in sub-paragraph (2) above shall be read as "1968-69":—

(1) Jiwaji, (2) Kanpur, (3) Madras, (4) Meerut, (5) Sardar Vallabhbhai Patel, (6) Bangalore, (7) Aligarh, (8) Mysore, (9) Bhagalpur, (10) Patna, (11) Vikram, (12) Agra, (13) Ranchi, (14) Berhampur."

Yours faithfully,

A. N. Veeraraghavan
Secretary,
Bar Council of India.

ANNEXURE

(See Sub-paragraph (1) of Resolution No. 59/1970 of the Bar Council of India).

I. Rule 11, in Part III-A:

Explanation: Nothing in these rules shall affect persons who joined a course of instruction in law for a degree in law before the 1st academic term of the year 1967 and have taken a degree in law before 31st December, 1971, but they shall continue to be governed by the Resolution of this Council being Resolution No. 201/1963 dated 26th February, 1963, read with Resolutions Nos. 50/1965 dated 11-4-1965, 16/1966 dated 27-2-1966 and 121/1966 dated 27th August, 1966."

Resolution No. 201/1963 dated 26-2-1963:

1. RESOLVED that a degree in law obtained on or before the 30th June, 1964, from any University established by law in the territory of India be recognised for the purposes of Section 24 (1) (c) (iii) of the Advocates Act, 1961.

2. RESOLVED that no degree in law obtained after the 30th June, 1964, from any University in the territory of India shall be recognised unless such degree has been obtained after undergoing a course of study in law for a minimum period of two years after graduation. Provided however that nothing herein contained shall affect a person who has commenced a course of study in law before graduation prior to the 28th February, 1963 and obtained a degree in law before the 1st October, 1966.

3. RESOLVED that for the purpose of Section 24 (1) (c) (iii) of the Act, a degree in law obtained from any University in Pakistan shall be recognised only if such degree has been obtained after a study in law for a minimum period of two years after graduation.

Resolution No. 50/1965 dated 11-4-1965:

The Bar Council of India is of the opinion that the degree in law recognised in Paragraph 2 of the Resolution No. 201/1963 should have been obtained after a course of study in law by regular attendance and after attending the necessary lectures of a college recognised by a University.

Resolution No. 16/1965 dated 27-2-1966:

RESOLVED that Resolution No. 50/1965 passed on the 10th of April, 1965, will not apply to persons who have begun their course of study in law or taken a degree in law prior to that date viz., 10th April, 1965.

Resolution No. 121/1965 dated 27-8-1966:

Having considered the following Resolutions 201/1963, 50/1965 and 16/1966 and representations for letters received (1) dated 28th May, 1966, from the Secretary of the Bar Council of Rajasthan and (2) 15-6-1966 from the Secretary, Bar Council of Madras.

This Council resolves that all applications for enrolment rejected by any State Bar Council or Enrolment Committee thereof of persons who began their course of study in law or who took their degree in law prior to 10th April, 1965, on the sole ground that their law degrees were not obtained after a course of study in law by regular attendance and after attending the necessary lectures at the University—recognised college shall be deemed to be pending and the State Bar Councils concerned and the Enrolment Committee thereof are hereby directed to dispose of the same in the light of the above mentioned Resolutions of this Council.

II. Rule 1 in Part III.A: (referred to in the Proviso in sub-paragraph No. 2).

"Rule 1: No person shall be eligible for enrolment under the Advocates Act, 1961, unless at the time of joining the course of instruction in law for a degree in law he is a graduate of a University or holds such academic qualifications which are considered equivalent to a graduate's degree of a University by the Bar Council of India."

III. "Resolution No. 8/1970:

RESOLVED that as a special case, the Diploma in Rural Service awarded by the National Council for Rural Higher Education which has been treated to be on a par with a graduate's degree of the Rajasthan University, may be treated as equivalent to a graduate's degree in terms of Rule 1, as amended and that there should be no objection to the enrolment of candidates who obtained the LL.B Degree thereafter, provided that the other requirements relating to enrolment are satisfied."

(A. N. Veeraraghavan)

Secretary,

The Bar Council of India

REVIEWS

TAXATION OF COMPANIES; By A. V. Kasbekar, Foreword by R. N. Jain, Member, Central Board of Direct Taxes, 2nd Edition, 1969, Eastern Law House, Private Ltd., Calcutta. Pp. 227 & xiv. Price. Rs. 15.

The tax law applicable to companies has undergone vast changes recently, and the new tax structure evolved by the Finance Act, 1961 has been successively revised. Further the relevant provisions are strewn about in the Income-Tax Act, the Income Tax Rules, the Finance Act, etc. The present handbook on the Income-Tax Act, 1961 & subsequent revisions was originally published in 1966, and the present Edition has been enlarged & revised to suit practical requirements.

The book has been divided into three Parts. Part I deals with the provisions of the Income-Tax Act which are important to companies under suitable chapter heads like income from house property income from Business, depreciation, Development rebate, Business Expenses, Capital gains, Losses, Assessment procedures, Demand & Collection, and Penalties, Topics of special interest like Amalgamations, Collaboration agreements, Non-resident companies & priority industries are considered in Part II, while the third Part contains a survey of the company rate structure from 1952-3 to the present day, followed by tables of Tax rates, rates of development rebate, etc. The Survey is compiled under the heads of Primary classification of companies, Grouping of companies for rate purposes, residence of companies, factors governing rebate, and withdrawal of rebate

The Appendices giving the different Schedules of articles of priority industries, etc., and the Index are useful. The author has collected all relevant material pertaining to the taxation of companies, and topics of vital interest have been appropriately grouped together. To appreciate the change, in the proper perspective, a brief historical background has been provided where necessary, and to the extent that is possible the law applicable to individual assessment years has been differentiated. In this task the author's official experience has stood him in good stead. For sixteen years he was with the Income-Tax Department, when he had to deal with the income-tax assessments of limited companies; he is now working as Tax Adviser to the National and Grindlays Bank Ltd. Dealing as it does with the provisions of interest to Companies, it should be useful to those who are too busy to undertake a comparative study of the various changes effected from year to year. Tax-payers, tax-practitioners and those who are concerned with the assessment of limited Companies should find the book of considerable assistance.

Publications like the one under review can necessarily be of assistance only during the currency of the Act and amendments they deal with, because taxation is subject to budgetary changes every year. The latest Union Budget leaves the structure of company taxes more or less intact although it proposed to disallow entertainment and guest house allowances in the computation of total income for income tax purposes. But the Budget provisions for corporate taxation for 1969 came into force subsequent to the publication of this book.

R.S.S.

EQUALITY BY STATUTE: By Monroe Berger, University Book House. 15 U. B. Bungalow Road, Delhi 7. Revised Edition. 1969. Pp. viii and 263. Price Rs. 3.50.

The highly interesting story of the gradual removal of the many civil and political disabilities of the American Negro and his rehabilitation in the eye of the law to a position of equality with the other citizens in the United States is the sum and substance of this absorbing volume. The concept of equality is at work in several activities of life — equality in employment opportunities, equal protection of the laws, segregation and equality in educational facilities, equality in the exercise of the franchise, equality in housing, equality in the use of transportation facilities and equality in recreational facilities. The author has highlighted the crucial role that the U. S. Supreme Court has played in this process. He describes a succession of important judicial decisions which have earned for that institution an undying place in the constitution of that country.

The fifth, fourteenth and fifteenth Amendments to the U. S. Constitution are relevant to the issues discussed in the pages of this volume. According to the fifth Amendment, "no person . . . shall be deprived of life, liberty or property without due process of laws." The fourteenth Amendment lays down that all persons born or nationalised in the U. S. . . . are citizens of the U. S. . . . No State shall make or enforce any law which shall abridge the privileges or immunities of citizens . . . No State shall deny to any person the equal protection of the laws . . ." and the fifteenth Amendment guarantees that the citizen's right to vote shall not be denied or abridged on account of race or colour." How far these judicial decisions have helped to uphold and amplify the principles and policies enshrined in the Constitution has been examined with critical insight by the author of the volume under review, and it is not without significance that he has given it the sub-title "The Revolution in civil rights."

The revised edition of 1969, the first edition having been printed so far back as 1952, devotes two chapters to the evolution of civil rights in the period prior to 1868 and to the subject of law and the control of prejudice and discrimination. In the fourth chapter is recounted the experience of New York State in reducing discrimination in employment, while chapters 2 and 3 are mainly concerned with the Supreme Court's role in buttressing the caste order in the period 1868-1936, and subsequently with that Court's role in undermining the caste order in the period since 1937. Until about 1937 the Supreme Court buttressed laws which enforce separation, but, mindful of America's equalitarian doctrine, it joined hands with the legislatures in establishing the compromise of "separate but equal." Since 1937, however, the Court has been telling the nation that the Negro must be treated in accordance with the professions of equality and justice which underlie the basic law of America. Its special position in the U. S. Federal system has been of great help. It places it at the apex of a pyramid and farthest removed of all political agencies, it becomes most independent of the pressure of public opinion in general and of specific group interests and gives it the greatest immunity from the influence of periodic elections. In the last three decades it has considerably reshaped the basic law governing the rights of Negroes in almost every aspect of social life, increased personal liberty in political and cultural life, further protected persons accused of crime in facing the State apparatus ranged against them and started legislatures on the road to a more equitable system of apportioning representatives in these law making bodies.

Beginning in the late 1930s the Supreme Court judicial decisions have, in a series of well-planned cases, educated the public regarding civil rights and removed legal obstacles to equality of opportunity. This education has been through the interpretation of older statutes and the Constitution itself and the affirmation of the constitutionality of such new State and federal legislation as has been enacted in recent years. All the evidence presented in this volume indicates that law is a formidable means for the elimination of group discrimination and the establishment of conditions which discourage prejudicial attitudes. Law's potentialities for good are many. The legal machinery can be withdrawn from the support of discriminatory patterns. Law can withhold certain privileges from the discrimination. It can put the State's influence and power on the side of those discriminated against. It can help to establish those conditions of social life which encourage the free association of all groups on a level of equality. Often favourable laws herald the advent of advances in the status and welfare of groups which have been subject to discrimination. Finally, proper legal controls fortify the believers in fair play and weaken the position of those who discriminate.

The volume we have been reviewing has a useful bibliography, list of cases and Index at the end. R.S.S.

THE INDIAN SUPREME COURT AND THE CONSTITUTION. By Mohammad Inam, B.A., LL.M. (Osm), Ph. D. (London). With a Foreword by the Hon'ble Mr. Justice M. Hidayatullah; Eastern Book Co., 34 Lal Bagh, Lucknow, or Kashmir Gate, Delhi, 1968. Pp. xxxvi and 571. Price, Rs. 30.

In the book under review, which embodies substantially the author's thesis approved by the London University for its Doctorate degree, the author analyses the nature and significance of the judicial process adopted by the Supreme Court of India in the construction of the Constitution. Although a study of the cases decided by the Supreme Court interpreting the Constitution, the cases of the United States and Australian and Canadian constitutional laws have also been brought under focus. In the treatment of the judicial process, the development of constitutional law through the instrumentality of the Supreme Court has been placed in its historical setting, (e.g.), proceedings of the Constituent Assembly, Parliament, the Joint Committees, and the Government of India Act, 1935.

The book has been divided into three parts. In the first part are discussed the general features, complexities, and object of the Constitution which have presented problems in the solution of which the Supreme Court had to set its judicial process to work. It discusses the place that the Supreme Court occupies in the scheme of the Constitution. The next 3 chapters, in the second part, consider the questions as to how far the Constitution is a document complete in itself, how far the framers, intentions have been unambiguously expressed and, if not, to what other sources one should look for their intention. They also examine whether the future generations have a right to understand the Constitution in any way they like as an agent to carry out their desires. These chapters try to show to what extent history played a role in the development of the Constitution through the Supreme Court. The author has tried to assess how far the Supreme Court has subjected its value preferences to the intentions of the founders, and he examines how far the Court is guided by the principles of the constitutional laws of the U.S., Austria, Canada and England. Finally, he has tried to evaluate the process of constitutional interpretation through the Supreme Court under convenient topics. This process of constitutional interpretation is never-ending, because social, economic and political values change perpetually and would require the Supreme Court, says the author, to become "super-sensitive in changing the values of the constitution with the same pace as other values change." This chapter, therefore, assesses the creative work of the Supreme Court in creating new values of its own in the context of the general scheme, as an institution of vital importance under the constitution to maintain equilibrium between constitutional Government, the liberties of the individual, and the welfare of the Community. Part III contains a re-appraisal of the judicial process, and considers to what extent the Supreme Court has adhered to principles as such and to what extent it has shifted from one principle to another. This analysis of the Supreme Court's approach in the interpretation of the Constitution tells us what has been the nature of the judicial process of the Supreme Court, what values emerge from them, which of its policies are reflected in it, and what place it has carved for itself in the system of Government under the Constitution.

According to the Constitution there shall be a President of India in whom the Executive Power of the Union shall be vested, and there shall be a Council of Ministers collectively responsible to the House of the People to aid and advise the President in the exercise of his functions. There shall be a Parliament for the Union consisting of the President and the two Houses. There shall be a Supreme Court of India whose declaration of law shall be binding on all Courts within the territory of India, and all authorities, civil and judicial, shall act in its aid. Thus the three traditional organs of the State were created. Under Part III of the Constitution certain fundamental rights are guaranteed to the citizen, and he is empowered to move the Supreme Court for the enforcement of these rights by appropriate proceedings.

In this study of the judicial process of the Supreme Court, the case law method has been adopted. Most of the relevant decisions of the Supreme Court on constitutional law have been studied and analysed under each topic. The Court and its work are continuously on the march, and its actual decisions have, therefore, been the starting premise of this study. Frequent changes in the personnel of the Court and the creation of a wide area of conflicting reasoning and judgment, the author requests, may not have made his conclusions as accurate as it would otherwise have been possible.

In an Appendix is given the text of the Constitution of India with its nine schedules, and a list of the several Chief Justices and judges who have been on the Bench is given in another appendix. A select bibliography table of cases and subject index are other useful features of this interesting piece of research.

R.S.S.

COMMENTARIES ON THE INDIAN EVIDENCE ACT, 1872: By V. B. Raju, M. A., I. C. S., Judge, Gujarat High Court, Vol. I (Secs 1—92) Eastern Book Company, 34 Lalbagh, Lucknow, or, Kashmere Gate, Delhi. 3rd Edition. 1969. Pp. viii & 1056. Price. Rs. 60 per set.

Here is a welcome attempt to explain in a lucid and simple manner the principles of evidence in such a way that the law on any point can be ascertained quickly, the Evidence Act being a difficult branch of the Law of Procedure. The book is divided into two Parts, the 1st Part dealing with the relevancy of facts, under various heads such as statement by persons who cannot be called as witnesses, statements made under special circumstances. How much of a statement is to be proved, judgments of courts when relevant, opinions of third persons, and character, when relevant. Part II is devoted to the subject of proof, with separate chapter titles for facts which need not be proved, oral evidence, documentary evidence, public documents and presumptions as to documents. The different sections in the 2nd chapter cover the relevancy of facts enabling a court to determine the amount in suits for damages, and when right or custom is in question or when they hear on the question whether an act was accidental or intentional. The relevancy is discussed then of statement made by a person who is dead or cannot be found, or made in a will or deed. Entries in books of account, in public records and statements in law books are relevant. The opinions of experts in law, science and the arts are relevant. In civil cases character to prove conduct imputed is irrelevant, but in criminal cases previous good character is relevant.

As regards proof, the Court has to take judicial notice of facts which are grouped under 13 heads and none of these need be proved, and all facts, except the contents of documents may be proved by oral evidence, which should in all cases be direct. Documents are public or private; public documents are those forming the acts or records of the sovereign authority, official bodies or tribunals, public officers, and public records of a State of private documents. All others are private documents. The text of the Evidence Act is given sectionwise, and each section is followed by detailed synopses, commentary, notes and illustrations, where necessary.

The present Edition has undergone complete revision and up-to date case law has been incorporated. The author's views on several points have been supported with original and convincing reasons. He has included explanations and comments of his own on Sections 3, 11, 13, 24, 27, 30, 42, 74, 80, 91, etc., as well as relevant extract from various judgments. In at least two instances the author's views have been endorsed by the Supreme Court, e.g., his view that the evidence of identification parades held by the Police in the course of investigation is both inadmissible and irrelevant, and that the Privy Council's decision that in the Indian Evidence Act it would not be inconsistent with the natural use of language to construe a confession as a "statement by an accused suggesting the inference that he committed the crime" is wrong. There have been important changes in case-law in 1953, 1954 & 1955, which have been dealt with in the commentary; it includes also cases, Indian & English, not reported in any other commentary. A good commentary must be exhaustive, as well as clear and useful, and the exposition of the law should be such that it should be possible to ascertain the law on any point unequivocally and quickly, and members of the legal profession will find that this volume admirably fills the bill.

"Sections 1-192" on the shoulder of the binding is a mistake. R.S.S.

THE WEST BENGAL PREMISES TENANCY ACT, 1956 by Nirmal Kumar Roy, M. A., LL. B., Advocate, S. C. Sarkar & Sons Private Ltd., 1-C College Square, Calcutta 12, 2nd Edition, 1963, Pp. xxxii and 356, Price, Rs. 13.

Whether Bombay or Calcutta is the first city in India may admit of argument, but there can be no denying the fact that Calcutta is perhaps far ahead of the other cities in India in respect of population.

It is a large centre of industrial activity and there is always a large rush of people in search of employment, with a resultant shortage of accommodation. This shortage has become chronic in Calcutta and the districts, leading to all sorts of undesirable practices by the landlord or the tenant. To stop them a series of legislative measures was enacted. In West Bengal the Calcutta Rent Act of 1920 was the starting point of rent control legislation, and this was in force for 7 years, after which it died a natural death. It defined 'premises' as a building or hut "let separately for residential, charitable, educational or public purpose, or for the purposes of a shop or an office". After the second World War there was a series of enactments in Bengal culminating with the West Bengal Premises Tenancy Act, 1956.

The main provisions of this Act, which provide for the regulation of certain incidents of tenancy of premises in the city of Calcutta and some other areas of West Bengal, include: fixation of fair rent; provisions under which such rent may be increased or revised; protection of tenants against arbitrary eviction; the conditions under which the landlord is entitled to recover possession; restriction on sub-letting or assignment; position of sub-tenants, and when a tenant is entitled to restoration and compensation. The main objects of the Act are to give the tenant 'fair rent and a status of irremovability, and it aims at preventing landlords from increasing rents by more than a permitted amount above a basic figure called 'fair rent,' and conferring on them security of tenure by preventing the landlords from evicting the tenants without an order of the Court; it also forbids a Court to make an order for possession in favour of landlords except on certain specified grounds.

There are seven chapters in this book, which include those on provisions regarding rent, suits and proceedings for eviction, deposit of rent, appointment of Controller and other officers, their powers and functions, appeal, revision and review, and penalties. The different sections are suitably grouped under each chapter, accompanied by suitable and satisfying notes. In this second edition of the book, the provisions of the 1963 Amendment Act and of the President's Amendment Act 1963 have been duly incorporated in the relevant sections. In view of these amended provisions, many judicial decisions on S. 17 have been rendered out-tory, and these have been omitted from this edition. The book, we learn, has been thoroughly revised and brought up to date, by incorporating and analysing the large number of judicial decisions that have been pronounced since the first edition was published.

Towards the end of the book are reproduced the texts of the West Bengal Premises Tenancy Rules, 1956, the West Bengal Premises Rent Control (Temporary Provisions) Act, 1950 and the West Bengal Premises Rent Control Rules, 1950. The value of the book has been enhanced by a useful Table of Cases and Index. The Rent Act legislation is a remedial measure in nature and its main purpose is to prevent the landlord from exacting higher sums of money from the tenant in addition to the permitted or fair rent. As a corollary, it inevitably leads to the granting of security of tenure to the tenant. To both, therefore, as well as to the practising lawyer, the publication should be of practical assistance.

R.S.S.

JUSTICE IN INDIA. By Govind Das, M.A., Bar-at-Law, N. M. Tripathi Private Ltd., 164 Samaldas Marg, Bombay 2, Pp. 197. Price, Rs. 20.

"Can an Indian be arrested without any trial in his country? Can the Executive drive him out of his house? Is the policeman feared most in the slums? Does the law aid the strong and the aggressive? Does it mumble for the failing and the weak? Does the law guarantee security, freedom and progress?"—These are among the several questions posed by the author in the volume under review. There are laws in India, he concedes, any number of them, but Justice? He answers in his own style in the pages of this book. It contains three parts, 'Past,' 'Present,' and 'Future.' The 'Past' contains a rapid survey of various concepts of justice including the Indian; the existing problems of law and justice in the Indian context in the last two decades are dealt with in the 'present'; and the 'future' contains attempted solutions. The earlier chapters deal with the different theories of law and justice and the agencies administering them among the ancient Greeks and Romans, in the mediaeval ages, in Christianity, in Islam and Hinduisms at different periods in history.

It was after the great Indian mutiny of 1857 that many of the British systems of law were introduced into India, but, during the British days, the Indian legal system functioned without the native spirit, and today the prevailing temper has not succeeded in formulating a categorial philosophy of law. An attempt to inject a lively spirit into the laws resulted in the enactment of the Constitution of India, whose "Directive Principles" sought to introduce a social order in which justice, social, economic and political, shall inform all the institutions of national life. These principles were considered fundamental in the governance of the country, but a subsequent paragraph said that these "Directive Principles" were not enforceable by a Court, and the Supreme Court has considered them as merely "subserving, and not over-riding" the Constitution. But it is feared that the ever-increasing power of the Executive coupled with the ever-contracting power of the Judiciary might upset the delicate balance on which the Indian legal structure rests. The Courts, adds the author, must contrive means to exercise the fullest control over the administrative actions of the Executive and the limitations on the power of judicial review of executive actions should be relaxed. The author refers appreciatively to the adverse comments of the Ford Foundation Specialist on the system of legal education obtaining in the country and considers that it is high time we stopped deluding ourselves with all sort of fanciful notions about the qualifications and attainment desirable for members of the judiciary.

In the third Part the author deals with Roscoe Pound's concept of "social engineering," into which he has contrived to squeeze the entire scheme of legal process. But the author would seem to think that in an under-developed society like that of India, "humane order with safety for the failure, since every failure does not imply fault," should be the task of social promotion, and not mere social engineering. Dealing with the doctrine of countervailing power, in a juristic sense, says the author, different institutions should be given freedom to lead their own effective lives. On occasions when a sense of injustice is caused, or justice is threatened, or liberty is in peril, the judiciary should tackle the situation and avert the feared eventuality. The Supreme Court of India seems to have inaugurated this process in its epoch-making judgment in the Golak Nath case. It said that Parliament had no power to take away or abridge any of the fundamental rights guaranteed by the Constitution by way of constitutional amendments. However, considering the great social and economic changes that had been effected on the basis of such laws and having regard to the requirements of justice, the Court limited the effect of the judgment to future legislation only.

"... There is no justice in India and no one is playing the game fairly" deplores the author. India needs for the success of its legal system full-employment and a modicum of social security. It needs reaffirmation of the norms and values in the community which have had a record of past success. Among the suggestions made by the author are: the decentralisation of the seats of power, the enthronement of the judiciary with effective authority and jurisdiction; use of suitable language for law with drastic re-orientation of legal education; recasting of the statutes based upon the ideal norms of the community; the proper choice of the judges as agents for implementing justice, and the enunciation of a positive philosophy of law. Mere amendments of statutes would be futile. What is wanted is a thorough revaluation or a fundamental revolution "whereby right and wrong shall be enunciated, emphasised, and enforced in society, and economic progress or prosperity will be a mere consequential by-product." Even the change in our political masters does not guarantee the automatic prevalence of justice, which can be made possible only through prescribed endeavours of a fundamental character.

This is a thought-provoking book on the drawbacks and deficiencies of the ruling concept of law and justice and of the agencies in charge of their administration. An index and table of cases would have been useful features of the volume.

THE SUPREME COURT ON CRIMINAL LAW: By J. K. Soonawala, B. A. LL. B., Attorney-at-law, Bombay High Court. Second Edition, 1958; By Y. D. Nayak, B. Sc., LL. M., Advocate High Court, Bombay. Vol. I, Pp. CXXXI and 1155. Vol. II, Pp. CXVIII and 1157 to 1958. N. M. Tripathi Private Ltd., Princess Street, Bombay 2, Price per set, Rs. £0.

Since the inception of the Supreme Court in 1950 the exercise of its powers of authoritative interpretation has made a heavy impact on all branches of criminal law, and a comprehensive reference book, like the one under review, containing all its decisions on the entire range of criminal law, was becoming necessary in order to meet the needs of judges and lawyers. The first Volume contains four Parts, one each for the Decisions of the Supreme Court on constitutional principles applicable to criminal law, the Penal Code, the Law of Evidence, and the Code of Criminal Procedure. The Constitution is the Paramount Law which has laid down a scheme of Government under which a balance has been struck between the rights and freedoms of the citizen and the State's power of social control, and a study of the basic principles of the constitution is necessary if there is to be any thorough understanding of criminal law. While all the relevant articles are given, the difference between the Indian and American Constitutions and the Scheme of governance under the constitution are also touched upon. The Second Part deals with the Penal Code under the heads, inter alia, of Punishment or Sentence, Criminal Conspiracy, Unlawful Assembly, Offences of Bribery and Corruption, against the State and Public Servants, Offences against Religion and Human Life, Theft, Misappropriation, Cheating, Trespass and offences relating to marriage. In the next Part, on the Law of Evidence, the heads cover, among other things, Rules, as to relevancy of facts, Oral evidence, Documentary evidence, Burden of Proof, and the Law as to Dying declarations. Special importance has been given to the Law as to Circumstantial evidence, the Law as to Confessions, the Law as to Sufficiency and Corroboration, and the Law as to the effect of contravention of mandatory rules of procedure under the Criminal P. C., subjects on which the Law is believed to have crystallised as a result of the Supreme Court decisions.

The Second Volume deals with Appeals to the Supreme Court, all other criminal enactments, and the interpretation of criminal statutes. After briefly dwelling on the criminal appellate jurisdiction of the Supreme Court and appeals on Constitutional issues, this Part is devoted to the Court's power of intervention on questions of fact and questions of law, new points raised for the first time, and the binding character of its decisions, principles governing the issue of a certificate under Art. 134, and the the Court's discretion in the matter of sentence or order. In the sixth Part all the other criminal laws have been dealt with under headings such as Bribery and Corruption, Preventive Detention, Public Safety and Public Order, Contempt of Court, Prohibition and Excise, Customs and Import Control, Rent Control, Work in factories and Shops, Municipalities and Local Bodies, Industrial Disputes, Motor Vehicles and a host of other laws under a comprehensive "Miscellaneous and General" Section. In the final Part have been brought together a large number of principles on the interpretation of criminal statutes laid down by the Court, and they cover basic rules of construction, use of ancillary aids, and the effect of the repeal or expiry of a statute.

It is noteworthy that the exhaustive contents include every heading in the Book, and a chronological and comparative index and alphabetical index, with the page numbers of each case in the text, are also given. When an authority on a particular subject is sought for, the reader has to refer to the contents and trace the appropriate heading and then to look up the same heading in the body of the text where all the cases relating to that subject are grouped together, with their serial numbers indicating their citations in the Law Reports. This combined use of Text, Contents and Index should facilitate easy and quick reference, and Mr. Soonawala's novel method of arranging the subject-matter distinguishes it from other books on the subject. In an Appendix in the second volume are given the decisions of the Privy Council and the Federal Court on Criminal Law between 1900 and 1950. Altogether a laudable effort to present in an easily assemblable form the continuity and development of interpretation on each subject in successive judgments of the Court.

The first edition of this book appeared in 1961, but the author did not live to see the present edition out. Although he suddenly passed away in 1965, he had prepared the manuscript of this edition bringing the case-law upto June 1965, and Mr. Nayak was entrusted with the work of bringing it out by adding case-law upto December 1967, which appears as a supplement at the end of the second volume.

R.S.S.

THE HONOURABLE COURT (A HISTORY OF THE UNITED STATES SUPREME COURT), By Leo Pfeffer, 1st Indian Print 1969, Academic International, Calcutta 9, Pp. 471, Price. Rs. 10.

Has the Supreme Court of the United States been a handmaid of capitalist exploitation? Has it served as an instrument of Communist machinations? Is it necessary to enact measures to curb its power? Or, has it fulfilled the hopes entertained by John Marshall, the greatest of the Supreme Court Chief Justices who moulded the destinies of the Court over the first three decades of the 19th Century? Marshall hoped that the Court would be capable of withstanding the shifts of popular passions and of changing the patterns of the nation on healthy lines. How far these hopes have been vindicated have been vividly and graphically brought out by the author's masterly survey of the developments which have made the Court the unquestioned guardian of the Constitution; the survey is based on the epoch-making decisions of a succession of distinguished judges who have adorned the Court. He describes the great personalities and landmark decisions of the Court's history. He points out how the Court has become the agency most committed to and effective in the participation of American democracy.

When the average American, says the author, thinks of the Supreme Court, it is in terms of decisions outlawing racial segregation in the public schools or declaring unconstitutional gerrymandering in favour of rural over urban voters. They are constitutional law decisions which invoke the superior authority of the Constitution to check action by the Legislature. The uniqueness of the Supreme Court as a judicial tribunal is to be found in these decisions. In major political economic and social cases, the Supreme Court's power to interpret the acts of the Legislature can be an extremely effective instrument, as effective as vetoing a law by declaring it unconstitutional. Practically it makes little difference whether the Supreme Court declares a particular law unconstitutional or interprets it in such a way as to deprive it of its vital force.

There has at the same time been a series of judicial decisions which exalted what is known as the "due process clause" as a means of asserting power to pass judgment on industrial and commercial measures adopted by the legislative arm of Government. Under the doctrine of the "due process of law" the American Supreme Court assumed and exercised powers, as the ultimate judicial authority, in testing whether in cases before it the Executive or Legislature conformed in certain fundamental principles of right and justice within the ambit of the American Constitution. The Supreme Court in India, although the ultimate interpreter of the Constitution and the final protector of the Citizen's fundamental rights guaranteed under the Constitution, has not been able until the 10th February 1970, to widen the scope to mould the "concept of justice" in contrast with the American analogy. But this gap has to an extent been bridged by the latest decision of the Court in striking down the Bank Nationalisation Act as unconstitutional. In doing so, it set a new principle for Court adjudication on fundamental right cases, abandoning a principle enunciated by Mr. Justice Kania in 1950 in a case in which the Marxist leader Mr. A. K. Gopalan, challenged his preventive detention. This decision has now been rejected as being based on the theory that in protecting the fundamental rights of citizens the Court need consider only "the object and form" of the State action and should ignore the effect of the laws on the fundamental rights of the individuals in general.

Dealing with the American Supreme Court, the author of the present volume poses a three-fold paradox. A high judicial tribunal, acting within judicial customs and using judicial instruments, exercises important political and legislative functions. In doing so it makes enemies in high places but escapes any effective attack upon its status or powers. All other agencies of Government accept these political and legislative decisions though the Court has absolutely no weapon to employ to enforce compliance. How is this triple paradox explained? "Where", asks the author, "does one find the solution for the riddle of a Court that exercises political power... and yet has no means" to defend its power if it was seriously challenged? How does the Court enjoy, though it has been continually making enemies, such a high prestige? The answers to these are to be found in the life history of the Court, which the book under revision presents. This life history is examined against the political, social and economic background which gave rise to its major decisions and which in turn was vitally affected by these decisions. At the same time due consideration is given to the influence upon the Court's evolution of Titans inside and outside the Court like Jefferson, Marshall, Holmes, Franklin Roosevelt, Warren, etc.

Index of cases cited, Selected bibliography and general index are useful features of the book.

The author, Mr. Leo Pfeffer, is a constitutional lawyer of reputation in America and is a noted authority on religious liberty and Church-State issues. A lawyer before the United States Supreme Court, he has written several well known books like "Church, State and Freedom," "The Liberties of an American" and "Creeds in competition". At present he is Professor of Political Science and Chairman of the department at Long Island University, New York.

R.S.S.

BOOKS RECEIVED

"HUMANISM OF MAHATMA GANDHI" By M. Hidayatullah Chief Justice of India, Published by Gandhi Centenary Literature Propagation Committee, 46 Parimal Society, Ahmedabad 6.

"COMPANY ACTIONS IN THE MODERN SET-UP" By S. C. Sen, Bar-at-Law. Published by Eastern Law House (p.) Ltd. Calcutta 13 Price Rs. 10.

"LAW DIARY 1970" Published by Law Book House, Laxmi Road, Panna 30. Price Rs. 4-50.

END OF A DISPUTE, By C. N. Kamath, Advocate. Being the details of dispute between workmen and the Management of Indian Telephone Industries, Tribunal Award, Judgment of the Supreme Court of India, Gajendragadkar Commission Recommendations, A challenge and A Problem. Foreword by Hon'ble Mr. Justice T. K. Tukol, High Court of Mysore 1962. Price Rs. 2.

: B.D.B.

viz., June 3, 1957 by the appellants' counsel, and it is after such a fairly exhaustive consideration of the objections of the appellants, the demand notice Exhibit A and the materials on record, that the Collector passed the order Exhibit Q. In fact, as already mentioned, it is not as if the Collector merely confirmed the demand under Exhibit A in toto. On the other hand, he modified it in favour of the appellant to some extent. It is such an exhaustive order passed by the Collector — Exhibit Q — that was the subject of consideration in the first instance, by the Central Board of Revenue, in Exhibit T, and later, by the Central Government, in Exhibit V. Under those circumstances, we are not inclined to accept the contention of the learned counsel for the appellant that the orders — Exhibits T and V — require to be interfered with.

16. The further grievance placed before us by the learned Counsel on behalf of the appellant is that before the High Court various objections had been raised in the writ petition regarding the manner in which the inspection was done by the Deputy Superintendent and none of these matters had been considered by the High Court. To a direct question put by us, as to whether all the points referred to in para 33 of the writ petition were really argued before the High Court, the counsel quite fairly stated that he has no instructions to say that these points were as a matter of fact pressed before the High Court.

17. The counsel further urged that no opportunity had been given to cross-examine the Deputy Superintendent of Central Excise nor was a copy of his report made available to the appellants. The inspection was done without the knowledge of the appellants and without notice to them and Khuda Bux was not authorised to represent them at the time the inspection was conducted by the Deputy Superintendent. We are not inclined to accept these contentions of the learned counsel. So far as we could see, the appellant had made no grievance before the Collector of Central Excise that they should be allowed to examine witnesses nor did they urge that a copy of the report of the Deputy Superintendent had not been made available to them. They did not make any request for cross-examining the Deputy Superintendent of Central Excise. In view of all these circumstances, in our opinion the High Court was justified in holding that the appellants had a proper opportunity of contesting the demand made by the department and that there had been no failure of natural justice in the proceedings conducted by the respondents.

18. A further grievance was made by the learned counsel for the appellants that the order — Exhibit N — dated February 6, 1958, passed by the Collector of Central Excise, was illegal and contrary to the proviso to sub-section (1) of Section 35 of the Act. According to the learned Counsel, the Assistant Collector, by his order Exhibit M, had condoned the losses by a certain percentage in respect of five lots whereas the order of remand for a de novo adjudication passed by the Collector under Exhibit N will have the result of depriving the appellants of the favourable directions obtained by them under Exhibit N and their liability would be enhanced. That is, according to the appellants, the order of remand, Exhibit N, passed by the Collector, will have the effect of subjecting them to a greater penalty than has been adjudged under the original order of the Assistant Collector, Exhibit M. We are not inclined to accept this contention of the appellant. Section 35 deals with appeals and sub-section (1) gives a right of appeal to an aggrieved party against any decision or order passed by officers under the Act and the Rules giving power to the appellate authority that such authority or officer may thereupon make such further inquiry and pass such order as he thinks fit, confirming, altering or annulling the decision or order appealed against, provided that no such order in appeal shall have the effect of subjecting any person to any greater confiscation or penalty than has been adjudged against him in the original decision or order. The fallacy underlying the contention of the learned counsel is the assumption that the consequence of the order of the Collector will be to subject the appellants to a greater penalty for which, in our opinion, there is no basis, as is seen from Section 35. What the Collector has done in this case is to give the appellants an opportunity of satisfying, if they can, the authority concerned that there was no justification for the issue of the two notices, Exhibits K and L under R. 223-A. The order does nothing more than this. If the appellants are able to satisfy the authority properly, the result may even be that no action will be taken under Rule 223-A.

19. Lastly, it was feebly urged that there was a conflict between the orders of the Collector, Exhibit Q dated March 8, 1958 and Exhibit N, dated February 6, 1958. In our opinion, there is no scope for any conflict because the two orders relate to different types of proceedings initiated against the appellants.

20. The result is that the appeal fails and is dismissed with costs.

Appeal dismissed.

AIR 1970 SUPREME COURT 802

(V 57 C 170)

(From: Punjab)

J. C. SHAH AND K. S. HEGDE, JJ

Sm. Gunwant Kaur and others, Appellants v. Municipal Committee, Bhatinda and others, Respondents.

Civil Appeal No. 1337 of 1969, D/- 4-12-1969.

(A) Land Acquisition Act (1894), Sections 4, 6 and 5A and 17 (4) — Notification seeking to acquire certain land without demarcation — Objections alleging that notification did not show correct demarcation and that different landholders had no opportunity to file objections — Collector's order stating that collector was satisfied that land demarcated corresponded to the area notified — Order under Section 17 (4) not passed — Writ petition dismissed in limine on ground that High Court could not go into disputed question of fact — Order held, was bad — Decision of Punjab H. C., Reversed.

Where no order under Section 17 (4) is issued by the Government of Punjab, the owners of the lands are entitled to be heard on the question whether their lands or any land in the locality should be acquired for the purpose for which it is intended to be acquired. As the collector is to make an offer of compensation petitioners are entitled to challenge the correctness of the collector's opinion. The jurisdiction of the Collector depends upon the issue of a valid notification and the mere fact that the Collector is satisfied that the true area of land demarcated corresponds to the area notified — whatever that expression may mean — does not prevent the owners of the lands from contending before the High Court that they had no opportunity of making their representations under Section 5A of the Act and of satisfying the Collector that their lands should not be acquired. Decision of Punjab High Court, Reversed.

(Paras 10 and 11)

(B) Constitution of India, Articles 220 and 227 — Disputed questions of fact can be determined.

The High Court is not deprived of its jurisdiction to entertain a petition under Article 220 merely because in considering the petitioner's right to relief questions of fact may fall to be determined. In a petition under Article 220 the High Court has jurisdiction to try issues both of fact and law. Exercise of the jurisdiction, though discretionary the discretion must be exercised on sound judicial principles. When the petition raises complex question of fact which may require oral evidence to be taken and the High Court may decline to try a petition.

(Para 14)

(C) Constitution of India, Article 220 — Dismissal of petition in limine — Consideration.

Rejection of a petition in limine will normally be justified, where the High Court is of the view that the petition is frivolous or because of the nature of the claim made, dispute sought to be agitated, or that the petition against the party against whom relief is claimed, the petition is not maintainable or that the dispute raised thereby is such that it would be inappropriate to try it in the writ jurisdiction or for analogous reasons.

(Para 14)

The Judgment of the Court was delivered by

SHAH, J.: This is an appeal against the judgment of the High Court of Punjab dismissing in limine a petition filed by the three appellants in this appeal.

2. The third appellant purchased from one Hari Ram a plot of land approximately 500 sq. yds. at Bhatinda and applied on August 4, 1960 for permission of the local Municipal Committee to construct a house on that plot of land. Sanction was granted on August 10, 1960, and the third appellant constructed a residential building on the land. The first appellant also purchased 500 sq. yds. from Hari Ram on April 4, 1961 and submitted an application with plans to the Municipal Committee for constructing a house. The application was granted on August 9, 1963. The second appellant purchased a plot measuring 268 3/4 sq. yds. on November 5, 1962 adjacent to the land purchased by the first appellant from one Tarsem Singh who in his turn had purchased it from Hari Ram. He also applied for constructing a structure and that was sanctioned by the local Municipal Committee on August 9, 1963.

3. A notification had been issued by the State Government of Punjab under Section 4 of the Land Acquisition Act on June 26, 1959 declaring that land specified in the Schedule to the notification was needed for a public purpose i. e., for construction of Mall Road leading from the Railway Station Bhatinda to the Main Road known as Goniana-Bhatinda Road. In the schedule to the notification the land was described as Khasra No. 2030 and 11 sets of persons were shown as owners of different pieces of land. The aggregate area of the land likely to be needed was shown as 15 bighas and 5 biswas, and Hari Ram was shown as owner of two pieces out of the land. By an amendment of the notification published on July 31, 1959, the holding of Hari Ram was shown in the aggregate as 8 bighas and 15 biswas. A notification under Section 6 of the Land Acquisition Act declaring that the lands were needed for a public purpose was issued on January 6, 1960 and published on January 15, 1960. The Schedule to the notification was in the same form as it was originally published in the notification under Section 4 and modified on July 31, 1959. It was recited in paragraph 3 of the notification that the plans of the land may be inspected in the office of the Bhatinda District and of the Municipal Committee, Bhatinda.

4. In the view of the Municipality of Bhatinda the demarcation of the land according to the plan published with the notification under Section 6 did not tally with the situation on the site. The matter was accordingly referred to the Public Works Department of the State. Later the Municipal Committee resolved to reduce the width of the road which was originally intended to be 100 feet to 60 feet. On February 15, 1965, the Municipal Committee resolved to abandon the scheme for it appeared to the Municipal Committee that even with the reduced width of 60 feet certain Municipal installations and lands used for public purposes were likely to be included in that road width. There was correspondence between the Municipal Committee and the local Government under which the alignment of the road was sought to be modified. The Government of Punjab, however, insisted that the Municipal Committee should proceed with the acquisition and directed the Collector to issue the requisite notices and to make his award of compensation.

5. The appellants then filed a writ petition in the High Court of Punjab on December 16, 1968, alleging that the substance of the notification under Section 4 and its corrigendum was not published in the locality by the Collector; that the proposed land which was sought to be acquired for the Mall Road was not demarcated at site under Section 4 (2) of the Act; that the procedure laid down in S. 5-A of the Act was not followed; that the notification was vague and since the land sought to be acquired was not fully described in the notification, the interested persons could not file their objections against the requisition; that Khasra No. 2030 was a very large plot of land consisting of several building plots which were all part of the main Khasra No. 2030 and the original owners of this field number had divided this field into several abadi plots and had sold them to different persons before the notification and unless the portions of Khasra No. 2030 sought to be acquired were specified by the mere reference to certain areas thereof the owners could not be deemed to have intimation that their plots were to be acquired; and that the notification issued by the Government under Sec. 6 and the plan accompanying thereto did not tally with the alignment of the road as originally intended to be laid or subsequently modified by the Municipal Committee.

6. The High Court of Punjab dismissed the petition in limine. The High Court observed:

"The grievance of the petitioner's complaint is that the area now sought to be taken possession of was not included in the acquisition notification of 1959. In the elaborate order of the Collector the condition is, 'I am satisfied that the true area of land demarcated corresponds to the area notified and that it has been demarcated on the ground with as much accuracy as was reasonably possible.' This Court cannot determine disputed question of fact and this petition is dismissed accordingly".

With certificate granted by the High Court the petitioners have appealed to this Court.

7. The notification under Section 4 is the foundation of a proceeding for acquisition of land. In the present case the notification under Section 4 did not set out with precision the parts of Khasra No. 2030 belonging to different owners sought to be acquired. The notification merely set out the areas intended to be acquired out of Khasra No. 2030 but the location of the areas under Khasra No. 2030 could not thereby be ascertained. No plans demarcating the land to be acquired were published or made available to the owners of the land.

8. The contention of the appellants is that they had no opportunity to avail themselves of their statutory right to object to the proposed acquisition under Section 5A of the Land Acquisition Act and on that account the proceedings for acquisition are ultra vires.

9. Section 4 of the Land Acquisition Act does not expressly require the Collector to publish or make available the plans of the lands intended to be notified to the owners of the lands. But the acquiring authority is bound to publish sufficient information giving due notice to the owners of the lands that their properties are intended to be compulsorily acquired. Under Section 4 (1) the appropriate Government being of the opinion that land in any locality is needed or is likely to be needed for any public purpose, may publish a notification to that effect. The Collector has then to cause public notice of the substance of such notification to be given at convenient place in the locality. After the notification is issued the Collector may exercise the power to enter upon and survey the land and set out the boundaries of the land proposed to be taken and the intended line of the work proposed to be made thereon. By Section 5A any person interested in any land notified under Section 4 as being needed or likely to be needed for a public purpose or for a Company may within thirty days after the issue of the notification, submit in writing to the Collector his objection to the acquisition of the land or of any land in the locality as the case may be. The Collector has to give to the objector an opportunity of being heard and has, after hearing the objections and making such further inquiry as he thinks necessary, to submit the case for the decision of the appropriate Government, together with the record of the proceedings held by him and a report containing his recommendations on the objections. Under Section 6 of the Act the Government may proceed to make a notification only if the Government is satisfied after considering the report of the Collector under Section 5-A that the land is needed for a public purpose. The inquiry and the report under Section 5-A may be dispensed with only if a notification is issued under Section 17 (4) of the Land Acquisition Act.

10. In the present case no order under Section 17 (4) was issued by the Government of Punjab. The owners of the lands were, therefore, entitled to be heard on the question whether their lands or any land in the locality should be acquired for the purpose for which it was intended to be acquired. The appellants contended that they had no opportunity of making their representations, for the notification gave no notice to them that the land in their occupation was intended to be acquired.

11. In summarily rejecting the petition two grounds were given in the order of the High Court—first that the Collector was satisfied that the true area of the land demarcated corresponded to the area notified and that it had been demarcated on the ground with as much accuracy as was reasonably possible, and the second, that the question raised was one of fact. The writ petition filed before the High Court was not in the nature of an appeal against the decision of the Collector. The Collector was acting for and on behalf of the State Government to make an offer of compensation for the lands to be acquired. The appellants were entitled to challenge the correctness of the Collector's opinion. Again the jurisdiction of the Collector depended upon the issue of a valid notification and the mere fact that the Collector was satisfied that the true area of land demarcated "Corresponded to the area notified"—whatever that expression may mean—did not prevent the owners of the lands from contending before the High Court that they had no opportunity of making their representations under Section 5-A of the Act and of satisfying the Collector that their lands should not be acquired. The three appellants had applied to the Local Municipal Committee for constructing buildings on their plots and the Municipal Committee had sanctioned the constructions. Prima facie, this may indicate that in the view of the Municipal Committee the lands on which the buildings were allowed to be constructed were not within the area notified for acquisition or would not be needed for the road.

12. The Government of Punjab did not publish any plans, nor did they inform the owners of the lands in the locality to which the notification under Section 4 of the Land Acquisition Act related, that plans were available for inspection at the office of the Collector: the owners of the lands were only informed that some parts of Khasra No. 2030 belonging to the owners were required. There is no evidence on the record that the entire area of khasra No. 2030 was intended to be acquired. The notification did not, therefore, give due notice to the owners that their lands were intended to be notified for acquisition. In paragraph 2 of the petition it is also averred that there was no due publication of the notification in the locality by the Collector.

13. The pleas raised by the petitioners about the infirmity in the notification and the proceedings for compulsory acquisition were serious.

14. The High Court observed that they will not determine disputed question of fact in a writ petition. But what facts were in dispute and what were admitted could only be determined after an affidavit in reply was filed by the State. The High Court, however, proceeded to dismiss the petition in limine. The High Court is not deprived of its jurisdiction to entertain a petition under Article 226 merely because in considering the petitioner's right to relief questions of fact may fall to be determined. In a petition under Article 226 the High Court has jurisdiction to try issues both of fact and law. Exercise of the jurisdiction is, it is true, discretionary, but the discretion must be exercised on sound judicial principles. When the petition raises questions of fact of a complex nature, which may for their determination require oral evidence to be taken, and on that account the High Court is of the view that the dispute may not appropriately be tried in a writ petition, the High Court may decline to try a petition. Rejection of a petition in limine will normally be justified, where the High Court is of the view that the petition is frivolous or because of the nature of the claim made, dispute sought to be agitated, or that the petition against the party against whom relief is claimed is not maintainable or that the dispute raised thereby is such that it would be inappropriate to try it in the writ jurisdiction, or for analogous reasons.

15. From the averments made in the petition filed by the appellants it is clear that in proof of a large number of allegations the appellants relied upon documentary evidence and the only matter in respect of which conflict of facts may possibly arise related to the due publication of the notification under Section 4 by the Collector.

16. In the present case, in our judgment, the High Court was not justified in dismissing the petition on the ground that it will not determine disputed question of fact. The High Court has jurisdiction to determine questions of fact, even if they are in dispute, and the present, in our judgment, is a case in which in the interests of both the parties the High Court should have entertained the petition and called for an affidavit in reply from the respondents, and should have proceeded to try the petition instead of relegating the appellants to a separate suit.

17. It was urged by Mr. Hazarnavis on behalf of the Municipal Committee, Bhatinda, that the three appellants were purchasers of the lands claimed by them after the notification under Section 4 was issued and they had no right to challenge the issue of the notification. If, however, the notification under Section 4 was vague, the three appellants who are purchasers of the land had title thereto may challenge the validity of the notification. The appellants have spent in putting up substantial structures considerable sums of money and we are unable to hold that merely because they had purchased the lands after the issue of the notification under Section 4 they are debarred from challenging the validity of the notification, or from contending that it did not apply to their lands.

18. The appeal is, therefore, allowed and the order passed by the High Court is set aside. The proceeding is remanded to the High Court with the direction that the petition be readmitted to its original Number and that it be heard and disposed of according to law after considering the affidavits in reply and the other evidence produced by the parties. Costs of the appeal will be the costs in the petition.

Appeal allowed.

AIR 1979 SUPREME COURT 806
(V 57 C 171)

(From: Allahabad)*

J. M. SHELAT, V. BHARGAVA AND
G. A. VAIDIALINGAM, JJ.

Agra Electric Supply Co. Ltd., Appellant v. The Labour Court, Meerut and another, Respondents.

Civil Appeal No. 1631 of 1967, D/- 8-11-1968.

U. P. Industrial Disputes Act (28 of 1947), Section 6-H (2) — U. P. Industrial Disputes Rules (1957), Rules 16 (1) and 16 (2) — Application under Section 6H (2)
— Dismissal of, for default of appearance — Order of dismissal not covered by Rule 16 (1) — Second application claiming identical relief is maintainable without following procedure laid in R. 16 (2).

Where a previous application under Section 6H (2) filed by workmen was dismissed for default of appearance, a second application claiming identical reliefs is maintainable without following the procedure indicated by Rule 16 (2). The necessity for filing an application for setting aside an order passed in the case in the absence of a party, as contemplated under sub-rule (2) of Rule 16 will only arise when an order on merits affecting the case has been passed in the absence of a party, under sub-rule (1) of Rule 16. An order dismissing a case for default for non-prosecution, does not come under sub-rule (1) of Rule 16 and to such an order sub-rule (2) has no application. Civil Misc. Writ Petn. No. 1647 of 1967, D/- 11-5-1967 (All), Affirmed.

(Paras 11, 12)

Mr. S. V. Gupte, Senior Advocate (Mr.
D. N. Mukherjee, Advocate with him), for Appellants; Mr. M. K. Ramamurthi,
Mrs. Shyanla Pappu and Mr. Vineet
Kumar Advocates, for Respondent No. 2.

The following Judgment of the Court was delivered by VAIDIALINGAM, J.: In this appeal by special leave, the appellant challenges the order of the Allahabad High Court dated May 11, 1967 dismissing Civil Miscellaneous Writ Petition No. 1647 of 1967.

2. The facts leading up to the filing of the said writ petition by the appellant under Article 226 of the Constitution may be briefly stated. The appellant is an existing company under the Companies Act, 1956, and has its registered office at Calcutta. The company was and is being managed by Martin Burn Ltd., Secretaries and Treasurers. The Company carries on the business of generation, distribution and supply of electricity within its licensed area in the city of Agra and its environs in the State of Uttar Pradesh. On a reference made by the Government of Uttar Pradesh regarding a dispute that had arisen between the electricity undertakings managed by Martin Burn Ltd., of which the appellant was one, and their workmen about the demand of the workmen for supply of uniforms, free of charge the Chairman, Martin Electricity Supply Company Adjudication Board made an award on February 20, 1947 in and by which certain types of workmen were directed to be supplied with uniforms. The said award remained operative till April 15, 1950 on which date it was terminated. Though the award had been terminated, the appellant continued practice of supplying uniforms to its workmen. Subsequently, again, a dispute was raised by the employees of the electricity undertakings managed by Martin Burn Ltd., regarding the supply of uniforms to some categories of workers. The said dispute was referred by the Government of Uttar Pradesh, by order dated March 15, 1951, for adjudication to the State Industrial Tribunal, Uttar Pradesh, Allahabad. The said Industrial Tribunal passed an award dated November 29, 1952 holding that the same categories of workmen to whom uniforms had to be supplied as per the award dated February 20, 1947 were entitled to be supplied with uniforms. Though this award remained in operation only for a period of one year, the appellant continued to supply uniforms till 1953 after which year the supply of uniforms was discontinued. Nevertheless, the appellant again resumed supplying uniforms from May 1961.

3. On December 31, 1961 twenty-three employees of the appellant, including the second respondent herein filed a joint petition before the Labour Court, Meerut, under Section 6-H (2) of the Uttar Pradesh Industrial Disputes Act, 1947 (hereinafter referred to as the Act) claiming that they were entitled to recover the money equivalent to the cost of uniforms which had not been supplied to them during the period 1954 to 1960. The said petition was numbered as Case No. 1 of 1962. According to these employees, the employer had failed to supply them uniforms which they were entitled to get and in consequence of such failure the workmen had been put to expense by purchase of clothes to be used while rendering service in the company. They claimed that the benefits which they were entitled to get should be computed in terms of money to enable them to recover the cost of uniforms from the appellant. The appellant filed a written statement on January 27, 1962 disputing the claim of the workmen and denying its liability to either supply uniforms or pay the money value of the same.

*C. M. W. P. No. 1647 of 1967, D/- 11-5-1967—All.)

4. On February 22, 1964 the application filed by the workmen was taken up by the Labour Court for hearing, but as none appeared on behalf of the workmen who were the applicants when the case was called on for hearing, the Labour Court, Meerut, dismissed the application for non-prosecution. The actual order passed by the Labour Court was as follows:

"Case called on for hearing. No one is present on behalf of the applicant, nor any request for adjournment has been received.

The application is dismissed as not having been prosecuted. No order as to costs."

5. On or about January 1, 1965 seven employees of the appellant, including the second respondent herein, filed seven separate applications before the Labour Court, Meerut, again under Section 6-H (2) of the Act. The seven applications had been numbered as Case Nos. 217 to 223 of 1965. The application filed by the second respondent was Case No. 217 of 1965. The second respondent, in particular claimed that he was a mains cooly from April 13, 1950 to September 15, 1959 and that he was entitled to be supplied uniform by the appellant. As the uniform had not been so supplied, he pleaded that he was entitled to recover a sum of Rs. 330 as cost of the uniforms which the management should have supplied during these years. All the applicants, including the second respondent, had also stated in their respective applications that they had moved before the Labour Court a similar application, under Sec. 6H (2) of the Act, but unfortunately that had been dismissed for default on February 21, 1964 and hence the fresh applications were being filed.

6. The appellant filed, on or about April 7, 1965 separate objections denying the claim made by the applicants. We are not, at this stage, concerned with the various pleas taken either by the employees, in support of their claim, or by the appellant, in denial thereof. It is only necessary to state that the appellant pleaded that the fresh applications, filed by the workmen, were not maintainable in view of the fact that identical applications, claiming the same reliefs, had been dismissed on February 21, 1964 by the Labour Court. If the workmen were aggrieved by the said order, the proper remedy that should have been adopted by them was by taking action under Rule 16 (2) of the Uttar Pradesh Industrial Disputes Rules, 1957 (hereinafter referred to as the rules). Not having adopted the procedure indicated therein, the management pleaded that it was no longer open to the workmen to file a second application and the Labour Court had no jurisdiction to entertain the same.

7. The labour Court had, by its order dated August 27, 1965 consolidated all the seven applications. On the basis of the objection raised by the appellant to the maintainability of the applications filed, issue No. 5 was framed in the following terms:—

"Whether the present applications of the workmen under Section 6-H (2) are not maintainable for the reasons given in para 5 of the written statement of the employers?"

and this issue was treated as a preliminary issue and arguments heard on the same. By order dated February 10, 1967 the Labour Court held that the applications filed by the seven workmen, including the second respondent were maintainable. The Labour Court has expressed the view that the order passed on February 21, 1964 was one dismissing the applications, filed by the workmen, for default and such an order was not contemplated by sub-rule (1) of Rule 16 of the rules, and hence the workmen were not bound to take action under sub-rule (2) of Rule 16. In consequence the Labour Court held that the applications filed by the workmen were competent and directed the applications to be posted for further hearing. Though the order had been passed in Case No. 217 of 1965, the Labour Court directed that the finding given on issue No. 5 would govern Cases Nos. 218 to 223 of 1965 also. The appellant challenged this finding of the Labour Court before the High Court of Allahabad in Civil Writ No. 1647 of 1967. A Division Bench of the High Court, by its order dated May 11, 1967 summarily dismissed the writ petition.

8. Mr. Gupte, learned counsel for the appellant and Mr. Ramamurthy, learned counsel for the second respondent, urged the same contentions that were urged on behalf of their clients before the Labour Court. Therefore the question that arises for consideration is whether the view of the Labour Court that the second application filed by the second respondent herein is maintainable, is correct.

9. Section 8-H of the Act deals with recovery of money due from an employer. Section 8-H more or less corresponds to Section 33-C of the Industrial Disputes Act, 1947. Sub-section (2) of Section 8-H, with which we are concerned is as follows:

"(2) Where any workman is entitled to receive from the employer any benefit which is capable of being computed in terms of money, the amount at which such benefit should be computed may, subject to any rules that may be made under this Act, be determined by such Labour Court as may be specified in this behalf by the State Government, and the amount so determined may be recovered as provided for in sub-section (1)."

As we have already mentioned the second respondent, along with certain others, had filed an application on December 31, 1961 claiming identical relief that is now claimed in Case No. 217 of 1965. That application was dismissed as not having been prosecuted, on February 22, 1964. The second application was filed on January 1, 1965.

10. We shall now refer to the relevant rules. Rule 9 empowers a Tribunal or Labour Court to accept, admit or call for evidence at any stage of the proceedings before it and in such manner as it may think fit. Rule 10 relates to the issue of summons for production of any books, papers or other documents as the Labour Court, Tribunal or Arbitrator feels necessary for the purpose of investigation or adjudication. Rule 12 relates to procedure at the first hearing. It states that at the first sitting of a Labour Court or Tribunal, the Presiding Officer shall call upon the parties in such order as he may think fit to state their case. Rule 18 provides for the Labour Court or Tribunal or Arbitrator proceedings ex parte, as follows:

"(1) If on the date fixed or on any other date to which hearing may be adjourned any party to the proceedings before the Labour Court or Tribunal or an Arbitrator is absent, though duly served with summons or having the notice of the date of hearing, the Labour Court or Tribunal or the Arbitrator, as the case may be, may proceed with the case in his absence and pass such order as it may deem fit and proper.

(2) The Labour Court, Tribunal or an Arbitrator may set aside the order passed against the party in his absence if within ten days of such order, the party applies in writing for setting aside such order and shows sufficient cause for his absence. The Labour Court, Tribunal or an Arbitrator may require the party to file an affidavit, stating the cause of his absence. As many copies of the application and affidavit, if any, shall be filed by the party concerned as there are persons on the opposite side. Notice of the application shall be given to the opposite parties before setting aside the order."

Sub-rule (1) deals with the absence of a party on the date fixed or any other date to which the hearing may be adjourned, though he has been served with summons or he has notice of the date of hearing. Under those circumstances it provides that the Labour Court, Tribunal or Arbitrator, as the case may be, "may proceed with the case in his absence and pass such order as it may deem fit and proper." It is to the setting aside of such an order that may have been passed under Sub-rule (1), that the procedure is indicated in sub-rule (2). According to Mr. Gupte, learned Counsel for the appellant, the order passed on February 22, 1964, by the Labour Court is one contemplated by sub-rule (1) of Rule 16, in which case the provisions of sub-rule (2) are attracted and the second respondent, if he felt aggrieved by that order, should have filed an application under sub-rule (2), within time, to set aside that order.

11. We are not inclined to accept this contention of Mr. Gupte. As pointed out earlier by us, the order passed on February 22, 1964, is one dismissing the application as not having been prosecuted, for default of appearance of the second respondent. We will presently show that the order of February 22, 1964, cannot be considered to be one contemplated to have been passed under sub-rule (1) of Rule 16. Sub-rule (1) refers to a party being absent on the date fixed, or on any other date to which the hearing has been adjourned, and such party having been duly served or having notice of the date of hearing. The said sub-rule (1) indicates as to what is to be done under such circumstances. We have referred to Rule 12 which provides for what the Labour Court or Tribunal should do at the first hearing. Neither the Act nor the rules empower a Tribunal or Labour Court to dismiss an application for default of appearance of a party. Rule 16 (1) is the only provision providing for what is to be done when a party is absent. That provision, which clearly enjoins the Labour Court or Tribunal in the circumstances mentioned therein "to proceed with the case in his absence", either on the date fixed or on any other date to which the hearing may be adjourned, coupled with the further direction "and pass such order as it may deem fit and proper", clearly indicates that the Tribunal or Labour Court should take up the case and decide it on merits and not dismiss it for default. Without attempting to be exhaustive, we shall just give an example. Where a workman, after leading some evidence in support of his claim, absents himself on the next adjourned date with the result that he does not lead further evidence, the Tribunal is bound to proceed with the case on such evidence as has been placed before it. It cannot dismiss the application on the ground of default of appearance of the workman. This will be an instance of "proceeding with the case in the absence of a party" and giving a decision on merits. If such an order is passed by the Tribunal in the absence of one or other of the parties before it, a right is given to such party to apply, under sub-rule (2) for setting aside the order that has been passed in his absence in the case in terms of sub-rule (1). The application must be filed within the period mentioned in sub-rule (2) and the party will have also to satisfy the Tribunal or Labour Court that he had sufficient cause for his absence. The necessity for filing an application for setting aside an order passed in the case in the absence of a party, as contemplated under sub-rule (2) of Rule 16 will only arise when an order on merits affecting the case has been passed in the absence of a party, under sub-rule (1) of Rule 16. An order dismissing a case for default or non-prosecution, does not come under sub-rule (1) of Rule 16 and to such an order sub-rule (2) has no application.

12. We have already indicated that the order passed on February 22, 1964 by the Labour Court cannot be considered to be an order contemplated under sub-rule (1) of Rule 16. If that is so, the second respondent was not bound to file an application within the time mentioned in sub-rule (2) for setting aside the order dated February 22, 1964. Therefore the fact that a previous application, filed by the second respondent, was dismissed for non-prosecution on February 22, 1964 is no bar under Rule 16 (2) to the filing of the present application, Case No. 217 of 1965. It follows that the objections raised by the appellant to the maintainability of the application filed by the second respondent have been rightly rejected by the Labour Court and the High Court.

13. The appeal fails and is dismissed. The appellant will pay the costs of the second respondent.

Appeal dismissed.

AIR 1970 SUPREME COURT 809 (V 57 C 172)

(From: Patna)*

S. M. SIKRI, R. S. BACHAWAT AND
K. S. HEGDE, JJ.

Shashibhushan Prasad Misra (dead) and another, Appellants v. Babuaji Rai (dead) by his legal representatives and others, Respondents.

Civil Appeal No. 1110 of 1965, D/- 27-11-1968.

Civil P. C. (1908), Sections 11, 96 and Order 22, Rules 3 and 4 — Res judicata between co-defendants — Settlement of land in favour of plaintiff as tenant from deity — Suit by plaintiff for declaration of title and possession of land annexed to their land by alluvion — Deity impleaded only as pro forma defendant — Dismissal of suit — First appeal to High Court impleading deity as pro forma respondent — Dismissal of appeal against deity for failure to pay cost of guardian ad litem appointed by Court for deity — Dismissal of entire appeal not proper — No inconsistent decree would result.

Plaintiff obtained settlement from a deity in respect of certain plot of land situate in a village. The deity was 16 annas proprietor of the said village. Due to changes in the channel of the river flowing between the village of the deity and another village a portion of land became annexed to the plot of land settled upon plaintiff. Plaintiff claimed declaration of title and possession in respect of annexed land contending that by diluvion the said land was lost to the village to which it originally belonged. The proprietor of this other village as well as the deity were arrayed as defendant the latter being only a pro forma. The suit having been dismissed on grounds inter alia that plaintiff had failed to prove adverse possession for requisite period, a first appeal was filed in the High Court wherein a guardian ad litem in respect of the respondent deity was appointed. On failure of plaintiff to pay costs of guardian ad litem the appeal came to be dismissed against deity. The Court dismissed the whole appeal as incompetent holding that the appeal had abated against deity and as there was an issue between contesting defendants and deity as to whether the land in dispute appertained to the village of the deity and as that issue stood concluded against the deity by the decree of trial Court, success in appeal might result in inconsistent decrees. On appeal to Supreme Court:

* (First Appeal No. 235 of 1951, D/- 6-7-1959 — Pat.)

Held that (i) the High Court erred in holding that appeal abated wholly or in part. Nono of the parties having died there was no question of abatement.

(Para 2)

(ii) that the question whether the suit lands appertained to the village of the deity became res sub judice on filing of first appeal and since this question was not finally decided between deity and other contesting defendants in appeal in the absence of any decision by High Court on merits on this question there was no final decision against deity. Thus there was no question of res judicata between co-defendants. AIR 1931 PC 114, Rel. on.

(Para 5)

(iii) that as the plaintiffs suing as tenants of deity did not ask for any relief against the deity, were entitled to prosecute the appeal against the contesting defendant-respondents on the question of title and possession on allegation that the suit land appertained to the village of deity.

(Para 3)

On facts, however, the Supreme Court having decided the question of the proprietorship of deity to the accreted land against the plaintiff in C. A. No. 140 of 1936 arising out of another suit T. S. 29/11 of 1946, this appeal was also dismissed.

(Para 6)

Cases Referred: Chronological Paras

(1931) AIR 1931 PC 114 (V 18)=

58 Ind App 158, Munni Bibi v.

Tirlok Nath

Mr. Sarjoo Prasad, Senior Advocate (Mr. B. P. Jha, Advocate, with him), for Appellants (excepting Respondents Nos. 15 (b) to 15 (d), C. B. Agarwal, Senior Advocate, (M/s P. K. Chatterjee and R. B. Datar, Advocates, with him), for Respondent.

The Judgment of the Court was delivered by

BACHAWAT, J.—This appeal arises out of Title Suit No. 12/9 of the 1946 instituted in the Court of the First Additional Subordinate Judge, Darbhanga. The plaintiff claimed declaration of their title and possession in respect of 70 bighas of land in plot No. 1083 in village Siripur Majraha. They obtained settlements of the lands from the deity Shri Radhakrishnan Jee Baldeojee. The deity was the 18th owner proprietor of village Siripur Majraha Pergana Jankahalpur, Tauzi No. 27/94. The river Karey flows between this village and the villages of Kazi Dumra and Shankarpur. The contesting defendants were the landlords and tenants of villages Kazi Dumra and Shankarpur. The deity was defendant No. 18 and was represented by one Tantreshwar Singh. The plaintiffs claimed that in consequence of the changes in the Channel of the river Karey the lands in suit were lost to villages Kazi Dumra and Shankarpur by diluvion and were annexed to plot No. 1083 in village Siripur Majraha by gradual increment and accretion. The Trial Court dismissed the suit. It held that (1) the suit lands did not accrete to plots Nos. 1083 and 1089 in village Siripur Majraha due to slow, gradual and imperceptible changes in the channel of the river Karey, (2) there was no custom in the village by which the disputed lands became the property of the owner of plots, (3) the deity Radha Krishanji Baldeoiji or the owner of village Siripur Majraha did not obtain possession of the lands in the manner alleged in the plaint, (4) the lands originally belonged to the proprietors of villages Kazi Dumra and Shankarpur and continued to be their property and (5) the plaintiffs failed to prove their title and possession in respect of the suit lands within 12 years before the date of the institution of the suit. The plaintiffs filed F. A. No. 291 of 1951 in the High Court of Patna against the decree passed by the Trial Court. The deity Shri Radha Krishanji Baldeoiji, the original defendant No. 18 was impleaded as respondent No. 23 in the appeal. By an order dated January 24, 1952 the High Court appointed the Deputy Registrar as the guardian of the deity. On February 18, 1952 the High Court passed the following order:—

“Two weeks further time is allowed to deposit D. R. guardian's cost for respondent No. 23 (deity) failing which this appeal shall stand dismissed against him without further reference to a Bench.”

This peremptory order was not complied with and on the expiry of the two weeks the appeal stood dismissed against the deity. At the hearing of the appeal the contesting defendants urged that the entire appeal became incompetent in view of the dismissal of the appeal against the deity. The High Court accepted this contention and dismissed the appeal in its entirety. The High Court held that there was a clear issue between defendant No. 18 and the contesting defendants as to whether the lands formed part of the village Siripur Majraha, that the issue stood concluded against defendant No. 18 by the decree of the Trial Court, that the appeal had abated against defendant No. 18 and that as success in the appeal might lead to conflicting and inconsistent decrees, the appeal against all the defendants became incompetent. The present appeal has been filed by the plaintiffs after obtaining a certificate from the High Court.

2. Clearly, the High Court was in error in holding that the appeal had abated either wholly or in part. None of the parties to the appeal had died and there was no question of the abatement of the appeal. Mr. C. B. Agarwala relying on the case of Munni Bibi v. Trilokinath, 58 Ind App 158 = (AIR 1931 PC 114) submitted that the decision of the Trial Court on the question whether the suit lands appertained to village Siripur Majraha operated as res judicata between the deity and the contesting co-defendants, that the appellate court could not record an inconsistent finding that the suit lands appertained to village Siripur Majraha, and that in the circumstances, the entire appeal before the High Court became incompetent. We are unable to accept these contentions.

3. The plaintiffs claiming as tenants of the deity sued the contesting defendants for declaration of their title and possession in respect of the suit lands on the allegation that the lands appertained to village Siripur Majraha of which the deity was the proprietor. The deity was not a necessary party to the suit. It was joined as a defendant, but no relief was claimed against it. The suit was dismissed on the finding that the suit lands did not appertain to village Siripur Majraha. The plaintiffs filed an appeal against the decree impleading the deity as one of the respondents. The appeal was dismissed against the deity for non-payment of costs of its guardian ad litem. The deity was not a necessary party to the appeal. The plaintiffs were entitled to prosecute their appeal against the contesting defendants in the absence of the deity.

4. As soon as the appeal was filed by the plaintiffs in the High Court the decision of the Trial Court lost its character of finality and the question whether the suit lands appertained to village Siripur Majraha became once again res sub judice. The case of 58 Ind App 158 = (AIR 1931 PC 114) (supra) shows that a decision operates as res judicata between co-defendants if (1) there is a conflict of interest between them; (2) it is necessary to decide that conflict in order to give the plaintiffs the reliefs which they claim and (3) the question between the co-defendants is finally decided. In the present case, the third condition was not satisfied. The question whether the suit lands appertain to Siripur Majraha was not finally decided between the deity and the co-defendants. On the filing of the appeal by plaintiffs, the question became once more the subject of judicial inquiry between the deity and the contesting defendants.

5. Before the appeal was finally heard and decided, it was dismissed as against the deity for non-payment of its guardian's costs. The Appellate Court did not give any decision on the merits of the case in the presence of the deity. There is no final decision against the deity on the question of the title to the suit lands. The decision of the Appellate Court against the contesting defendants will not lead to conflicting and inconsistent decree. The High Court was in error in holding that the appeal against the contesting defendants became incompetent.

6. In the circumstances the High Court ought to have decided the appeal before it on the merits. Counsel for the parties agreed that the decision of the present appeal on the merits would abide by the decision in C. A. No. 140 of 1966 arising out of T. S. No. 29/11 of 1946. That suit and T. S. No. 12/9 of 1946 out of which the present appeal arises were heard together by the Trial Court and disposed of by a common judgment. In C. A. No.

140 of 1968 we have held that the disputed lands appertained originally to village Kazi Dumra and Shankarpur, that due to the recession of the river Karey the lands re-formed in situ and that the property in the lands continued to remain with the proprietors of the lands in villages Kazi Dumra and Shankarpur. The plaintiffs failed to prove that the deity Shri Radha Krishnaji Baldeoji came into possession of the disputed land as alleged in the plaint. There was no issue on the question whether the deity had acquired title to the suit lands by adverse possession. The plea for the acquisition of title by adverse possession cannot be raised for the first time at the appellate stage. The plaintiffs failed to establish acquisition of the title of the deity to any portion of the suit lands by adverse possession. It follows that there was no merit in F. A. No. 235 of 1951. Although the High Court did not decide this appeal on the merits, it is not necessary to remand the matter to the High Court. Having regard to our findings in C. A. No. 140 of 1968, T. S. No. 12/9 of 1946 also must be dismissed.

7. In the result, the appeal is dismissed. There will be no order as to costs.

Appeal dismissed.

AIR 1970 SUPREME COURT 812

(V 57 C 173)

(From: Delhi)

J. C. SHAH AND K. S. HEGDE, JJ.

Sangat Singh, Appellant v. Ch. Perma Nand Bahl and others, Respondents.

Civil Appeal No. 1850 of 1966, D/- 28-11-1969.

Houses and Rents — Delhi Rent Control Act (59 of 1958), Section 3 (a) and Section 3 Proviso — Auction of evacuee property — Acceptance of bid — Attornment by tenant to purchaser — Suit for ejectment of tenant — No evidence led to indicate that title did not pass to purchaser — Proviso to Section 3 and not Section 3 (a) is attracted — Civil Court is barred from entertaining suit — Decision of Delhi High Court Reversed — Civil P. C. (1908), Section 9.

Certain building which was originally evacuee property was put to auction. Bid of an auction purchaser was accepted but no certificate was immediately issued. The Managing Officer gave provisional possession to the purchaser with direction to the tenant occupying the building to at-torn to him. Purchaser realised the rent accordingly. He filed a suit for ejectment of the tenant in Civil Court. He did not discharge the burden which lay upon him to prove that he had not paid consideration till filing of the suit and that title was not conveyed to him by the Government.

Held, the Civil Court was barred from entertaining the suit. In absence of proof that the property did belong to Government at the time of filing the suit, the case did not fall under Section 3 (a). Proviso to Section 3 was attracted as the direction by the Managing Officer to the tenant to attorn to the purchaser and actual realisation of rent by him constituted letting within meaning of the Proviso. "Letting" within meaning of the Proviso is not restricted only to the voluntary act on the part of the landlord allowing the former tenant to continue in possession. AIR 1965 SC 1994 and 1969 Ren CR 494, Foll. (Paras 4, 5)

Cases Referred: Chronological Paras (1969) Civil Appeals Nos. 548 of 1966 and 331 to 334 of 1967, D/- 25-4-1969 = 1969 Ren CR 494, Shiv Nath v. Shri Mela Ram 4, 5 (1965) AIR 1965 SC 1994 (V 52) = (1965) 2 SCJ 873, Bishan Paul v. Mothu Ram 4

The following Judgment of the Court was delivered by

SHAH, J.—For many years before 1955 the appellant was a tenant of the Government in respect of a part of a building which was originally evacuee property. The property was treated as part of the compensation pool and was put up for auction on December 7, 1955. A bid offered by respondents 1, 2 and 3 in this appeal was accepted by the Government, but no certificate was immediately issued. The Managing Officer addressed a letter to respondents 1, 2 and 3 on December 8, 1956 informing them that "provisional possession" was "decided to be given of the property subject to terms and conditions stipulated in the Indemnity Bond and the special affidavit executed by them." One of the conditions was that the respondents were entitled to realise rent from the tenants who were directed to attorn to respondents 1-3 with effect from December, 1956. Pursuant to this direction the respondents collected the rent from the appellant from and after December 4, 1956.

2. The Delhi Rent Control Act (59 of 1958) was brought into force with effect from some time in the year 1958. The first respondent served on the 21st February 1964 a notice on the appellant determining the tenancy and requiring the appellant to deliver possession of the premises in his occupation. He thereafter instituted on August 7, 1964 a suit in the Civil Court at Delhi for an order in ejectment. The suit was resisted by the appellant contending inter alia that under the provisions of Delhi Rent Control Act, 1958 the suit was not maintainable in the Civil Court and that in any event the notice served upon the appellant did not operate to terminate the tenancy. These contentions were rejected by the Trial Court and a decree in ejectment was passed. The decree was confirmed in appeal to the District Court and in Second Appeal to the High Court. By special leave the appellant has appealed to this Court.

3. The principal question which falls to be determined in this appeal is whether the Civil Court had jurisdiction to entertain the suit. The facts may be recalled. The appellant was originally a tenant of the Government; the property was put up for sale by an auction on December 7, 1955 and the bid of the respondents was accepted; till the institution of the suit no certificate of sale or any deed conveying title to the property was executed in favour of the respondents by the Government. Under the Delhi Rent Control Act jurisdiction to entertain a proceeding in ejectment on the ground of termination of tenancy is maintainable not in the Civil Court but before the Rent Controller. But by Section 3 of the Act it is provided

"Nothing in this Act shall apply—

(a) to any premises belonging to the Government; or

(b) to any tenancy or other like relationship created by a grant from the Government in respect of the premises taken on lease, or requisitioned by the Government;

Provided that where any premises belonging to Government have been or are lawfully let by any person by virtue of an agreement with the Government or otherwise, then, notwithstanding any judgment, decree or order of any Court or other authority, the provisions of this Act shall apply to such tenancy."

4. The respondents contended that the Civil Court had jurisdiction because the premises belonged to the Government. The appellant contended that the premises at the date of the institution of the suit did not belong to the Government and that in any event they were let to him by the respondents "by virtue of an agreement with the Government or otherwise" within the meaning of the proviso. This Court has held that where evacuee property is put up for sale at an auction and the bid is accepted by the Government and price is received by the Government even in the absence of a sale deed executed or a certificate, the purchaser would be deemed to be an owner and not the Government. See the judgment of this Court in Bishan Paul v. Mothu Ram, AIR 1965 SC 1994 and Civil Appeals Nos. 546 of 1966 and 331 to 334 of 1967, Shiv Nath v. Shri Mela Ram, D/- 25-4-1969 (SC). But Mr. Misra contended that those cases have no application here for there is no evidence on the record that the price stipulated to be paid was in fact paid by the respondents before the suit was instituted. The question whether the consideration has been paid by the respondents to the Government is one of fact within the special knowledge of the respondents. They have not stated in the plaint nor have they attempted to prove that they have not paid the consideration which was agreed to be paid by them. Our attention was invited to some documents which were not before the trial Court nor before the District Court nor the High Court but were sought to be produced in this Court in support of the plea that the price could not have been paid by the respondents before the suit. We have declined to consider those documents as part of the record. If it was the case of the respondents that the property did belong to the Government and the title was not conveyed to them, it was for them to allege and prove that case. The case therefore does not fall under the terms of Section 3 (a) of the Delhi Rent Control Act.

5. In any event the case is clearly governed by the proviso to Section 3. This Court has in interpreting the proviso to Section 3 observed in Civil Appeal No. 546 of 1966 (SC) and the companion appeals.

"Even if it were assumed that the premises belonged to Government it would have to be held in the circumstances of the case, that it was lawfully let by the respondent to the appellants inasmuch as the Managing Officer's giving "provisional possession of the property to the respondent" would really mean delivering symbolical possession of the property to him with the result that a direction on the appellants to pay rent to him would in effect amount to a direction to attorn to him. We are not impressed by the argument that 'letting' within the meaning of the proviso can only apply to a voluntary act on the part of the landlord allowing the former tenant to continue in possession. Acting in pursuance of the direction of the managing officer after the property had been auctioned to the respondent would in law amount to a letting by the respondent to the persons who were tenants under the custodian before."

The facts which gave rise to Shiv Nath's case, Civil Appeals Nos. 548 of 1960 and 331 to 334 of 1967, D/- 25-4-1969 (SC) appear to be identical with the facts of the present case. The provisional possession had been given by the Managing Officer authorising the respondents to recover the rent and the tenants were directed to attorn to them. There is no dispute that the appellant did attorn to the respondents and according to the decision of this Court in Shiv Nath's case, Civil Appeals Nos. 548 of 1960 and 331 to 334 of 1967, D/- 25-4-1969 (SC), a direction of the Managing Officer after an auction sale, to the tenant to attorn to the purchaser and receipt of the rent by the purchaser constitute letting within the meaning of the proviso to Section 3. In either view of the case the suit was not maintainable in the Civil Court.

6. The appeal is therefore allowed and the plaintiff's suit is dismissed with costs throughout.

Appeal allowed.

AIR 1970 SUPREME COURT 814
(V 57 C 174)

J. C. SHAH AND K. S. HEGDE, JJ.

Sudhir Kumar Saha, Petitioner v. Commissioner of Police, Calcutta, and another, Respondents.

Writ Petn. No. 378 of 1969, D/- 18-12-1969.

Public Safety — Preventive Detention Act (1950), Section 3 (1) (a) (ii) — Detention under — Grounds for — Incidents mentioned in, not amounting to anything more than commission of certain breaches of law — They can be said prejudicial to "law and order" and not prejudicial to maintenance of "public order" or subversive of "public order" — Detention is illegal.

Where allegations made against a person detained under Section 3 (1) (a) (ii) do not amount to anything more than that he committed certain breaches of law and the stray incidents mentioned in the grounds which are not inter-linked are such which could not have prejudiced the maintenance of 'public order' nor can they be said to be subversive of 'public order' but were at best prejudicial to 'law and order' then the detention will be illegal. (Paras 7, 8)

Maintenance of "law and order" is a conception much wider than the conception of maintenance of 'public order'. The latter is the prevention of a disorder of grave nature. Every act that affects 'law and order' need not affect 'public order'. 'Public order' is the even tempo of the life of the community taking the country as a whole or even a specified locality. Disturbance of public order is to be distinguished from acts directed against individuals which do not disturb the society to the extent of causing a general disturbance of public tranquillity. It is the degree of disturbance and its effect upon the life of the community in a locality which determines whether the disturbance amounts only to a breach of 'law and order'. AIR 1960 SC 740, (1970) 1 SCWR 94, Relied on. (Para 7)

Cases Referred: Chronological Paras (1969) Writ Petn. No. 287 of 1969,

D/- 2-12-1969 = (1970) 1 SCWR 94, Arun Ghosh v. State of West Bengal

(1966) AIR 1966 SC 740 (V 53) = (1966) 1 SCR 709 = 1066 Cri LJ 608, Dr. Ram Manohar Lohia v. State of Bihar

D. P. Singh, Advocate, Amicus curiae for Appellant; C. S. Chatterjee, Advocate for Mr. Sukumar Basu, Advocate, for Respondent.

The following Judgment of the Court was delivered by HEGDE, J.—In this petition under Article 32 of the Constitution submitted from Jail, the petitioner seeks a writ of Habeas Corpus directing his release from detention. We have already directed the release of the petitioner on 15-12-1969. Now we proceed to give our reasons in support of that order.

2. The petitioner was ordered to be detained by the Commissioner of Police, Calcutta under Section 3 (2) of the Preventive Detention Act, 1950 (Act IV of 1950) by his order dated July 15, 1969. It is stated in that order that the petitioner was ordered to be detained with a view to preventing him from acting in any manner prejudicial to the maintenance of "public order". That order was confirmed by the State Government after the same was approved by the Advisory Board.

3. From the grounds served on the petitioner, it appears that his detention was ordered because of the three instances mentioned therein. It is said therein that on 28-2-1968 between 9-50 p. m. and 10-30 p. m. the petitioner armed with a knife along with some others also armed, created disturbance on the Northern Avenue in the course of which he attacked the local people with knife as a result of which one Ajit Kumar Biswas sustained stab injuries. It is further alleged that during that incident, the petitioner and his associates hurled sodawater bottles and brickbats towards the local people endangering their lives and safety and thereby they created fear and frightfulness amongst the people of the locality and thus affected public peace and tranquillity of the locality.

4. The second incident mentioned therein is that on 29-10-1968 at about 9-10 p. m. the petitioner being armed with bombs and accompanied by some others created disturbance on Raja Manindra Road, in the course of which he and his associates hurled bombs, used swords, iron rods and lathis against the local people endangering their lives and safety and thereby they created fear and frightfulness in the locality resulting in the disturbance of public peace and tranquillity of that locality.

5. The last incident mentioned is that on 28-6-1969 at about 11-15 p. m., the petitioner and his associates armed with bombs created disturbance on Raja Manindra Road in the course of which they indiscriminately hurled bombs towards the local people endangering their lives and safety and thereby they affected public peace and tranquillity of that locality.

6. From the record it does not appear that the petitioner was prosecuted for any of the offences mentioned earlier. It is not known why he was not prosecuted. In the ordinary course, if there is truth in the allegations made, he should have been prosecuted and given an opportunity to defend himself. The allegations made against the petitioner do not amount to anything more than that he committed certain breaches of law.

7. The freedom of the individual is of utmost importance in any civilized society. It is a human right. Under our Constitution it is a guaranteed right. It can be deprived of only by due process of law.

The power to detain is an exceptional power to be used under exceptional circumstances. It is wrong to consider the same, as the executive appears to have done in the present case, that it is a convenient substitute for the ordinary process of law. The detention of the petitioner under the circumstances of this case appears to be a gross misuse of the power, conferred under the Preventive Detention Act.

8. The three incidents mentioned in the grounds are stray incidents spread over a period of one year and four months. These incidents cannot be said to be inter-linked. They could not have prejudiced the maintenance of 'public order' nor can they be held to be subversive of 'public order'. They were at best prejudicial to 'law and order'. The distinction between the maintenance of 'public order' and maintenance of 'law and order' was brought out by this Court in Dr. Ram Manohar Lohia v. State of Bihar, (1966) 1 SCR 709= (AIR 1966 SC 740). Therein this Court pointed out that maintenance of "law and order" is a conception much wider than the conception of maintenance of 'public order'. The latter is the prevention of a disorder of grave nature. Every act that affects "law and order" need not affect 'public order'. If it is otherwise every one who disturbs "law and order", however petty the offence committed by him may be, can be detained under the Preventive Detention Act. This would be a total repudiation of the rule of law and an affront to our Constitution. The legal position relating to the point in issue was again recently considered by this Court in Arun Ghosh v. State of West Bengal, Writ Petn. No. 287 of 1969, D/- 2-12-1969. Therein it was observed that 'public order' is the even tempo of the life of the community taking the country as a whole or even a specified locality. Disturbance of "public order" is to be distinguished from acts directed against individuals which do not disturb the society to the extent of causing a general disturbance of public tranquillity. It is the degree of disturbance and its effect upon the life of the community in a locality which determines whether the disturbance amounts only to a breach of "law and order".

9. We are of the opinion that the grounds stated in support of the detention cannot amount to a disturbance of the maintenance of 'public order'.

Petition allowed.

AIR 1970 SUPREME COURT 818
(V 57 C 175)

(From Mysore: (1966) 1 Mys. L. J. 494)

J. C. SHAH, V. RAMASWAMI,
AND A. N. GROVER, JJ.

K. Brahma Suraiah and another, Appellants v. Laxminarayana, Respondent.

Criminal Appeal No. 183 of 1966, D/- 26-11-1968.

Panchayats — Mysore Village Panchayats and Local Boards Act (10 of 1959), Section 220 — Commission of an offence under — Private complaint is not maintainable in view of Rule 16 of Mysore Panchayat Secretaries' Powers and Duties Rules, 1961: 1966 (1) Mys LJ 494, Reversed.

A private complaint cannot be entertained for the commission of an offence under Section 220 of the Mysore Village Panchayats and Local Boards Act, 1959. A complaint can be filed under R. 16 of Mysore Panchayat Secretaries Powers and Duties Rules, 1961, only by the secretary of the Panchayat and by no one else.

(Para 2)

The Secretary has to act on behalf of the Panchayat and it is the panchayat that would be vitally interested in preventing and stopping any contravention of provisions like Section 220 of the Act. The question of his subordination to any of its office-bearers is of no consequence. 1966 (1) Mys LJ 494 Reversed, AIR 1968 SC 1339, Followed.

(Para 4)

It is true that under Section 236 of the Act any police officer may arrest any person committing in his presence any offence against any of the provisions of the Act or of any rule, regulation or by law made thereunder. But it is incorrect to say that all offences committed under the various provisions contained in the Act would be cognizable owing to the general powers conferred on police officers by Section 236. Indeed that section gives only a limited power to the police officer to effect arrest if an offence is committed in his presence. There are certain sections in Chapter II of the Act which by express words make offences committed under them cognizable but in the same chapter there are other sections which do not contain any such provision; for instance, Sections 15, 17, 21 and 22 expressly provide that the offences committed under them would be cognizable but Sections 18, 19 and 20 do not contain any such provision. In other words the offences committed under them must be deemed to be not cognizable.

(Para 8)

The other provisions also of the Act, namely, Sections 214 to 219 indicate that it was never contemplated that a complaint for infringement or contravention of the prohibition contained therein could be lodged before a magistrate having jurisdiction under Section 233 by any private individual in the presence of a specific rule that the secretary shall have the power to file a complaint on behalf of the Panchayat.

(Para 2)

Cases Referred: Chronological Paras

(1968) AIR 1968 SC 1339 (V 55) =

Cri App No. 145 of 1965, D/-

18-4-1968 = 1968 Cri LJ 1510,

K. M. Kanavi v. Stato of Mysore 2, 4

(1958) AIR 1958 Andh Pra 392

(V 45) = 1958 Cri LJ 737, Public

Prosecutor v. A. V. Ramiah 8

Mr. R. B. Datar, Advocate, for Appellants.

The following Judgment of the Court was delivered by

GROVER, J. — This is an appeal by special leave from a judgment of the Mysore High Court in which the only point involved is whether a private complaint could be entertained for the commission of an offence under Section 220 of the Mysore Village Panchayats & Local Boards Act, 1959, hereinafter called the "Act". The appellants who were the Vice-Chairman and the Chairman of the Keladi village panchayat were convicted under the aforesaid section and sentenced to pay a fine of Rs. 50/- and Rs. 40/- and in default to undergo 7 days and 5 days' simple imprisonment respectively.

2. A private complaint was filed against the appellants alleging that they gave bids at an auction held at the village panchayat and appellant No. 1 purchased a radio belonging to the panchayat for Rs. 35/-. Appellant No. 2 also bid at the same auction for the radio. According to Section 220 of the Act no member or an employee of a panchayat shall directly or indirectly bid for or acquire interest in any movable or immovable property sold at such sale in connection therewith. If any person contravenes this provision he is to be punished, on conviction, with a fine which may extend to Rs. 500/-. Under Rule 16 of the Mysore Panchayat Secretaries' Powers and Duties Rules, 1961 promulgated under the provisions of the Act, only the Secretary of the Panchayat has the power to file a complaint on behalf of the Panchayat. The High Court was of the view that this Rule did not preclude persons other than the Secretary from filing a complaint but it only debarred complaints being made by others on behalf of the Panchayat. Now Rule 16 may be reproduced.

"The Secretary shall have power to file complaints and suits on behalf of the Panchayat and to conduct the proceedings on its behalf under the orders of the Panchayat."

In K. M. Kanavi v. The State of Mysore, Cri. App. No. 145 of 1965, D/- 18-4-1968 = (AIR 1968 SC 1339) the appellant Kanavi, who was the President of Municipal Borough of Gadag Betgeri had been removed from Presidentship. He refused to hand over the charge of all the papers and property which were in his possession relating to the Borough to the new President in spite of an order made by the Government under Sec. 23A of the Bombay Municipal Boroughs Act, 1925, hereinafter called the "Bombay Act" to that effect. Pursuant to orders made by the Divisional Commissioner and the Deputy Commissioner the new President filed a complaint against Kanavi for an offence punishable under Section 23A (3) of the Bombay Act. The appellant was convicted and sentenced to pay a fine of Rs. 50/-. A question arose whether the complaint filed by the new President was competent as it was not filed in accordance with the procedure laid down in that Act. Section 200 of the Bombay Act provided that the Standing Committee, and subject to the provisions of sub-section (3), the Chief Officer may order proceedings to be taken for the recovery of any penalties and for the punishment of any persons offending against the provisions of the aforesaid Act. This Court was of the opinion that the complaint which had been filed by the new President was for initiating the proceedings for the punishment of Kanavi who had offended against the provisions of sub-section (2) of Section 23A and as the new President was not the Chief Officer and he had not filed the complaint under any direction made by the Standing Committee the complaint could not be entertained. In that case also the High Court had taken the view that Section 200 (1) was only an enabling section which gave the power to the Standing Committee and the Chief Officer to make a direction for taking of proceedings and it could not be held to be exhaustive of the authorities who could make directions for initiation of proceedings. The High Court had taken notice of the fact that there was no provision in that Act forbidding cognizance of offences being taken except on a complaint made under a direction of the Standing Committee or the Chief Officer. This is what was observed by this Court:—

"We are unable to accept the interpretation put by the High Court on S. 200 (1) of the Act. It is true that there is no specific provision in the Act laying down that cognizance of an offence under the Act is not to be taken except on a complaint filed in accordance with a direction made under Section 200 (1), but the scheme of the Act and the purpose of this provision in Section 200 (1) makes it clear that the legislature intended that such proceedings should only be instituted in the manner laid down in that sub-section. The word "may" was used only because the legislature could not have enacted a mandatory provision requiring the Standing Committee or the Chief Officer to make a direction for institution of proceedings in all cases. This word was intended to give a discretion to the Standing Committee or the Chief Officer to make directions for taking proceedings only when they considered it appropriate that such a direction should be made and to avoid compelling the Standing Committee or the Chief Officer to make such directions in all cases. The use of this word "may" cannot be interpreted as laying down that if a proceeding for punishment of any person for contravention of any of the provisions of the Act is to be instituted, it can be instituted in any manner without complying with the requirements of Section 200 (1) of the Act. If the interpretation put by the High Court on this provision is accepted, it would mean that this provision was totally unnecessary, because there would be no need to confer power on the Standing Committee or the Chief Officer to make such directions if such directions could be made or proceedings instituted at the instance of any private individual. We cannot accept the submission that this provision was made in the Act simply by way of abundant caution. In fact, if the provision had been made with such an object in view, there is no reason why the power should have been expressed to be conferred on the Standing Committee and the Chief Officer only and not on the President of the Municipality. We, consequently, hold that, if any proceeding for punishment of any person for contravention of any of the provisions of the Act is to be instituted, it must be instituted in the manner laid down in Section 200 (1) of the Act and in that manner only." It may be mentioned that the expression of the above opinion was based on a consideration of the previous decisions of this Court. Following the ratio of the above decision it would be legitimate to hold that the complaint, in the present case, could be filed under Rule 16 only by the Secretary of the Panchayat and by no one else. It may be pointed out that in the Act Sec. 213 (3) is analogous to Section 23A (3) of the Bombay Act. On a parity of reasoning it could not be suggested that if there had been any contravention of Section 213 (3) any voter or member of the public could have filed a complaint in the matter. The other provisions also of the Act which follow, namely, Sections 214 to 219 indicate that it was never contemplated that a complaint for infringement or contravention of the prohibition contained therein could be lodged before a magistrate having jurisdiction under Section 233 by any private individual in the presence of a specific rule that the Secretary shall have the power to file a complaint on behalf of the Panchayat. Most of these sections i.e., Sections 217 and 218 postulate infractions of orders of the Panchayat for which the Panchayat alone would be interested in filing a complaint. We are satisfied that the scheme of the Act also supports the view which we are taking that a complaint could be filed only under Rule 16 of Mysore Panchayat Secretaries' Powers and Duties Rules 1961 and could not have been filed by a private complainant.

3. The High Court seems to have relied on Section 236 of the Act which deals with powers of police officers. This section provides that any police officer may arrest any person committing in his presence any offence against any of the provisions of the Act or of any rule, regulation or bye-law made thereunder. The person arrested has to be produced before the nearest magistrate within a period of 24 hours of arrest. The police officer effecting the arrest must give immediate information to the Chairman or the Secretary of the Panchayat of the commission of such offence and give all assistance in the exercise of his lawful authority. The High Court was of the view that under the provision of this section the police officer could submit a charge-sheet under Section 173 of the Criminal Procedure Code after necessary investigation for offences committed under the Act. Chapter II of the Act relates to establishment and constitution of Panchayats. There are certain sections in it which by express words make offences committed under them cognizable but in the same Chapter there are other sections which do not contain any such provision; for instance, Sections 15, 17, 21 and 22 expressly provide that the offences committed under them would be cognizable but Sections 16, 18, 19 and 20 do not contain any such provision. In other words the offences committed under them must be deemed to be not cognizable. Section 23 in the same Chapter says that no Court shall take cognizance of an offence punishable under Section 16 or Section 17 or under Section 19 (2) (a) unless there is a complaint made by an order of or under authority from the Deputy Commissioner. The High Court was, therefore, not right in saying that all offences committed under the various provisions contained in the Act would be cognizable owing to the general powers conferred on police officers by Section 236. Indeed that section gives only a limited power to the police officer to effect arrest if an offence is committed in his presence. There is authority for the view that this will make an offence cognizable within the meaning of Section 4 (f) of the Criminal Procedure Code; vide Public Prosecutor v. A. V. Ramiah, AIR 1958 Andh Pra 392. In the absence of any express provision in Section 220 with which we are concerned we doubt whether, that the offence committed under it would be cognizable and a police officer could carry on investigation in respect of it under Chapter XIV of the Criminal Procedure Code and finally submit a charge-sheet under Section 173 of that Code.

4. It may also be pointed out that in the present case we are not concerned with the powers which a police officer can exercise in respect of an offence committed under Section 220 of the Act. What has to be seen is whether a private person or an individual could file a complaint. In the presence of Rule 16 and for the reasons given in Cri. App. No. 145 of 1965, D/- 18-4-1968 = (AIR 1968 SC 1339) we are of the opinion that it was the Secretary of the Panchayat who alone was competent to file the complaint. It must be remembered that it would be the panchayat that would be largely interested in taking action against any of its members and employees for the contravention of Section 220. The Secretary would, therefore, be entitled to file a complaint on behalf of the panchayat. The difficulty felt by the High Court that a Secretary who is subordinate to the Chairman may find it embarrassing to file a complaint against him can hardly be accepted as serious hurdle in the way of coming to the conclusion at which we have arrived. The Secretary has to act on behalf of the Panchayat and it is the panchayat that would be vitally interested in preventing and stopping any contravention of provisions like Section 220 of the Act. The Secretary acts on behalf of the panchayat and the question of his subordination to any of its office bearers is of no consequence.

5. In the view we have taken the appeal is allowed and the conviction and sentence imposed on each of the appellants is set aside.

Appeal allowed.

AIR 1970 SUPREME COURT 819
(V 57 C 176)

S. M. SIKRI, J. M. SHELAT, V.
BHARGAVA, G. K. MITTER AND
C. A. VAIDIALINGAM, JJ.

Hari Vishnu Kamath, Petitioner v.
Gopal Swarup Pathak, Respondent.

Election Petn. No. 6 of 1969, D/- 18-12-1969.

Presidential and Vice-Presidential Elections Act (1952), Secs. 5, 21, Rules under Presidential and Vice-Presidential Elections Rules, 1952, Rules 4, 5 and 6 — Nomination papers must be presented in person either by the candidate or proposer or the seconder — Presentation by post is not a proper presentation.

Rule 4 of the Presidential and Vice-Presidential Elections Rules provides only one delivery either in person by the candidate or by his proposer or seconder. It can be delivered only between the hours of eleven in the forenoon and three in the afternoon. A nomination paper sent by post cannot be said to be validly presented. (Para 11)

Rule 5 proceeds on the basis that the presentation of a nomination paper must be in person because it requires the returning officer to sign thereon a certificate stating the date and time of the presentation of the same and to inform the person, the date, time and place fixed for scrutiny. This is again evident from Rule 6 which directs the Returning Officer inter alia to give the candidates and other authorised persons present reasonable facilities for examining the nomination papers of all candidates which have been delivered within the time and in the manner laid down in Rule 4. (Para 13)

Mr. Sarjoo Prasad, Senior Advocate (M/s. P. Parameswara Rao and K. C. Dua, Advocate with him), for Petitioner; M/s. M. C. Setalvad, N. A. Palkhivala and M. C. Chagla, Senior Advocates (M/s. J. B. Dadachanji, Ravinder Narain and O. C. Mathur, Advocates of M/s. J. B. Dadachanji and Co. with them), for Election Commission of India and Attorney General for India; Mr. Jagadish Swarup, Solicitor-General of India and Dr. L. M. Singhvi, Senior Advocate, (Mr. S. P. Nayar Advocate, with them), for Respondent.

The Judgment of the Court was delivered by

SIKRI, J.: This is a petition under Article 71 of the Constitution and Section 14 of the Presidential and Vice-Presidential Elections Act (XXXI of 1952)—hereinafter referred to as the Act—praying for a declaration that the election of Shri Gopal Swarup Pathak, respondent, to the office of the Vice-President of India is void.

2. The main ground on which this declaration is sought is that the nomination paper of Dr. Ram Sharan Dass Sakhuja was wrongly rejected by the Returning Officer on August 6, 1969. The respondent apart from meeting this ground has raised a number of other issues including the issue whether the nomination paper of Dr. Ram Sharan Dass Sakhuja was genuine, and if not, whether the petition is maintainable. The learned counsel for the respondent strongly pressed on us that we should first try this issue suggested by him but as we have come to the conclusion that the petition must fail on the ground that the nomination paper of Dr. Ram Sharan Dass Sakhuja was rightly rejected on August 6, 1969, it is not necessary to consider the other issues that arise out of the pleadings of the parties.

3. The two issues suggested by the petitioner which we propose to discuss are:

1. Whether the nomination of Dr. Ram Sharan Dass Sakhuja has been wrongly rejected on the ground that the nomination paper was not delivered in person;

2. Whether the Returning Officer had power to reject the nomination even before the date of scrutiny.

4. The relevant facts for determining these issues may now be set out. On 19th or 20th July, 1969, the office of the Vice-President of India fell vacant on the resignation of the then incumbent, Shri V. V. Giri. The Election Commission appointed Shri B. N. Banerjee Secretary, Rajya Sabha, as returning officer for the election of the Vice-President of India. The Election Commission issued a notification under Section 4 appointing August 9, 1969, as the last date for filing nomination for election to the office of the Vice-President of India and August 11, 1969, for scrutiny of nomination papers. A number of candidates filed nomination papers and on August 11, 1969, the Returning Officer made a record of proceedings. The relevant part of the proceedings reads as follows:

"I held the scrutiny of nomination papers for the Vice-Presidential Election today, the 11th August, 1969, at 11 a. m. in my office (Room No. 29) in Parliament House, New Delhi; 24 nomination papers were delivered to me within the time and in the manner laid down in Rule 4 of the Presidential and Vice-Presidential Elections Rules, 1952. These nomination papers related to:—

- | | |
|--|-------------------------------|
| 1. Shri S. Nagappa | (One nomination paper) |
| 2. Shri G. S. Pathak | (Seventeen nomination papers) |
| 3. Shri Sivashanmugam (Jagannathan Pillai) | (Two nomination papers) |
| 4. Smt. Manohara Nirmala Holkar | (One nomination paper) |
| 5. Shri B. P. Mahaseth | (One nomination paper) |
| 6. Shri Hari Vishnu Kamath | (Two nomination papers) |

.....

3. I gave the candidates and the others present all facilities for examining the nomination papers of all the candidates delivered to me. The nomination papers were examined by them. No objection was raised to any nomination papers by any candidate or his representative. I scrutinised all the nomination papers and I found that they satisfied the requirements of a valid nomination paper. I accordingly accepted all the nomination papers as valid and made endorsements on all the 24 nomination papers accepting them.

4. I also brought to the notice of those present that I had received some nomination papers, and some other papers purporting to be nomination papers, by post, and that I could not treat them as valid nomination papers as they were not delivered to me in accordance with sub-r. (1) of Rule 4 of the Presidential and Vice-Presidential Elections Rules, 1952, and that they also did not comply with the provisions of law in other respects. I further mentioned to those present that there were in addition three other papers which, though presented to me in person, did not comply with the requirements of the law as they were not accompanied by the certified extracts from the electoral roll and suffered from other defects. I had not given any serial number to any of these papers and had rejected all of them."

5. One of the nominations referred to in para 4 of the proceedings was that of Dr. Ram Sharan Dass Shakuja. It appears that the nomination papers of Dr. Shakuja alleged to be complete in every respect, were not delivered in person either by Dr. Shakuja or by the proposer or seconder in person to the Returning Officer but were received by him by post on August 6, 1969. On that very day, the Returning Officer did not treat the papers as valid as they were not delivered to him in accordance with sub-rule (1) of Rule 4 of the Presidential and Vice-Presidential Elections Rules, 1952.

6. In order to discuss the issues mentioned above it is necessary to set out the relevant statutory provisions. Under Section 4 of the Act the Election Commission by notification appoints for every election (a) the last date for making nominations, (b) the date for scrutiny of nominations, (c) the last date for the withdrawal of candidatures, and (d) the date on which poll shall, if necessary, be taken. Under Section 5 any person may be nominated as a candidate for election to the office of Vice-President if he is qualified to be elected to that office under the Constitution. Sub-section (2) of Sec. 5 prescribes that each candidate shall be nominated by a nomination paper completed in the prescribed form and subscribed by the candidate himself as assenting to the nomination and by two electors as proposer and seconder.

7. We may assume for the purpose of this case that the conditions laid down in Section 5 (2) were complied with.

8. Section 6 deals with the withdrawal of candidature and provides that any candidate may withdraw his candidature by a notice in writing in the prescribed form subscribed by him and delivered before three O'clock in the afternoon on the date fixed under Clause (c) of sub-section (1) of Section 4, to the Returning Officer either by such candidate in person or by his proposer or seconder who has been authorised in this behalf in writing by such candidate.

9. The learned counsel for the petitioner rightly conceded that if a candidate wants to withdraw his candidature the notice in writing must be delivered to the Returning Officer in person by such candidate or by his proposer or seconder who has been authorised. In other words no candidate can withdraw by sending a notice in writing by post.

10. Section 18 gives the grounds for declaring the election of a returned candidate to be void. One of the grounds is:

"If the Supreme Court is of opinion that the nomination of any candidate has been wrongly rejected or the nomination of the successful candidate or of any other candidate who has not withdrawn his candidature has been wrongly accepted, the Supreme Court shall declare the election of the returned candidate to be void." Section 21 gives powers to the Central Government to make rules and the two matters, among others, on which rules can be made are:

"(d) the form and manner in which nominations may be made and the procedure to be followed in respect of the presentation of nomination papers;

(e) the scrutiny of nominations and, in particular, the manner in which such scrutiny shall be conducted and the conditions and circumstances under which any person may be present or may enter objections thereat."

In pursuance of these powers rules were framed.

Rule 4 deals with the presentation of nomination papers and is in the following terms:

"4. (1) On or before the date appointed under Clause (a) of sub-section (1) of Section 4, each candidate shall, either in person or by his proposer or seconder, between the hours of eleven in the forenoon and three in the afternoon, deliver to the Returning Officer at the place specified in this behalf in the public notice a nomination paper completed in Form 2 in the case of a Presidential Election, and in Form 3 in the case of a Vice-Presidential election, together with a certified copy of the entry relating to the candidate in the electoral roll for the Parliamentary constituency in which he is registered.

(2) Any nomination paper which is not received before three O'clock in the afternoon on the last date appointed under clause (a) of sub-section (1) of Section 4 or to which the certified copy referred to in sub-rule (1) of this Rule is not attached shall be rejected."

Rule 5 prescribes the procedure on receipt of nomination papers as follows:

"5. On the presentation of a nomination paper, the Returning Officer shall —

- (a) sign thereon a certificate stating the date and time of presentation of the nomination paper and enter thereon its serial number;
- (b) inform the person or persons presenting the nomination paper of the date, time and place fixed for the scrutiny of nominations; and
- (c) cause to be affixed in some conspicuous place in his office a copy of the nomination paper as certified and numbered under clause (a) of this rule."

Rule 6 provides for the scrutiny of nominations and is in the following terms:

"6. (1) The candidates, one proposer and one seconder of each candidate, and one other person duly authorised in writing by such candidate, shall be entitled to be present at the time of scrutiny of nominations; and the Returning Officer shall give them all reasonable facilities for examining the nomination papers of all candidates which have been delivered within the time and in the manner laid down in Rule 4.

(2) The Returning Officer shall then examine the nomination papers and decide all objections which may be made to any of them.

(3) The Returning Officer may, either on such objection or on his own motion, and after such summary inquiry, if any, as he thinks necessary, reject a nomination paper on any of the following grounds namely:—

(a) that the candidate is not eligible for election as President or Vice-President, as the case may be, under the Constitution; or

(b) that the proposer or seconder is not qualified to subscribe a nomination paper under sub-section (2) of Section 5; or

(c) that the signature of the candidate, proposer or seconder is not genuine or has been obtained by fraud; or

(d) that the nomination paper has not been duly completed and the defect or irregularity is of a substantial character or

(e) that the proposer or seconder has subscribed, whether as proposer or seconder, another nomination paper received earlier by the Returning Officer at the same election.

(4) The Returning Officer shall hold the scrutiny on the date appointed in this behalf under Clause (b) of sub-section (1) of section 4 and shall not allow any adjournment of the proceedings except when such proceedings are interrupted or obstructed by riot or open violence or by causes beyond his control;

Provided that, in case an objection is made, the candidate concerned shall, if he so requires, be allowed time to rebut it not later than the next day but one following the date fixed for scrutiny, and the Returning Officer shall record his decision on the date on which the proceedings have been adjourned.

(5) The Returning Officer shall endorse on each nomination paper his decision either accepting or rejecting it and if the nomination paper is rejected, he shall record in writing a brief statement of his reasons for rejecting it."

11. The question whether a candidate is entitled to send his nomination papers by post to the Returning Officer may now be considered. It will be noticed that Rule 4 provides only one manner of presentation, i. e. delivery either in person by the candidate or by his proposer or seconder. Further, it mentions the time within which it can be delivered, i. e., between the hours of eleven in the forenoon and three in the afternoon. It seems to us that if the nomination paper is not presented in person either by the candidate or by the proposer or the seconder it cannot be deemed to have been presented at all. There seems to be good reason for making this rule because otherwise not only the authenticity of the person sending the nomination paper will be in doubt but also the time of the delivery of the nomination paper would be in doubt.

12. Be that as it may, if the rule provides one method of presentation that method of presentation must be followed. That this is the only method of presentation of nomination papers is borne out by subsequent provisions. Sub-rule (2) of Rule 4 provides that any nomination paper which is not received before

3 O'clock in the afternoon on the last date appointed under Cl. (a) of sub-sec. (1) of Section 4 shall be rejected. This shows that even if a nomination paper is presented personally but after 3 O'clock in the afternoon it has to be rejected. The rule proceeds on the basis that the presentation must have been either in person or by the proposer or the seconder. If a nomination paper is received by post it would be difficult to say that it has been presented and received before 3 O'clock on the last date appointed under Clause (a) of sub-section (1) of Section 4.

13. Rule 5 also proceeds on the basis that the presentation of a nomination paper must be in person because it requires the Returning Officer to sign thereon a certificate stating the date and time of presentation of the nomination paper and inform the person or persons presenting the nomination paper of the date, time and place fixed for the scrutiny of nominations. It is clear that Rule 5 contemplates only one method of presentation. This is again evident from Rule 6 which directs the Returning Officer inter alia to give the candidates and other authorised persons present reasonable facilities for examining the nomination papers of all candidates which have been delivered within the time and in the manner laid down in Rule 4. In other words, the nomination papers which have not been delivered within time and in the manner laid down in Rule 4 have not to be shown for purposes of scrutiny.

14. The learned counsel for the petitioner contends that sub-rule (2) of Rule 4 gives two grounds of rejection, one that the nomination paper is not received before 3 O'clock in the afternoon of the last date appointed under Clause (a) of sub-section (1) of Section 4, and the second that the certified copy referred to in sub-rule (1) of Rule 4 is not attached. He further says that Rule 6 gives five more grounds of rejection. He says that the ground on which the nomination paper of Dr. Ram Sharan Dass Shakuja has been rejected is not covered by either sub-rule (2) of Rule 4 or Rule 6 and accordingly the nomination paper of Dr. Ram Sharan Dass Shakuja could not have been validly rejected.

15. It seems to us that this nomination paper could be rejected on the ground that it has not been presented in person and received before 3 O'clock in the afternoon on the last date appointed under Cl. (a) of sub-r. (1) of R. 4. Such a nomination paper could not be treated to have been received within the meaning of sub-rule (2) of Rule 4 and the Returning Officer was entitled to reject it.

16. There is no force in the second submission that at any rate the Returning Officer should have waited till the date of the scrutiny because as soon as he finds that a nomination paper has not been duly represented he must reject it outright at the time it is handed over to him.

17. The learned counsel contends that even if there has been a breach of R. 4(1) the rule is not mandatory and the breach of it should not be deemed fatal. We are unable to agree with this submission. As we have mentioned before, the rules contemplate only one method of presentation and if that method is not followed the nomination papers cannot be held to be validly presented and must be rejected outright. To hold otherwise would lead to utter confusion and delay in the completion of the election. The Returning Officer would not know who and where to inform about the date of scrutiny, he would not be certain whether it is genuine and would have to take evidence as to whether it is a genuine nomination paper or a forged paper.

18. In the result the petition fails and is dismissed with costs. The petitioner will pay to the respondent Rs. 500 as total amount of costs.

Petition dismissed.

AIR 1970 SUPREME COURT 823 (V 57 C 177)

(From: Bombay at Nagpur)*

J. M. SHELAT AND V. BHARGAVA, JJ.
The Manager, M/s. Pyarchand Kesarimal Porval Bidi Factory, Appellant v.
Onkar Laxman Thenge and others, Respondents.

Civil Appeal No. 793 of 1966, D/- 27-
9-1968.

C. P. and Berar Industrial Disputes
Settlement Act (23 of 1947), Section 16
— Contract Act (1872), Section 73 —
Contract of service — Incidents of — Services of employee lent to third person
— Original employment does not cease — Third person cannot dismiss employee.

*(Spl. Civil Appln. No. 353 of 1963, D/- 21-8-1964—Bom. at Nag.)

CN/CN/E890/68/SNV/B

When an employer lends services of his employee to third person, the employee still continues to be in the employment of his employer and hence the third person cannot terminate the services of the employee. (Para 8)

A contract of service being incapable of transfer unilaterally a transfer of service from one employer to another can only be effected by a tripartite agreement between the employer, the employee and the third party, the effect of which would be to terminate the original contract of service and to make a new contract between the employee and the third party. So long as the contract of service is not terminated, a new contract is not made and the employee continues to be in the employment of the employer. When an employer orders him to do a certain work for another person, the employee still continues to be in his employment. The employee has the right to claim his wages from the employer and not from the third party. Such third party-hirer may pay his wages but that is because of his agreement with the employer. The hirer may also exercise control and direction in the doing of the thing for which he is hired or even the manner in which it is to be done. But the hirer third party cannot dismiss him. The right of dismissal vests in the employer. Spl. Civil Appln. No. 353 of 1963, D/- 21-8-1964 (Bom), Approved; AIR 1961 SC 627, Dist-
ing. (Para 8)

Cases Referred: Chronological Paras

- | | |
|--|----|
| (1961) AIR 1961 SC 627 (V 48) = | |
| 1961-2 SCR 811, Jestmani Gulabrao | |
| Dholkia v. Scindia Steam Naviga- | |
| tion Co. | 10 |
| (1955) 1955-2 QB 437 = 1955-2 | |
| All ER 561, Denham v. Midland | |
| Employees Mutual Assurance | |
| Ltd. | 7 |
| (1947) 1947 AC 1 = 115 LJKB 465, | |
| Mersey Docks and Harbour Board | |
| v. Coggins and Griffith (Liver- | |
| pool) Ltd. | 7 |
| (1942) 1942 AC 509 = 111 LJ PC | |
| 138, Century Insurance Co. Ltd. | |
| v. Northern Ireland Road Trans- | |
| port Board | 7 |
| (1940) 1940-3 All ER 549 = 109 | |
| LJ KB 865 (HL), Nokes v. Don- | |
| caster Amalgamated Collieries | |
| Ltd. | 7 |
| (1898) 2 QB 565 = 67 LJ QB 895, | |
| Jones v. Scullard | 7 |
| (1840) 6 M & W 499 = 151 ER | |
| 509, Quarman v. Burnett | 7 |

5. As to the first contention, it would not be correct to say that the High Court made out a new case for the first time for Respondent 1 which was not pleaded by him before the Assistant Commissioner. In Para 1 of his application he had expressly averred that about three years after his employment in the factory he had been ordered to work in the head office. In reply to the application the appellants conceded that though Respondent 1 was first employed in the factory and had worked there for about three years, he had thereafter been transferred to and been working as a clerk in the head office. There was, however, no averment in that reply that the contract of service of Respondent 1 with the said factory was at any time put an end to or that when he was directed to work in the head office a fresh contract of service was entered into between him and the head office. The Assistant Commissioner in his said order held that the head office and the factory were two separate establishments registered under two different Acts, and, therefore, subject to different provisions of law. He further held that since Respondent 1 was not actually working in the factory and his name did not figure in the factory's muster roll and was not paid his wages by the factory, the applicant could not be said to be an employee of the said factory. In his revision application before the Industrial Court, Respondent 1 made an express plea that when he was directed to work in the Head office, he had received no notice from the factory that his services were terminated there or that he had henceforth become the employee of the head office. It is clear from these pleadings that it was not for the first time in the High Court that Respondent 1 contended as to the incompetence of the head office to take disciplinary action against him and to pass the order of dismissal. The first contention of Mr. Phadke, therefore, cannot be accepted.

6. As regards the second and the third contentions, there is no dispute that though the head office and the said factory belong to the same proprietors, they were always treated as two distinct entities registered under two different Acts, that Respondent 1 was employed first in the factory where he worked for 2 or 3 years and was thereafter ordered to work at the head office where admittedly he worked for about six years before the impugned order terminating his services was passed. The question, therefore, which the Assistant Commissioner and the Industrial Court had to decide, in view of the pleadings of the parties, was whether Respondent 1 had ceased to be the employee of the factory and was in the employment of the head office at the time when the impugned order was passed, or whether his services were simply lent to the head office and he continued all along to be the employee of the factory?

7. The general rule in respect of relationship of master and servant is that a subsisting contract of service with one master is a bar to service with any other master unless the contract otherwise provides or the master consents. A contract of employment involving personal service is incapable of transfer. Thus, where a businessman joins a partnership firm and takes his personal staff with him into the firm, his staff cannot be made the staff of the firm without the consent of the other partners. (cf. Mersey Docks and Harbour Board v. Coggins and Griffith (Liverpool) Ltd., 1947 AC 1 at p. 17). In certain cases, however, it is possible to say that an employee has different employers, as when the employer, in pursuance of a contract between him and a third party, lends or hires out the services of his employee to that third party for a particular work. Such an arrangement, however, does not effect a transfer of the contract of service between the employer and his employee, but only amounts to a transfer of the benefit of his services. (cf. Century Insurance Co. Ltd. v. Northern Ireland Road Transport Board, 1942 AC 509.) In such cases where a third party engages another person's employee it is the general employer who is normally liable for the tortious acts committed by the employee and his liability is not affected by the existence of a contract between him and the third party under which the services of the employee are lent or hired out for a temporary period to such third party. In order to absolve the employer from the liability and to make the person who temporarily engages the employee or hires his services it is necessary to prove that the relationship of master and servant was temporarily constituted between such third party and the employee, and that it existed at the time when the tortious act was committed by the employee. There is, however, a presumption against there being such a transfer of an employee as to make the hirer or the person on whose behalf the employee is temporarily working and a heavy burden rests on the party seeking to establish that the relationship of master and servant has been constituted pro hac vice between the temporary employer and the employee; (1917 AC 1 (supra)). In cases where an employer has hired out or lent the services of his employee for a specific work and such an employee has caused damage to another person by his tortious act, the question often arises as to who of the two i.e., the employer or the person to whom such services are hired out or lent, is vicariously responsible for such damage. In cases commonly known as cranes and carriage cases, courts in England evolve the rule of the employee being temporarily the employee of such third party to impose the responsibility on him if it was established that in the matter of the act, in the performance of which the tortious act was committed such third party had exercised control and direction over the performance of the act in question and the manner in which it was to be performed. The classic case commonly cited and in which this rule was applied is Quarman v. Burnett, (1840) 6 M & W 499. (cf. also Jones v. Scullard, (1893) 2 QB 565 where Lord Russell applied the test of the power to direct and control the act in performance of which damage was caused to another person). The position in law is, therefore, clear that except in the case of a statutory provision to the contrary, a right to the service of an employee cannot be the subject matter of a transfer by an employer to a third party without the employee's consent. Thus, in Nokes v. Doncaster Amalgamated Collieries, Ltd., 1940-3 All ER 549 where an order was made under Section 154 of the Companies Act, 1929 transferring all the assets and liabilities of a company to another company, Viscount Simon held that such an order did not mean that contracts of service between the appellant and the transferor-company also stood transferred. The principle that even in cases where the services of an employee are lent to a third party temporarily for a particular work, the employee still remains the employee of the employer is illustrated in Denham v. Midland Employers Mutual Assurance Ltd., 1955-2 QB 437. There Eastwoods Ltd., employed Le Grands to make test borings on their property. Le Grands provided two skilled drillers with plant and tackle to carry out the borings and Eastwoods Ltd. agreed to provide one of the labourers, one Clegg, to assist those skilled men free of charge to Le Grands. While the said work was being carried out, Clegg was killed in circumstances in which Le Grands were liable to pay damages to his widow on the ground that his death was caused on account of the negligence of Le Grands or their servants. Le Grands sought to be indemnified by their insurers against their said liability. They were covered by two policies, one with the Midland Employers Mutual Assurance Ltd. in respect of their liability to the employees and the other with Lloyds in respect of their liability to the public in general. The policy issued by the Midland Employers Mutual Assurance Ltd. provided that if any person "under a contract of service" with the insured were to sustain any personal injury by accident caused during the period of employment, and if the insured became liable to pay damages for such injury the association would indemnify the insured against all sums for which he would be so liable. The policy issued by the Lloyds indemnified Le Grands for any sums for which they might become liable to pay in respect of death or accidental bodily injury to persons and loss or damage to property arising in or out of the business of borings carried out by Le Grands. The question was whether at the time of his death Clegg was the servant of Le Grands and under "a contract of service" with them as provided in their policy with the Midland Assurance Ltd. Dealing with that question, Denning, L. J., observed that the difficulty which surrounded such a subject arose because of the concept that a servant of a general employer may be transferred to a temporary employer so as to become for the time being his servant. Such a concept was, he said, a very useful device to place liability on the shoulders of the one who should properly bear it, but did not affect the contract of service itself. No contract of service can be transferred from one employer to another without the servant's consent and such consent is not to be raised by operation of law but only by the real consent in fact of the man express or implied. He further observed:

"In none of the transfer cases which has been cited to us had the consent of the man been sought or obtained. The general employer has simply told him to go and do some particular work for the temporary employer and he has gone. The supposed transfer, when it takes place, is nothing more than a device — a very convenient and just device, mark you — to put liability on to the temporary employer; and even this device has in recent years been very much restricted in its operation. It only applies when the servant is transferred so completely that the temporary employer has the right to dictate, not only what the servant is to do, but also how he is to do it."

Applying these principles to the facts before him, he observed that he had no doubt that if a third person had been injured by the negligence of Clegg in the course of his work, Le Grands and not Eastwoods would be liable to such third person. So, also when Clegg himself was killed, Le Grands were liable to his widow on the same footing that they were his masters and not merely inviters. These results were achieved in law by holding that Clegg became the temporary servant of Le Grands. He further observed that there was no harm in thus describing him so long as it was remembered that it was a device designed to cast liability on the temporary employer. However, on the question whether Clegg was "under a contract of service" with Le Grands, he held that he was not, for his contract of service was with Eastwoods. They had selected him and paid his wages and they alone could suspend or dismiss him. Clegg was never asked to consent to a transfer of the contract of service and he never did so. If he was not paid his wages or if he was wrongfully dismissed from the work, he could sue Eastwoods for the breach of contract and no one else. If he failed to turn up for work, Eastwoods alone could sue him. He could, therefore, see no trace of a contract of service with Le Grands except the artificial transfer raised by law so as to make Le Grands liable to others for his faults or liable to him for their own faults and that the artificial transfer so raised cannot be said to be a contract of service within the said policy of assurance. Le Grands, therefore, were not entitled to be indemnified by the Midland Assurance Company under the employer's liability policy but were entitled to be indemnified by Lloyds under their public liability policy.

8. A contract of service being thus incapable of transfer unilaterally, such a transfer of service from one employer to another can only be effected by a tripartite agreement between the employer, the employee and the third party, the effect of which would be to terminate the original contract of service by mutual consent and to make a new contract between the employee and the third party. Therefore, so long as the contract of service is not terminated, a new contract is not made as aforesaid and the employee continues to be in the employment of the employer. Therefore, when an employer orders him to do a certain work for another person, the employee still continues to be in his employment. The only thing that happens in such a case is that he carries out the orders of master. The employee has the right to claim his wages from the employer and not from the third party to whom his services are lent or hired. It may be that such third party may pay his wages during the time that he has hired his services, but that is because of his agreement with the employer. That does not preclude the employee from claiming his wages from the employer. The hirer may also exercise control and direction in the doing of the thing for which he is hired or even the manner in which it is to be done. But if the employee fails to carry out his directions he cannot dismiss him and can only complain to the employer. The right of dismissal vests in the employer.

9. Such being the position in law, it is of the utmost importance in the present case that the appellants at no time took the plea that the contract of employment with the factory was ever terminated or that the respondent gave his consent, express or implied, to his contract of service being transferred to the head office, or that there was a fresh contract of employment so brought about between him and the head office. Unless, therefore, it is held from the circumstances relied upon by Mr. Phadke that there was a transfer of the consent of service or that Respondent 1 gave his consent, express or implied, to such a transfer, Respondent 1 would continue to be the servant of factory. Since the case has been remanded to the Assistant Commissioner, we refrain from making any observations as regards the effect of the admissions said to have been made by Respondent 1 and relied on by the Assistant Commissioner.

10. Mr. Phadke, however, relied on Jestamani Gulabrai Dholkia v. Scindia Steam Navigation Co., 1961-2 SCR 811 = (AIR 1961 SC 627) in support of his contention that there was a transfer of the contract of employment and that it was not a mere transfer of the benefit of the services of Respondent 1. In that case the appellants were originally in the service of the Scindia Steam Navigation Company. In 1937 Air Services of India Ltd., was incorporated. In 1943, the Scindias purchased the ASI and by 1946 ASI became a full-fledged subsidiary of the Scindias. Between 1946 to 1951 the Scindias transferred several of their employees including the appellants to the ASI. The Scindias had a number of such subsidiary companies and it was usual for them to transfer their employees to such companies and also to recall them whenever necessary. In 1953, the Government of India decided to nationalise the airlines operating in India with effect from June 1953. On April 6, 1953 the appellants wrote to the Scindias to recall them to their original posts but the Scindias refused to do so as they were not in a position to absorb them. They pointed out that a Bill, called the Air Corporation Bill, 1953, was pending before Parliament, that under clause 20 thereof persons working with ASI on the appointed day would become the employees of the Corporation, that under that clause they had the option to resign if they did not wish to join the Corporation and that if the appellants exercised that option, the Scindias would treat them as having resigned from their service. The Act was passed on May 28, 1953. Section 20 of the Act provided that every employee of an existing air company employed by such company prior to July 1, 1952 and still in its employment immediately before the appointed day, shall, in so far as such employee is employed in connection with the undertaking which has vested in the Corporation by virtue of the Act, become as from the appointed date, the employee of the Corporation in which the undertaking has vested. On June 8, 1953 the appellants made a demand that if the Corporation were to retrench any person from the staff loaned to ASI within the first five years, the Scindias should take them back. The Scindias refused. None of the appellants had exercised the option provided by Section 20 (1). On August 1, 1953, ASI became vested in the Corporation and Section 20 (1) came into force as from that date. The appellants contended inter alia that the contract of service between them and the Scindias was not transferable. The contention was rejected on the ground that by reason of Section 20 (1) the contract of service of the appellants stood transferred to the Corporation and that though the appellants were not originally recruited by ASI and were transferred by the Scindias to the said company, they were the employees of ASI and were such employees on the appointed day and since they had not exercised the option under Section 20 (1) they became the employees of the Corporation by operation of that provision. The Scindias, therefore, were no longer concerned with them. It is true that the appellants were transferred to ASI on condition that they would receive the same remuneration and other benefits as they were getting in the Scindias and further that it was possible to contend that Scindias alone could dismiss them. But the learned Judge explained that these were special terms applicable to the appellants. But in spite of them they still had become the employees of the ASI and were such employees on the appointed day. It seems that this conclusion was reached on the footing that since ASI was the subsidiary company of the Scindias like several other subsidiary companies, and it was usual for the Scindias to transfer any of their employees to such subsidiary companies, the appellants on their transfer were deemed to have commenced to become the employees of ASI in spite of the right of the Scindias to recall them whenever necessary and further that the appellants continued to be and were the employees of the ASI on the appointed day and were, therefore, governed by Section 20 (1) of the Act. It is clear that this was a case of employees becoming the employees of the Corporation by virtue of the operation of a statute. The decision, therefore, is not an authority for the proposition that an employer can transfer his employee to a third party without the consent of such employee or without terminating the contract of employment with him. That being the position the case of 1961-2 SCR 811 = (AIR 1961 SC 627) (supra) cannot assist Mr. Phadke.

II. In our view the High Court was right in setting aside the order of the Assistant Commissioner and the Industrial Court on the ground that unless a finding was reached on the facts of the case that the contract of service with the said factory came to an end and a fresh contract with the head office came into being Respondent 1 continued to be in the employment of the factory and the head office, therefore, was not competent to dismiss him. The appeal, therefore, fails and is dismissed with costs.

Appeal dismissed.

AIR 1970 SUPREME COURT 829

(V 57 C 178)

(From: Punjab)*

S. M. SIKRI, R. S. BACHAWAT AND
K. S. HEGDE, JJ.

M/s. Motibhai Fulabhai Patel and Co.,
Appellant v. R. Prasad, Collector of Central Excise, Baroda and others, Respondents.

Civil Appeal No. 13 of 1966, D/- 30-10-1968.

Central Excise Rules (1944), Rule 40 — Construction of — Unlawful mixing of duty-paid tobacco with non-duty paid tobacco — Confiscation of mixture — So much of mixture representing non-duty paid tobacco can only be confiscated — AIR 1961 Bom 48, Overruled — (Civil
P. C. (1908), Pre. — Interpretation of Statutes).

Where a dealer has contravened R. 40 of the Central Excise Rules (1944), by unlawfully mixing duty-paid tobacco with the non-duty paid tobacco the entire mixture cannot be confiscated but only so much of the mixture as can reasonably represent the value of the non-duty paid tobacco can be confiscated. (Para 11)

Rule 40 relates to forfeiture and is a penal provision. Its scope cannot be extended by reading into it words which are not there.
Rule 40 permits the Central Excise authorities to confiscate only those goods on which duty has not been paid. It is not permissible for the Collector to confiscate the entire tobacco mixture.
If by the wrongful act of a party he renders it impossible for the authorities to confiscate under Rule 40 the non-duty paid goods it is open to those authorities to confiscate from out of the goods seized, goods only of the value reasonably representing the value of the non-duty paid goods mixed in the goods seized. AIR 1961 Bom 48, Overruled.

(Para 11)

Variety of tobacco	Quantity	Rate of duty
Biri Patti	Bmds. 251. 8	Rs. 1.20 nP per lb
Stems Kandi	" 287.20	Rs. 0.50 -do-
Rava	" 1326.14	Rs. 0.50 -do-
Stalk Kandi	" 57.20	Rs. 0.06 -do-

3. On December 13, 1958 the appellants obtained permission from the Local Central Excise Authorities to mix the above lots of tobacco.
The percentage of

*(Civil Writ No. 557-D of 1961, D/- 13-1-1964 — Punj.)

CN/CN/F521/68/DVT/C

Cases Referred:	Chronological	Paras
(1961) AIR 1961 Bom 48 (V 48)=
62 Bom LR 634, M/s. Valimshomad Gulsmhusain Sonavala & Co. v. C. T. A. Pillai		7, 8
(1894) 1894 AC 494=	71 LT 157,
Smurthwaite v. Hannay		10
(1868) LR 3 CP 427=	37 LJCP 169,
Spence v. Union Marine Insurance Co., Ltd.		9
(1863) 3 B & S 566=	1 New Rep 357,
Buckley v. Gross		9
(1841) 4 Y & C Ex. 351=	10 LJ Ex Eq 11,
Jones v. Moore		9

M/s. M. P. Vashi, Dilip K. Kapur, S. V. Tambwekar and A. G. Ratnaparkhi, Advocates, for Appellant; Mr. D. Narasaraju, Senior Advocate, (M/s. R. M. Mehta and S. P. Nayar, Advocates, with him), for Respondents.

The Judgment of the Court was delivered by HEGDE, J.:— In this appeal by certificate though several contentions were raised in the memo of appeal only two of them were pressed at the time of hearing. They are: (1) under the circumstances of the case the confiscation ordered by the Collector, Central Excise is illegal and (2) under any circumstances he could not have confiscated the entire quantity of tobacco used in the mixture.

2. The appellants are tobacco merchants in Dashrath village near Baroda in Gujarat State. At the relevant time they were holding Central Excise licence in form L-2 and L-5 for the purpose of storing, selling and processing duty paid and non-duty paid tobacco. They had their own duty paid and non-duty paid godowns. In about December 1958 according to their books they possessed the following lots of different varieties of tobacco.

different varieties of tobacco when mixed would have been as under:

Rava	—	68.97%
Stems Kandi	—	14.86%
Biri Patti	—	13.07%
Stalk Kandi	—	3.00%

4. On December 23, 1958 when the process of mixing was still going on the Superintendent of Central Excise, Preventive Headquarters, Baroda and his party raided the duty paid premises of the appellants. There he seized the entire mixture tobacco weighing Mds. 200.43 srs. i.e., 1,64,834.50 lbs. of tobacco. According to that Superintendent when experiments were conducted he found in the above mixture percentage of different varieties as under

Rava	— 44.00%
Biri Patti	— 51.50%
Stems Kandi	— 3.74%

From this he concluded that considerable quantity of non-duty paid Biri Patti tobacco had been utilised in the manufacture of the mixture. Hence notice was issued to the appellants on January 6, 1959 to show cause why action should not be taken against them under Rule 40 of the Central Excise Rules 1944 inasmuch as they brought into duty paid premises 60,770 lbs. of Biri Patti tobacco without payment of duty. It was also alleged in that notice that the appellants had removed certain quantity of Rava tobacco from L-2 premises. The appellants submitted their reply on 13-3-1959. At the hearing before the Collector as the appellants challenged the correctness of the experiments conducted by the Superintendent, Central Excise, the Collector himself in the presence of the appellants conducted a fresh experiment. On the basis of that experiment he came to the conclusion that the results obtained by the experiment conducted by the Superintendent, Central Excise are by and large correct.

5. By his order dated April 13, 1959, the Collector, Central Excise held the appellants guilty of contravening Rule 40 and consequently levied on them a penalty of Rs. 2,000/- as well as the duty payable under law. He also ordered the confiscation of the seized tobacco weighing 1,64,834.50 lbs. But he gave an option to the appellants of redeeming the same on payment of a fine of Rs. 1 lac. The appellants paid the amount of fine under protest and got the goods released.

6. Thereafter they moved the High Court of Bombay under Article 226 of the Constitution for quashing the order of the Collector but that application was withdrawn as the appellants first wanted to exhaust their remedy under the Central Excise Act. The appellants unsuccessfully went up in appeal and thereafter in revision under the Central Excises and Salt Act, 1944 against the order of the Collector. After the 3rd respondent dismissed their revision petition they filed in the High Court of Punjab at Delhi Civil Writ No. 557-D of 1961 challenging the legality of the order made by the Collector of Central Excise on 13-4-1959. That petition was dismissed by a Division Bench of that Court on January 13, 1964. This appeal is brought against that decision.

7. In this Court the finding of the Collector of Central Excise that the appellants were guilty of mixing the duty paid tobacco with non-duty paid tobacco and thereby they contravened Rule 40 was not challenged. Nor was there any dispute about the quantity of non-duty paid tobacco used in the mixture. The main contention of Mr. M. P. Vashi, learned Counsel for the appellants was that under Rule 40, the Collector could not have confiscated the tobacco mixture as it consisted of both, duty-paid tobacco as well as tobacco on which duty had not been paid. His alternative contention was that under any circumstances the Collector could not have confiscated anything more than 60,770 lbs. of the mixture which can be said to represent Biri Patti tobacco on which duty had not been paid. In support of his first contention he heavily relied on the decision of K. T. Desai, J., in M/s. Vulimshomad Gulsmhusain Sonavala Co. v. C. T. A. Pillai, 62 Bom L.R. 634= (AIR 1961 Bom 48).

8. The seized tobacco mixture weighed 1,64,834.50 lbs. That included 60,770 lbs. of Biri Patti tobacco on which duty had not been paid. But on the remaining quantity duty had been paid. The tobacco seized was found in the godown licenced to store duty paid tobacco. Hence the appellants were clearly guilty of contravening Rule 40 of the Central Excise Rules which reads:

"Except as provided in the proviso to sub-rule (1) of Rule 32 and in Rule 171 no wholesale purchaser of unmanufactured tobacco for the purpose of trade or manufacture and no wholesale purchaser of other unmanufactured products from a curer shall receive into any part of his premises or into his custody or possession, any unmanufactured tobacco or other unmanufactured products other than tobacco or other unmanufactured products imported from a foreign country otherwise than under a valid permit granted by an officer showing that the proper duty has been paid; and every such wholesale purchaser who receives or has in his custody or possession any such goods, in contravention of this rule shall, in respect of every such offence, be liable to pay the duty leviable on such goods, and to a penalty which may extend to two thousand rupees, and the goods shall also be liable to confiscation."

In view of this rule the legality of the order made by the Collector in so far as he levied duty as well as penalty cannot be challenged and was not challenged before us. But so far as the confiscation is concerned it was urged that under the rule in question only tobacco on which duty had not been paid could alone have been confiscated. In the instant case even according to the finding of the Collector only on 66,770 lbs. of Biri Patti tobacco the duty had been paid; but on the remaining tobacco seized duty had not been paid, it was not possible to separate the duty paid tobacco from the non-duty paid tobacco; hence it was impermissible for the Collector to confiscate the said tobacco under Rule 40 as that rule permitted the confiscation of only non-duty paid tobacco. In Sonavala's case, 62 Bom LR 634= (AIR 1961 Bom 48) referred to earlier Desai, J., had held that the right to confiscate smuggled goods under Section 167 (8) of the Sea Customs Act, 1878 does not carry with it the right to confiscate unsmuggled goods. The words 'such goods' appearing in Section 167 (8) of the Act cannot be interpreted to mean similar goods. It is not open to the Customs authorities to confiscate similar goods even though they may be of the same quality, bulk and value. The words 'such goods' mean the very goods which have been smuggled. If the smuggled goods lose their identity, it would not be open to the Customs officer to confiscate any part of those goods. Where, therefore, gold that has been smuggled has in the melting process got so mixed up with gold that is unsmuggled that it is impossible to separate the smuggled gold from the unsmuggled one, the right to confiscate smuggled gold ceases when the two get inextricably mixed up. The broad proposition laid down by Desai, J., undoubtedly supports the contention advanced on behalf of the appellants. We shall presently show that this statement of the law is not correct but it is necessary to mention at this juncture that in the Sonavala's case, 62 Bom LR 634= (AIR 1961 Bom 48) an innocent third party had purchased the smuggled gold for proper value and mixed the same with unsmuggled gold, which circumstance had an important bearing on the decision of the case.

9. In Institutes of Justinian at page 104 dealing with the topic Commixtio it is observed:

"If the things mixed, still remaining the property of their former owners, were easy to separate again, as for instance, cattle united in one herd, when one owner brought his claim by vindictio his property was restored to him without difficulty but if there was difficulty in separating the materials from each other, as in dividing the grains of wheat in a heap, the obvious mode would be to distribute the whole heap in shares proportionate to the quantity of wheat belonging to the respective owners. But it might happen that the wheat mixed together was not all of the same quality, and therefore the owner of the better kind of wheat would lose by having a share determined in amount only by the quantity of his wheat; and the judge therefore was permitted to exercise his judgment how great an addition ought to be made to his share to compensate for the superior quality of the wheat originally belonging to him." In Williams on Personal Property (18th Edn.) at p. 50, it is observed:

"The acquisition of ownership by accession or confusion of substances also presupposes a previous title. Thus the young of a domestic animal belong to the owner of the mother. If any substances, for instances tallow, belonging to various owners be mixed by consent or accidentally, the mass appears to belong to the owners of parts in common. And if the confusion be made wilfully by one without the other's leave, the mass belongs to the latter, whose ownership is thus unlawfully invaded."

Dealing with the same topic it is observed in Halsbury's Laws of England 3rd Edn. (Vol. 29) at p. 378:

"Ownership of goods may be acquired by confusion or intermixture, if the goods, when mixed, are indistinguishable. If the goods are mixed by agreement or consent the proprietors have an interest in common in proportion to their respective shares; if mixed by accident or the act of a third party, for which neither owner is responsible, the proprietors become owners in common of the mixed property in proportion to the amounts contributed. Where, however, one man wilfully mixes his goods with those of another without the approbation or knowledge of the other, the whole belongs to the latter."

The law on this topic was stated by Bovill, C. J., as early as 1868 in Spence v. The Union Marine Insurance Co., Ltd., (1868) LR 3 CP 427 thus:

"In our own law there are not many authorities to be found upon this subject but, as far as they go, they are in favour of the view, that, when goods of different owners become by accident so mixed together as to be undistinguishable, the owners of the goods so mixed become tenants in common of the whole, in the proportions which they have severally contributed to it. The passage cited from the judgment of Blackburn, J., in the case of the tallow which was melted and flowed into the sewers, is to that effect: Buckley v. Gross, (1863-3 B & S 506). And a similar view was adopted by Lord Abinger in the case of the mixture of oil by leakage on board ship in Jones v. Moosa, (1841-4 Y & C Ex. 351).

"It has been long settled in our law, that where goods are mixed so as to become undistinguishable, by the wrongful act or default of one owner, he cannot recover, and will not be entitled to his proportion, or any part of the property, from the other owner, but no authority has been cited to shew that any such principle has ever been applied, nor indeed could it be applied, to the case of an accidental mixing of the goods of the two owners; and there is no authority nor sound reason for saying that the goods of several persons be the property of their several owners, and become bona vacantia."

10. The same principle was again reiterated by the House of Lords in Smurthwaite v. Hannay, 1894 AC 494.

11. The rules enunciated above are of assistance in finding out a solution to the problem before us though they do not govern the same. In the instant case there is no doubt that the appellants were guilty of an unlawful act in mixing duty paid tobacco with the non-duty paid tobacco but the fact remains that they were the owners of both those lots at the time they mixed them and hence the legal principles set out earlier do not cover such a case. It must also be remembered that in dealing with a provision, relating to forfeiture we are dealing with a penal provision. It would not be proper for us to extend the scope of that provision by reading into it words which are not there and thereby widen the scope of the provision relating to confiscation. Rule 40 permits the Central Excise authorities to confiscate only those goods on which duty has not been paid. It does not permit them either specifically or by necessary implication to confiscate other goods. Therefore it was not permissible for the Collector to confiscate the entire tobacco mixture. At the same time no person can be permitted to benefit by his wrongful act. No rule of law should be so interpreted as to permit or encourage its circumvention. If by the wrongful act of a party he renders it impossible for the authorities to confiscate under Rule 40 the non-duty paid goods, it is in our opinion open to those authorities to confiscate from out of the goods seized, goods of the value reasonably representing the value of the non-duty paid goods mixed in the goods seized. Applying that rule to the facts of this case, it follows that the Collector, Central Excise could have confiscated out of the tobacco seized, so much of it as can be held to reasonably represent the value of the tobacco on which the duty had not been paid.

12. As noticed earlier the tobacco confiscated had been returned to the appellants after realising from them a sum of Rs. 1 lac as fine. The Counsel for the parties agreed at the hearing that the value of the Biri Patti tobacco used in the mixture for which no duty had been paid could be fixed at Rs. 35,000/-. In view of this agreement it is not necessary for us to remit the case back to the Collector of Central Excise for assessing the value of the tobacco on which duty had not been paid. In view of our earlier findings the fine to be levied on the appellants in lieu of the confiscation that could have been ordered has to be fixed at Rs. 35,000/-. From this it follows that the Collector has to refund to the appellants a sum of Rs. 65,000/- which he has collected from them in excess of the aforementioned Rs. 35,000/-. The appeal is allowed to that extent. In the circumstances of the case we direct the parties to bear their own costs both in this Court as well as before the High Court.

Order accordingly.

AIR 1970 SUPREME COURT 833

(V 57 C 179)

(From: Punjab)*

S. M. SIKRI, R. S. BACHAWAT AND
K. S. HEGDE, JJ.Satish Kumar and others, Appellants v.
Surinder Kumar and others, Respondents.Civil Appeal No. 822 of 1966, D/- 27-9-1968.

Arbitration Act (1940), Sections 14, 17 and Schedule 1 Rule 7 — Reference to arbitration by parties — Arbitration without intervention of Court — Award not made rule of court — Binding effect on parties — Extent of — Private award effecting partition of immovable property worth more than Rs. 100 — Registration of award before making it rule of Court is necessary — AIR 1958 Pat 252 (FB) & AIR
1968 Punj & Har 204 (FB), Overruled —
Registration Act (1908), Section 17 (1) (b).

An award given under the Arbitration
Act on a private reference requires registration under Section 17 (1) (b) of the Registration Act, if the award effects partition of immovable property exceeding the value of Rs. 100/-. Civil Revn. No.
841 of 1964, D/- 27-4-1965 (Punj),
Affirmed; AIR 1958 Pat 252 (FB) & AIR
1968 Punj & Har 204 (FB), Overruled;
AIR 1938 Bom 422 & AIR 1939 Nag 233
(FB) & AIR 1940 Rang 228 and AIR 1945
Cal 19, Approved. (Paras 16, 18)

The award is not a mere waste paper but has some legal effect. It is final and binding on the parties and it cannot be said that it is a waste paper unless it is made a rule of the Court. The confer-ment of exclusive jurisdiction on a Court under the Act does not make an award any the less binding than it was under the provisions of the Second Schedule of the Code of Civil Procedure. The award is, in fact, a final adjudication of a Court of the parties' own choice, and until impeached upon sufficient grounds in an appropriate proceeding, an award, which is on the face of it regular, is conclusive upon the merits of the controversy submitted. As between the parties and their privies, an award is entitled to that respect which is due to judgment of a court of last resort. Case law discussed. (Paras 8, 9, 13, 14)

The award does create rights in property but those rights cannot be enforced

*(Civil Revn. No. 841 of 1964, D/- 27-4-1965 — Punj.)

CN/CN/E888/68/DVT/M

1970 S. C./53 VI G—3 until the award is made a decree of the Court. It is one thing to say that a right is not created, it is an entirely different thing to say that the right created cannot be enforced without further steps. For the purpose of Section 17 (1) (b) of the Registration Act, all that is necessary is whether the award purports or operates to create or declare, assign, limit or extinguish whether in present or future any right, title or interest whether vested or contingent of the value of one hundred rupees and upwards to or in immovable property. If it does, it is compulsorily registrable. Section 17 does not concern itself with the enforcement of rights.

(Para 19)

Cases Referred: Chronological Paras

(1968) AIR 1968 Punj & Har 204

(V 55)= ILR (1967) 1 Punj &
Har 622 (FB), Sardool Sing v.

Hari Singh

5

(1962) Civil Appeal No. 296 of 1960,

D/- 6-12-1962 (SC), Sheonarain

Lal v. Rameshwari Devi

10

(1962) Civil App. No. 162 of 1962,

D/- 11-10-1962 (SC), M/s. Uttam

Singh Dugal & Co. v. Union of India

8, 10

(1961) AIR 1961 SC 1077 (V 48)=

(1961) 3 SCR 792, Kashinathsa

Yamasa Kabadi v. Narsinghsa

Bhaskarsa Kabadi

12

(1960) AIR 1960 SC 629 (V 47)=

(1960) 2 SCR 810, Champalal v.

Mst. Samarth Bai

11

(1958) AIR 1958 Pat 252 (V 45)=

ILR 37 Pat 252 (FB), Sheonarain

Lal v. Prabhu Chand

4, 6, 10, 16

(1945) AIR 1945 Cal 19 (V 32)=

48 Cal WN 721, Nani Bala Saha

v. Ram Gopal Saha

4

(1940) AIR 1940 Rang 223 (V 27)=

1940 Rang LR 372, U Keltaha

v. U Pannawa

4

(1939) AIR 1939 Nag 233 (V 26)=

ILR (1939) Nag 607 (FB), Mohd.

Azizulla Khan v. Mohd. Noorullah

Khan

4

(1938) AIR 1938 Bom 422 (V 25)=

40 Bom LR 952, Chimanlal Gir-

dhar Ghanchi v. Dahyabhai Nathu-bhai Gandhi

4

(1909) ILR 33 Cal 881= 4 Cal LJ

162, Bhajahari Saha Banikya v.

Behary Lal Basak

8

Mr. Sarjoo Prasad, Senior Advocate,

(Mr. D. N. Mishra, Advocate, and Mr.

Ravinder Narain, Advocate of M/s. J. B.

Dadachanji and Co. with him), for Appellants; M/s. A. K. Sen and S. V. Gupte,

Senior Advocates, (M/s. B. P. Maheshwari and R. K. Maheshwari, Advocates with them), for Respondent No. 1.

The following judgments of the Court were delivered by

SIKRI, J. (On behalf of himself and Bachawat, J.)— This appeal by special leave is directed against the judgment dated April 27, 1965, of the High Court of Punjab at Chandigarh (S. B. Kapoor, J.) dismissing Civil Revision No. 841 of 1964. The Civil Revision arose out of the following facts.

2. The following pedigree table shows the relationship between the parties:

Sohan Lal (Deed.) Husband of Cujri

3. On the death of Sohan Lal, Behari Lal was appointed as arbitrator by Harbans Lal, Surinder Kumar (then a minor through his mother Smt. Lachmi Devi) and Smt. Cujri, widow of Sohan Lal, for partition of the joint property. Behari Lal, by his award dated October 21, 1956, divided the property into two equal shares, between Harbans Lal and Surinder Kumar. Harbans Lal and Surinder Kumar signed the award. Harbans Lal died on May 20, 1960, upon which Surinder Kumar filed a suit for partition of the properties, the subject-matter of the award. This suit was dismissed as withdrawn on March 13, 1962. On March 11, 1962, Behari Lal, arbitrator, filed an application under Section 14 of the Indian Arbitration Act 1940 (X of 1940) — hereinafter referred to as the Act — for filing the award in Court and for making the same a rule of the Court. Surinder Kumar entered appearance and filed objections under Section 30 of the Act. One of the objections was that the award dated October 21, 1956, was not admissible in evidence for want of proper stamp and registration and could not, therefore, be made a rule of the Court. On January 31, 1963, the objections were dismissed by Miss Harmohinder Kaur, Subordinate Judge, First Class, Ludhiana, as time-barred, but she did not make the award a rule of the Court as there was a further objection to the effect that the award not having been executed on a properly stamped paper and not having been registered, was not admissible in evidence. This objection was dealt with by Shri Om Parkash Saini, Subordinate Judge, First Class, Ludhiana, who, by his order dated June 5, 1963, held that the award in question was not admissible in evidence as it was executed on delicately stamped paper and was not registered. He accordingly dismissed the application.

4. An appeal was taken to the District Judge, and the Additional District Judge, by his order dated November 23, 1964, upheld the order of the Subordinate Judge. A revision was then taken to the High Court. Kapoor, J., held that the award actually effected a partition and required registration under S. 17 (1) (b) of the Indian Registration Act, 1908. The learned Judge dissented from the decision of a Full Bench of the Patna High Court in Seonarain Lal v. Prabhu Chand, ILR 37 Pat 252 = (AIR 1958 Pat 252) (FB) and preferred to follow the view expressed by the Bombay High Court in Chimanlal Cirdhar Chanchi v. Dabyabhai Nathubhai Candhi, AIR 1938 Bom 422, by the Nagpur High Court in M. A. M. Salamullah Khan v. M. Noorullah Khan, AIR 1939 Nag 233 at p. 235, by the Rangoon High Court in U Keltaba v. U Pannawa, AIR 1940 Rang 228 and by the Calcutta High Court in Nani Bela Saha v. Ram Gopal Saha, AIR 1945 Cal 19 at pp. 21,

22. He accordingly dismissed the revision petition.

5. The decision of the Patna High Court was, however, later followed by a Full Bench of the Punjab and Haryana High Court in Sardool Singh v. Hari Singh, ILR (1967) 1 Punj & Har 622= (AIR 1968 Punj & Har 204), judgment dated November 8, 1966.

6. The question which arises before us is whether an award given under the Act on a private reference requires registration under Section 17 (1) (b) of the Indian Registration Act, if the award effects partition of immovable property exceeding the value of Rs. 100/-. The main reason given by Sinha, J., speaking for the Patna Full Bench in ILR 37 Pat 252= (AIR 1958 Pat 252 (FB)) for holding that such an award does not require registration is that under the scheme of the Act a private award, unless a decree is passed in terms of the award, has no legal effect. This, according to him, follows from the conclusion that once a matter has been referred to arbitration, it comes within the immediate control of the Court under the Act, and no other authority has any jurisdiction to deal with the matter except as provided for in Section 35 of the Act. He thought that what distinguishes the provisions in the Arbitration Act from the provisions in the Second Schedule in the Code of Civil Procedure is that the Act bars jurisdiction of all Courts to pronounce upon the validity, effect or existence of an award or arbitration agreement except the Court under the Act itself. Sinha, J., looking at it from another point of view, namely, that an award is only effective when a decree follows the judgment upon the award, observed that such an award may be covered by the exception mentioned in Section 17 (2) (vi) (any decree or order of a Court) of the Registration Act.

7. The Punjab Full Bench has followed this reasoning, and indeed reproduced paras 5 to 15 of the Patna Full Bench judgment in its own judgment. Mahajan, J., with whom the two other Judges agreed, observed:

"I am in respectful agreement with the entire line of reasoning in the Patna case barring the underlined observation:—

"....an award is only effective when a decree follows the judgment on the award 'such an award may be covered by the exception mentioned in S. 17 (2)

(vi)' (any decree or order of a Court) of the Registration Act."

If these observations are meant to convey that award as such is covered by the exception (vi) of Section 17 (2) of the Registration Act, I am unable to agree. But the decree that follows the award when it is made a rule of the Court, no exception can be taken to the view that such a decree is covered by the exception."

The Punjab Full Bench gave two additional reasons:

"(1) If an award is registered, it is still a waste paper unless it is made a rule of the Court. Thus registration does not, in any manner, add to its efficacy or give it any added competence. Section 32 of the Arbitration Act is specific for no right can be founded on an award as such after coming into force of the 1940 Arbitration Act;

(2) It is not disputed and indeed it could not be that the Court has the power under Section 16, to remit the award from time to time. If registration of an award is an essential pre-requisite before it could be made a rule of the Court under Section 17, every time an award is remitted and a new award is made, the new award will require registration. The result would be that, in the same controversy, there can be not only one registration but a number of registrations regarding the same title, a situation which is not even envisaged by the Registration Act."

8. It seems to us that the main reason given by the two Full Benches for their conclusion is contrary to what was held by this Court in its unreported decision in M/s. Uttam Singh Dugal and Co. v. Union of India, Civil Appeal No. 162 of 1962, D/- 11-10-1962 (SC). The facts in this case, shortly stated, were that M/s. Uttam Singh Dugal and Co. filed an application under Section 33 of the Act in the Court of the Subordinate Judge, Hazaribag. The Union of India, respondent No. 1, called upon respondent No. 2, Col. S. K. Bose, to adjudicate upon the matter in dispute between respondent No. 1 and the appellant company. The case of M/s. Uttam Singh Dugal and Co. was that this purported reference to respondent No. 2 for adjudication on the matters alleged to be in dispute between them and respondent No. 1 was not competent because by an award passed by respondent No. 2 on April 23, 1952, all the relevant disputes between them had been decided. The High Court held inter alia that the first award did not create any bar against the competence of the second reference. On appeal this Court after holding that the application under Section 83 was competent observed as follows:

"The true legal position in regard to the effect of an award is not in dispute. It is well settled that as a general rule, all claims which are the subject-matter of a reference to arbitration merge in the award which is pronounced in the proceedings before the arbitrator and that after an award has been pronounced, the rights and liabilities of the parties in respect of the said claims can be determined only on the basis of the said award. After an award is pronounced, no action can be started on the original claim which had been the subject-matter of the reference. As has been observed by Mookerjee, J. in the case of Bhajahari Saha Banikya v. Behary Lal Basak, (1909) ILR 33 Cal 881 at p. 898, 'the award is, in fact, a final adjudication of a Court of the parties' own choice, and until impeached upon sufficient grounds in an appropriate proceeding, an award, which is on the face of it regular, is conclusive upon the merits of the controversy submitted, unless possibly the parties have intended that the award shall not be final and conclusive.....in reality, an award possesses all the elements of vitality even though it has not been formally enforced and it may be relied upon in a litigation between the parties relating to the same subject-matter.' This conclusion, according to the learned Judge, is based upon the elementary principle that, as between the parties and their privies, an award is entitled to that respect which is due to judgment of a court of last resort. Therefore, if the award which has been pronounced between the parties has in fact, or can, in law, be deemed to have dealt with the present dispute, the second reference would be incompetent. This position also has not been and cannot be seriously disputed."

This Court then held on the merits "that the dispute in regard to over payments which are sought to be referred to the arbitration of respondent No. 2 by the second reference are not new disputes; they are disputes in regard to claims which the Chief Engineer should have made before the arbitration under the first reference." This Court accordingly allowed the appeal and set aside the order passed by the High Court.

9. This judgment is binding on us. In our opinion this judgment lays down that the position under the Act is in no way different from what it was before the Act came into force, and that an award has some legal force and is not a mere waste paper. If the award in question is not a mere waste paper but has some legal effect it plainly purports to or affects property within the meaning of Section 17 (1) (b) of the Registration Act.

10. We may mention that an appeal was filed in this Court against the decision of the Division Bench of the Patna High Court, which had referred the case of ILR 37 Pat 252 = (AIR 1958 Pat 252) (FB) to the Full Bench for opinion on certain questions and which decided the case in accordance with that opinion, and the same was dismissed by this Court in Sheonarain Lal v. Rameshwari Devi, Civil Appeal No. 296 of 1960, D/- 6-12-1962 (SC) in which the judgment was delivered by the same Bench which decided the case of Civil Appeal No. 162 of 1962, D/- 11-10-1962 (SC). It is true that this Court in Civil Appeal No. 296 of 1960, D/- 6-12-1962 (SC) did not expressly rule on the validity of the answer given by the Patna Full Bench in ILR 37 Pat 252 = (AIR 1958 Pat 252 (FB)) that such awards did not require registration, but decided the case on the point whether the award in dispute in that case in fact purported or operated to create a right, title or interest of the value of more than Rs. 100 in immovable properties. But after holding that the document did not operate to create or extinguish any right in immovable property, this Court observed:

"The position would have been otherwise if the arbitrators had directed by the award itself that this shop would go to Prabhu Chand without any further document. In that case the award itself would have created in Prabhu Chand a right to these properties. That is not, however, the provision in the award. In the absence of a registered document, Prabhu Chand would get no title on the award and Sheonarain's title would remain in the shop."

11. In this connection we may mention two other decisions of this Court. In Champalal v. Mst. Samarath Bai, (1960) 2 SCR 810 at p. 816 = (AIR 1960 SC 629 at p. 631), Kapur, J., speaking for the Court, observed as follows:

"The second question that the award required registration and would not be filed by the arbitrators before it was registered is equally without substance. The filing of an unregistered award under Section 49 of the Registration Act is not prohibited; what is prohibited is that it cannot be taken into evidence so as to affect immovable property falling under Section 17 of the Act. That the award required registration was rightly admitted by both parties."

12. Again in Kashinathsa Yamosa Kabadi v. Narsingsa Bhaskarsa Kabadi, (1961) 3 SCR 792 at p. 806 = (AIR 1961 SC 1077 at p. 1084), Shah, J., speaking for the Court observed:

"The records made by the Panchas about the division of the properties, it is true, were not stamped nor were they registered. It is however, clear that if the record made by the Panchas in so far as it deals with immovable properties is regarded as a non-testamentary instrument purporting or operating to create, declare, assign, limit or extinguish any right, title or interest in immoveable property, it was compulsorily registrable under Section 17 of the Registration Act and would not in the absence of registration be admissible in evidence."

13. In view of the above decisions it is not necessary to refute the other reasons given by both the Full Benches, but out of respect for the learned Judges we deal with them. We may mention that no comment was made in these cases on the provisions of Para 7 of Schedule 1 to the Act. This para provides:

"7. The award shall be final and binding on the parties and persons claiming under them respectively." If the award is final and binding on the parties it can hardly be said that it is a waste paper unless it is made a rule of the Court.

14. We are unable to appreciate why the conferment of exclusive jurisdiction on a Court under the Act makes an award any the less binding than it was under the provisions of the Second Schedule of the Code of Civil Procedure. The Punjab Full Bench held that the registration does not in any manner add to its efficacy or give it any added competence. We cannot concur with these observations. If an award affects immovable property over the value of Rs. 100 its registration does get rid of the disability created by Section 49 of the Registration Act.

15. Regarding the difficulty pointed out by the Punjab Full Bench that there may be many registrations we are not called upon to decide whether these difficulties would arise because the language of Section 17 of the Registration Act is plain. It may be that no such difficulties will arise because under Section 16 (2) of the Act what the arbitrator submits to the Court is his decision and it may be that the decision may not be registrable under Section 17 of the Registration Act. But as we have said before we are not called upon to decide this point.

16. In our opinion, Capoor, J. was right in dissenting from the Patna Full Bench in ILR 37 Pat 252 = (AIR 1958 Pat 252) (FB) and holding that the award in dispute required registration.

17. In the result the appeal fails and is dismissed with costs.

18. We may make it clear that we are dealing only with an award made on a reference by the parties without the intervention of court.

19. HEGDE, J.: I agree. But I would like to add few words. Arbitration proceedings, broadly speaking may be divided into two stages. The first stage commences with arbitration agreement and ends with the making of the award. And the second stage relates to the enforcement of the award. Paragraph 7 of the First Schedule to the Arbitration Act lays down that "the award shall be final and binding on the parties and persons claiming under them respectively." Therefore it is not possible to agree with the Full Bench decisions of the Patna High Court and that of the Punjab and Haryana High Court that an award which is not made a decree of the Court has no existence in law. The learned Judges who decided those cases appear to have proceeded on the basis that an award which cannot be enforced is not a valid award and the same does not create any rights in the property which is the subject matter of the award. This in my opinion is not a correct approach. The award does create rights in that property but those rights cannot be enforced until the award is made a decree of the Court. It is one thing to say that a right is not created, it is an entirely different thing to say that the right created cannot be enforced without further steps. For the purpose of Section 17 (1) (b) of the Registration Act, all that we have to see is whether the award in question purports or operates to create or declare, assign, limit or extinguish whether in present or future any right, title or interest whether vested or contingent of the value of one hundred rupees and upwards to or in immoveable property. If it does, it is compulsorily registrable. In the aforementioned Full Bench decisions sufficient attention has not been given to Section 17 of the Registration Act. The focus was entirely on the provisions of the Arbitration Act and there again on the enforcement of the award and not in the making of the award. A document may validly create rights but those rights may not be enforceable for various reasons. Section 17 does not concern itself with the enforcement of rights. That Section is attracted as soon as its requirements are satisfied. There is no gainsaying the fact that the award with which we are concerned in this case, at any rate, purported to create rights in immoveable property of the value of rupees more than one hundred. Hence it is compulsorily registrable.

Appeal dismissed.

AIR 1970 SUPREME COURT 838 (V 57 C 180)

(From Punjab: (1962) 64 Pun LR 1091)
S. M. SIKRI, R. S. BACHAWAT AND
K. S. HEGDE, JJ.

Smt. Kaushalya Devi and others, Appellants v. K. L. Bansal, Respondent.

Civil Appeal No. 98 of 1960, D/- 3-12-1968.

Houses and Rents — Delhi and Ajmer Rent Control Act (38 of 1952), Section 13 — Decree passed by Court in ejectment with an award of compromise, without satisfying itself if the grounds for eviction existed — Decree is in contravention of Section 13 and a nullity and cannot be executed — (Civil P. C. (1903), Sec. 47).

Where in a suit under Delhi and Ajmer Rent Control Act for ejectment of the defendant the parties entered into a compromise that the decree for ejectment be passed against the defendant, executable after certain date, and that a new standard rent at a certain amount be fixed, to be payable from a certain date and the Court recorded the following order:

"In view of the statement of the parties' counsel and the written compromise, a decree is passed in favour of the plaintiff against the defendant", and the decree was drawn up accordingly.

Held that the decree passed on the basis of an award was in contravention of Section 13 (1) of the Act because the Court had passed the decree in terms of the award without satisfying itself that the ground of eviction existed. Accordingly the decree in so far as it directed delivery of possession of the premises to the landlord was a nullity and could not be executed. (1969) 1 SCWR 51, Foll.; (1962) 64 Punj LR 1091, Affirmed.

(Paras 3, 5)

Cases Referred: Chronological Paras
(1968) Civil Appeals Nos. 2464 and 2468 of 1966, D/- 18-10-1968 =
(1969) 1 SCWR 51, Bahadur Singh
v. Muni Subrat Dass 1, 5, 6

Mr. S. P. Sinha, Sr. Advocate, (M/s. G. Bhimseoa Rao and M. I. Khosla, Advocates, with him), for Appellants; Mr. I. N. Shroff, Advocate, for Respondent.

The Judgment of the Court was delivered by

SIKRI, J.: This appeal by certificate granted by the Circuit Bench of the Punjab High Court at Delhi is governed by the decision of this Court in Bahadur Singh v. Muni Subrat Dass, Civil Appeals Nos. 2464 and 2468 of 1966, D/- 18-10-1968 (reported in (1969) 1 SCWR 51).

2. The facts out of which the present appeal arises are these. One Raghunath Sharma, predecessor-in-interest of the appellants—hereinafter referred to as the plaintiff—instituted on February 7, 1956, suit No. 53 of 1950 in the Court of Sub-Judge Ist Class, Delhi, for the eviction of his tenant, K. L. Bansal, hereinafter referred to as the defendant. He gave three grounds for ejectment in the plaint: (1) that the premises were required bona fide by the plaintiff for occupation as residence for himself and other members of the family, and that he had no other suitable accommodation to meet his bona fide residential requirements; (2) that the defendant already owned a house in Delhi which was suitable for him; and (3) that the defendant had defaulted in payment of rent.

3. The defendant filed a written statement denying these allegations. Appropriate issues were framed on April 4, 1956. On June 5, 1956, an application was filed by the plaintiff and the defendant that a compromise had been effected on the following terms:

"(a) Decree for ejectment be passed in favour of the plaintiff against the defendant, the decree will be executable after the 31st December, 1958 if the defendant does not give possession till then.

(b) The standard rent of the premises be fixed at Rs. 40 per mensem, instead of Rs. 50 paid at present payable from the 1st July, 1956, till the defendant vacates the premises.

(c) The amount in deposit with this Court be paid to the plaintiff which will be adjusted between the parties."

On July 6, 1956, the counsel for the parties and the plaintiff made a statement on solemn affirmation to the same effect, and on the same day, the Court recorded the following order:

"In view of the statement of the parties' counsel and the written compromise a decree is passed in favour of the plaintiff against the defendant."

The decree was drawn up accordingly.

4. The defendant, however, did not vacate the premises on December 31, 1958. On the other hand, he presented an application on February 16, 1959, under Section 47, C. P. C., challenging the validity of the decree alleging that the same had been passed in contravention of the provisions of Section 13 of the Delhi and Ajmer Rent Control Act, 1952 (XXXVIII of 1952) (hereinafter referred to as the Act) and hence the decree was a nullity. He failed before the Sub-Judge, and also on appeal before the Senior Sub-Judge, Delhi.

5. The High Court, on revision, held that the decree was a nullity as the Order passed on the basis of the compromise did not indicate that any of the statutory grounds mentioned in Section 13 of the Act existed. In Bahadur Singh's case, Civil Appeals Nos. 2464 and 2468 of 1966, D/- 16-10-1968 = (reported in (1969) 1 SCWR 51) this Court held that the decree passed on the basis of an award was in contravention of Section 13 (1) of the Act because the Court had passed the decree in terms of the award without satisfying itself that the ground of eviction existed. Bachawat, J., speaking for the Court, observed that "on the plain wording of Section 13 (1) the Court was forbidden to pass the decree. The decree is a nullity and cannot be enforced in execution." This Court, accordingly, declared inter alia that "the decree in so far as it directs delivery of possession of the premises to the landlord is a nullity and cannot be executed."

6. The present case is also governed by the provisions of Section 13 (1) of the Act and, as we have said before, this appeal must fail, in view of the judgment of this Court in Bahadur Singh's case, Civil Appeals Nos. 2464 and 2468 of 1966 D/- 16-10-1968 = (reported in (1969) 1 SCWR 51). In the result the appeal is dismissed but there will be no order as to costs.

Appeal dismissed.

AIR 1970 SUPREME COURT 839 (V 57 C 181)

(From Calcutta: AIR 1963 Cal 198)

V. RAMASWAMI AND I. D. DUA, JJ.

C. Mackertich, Appellant v. Steuart & Co., Ltd., Respondent.

Civil Appeals Nos. 1933 and 1934 of 1966, D/- 14-10-1969.

(A) Transfer of Property Act (1882), Section 106 — Premises let out to partners of partnership firm carrying on business as coach builders under registered lease — Partners entering into agreement with company to sell entire business along with general assets and lease-hold properties — Company entering into possession of lease-hold premises — Object of company to carry on trade or business of coach and carriage builders and to buy, sell, import, manufacture, repair, let on hire, otherwise deal in carriages and vehicles of every description — Separate deed of transfer of premises in favour of company not executed — Lessor treating company as monthly tenant — Failure of Company to prove that lease was dominantly for manufacture purpose — Tenancy was monthly and terminable by 15 days' notice. AIR 1963 Cal 198, Reversed. (Paras 3, 5)

(B) Transfer of Property Act (1882), Section 106 — Whether for applying the presumption under Section 106 the test is exclusiveness of manufacturing purpose. (Quaere). (Para 5)

(C) Civil P. C. (1908), Sections 100-101 — New Point — Point not raised in written statement — Cannot be allowed to be raised. (Para 3)

Cases Referred: Chronological Paras

(1957) AIR 1957 Cal 198 (V 44) =
97 Cal LJ 1, Ramesh Chandra v.
Surya Properties 5

(1952) AIR 1952 Cal 320 (V 39) =
86 Cal LJ 12, Sati Prasanna v.
Md. Fazel 5

LM/AN/F191/69/YPB/M

(1951) 1951-1 KB 614 = (1951) 1

All ER 320, Howkins v. Jardine 5

The Judgment of the Court was delivered by

RAMASWAMI, J.: These appeals are brought by certificate from the judgment of the Calcutta High Court dated March 27, 1962 in appeals from original decrees Nos. 55 and 263 of 1956.

2. By a registered lease dated December 22, 1913, M. Mackertich and Frank Earnest Bushby let out the subject matter of Title Suit No. 31/53, that is, a portion of the premises No. 38/1 Panditla Road, covering an area of approximately 7 bighas, 9 cottahs, 5 chittacks and 9 square ft. of land to four persons, namely Walter Bushby, Frank Earnest Bushby, Geoffrey B. Page and William Shenton carrying on business as coach builders. The term of the lease was for 50 years from January 1, 1915. By another registered lease dated January 31, 1919 between the same lessors and the lessees the premises which are the subject-matter of Title Suit No. 30/53 were leased out for a period of 46 years and three months from October 1, 1918. By memorandum and Articles of Association dated December 4, 1919 a company limited by shares namely Steuart and Co. Ltd., was incorporated. The objects of the company were to carry on the trade or business of coach and carriage builders and to buy, sell, import, export, manufacture, repair, let on hire, otherwise deal in carriages and vehicles of every description. On December 17, 1919 an agreement was made and signed between the partners of the partnership firm (Frank Earnest Bushby Geoffrey Berridge Page and William Shenton) and Steuart and Co. Ltd., wherein it was stated that the partners of the partnership firm would sell the business and transfer all the assets of the firm with effect from the 31st day of December, 1919 to the incorporated company viz. Steuart and Co. Ltd. It was stipulated that the partners would sell and the incorporated company would purchase with effect from December 31, 1919 the goodwill of the business, the leasehold properties of the firm, machinery, office furniture etc., of the firm and generally all the assets of the firm. Under this agreement the incorporated company entered into possession of the leasehold premises of the partnership firm and also took charge of the business of the partnership firm and began to carry on the business itself. No separate deed of transfer in respect of the leasehold properties was executed by the partnership firm in favour of the new incorporated company. But the lessors treated the incorporated company as monthly tenants and accepted rents from them. Frank Earnest Bushby ultimately sold his interest as owner of the property to M. Mackertich. The plaintiff C. Mackertich is the son of M. Mackertich and has inherited all his interests and is, therefore, the sole landlord of two premises in suit. He claimed that the tenancies were governed by the West Bengal Premises Rent Control Act, 1950 and on the ground that there had been default of payment of rent from May, 1952 to March, 1953 he claimed that the defendant company had forfeited the protection against eviction. Notice determining the tenancy was issued on March 12, 1953 by registered post and served on the defendant company on March 13, 1953 calling upon the defendant company to vacate the premises. As the defendant company did not give up possession of the premises, the plaintiff instituted the two suits on May 26, 1953 seeking decrees for the ejectment against the defendant company and a decree for Rs. 5,500 for arrears of rent for 11 months from May, 1952 to March, 1953 in Title Suit No. 31 of 1953 and a decree for arrears of Rs. 2,200 for the 11 months from May, 1952 to March, 1953 in Title Suit No. 30 of 1953. Plaintiff also claimed decrees for damages from the 1st of April, 1953 in both the suits. The defendant contested the suits on the ground that the tenancies were governed by the terms of the lease deeds dated December 22, 1913 and January 31, 1919 and that in the circumstances the tenancies were not governed by the West Bengal Premises Rent Control Act, 1950 and could not be determined by service of 15 days' notice. The defendant denied that there was any arrears of rent and contended that for repairs of the premises which had become dilapidated the defendant company incurred expenditure to the extent of Rs. 22,000 and until there was adjustment of the account between the parties it could not be said that there was any arrear of rent due by the defendant company. The Subordinate Judge found that the defendant company being a separate legal entity from the partnership firm the members of which had been granted two leases the leasehold could not be transferred to the defendant company without registered documents and in the absence of such registered documients the defendant company could not claim to be lessees governed by the registered lease deeds Ex. L and L (I). The Subordinate Judge held that the plaintiff accepted rent for many years from the defendant company as a tenant. In the circumstances the defendant company must be deemed to be tenant from month to month terminable by 15 days' notice under Section 106 of the Transfer of Property Act, 1882. The Subordinate Judge rejected the claim of the defendant company that the purpose of the tenancy was manufacturing and that therefore six months' notice ending with the year of tenancy was necessary. As regards the claim of the defendant company for adjustment the Subordinate Judge observed that the defendant company was not entitled to avail of any condition contained in the registered lease deed Ex. L and L (I) and that as between the defendant company and the plaintiff there was no evidence of any agreement that the plaintiff would ever undertake repairs of the premises. In the circumstances the Subordinate Judge held that the plaintiff was not bound to carry out the repairs and that therefore the defendant company could not claim a set-off for the cost of the repairs against the arrears of rent. The Subordinate Judge, therefore granted the plaintiff decree for ejectment as well as arrears of rent and mesne profits in both the suits. Against this decision the defendant company preferred appeals to the Calcutta High Court. By its judgment dated March 27, 1962 the High Court held that the plaintiff was not entitled to a decree for eviction as the purpose of the lease was manufacturing and, therefore, the notice was bad. The High Court, however, upheld the findings of the Subordinate Judge and held that the suit should be decreed in part for arrears of rent claimed but dismissed so far as the claim for ejectment and damages and mesne profits is concerned.

3. In support of these appeals it was submitted on behalf of the appellant that the High Court was in error in holding that the tenancy was for manufacturing purpose and that six months' notice terminable with a year of tenancy was required. It was said that the onus of proving that the tenancy was for manufacturing purpose was upon the defendant and as that point was not raised in the written statement the High Court should not have allowed the respondent to raise the question. In our opinion there is substance in this argument. But we shall assume in favour of the respondent that such an objection could have been taken by it even without a specific plea in the written statement. Even upon that assumption we are of opinion that there is no evidence in the case to support the finding of the High Court that the purpose of the lease was dominantly for manufacturing purpose. Exhibit W is the Memorandum and Articles of Association. The objects of the company are given in paragraphs 3 and 4 and are to the following effect:

"(3) To carry on the business of motor-cab, motor-car, motor-omnibus, motor-boat and motor-van proprietors, motor-engineers, manufacturers, builders, painters, decorators, and repairers of motor cars, cabs, omnibuses, vans and other vehicles of every description so constructed as to progress whether on land or water or in the air.

(4) To carry on the business of harness-makers and wheel-wrights, mechanical engineers and manufacturers of and dealers in lamps, whips, rugs, leather goods, India-rubber goods, wheels, springs, axles, upholsterings, India-rubber tyres and all component parts of any carriage or vehicle and other articles used in the manufacture or fitting up of the above mentioned or any similar articles, and manufacturers or factors of or dealers in all products or substances which may be used in or in connection with the said business or any of them or in which it may be considered advantageous to deal." It cannot be said from these paragraphs that the object of the company was dominantly manufacturing purpose. The High Court has in this connection referred to the evidence of Mr. J. N. Ghose, the Managing Director of the defendant company. In reply to question 235 the witness said that the company had business as "Automobile engineers, coach builders, refrigerators, motor, mechanical engineer, body builders and the like and that business is continuing". In answer to question No. 247 the witness said that the company had agency to deal in Austin cars. It is true that in the registered lease deed Ex. L and L (I) there is the description of the lessee as coach-builder. But it is obvious that the defendant company cannot claim to be holding under the registered lease deed Ex. L and L (I) and so the purpose mentioned in the lease deed cannot be taken into consideration. In our opinion neither the evidence of Mr. J. N. Ghose nor the statement in Ex. W, Memorandum and Articles of Association, can be taken as sufficient evidence to prove that the purpose of the lease was exclusively or even dominantly for a manufacturing purpose. It follows, therefore, that the High Court was in error in holding that the dominant purpose of the lease was manufacture and so 15 days' notice ending with the month of each tenancy must be held to be insufficient.

4. The High Court expressed the view that the test for applying the presumption of Section 106 of the Transfer of Property Act is to ascertain what was the dominant purpose of the lease and not whether the lease was exclusively for manufacturing purpose. Section 106 of the Transfer of Property Act states:

"In the absence of a contract or local law or usage to the contrary, a lease of immoveable property for agricultural or manufacturing purposes shall be deemed to be a lease from year to year, terminable, on the part of either lessor or lessee, by six months' notice expiring with the end of a year of the tenancy; and a lease of immoveable property for any other purpose shall be deemed to be a lease from month to month, terminable, on the part of either lessor or lessee, by fifteen days' notice expiring with the end of a month of the tenancy.

Every notice under this section must be in writing, signed by or on behalf of the person giving it, and either be sent by post to the party who is intended to be bound by it or be tendered or delivered personally to such party or to one of his family or servants, at his residence, or (if such tender or delivery is not practicable) affixed to a conspicuous part of the property."

5. Counsel on behalf of the appellant referred to the decision of the Court of Appeal in Howkins v. Jardine, 1951-1 KB 614. In that case the landlord granted to the tenant a tenancy from year to year, terminable within six months, of seven acres of land and three cottages on the land. The lease contained provisions usual in a lease of an agricultural holding. The tenant, who farmed other land in addition to the seven acres, sub-let the three cottages to persons who were not engaged in agriculture. After the death of the landlord his executors served on the tenant twelve months' notice to quit the cottages, and land under Section 23, sub-section (1) of the Agricultural Holdings Act, 1948. The tenant thereupon served a counter notice under Section 24, sub-section (1) of the Act. The Minister of Agriculture having given his assent to the notice to quit, the tenant appealed to the Agricultural Land Tribunal, who allowed his appeal, holding that the notice to quit was inoperative. Proceedings were then brought in the county court by the executors as landlords, and they were granted by the county court judge a declaration that they were entitled to possession of the cottages and to mesne profits on the ground that the decision of the tribunal rendered the notice to quit invalid so far as it related to the land as distinct from cottages. In this state of facts, it was decided by the Court of Appeal that Section 1 of the Act of 1948 which defined 'Agricultural holding' as meaning "the aggregate of the agricultural land comprised in a contract of tenancy" did not effect a severance of agricultural land and non-agricultural land, and as the lease in question was in substance a lease of an agricultural holding, therefore, the whole of the subject-matter of the contract of tenancy came within the protection of the Act and the appeal of the tenant was accordingly allowed. It was submitted on behalf of the respondents that a similar principle must be applied in construing Section 106 of the Transfer of Property Act and if the purpose of the lease was mainly or in substance a manufacturing purpose, a presumption of yearly tenancy will arise and that it was incumbent upon the landlord to give a notice expiring with the end of the year of tenancy if the lease was to be validly determined. The opposite point of view is put forward on behalf of the appellant. It was argued that the test was exclusiveness of manufacturing purpose for applying the presumption under Section 106 of the Transfer of Property Act. Reliance was placed upon the decision of the Calcutta High Court in Ramesh Chandra v. Surya Properties, AIR 1957 Cal 193 and Sati Prasanna v. Md. Fazel, AIR 1952 Cal 320. But we do not propose in this case to express our concluded opinion regarding Section 106 of the Transfer of Property Act. We shall proceed on the assumption that the argument of the respondent is correct and that the test applicable under Section 106 of the Transfer of Property Act is not exclusiveness of purpose but what is the main or substantial purpose of the lease. As we have already shown there is no proper material on the record of the case from which it can be inferred that the dominant purpose of the lease was manufacture or that the respondent substantially used the premises for manufacturing purposes. It follows, therefore that the trial court was right in holding that the tenancy was monthly and notices Exs. I and I-A were legally valid for termination of the tenancy.

6. For these reasons we set aside the judgment of the High Court dated March 27, 1962 in both the appeals and restore the judgment of the Subordinate Judge, Second Court, Alipore in Title Suits Nos. 30 and 31 of 1953. The appeals are accordingly allowed with costs. One set of hearing fee.

Appeals allowed.

AIR 1970 SUPREME COURT 843

(V 57 C 182)

(From: Patna)

S. M. SIKRI, G. K. MITTER AND
P. JAGANMOHAN REDDY, JJ.

Hari Sao and another, Appellants v.
The State of Bihar, Respondents.

Criminal Appeal No. 240 (N) of 1966,
D/- 15-10-1969.

Penal Code (1860), Sections 415 and 420
— Inducing Station Master to make out Railway Receipt — Railway Receipt made out stating that consignment was said to contain 251 bags of chillies with letters
L/U endorsed meaning that responsibility for loading and unloading vested with consignor — Wagons found to contain only 197 bags of chaff — Charge of cheating station master, held could not be established, as railway did not incur any additional liability by the false representation that consignment contained 251 bags and the issue of the railway receipt therefore was not likely to cause any damage or harm to the railway. No question of cheating the railway or the Station Master therefore arose. AIR 1950 Nag 85 and AIR 1956 Mad 176, Ref.; Decision of Patna High Court, Reversed. (Para 12)

Cases Referred: Chronological Paras

(1956) AIR 1956 Mad 176 (V 43) =

1955 Mad WN 983, Union of India v. S. P. L. Lekhu Reddiar

(1950) AIR 1950 Nag 85 (V 37) =

ILR (1950) Nag 212, Dominion

LM/AN/F199/69/GGM/P

of India v. Firm Museram Kishun Prasad

10

The Judgment of the Court was delivered by

MITTER, J.: This appeal by special leave is from a judgment and order of the High Court of Patna upholding the conviction of the two appellants under Section 420, I. P. C. read with Section 34 but reducing the sentence of imprisonment on each of them by awarding rigorous imprisonment for three years in place of seven years. The imposition of fine of Rs. 6,000 on each of the appellants by the Sessions Judge was maintained by the High Court. The two appellants were charged with having cheated the Assistant Station Master of Sheonarayanpur Railway Station on or about the period 13th May, 1960 to 12th May, 1963 by dishonestly inducing him to make a railway receipt with false particulars which was capable of being converted into a valuable security and thereby committed an offence punishable under Section 420, I. P. C. Five other persons were charged along with the appellants with having committed an offence punishable under Section 120-B read with Section 420 of the Indian Penal Code but they were acquitted. The appellants were also charged under Section 468 of the Indian Penal Code but they were acquitted of this.

2. The facts about which there can be no dispute are as follows. The appellant Shankar Sah met the Station Master of Sheonarayanpur Railway Station on May 11, 1960 and produced a forwarding note for booking a consignment of dry chillies to Calcutta. A wagon was allotted to him and stabled in the shed on May 12, 1960. On the day following both the appellants came to the Station Master and the necessary allotment entry was made in the forwarding note. The loading was done by the appellants without any help from any railway employee and the appellants wanted to be supplied with rivets after the wagon was loaded by them. Such supply being given by the Station Master they put the rivets on the wagon. A railway khalasi examined the rivets, sealed the wagon and fixed card labels on both sides of the wagon prepared by the Station Master. The railway receipt for the goods was made out by the Station Master to the effect that the consignment was "said to contain" 251 bags of dry chillies. The letters L/U were endorsed on the railway receipt meaning that the responsibility for loading and unloading of the consignment rested with the consignor. There was no facility for weighing the goods at the station and a note was made that the weight was as given by the consignor. This was indicated by the endorsement S. W. A. (sender's weight accepted). The wagon was attached to a goods train on the same day and carried forward out of the station on its way to Calcutta. There were frequent checking of the rivets and the seals of the wagon during the night of 13th May but on the morning of the 14th the seal on one side of the wagon was broken and the seal card lying on the ground. The wagon was detached and taken to a goods shed and checked at about 2 p. m. on 15th May. It was found that the wagon contained only 197 bags of chaff (Bbusa) instead of 251 bags of dry chillies. An entry was made in the station diary and a first information report was lodged on 18th May. The police submitted a charge sheet against the accused and the case proceeded to trial after the commitment enquiry. The prosecution examined several witnesses to establish that the appellants had brought straw to the goods shed at Sheonarayanpur in place of chillies and loaded the wagon therewith. The Sessions Judge did not accept the evidence of some of them but relied upon that of P. W. 8, a cartman who gave testimony to the effect that he along with others had loaded straw in the wagon mentioned.

3. There was evidence before the Sessions Judge that the appellants had obtained a sum of Rs. 5,500 from one Murarilal Jhunjhunwala by handing over the railway receipt to him by representing that they had hooked 251 bags of chillies. The Sessions Judge held that the station master had not checked the goods or verified the weight thereof but had acted on the representation of the appellants. According to him the appellants were guilty of an offence under Section 420 read with Section 34, I. P. C. and he sentenced them as already mentioned.

4. In appeal the learned Judge of the High Court after discussing the evidence felt satisfied that what was found as a result of the checking at 2 p. m. on 15th May, 1960 to be present in the wagon was nothing but the consignment which had been originally loaded by the appellants at Sheonarayanpur on the afternoon of 13th May, 1960". He further held that

"...the representation made by the appellants to the Station Master (P. W. 39) both orally and in the forwarding note which they had presented to him was a false representation and on the strength of such false representation the appellants had induced the Station Master to make out for them the railway receipt in respect of 251 bags of dry chillies. It is manifest that a valuable security such as a railway receipt is, in respect of 251 bags of chillies had been delivered to the appellants by the Station Master on the basis of the false representation which they had made to him both orally and in the forwarding note". The learned Judge therefore held that the appellants had committed the offence of cheating acting together in pursuance of their common intention.

5. It had been urged that the appellants were not guilty of cheating inasmuch as the Station Master had written on the railway receipt that the consignment in question was said to be 251 bags of dry chillies and thus he could not be said to have acted upon the declaration of the appellants being correct. Similarly with regard to the other endorsement on the railway receipt, "S. W. A." meaning "senders' weight accepted" it was made by the Station Master acting upon the declaration of the appellants.

6. Under Section 415 of the Indian Penal Code a person is said to cheat when he by deceiving another person fraudulently or dishonestly induces the person so deceived to deliver any property to him or to consent that he shall retain any property or intentionally induces the person so deceived to do or omit to do anything which he would not do or omit if he was not so deceived and which act or omission causes or is likely to cause damage or harm to that person in body, mind, reputation or property. There can be no doubt that the appellants had by deceiving the Station Master induced him to deliver a railway receipt which could be used as a valuable security, but assuming that the appellants thereby induced the Station Master to make out the railway receipt it will still have to be shown that the making out of the receipt was likely to cause damage or harm to the railway or the Station Master.

7. We have therefore to examine whether the issue of the railway receipt with the endorsements "said to contain" and "S. W. A." were likely to cause any damage to the railway. Under Sec. 58 of the Indian Railways Act the owner or person having charge of any goods which are brought upon a railway for the purpose of being carried thereon, has to deliver to a railway servant appointed in that behalf an account in writing signed by such owner or person and containing such description of the goods as may be sufficient to determine the rate which the railway administration is entitled to charge in respect thereof. This section casts an obligation on the owner or person having charge of goods to be carried by a railway to give a correct description thereof. Failure in this respect may, under sub-section (3) entitle the railway administration to charge in respect of the carriage of the goods at a rate not exceeding double the highest rate which may be in force at the time on the railway for any class of goods. Under Section 72 a person delivering to a railway administration goods to be carried by railway has to execute a note (forwarding note) in which the sender or his agent has to give such particulars in respect thereof as may be required. Section 73 provides for the general responsibility of a railway administration as a carrier of animals and goods except from any of the causes specified therein. But under the proviso to the section even in the case of loss, destruction etc. from any of the said causes the railway administration is not relieved of its responsibility for the loss, destruction etc., of the goods unless it proves that it has used reasonable foresight and care in the carriage of the goods. Under Section 74 where goods are tendered to a railway administration for carriage at a special reduced rate known as 'the owner's risk rate' then, notwithstanding anything contained in Section 73, the railway administration is not to be responsible for any loss, destruction, damage etc., from whatever cause arising, except upon proof that such loss, damage, destruction etc., was due to negligence or misconduct on the part of the railway administration or any of its servants. Under Section 106 a person requested under Section 58 to give an account with respect to any goods and giving one which is materially false may be punished with fine which may extend to Rs. 150/- for every quintal or part of a quintal of the goods in addition to any rate or other charge to which the goods may be liable.

8. It is therefore clear that the railway administration may be liable for loss, destruction or non-delivery of the goods under Section 73 if it fails to use reasonable foresight and care in the carriage of the same and would also be similarly liable even in respect of goods carried at special reduced rate if there was negligence and misconduct on its part or any of its servants. Such liability on the part of the railway arises whenever it issues a railway receipt. The question therefore arises as to whether the railway ran any additional risk or liability in acting upon the representation of the appellants and mentioning in the railway receipt the goods consigned were said to be 251 bags of chillies when in fact they were only 197 bags of straw. There can be little doubt that the railway did not run any additional risk. In case the goods were consumed by fire or even stolen from the wagon due to any negligence on the part of railway administration the owner would have to prove that he had put on rail 251 bags of chillies. He would also have to prove the weight of the chillies and the approximate value thereof. For this he would have to call evidence to show how and when he acquired the goods and the price he paid for them and exactly what quantity he loaded in the wagons. There would be no presumption that the goods put in the wagon were chillies because the railway did not accept the consignment as such and described it as 251 bags allegedly containing chillies. Nor was there any acceptance of the weight of the goods by the railway. The endorsement 'S. W. A.' would negate the plea, if any, that the weight was accepted by the railway. The endorsement "L/U" emphasised that the loading and unloading being in charge of the consignor the railway could not be held liable for any negligence in loading or unloading.

9. In this connection reference may be made to the Goods Tariff Rules. Rule 15 of Part I of the Goods Tariff shows that:

"The weight, description and classification of goods and quotation of rates as given in the railway receipt and forwarding note are merely inserted for the purpose of estimating the railway charges and the railway reserves the right of re-measurement, re-weighment, re-classification of goods and re-calculation of rates and other charges and correction of any other errors at the place of destination and of collecting any amount that may have been omitted or undercharged. No admission is conveyed by a railway receipt that the weight as shown therein has been received or that the description of goods as furnished by the consignor is correct."

Under Rule 22 (1) every consignment of goods when handed to the railway for despatch must be accompanied by a forwarding note which must be signed by the sender or his authorised agent and must contain a declaration of the weight in accordance with Section 53 of the Indian Railways Act and destination of the goods consigned. Under Rule 24 (2) if a materially false account is delivered with respect to the description of any goods, the person who gives such false account, and if he is not the owner, the owner also, is, on conviction by a Magistrate, liable to a fine which may extend to Rs. 50/- per maund or part of a maund of the goods, and such fine will be in addition to the rate to which the goods may be liable.

10. In Dominion of India v. Firm Museram Kishunprasad, AIR 1930 Nag 85 a railway receipt was issued to the consignor qualified with the statement that the wagon was said to contain 255 bags of coconuts. As only 251 bags were received at the destination, the plaintiff made a claim for the price of the 4 bags of coconuts by way of damages. It was held by the Nagpur High Court that there was no proof that 255 bags had in fact been loaded. Referring to Rule 22 of the Goods Tariff General Rules it was said that the receipt issued "qualified the number of stating that the wagon was 'said to contain' 255 bags and the number was mentioned merely to calculate the freight." Reference was also made to Rule 15 under which the mentioning of the weight in the railway receipt did not amount to an admission of the correctness of the statement and according to Nagpur High Court "this rule applies with even more vigour where the railway receipt in addition contains the 'said to contain' remark."

11. In Union of India v. S. P. L. Lakhu Reddiar, AIR 1956 Mad 176 a claim was made against the railway for short delivery of 11 bags. The railway receipt showed that the wagon was said to contain 200 bags of white toor. It was urged there that as the seals were intact at the end of the journey the responsibility for the shortage must lie with the railway. It was pointed out that this would be so if the railway staff had loaded the goods after verifying them and in the circumstances of the case the railway could not be held responsible for any shortage so long as there was no proof of tampering with the seals. The decision in the Nagpur case (supra) was followed in Madras and it was held that the endorsement to the effect that the consignment was 'said to contain' a certain number of bags did not amount to any admission on the part of the railway administration that the said number of bags had in fact been loaded.

12. It appears to us that the false representation made by the appellants in obtaining the railway receipt in the form in which it was issued did not cast any additional liability on the railway and the issue of the railway receipt therefore was not likely to cause any damage or harm to the railway. No question of cheating the railway or the Station Master therefore arose in this case and the appeal must be allowed. The appellants are directed to be set at liberty. The fine, if paid, must be refunded.

Appeal allowed.

AIR 1970 SUPREME COURT 840
(V 57 C 183)

(From: Andhra Pradesh)

J. C. SHAH AND K. S. HECDE, JJ.

Somnath Berman, Appellant v. Dr. S. P. Raju and another, Respondents.

Civil Appeal No. 2342 of 1968 with C. M. P. No. 3588 of 1968, D/- 18-10-1969.

Specific Relief Act (1963), Section 9 — Action for ejectment against trespasser — Prior possession of plaintiff is sufficient title notwithstanding that suit is brought more than six months after dispossession. (1883) ILR 9 Cal 130 & (1890) ILR 17 Cal 258 & (1899) ILR 26 Cal 579, Overruled.

Section 9 is no way inconsistent with the position that as against a wrong doer, prior possession of the plaintiff, in an action of ejectment, is sufficient title, even if the suit be brought more than six months after the act of dispossession complained of and that the wrong doer cannot successfully resist the suit by showing that the title and right to possession are in a third person. Therefore a person having possessory title can get a declaration that he was the owner of the land in suit and an injunction restraining the defendant from interfering with his possession. (1893) 20 Ind App 99 & (1903) ILR 26 Mad 514 & (1884) ILR 8 Bom 371 and AIR 1914 All 54 (2) & (1891) ILR 13 All 537 & AIR 1950 Pat 222, Approved; (1883) ILR 9 Cal 130 & (1890) ILR 17 Cal 256 & (1899) ILR 26 Cal 579, Overruled. (Para 10)

LM/AN/F205/69/GGM/M

Cases Referred:	Chronological	Paras
(1950) AIR 1950 Pat 222 (V 37) = 31 Pat LT 100, Subodh Gopal Bose v. Province of Bihar		10
(1914) AIR 1914 All 54 (2) (V 1)= ILR 36 All 51, Umrao Singh v. Ramji Das		10
(1903) ILR 26 Mad 514, Narayan Row v. Dharmachar		10
(1899) ILR 26 Cal 579= 3 Cal WN 568, Nisa Chand Gaita v. Kanchiram Bagani		10
(1893) 20 Ind App 99= ILR 20 Cal 834, Ismail Ariff v. Mahomed Ghouse		9
(1891) ILR 13 All 537= 1891 All WN 196, Wali Ahmad Khan v. Ajudhia Kundu		10
(1890) ILR 17 Cal 256, Parmeshur Chowdhry v. Brijo Lal Chowdhry		10
(1884) ILR 8 Bom 371, Krishnarao Yeshwant v. Vasudeo Appaji Ghalikar		10
(1883) ILR 9 Cal 39= 11 Cal LR 342, Debi Churn Baido v. Issur Chunder Manjee		10
(1883) ILR 9 Cal 130= 11 Cal LR 393, Ertaza Hossein v. Bany Mistry		10

The Judgment of the Court was delivered by.

HEGDE, J.:— This appeal has been brought by the 1st defendant in O. S. No. 210 of 1958 on the file of the 1st Additional Judge, City Civil Court, Hyderabad. That was a suit brought by the 1st respondent-plaintiff for possession of the suit property. That suit was dismissed by the trial Court but in appeal the High Court of Andhra Pradesh reversed the decree of the trial Court and decreed the plaintiff's suit for possession. Thereupon this appeal has been brought after obtaining a certificate under Article 133 (1) (a) of the Constitution.

2. The subject matter of the suit is a piece of land in Himayatnagar measuring 2856 sq. yards. The plaintiff's case is that he purchased this land from one Jamsheer Khan with other plots in the vicinity under two sale deeds marked Exhs. P-2 and P-3; thereafter he was in possession of the same; when he was in possession, the second defendant trespassed into the said property and took possession of the same, thereafter he illegally sold the same to the 1st defendant. The defendants denied the plaintiff allegations. They denied that the plaintiff had any title to the suit property or that he was in possession of the same at any time. On the other hand they pleaded that the second defendant who had acquired title to the suit property by adverse possession had sold the same to the 1st defendant in the year 1946.

3. The trial Court came to the conclusion that the plaintiff has not established his title to the suit property. It also held that the plaintiff has not satisfactorily proved that he was in possession of the suit property at any time. In view of those findings it thought that it was not necessary to go into the defendant's plea of adverse possession. In the result it dismissed the plaintiff's suit. In appeal the High Court agreed with the trial Court that the plaintiff has not proved his title to the suit property. It rejected the plea of the defendants that they have perfected their title to the suit property by adverse possession. But differing from the trial Court it came to the conclusion that the plaintiff was put into possession of the suit property by his vendor Jamsheer Khan Sahab in about the year 1930 and he was in possession of the same till about the year 1945, when the second defendant trespassed on the same and took possession of it.

4. In view of the concurrent finding reached by the trial Court and the High Court that the plaintiff has not proved his title, that question was not reopened in this Court. The finding of the High Court that the defendants have not established their plea of title by adverse possession was challenged though feebly. It was contended before us that the plaintiff who based his suit on title and prior possession having failed to establish his title, his suit has to fail. Further the finding of the High Court that the plaintiff was in possession of the said property between 1930 to 1945 was also assailed before us.

5. The appellant claims that he came into the possession of the suit property on the strength of the sale deed executed by the second defendant in his favour on 1-10-1946. The suit from which this appeal arises was initially instituted on the original side of the High Court of Hyderabad in the year 1949. Therefore to establish his claim of title by adverse possession, the 1st defendant must primarily depend on the fact that the second defendant was in possession of the suit property for a period of over nine years before he sold the same to him. Though the second defendant filed a written statement supporting the case of the 1st defendant and though he was present at the time of hearing on several occasions, he was not examined as a witness in this case to support the plea of adverse possession put forward by the defendants. No explanation is forthcoming for his non-examination. This circumstance goes a long way to discredit the defendant's plea of adverse possession. The 1st defendant's evidence as regards adverse possession is of very little significance as his knowledge of the suit property prior to the date he purchased the same is very little. The only other evidence relied on in support of the plea of adverse possession is that of D. W. 2, Shammhu Prashad who claims to have taken the suit property on lease from the second defendant. The lease deed said to have been executed by him is marked as Exh. D/1. It is not explained how the 1st defendant came into possession of Exh. D/1. Though the suit was filed as far back as 1949, Exh. D/1 was produced into Court for the first time in the year 1960. No explanation has been given for this inordinate delay in producing Exh. D/1, (an unregistered document) in Court. According to D. W. 2, the 1st defendant knew about this document as far back as 1950. Under these circumstances, the High Court was fully justified in rejecting the testimony of D. W. 2 and not relying on Exh. D/1. The other evidence adduced by the 1st defendant relating to the plea of adverse possession was not commended for our acceptance. Therefore we need not consider the same. Hence we agree with the High Court that the defendants have failed to establish their plea of adverse possession.

6. Now coming to the evidence relating to the plaintiff's possession of the suit property from the year 1930 to 1945, we have firstly the oral testimony of the plaintiff. The High Court has accepted the plaintiff's evidence as creditworthy. The plaintiff is a responsible person. He held important offices both under the State Government as well as under the United Nations. Prima facie his evidence is worthy of acceptance. This would be particularly so in view of the non-examination of the second defendant. The question before the trial Court and the High Court was whether the plaintiff was in possession of the suit property between 1930 to 1945 or whether the second defendant was in possession of the same during that period? On this aspect, the evidence is really one sided. The evidence of the plaintiff that he came into possession of the suit property under Exhs. P-2 and P-3 is supported by the recitals in those documents. In considering the question whether Jamsheer Khan, the vendor under Exhs. P-2 and P-3, had put the plaintiff into possession of the suit property, the fact that Jamsheer Khan had no title to the same is not very material. There is no reason to think that the recitals contained in Exhs. P-2 and P-3 as to the delivery of possession are false recitals. There is documentary evidence to show that the plaintiff paid the 'Nazul' for the properties purchased by him under Exhs. P-2 and P-3 after his purchase. It is true that those documents do not show how much 'Nazul' was paid in respect of the suit property but the second defendant has produced no documents to show that he had paid any 'Nazul' in respect of the suit property. Exhibit P-4 is a stamped revenue receipt on a printed form executed in favour of the plaintiff by the Magtadar on August 16, 1939 for Rs. 331/14/4 pies. It relates to the lands which belonged to Jamsheer Khan and situate at Narayanguda. Evidently that recital refers to the lands covered by Exts. P-2 and P-3. It recites that a sum of Rs. 331/14/4 Ps. was received from the plaintiff as 'Nazul' for the period from 15th Ahn 1338 Fasli to the end of the Ahn 1346 Fasli at the rate of Rupees 41/4/5 Ps. per year. The sale under Exhs. P-2 and P-3 was made in 1930. Evidently the 'Nazul' in respect of those properties was in arrears till 1939. The 'Nazul' due under Exhs. P-2 and P-3 comes to Rs. 41/- and odd per year as seen from Exh. P-6.

7. Exhibit P-5 is a letter dated 11-12-1937 received by the plaintiff from Mr.

J. D. M. Dean (P. W. 2), First Divisional Engineer, Hyderabad City. It relates to the construction of a road from Museerabad to Bashir Bagh. It states that under the Firman dated 29th Shaban 56 Hijri, H. E. H. The Nizam was pleased to accord sanction to the acquisition of 20 per cent of the land without any compensation for the construction of road, from the owners of the land and that for the excess land required, compensation will be paid. That letter further mentions that total area of the land belonging to the plaintiff was 7815 sq. yds. out of which 3112 sq. yds. were required for the construction of the road; out of that 1563 sq. yds. being the 20 per cent of the entire area was to be taken without any compensation and the value of the remaining 549 sq. yds. will be paid to the plaintiff. That letter further informed the plaintiff that the value of the additional area which might finally be determined after the marking may be obtained from the department. It is established that road from Musheerabad to Bashir Bagh was laid not only across the plot covered under P. 3 but also across the site purchased under Ex. P-2 in which the suit land is situate. That was obvious because if the road did not touch any portion of Exh. P-2, the entire area of the land belonging to plaintiff would have been only 5114 sq. yds. and not 7815 sq. yds. as mentioned in Exh. P-5. It also establishes that the plaintiff was recognised by the City Improvement Board as the person entitled to compensation in respect of that land. Evidence further discloses that the plaintiff was paid compensation in respect of the land taken from him in excess of 20 per cent referred to earlier. The oral evidence adduced in the case coupled with Exhs. P-2, P-4 and P-5 satisfactorily establishes the fact that the plaintiff was in possession of the suit property till about 1945.

8. In addition to the evidence referred to earlier, the High Court has also relied on two other documents namely Exts. D-8 and D-9, but those documents were produced as additional evidence in the High Court. Their connection with the suit property is not satisfactorily established. Therefore we have excluded them from consideration. If we bear in mind the fact that the question for decision is whether the plaintiff or the 2nd defendant was in possession of the suit property between the years 1930 to 1945, there is hardly any doubt that the preponderance of evidence is in favour of the plaintiff's case. As seen earlier, the defendants have not produced any reliable evidence to support their case. Hence we agree with the High Court that the plaintiff has succeeded in establishing that he was in possession of the suit property prior to 1945.

9. It was next contended on behalf of the appellant that in a suit for possession brought on the basis of title, the plaintiff cannot succeed unless he proves his title to the suit property as well as its possession within 12 years. According to the appellant, except in a suit under Section 9 of the Specific Relief Act, the plaintiff for succeeding in the suit, has to prove both existing title to the suit property and its possession within 12 years. We are unable to accept this contention as correct. In our opinion the possession of the plaintiff prior to 1945 is a good title against all but the true owner. The defendants who are mere trespassers cannot defeat the plaintiff's lawful possession by ousting him from the suit property. Possessory title is a good title as against everybody other than the lawful owner. In Ismail Ariff v. Mahomed Ghouse, (1893) 20 Ind App 99 (PC), the Judicial Committee came to the conclusion that a person having possessory title can get a declaration that he was the owner of the land in suit and an injunction restraining the defendant from interfering with his possession. Therein it was observed that the possession of the plaintiff was a sufficient evidence of title as owner against the defendant.

10. In Narayana Row v. Dharmachar, (1903) ILR 26 Mad 514 a bench of the Madras High Court consisting of Bhashyam Ayyangar and Moore, JJ., held that possession is, under the Indian, as under the English law, good title against all but the true owner. Section 9 of the Specific Relief Act is in no way inconsistent with the position that as against a wrongdoer, prior possession of the plaintiff, in an action of ejectment, is sufficient title, even if the suit be brought more than six months after the act of dispossession complained of and that the wrongdoer cannot successfully resist the suit by showing that the title and right to possession are in a third person. The same view was taken by the Bombay High Court in Krishnarao Yashwant v. Vasudev Appaji Ghotikar, (1884) ILR 8 Bom 371. That was also the view taken by the Allahabad High Court—See Umrao Singh v. Ramji Das, ILR 38 All 51= (AIR 1914 All 54 (2)), Wali Ahmed Khan v. Ajudhia Kandu, (1891) ILR 13 All 537. In Subodh Gopal Bose v. Province of Bihar, AIR 1950 Pat 222 the Patna High Court adhered to the view taken by the Madras, Bombay and Allahabad High Courts. The contrary view taken by the Calcutta High Court in Debi Churn Boldo v. Issur Chunder Manjee, (1883) ILR 9 Cal 39; Ertaza Houssein v. Bany Mistry, (1883) ILR 9 Cal 130, Purmeshur Chowdhry v. Brij Lal Chowdhry, (1890) ILR 17 Cal 256 and Nisa Chand Gaita v. Kanchiram Bagani, (1899) ILR 26 Cal 579, in our opinion does not lay down the law correctly.

ii. In the result this appeal fails and the same is dismissed with costs. We see no reason to accept any additional evidence in this Court. Hence C. M. P. No. 3588 of 1968 is dismissed, but no costs. Appeal dismissed.

AIR 1970 SUPREME COURT 530

(V 57 C 181)

(From: Bombay)

J. C. SHAH AND K. S. HEGBDE, JJ.

Dattatrayaya Shankarilal Ambalgi and others, Appellants v. The Collector of Sholapur and another, Respondents.

Civil Appeals Nos. 2313 and 2314 of 1966, D/- 17-10-1967.

Land Acquisition Act (1894), Section 54 — Appeal to Supreme Court — Interference with valuation made by High Court — Normal rule — Decision of Bombay High Court, Reversed.

be enforced because it was not executed in the manner required by Article 299 (1) of the Constitution and which was conclusive evidence the valuation by the High Court could not be sustained. Decision of Bombay High Court, Reversed.

(Pars 2, 3)

Cases Referred: Chronological Pars

(1959) AIR 1959 SC 429 (V 46)=

(1959) Supp (1) SCR 401, Spl.

Land Acquisition Officer, Bangalore v. T. Adinarayan Setty

The judgment of the Court was delivered by

SHAH, J.:— The appellant is the owner of Final Plot No. 22 in Town Planning Scheme No. III, Sholapur. The land is within the limits of the Sholapur Municipality and admeasures 71 acres. A part of the land measuring 31 acres, 7 gunthas, and 63 2/9 sq. yards was notified on January 23, 1958, under Section 4 of the Land Acquisition Act for compulsory acquisition for a public purpose, viz., a Polytechnic Institute. The Land Acquisition Officer awarded the appellant compensation for the land at the rate of Rs. 2,000/- per acre. In a reference made under Section 18 of the Land Acquisition Act, the Civil Judge, Senior Division, Sholapur, enhanced the compensation to Rs. 3,500/- per acre. The Land Acquisition Officer and the appellant appealed to the High Court of Bombay. In appeal the High Court awarded compensation at the rate of Rs. 2,000/- per acre. With certificate granted by the High Court these two appeals are preferred by the appellant.

3. In valuating the land the High Court failed to appreciate the full significance of a very important piece of evidence which, in our judgment, is practically conclusive. The Government of Bombay desired to acquire the land of the appellant by private agreement. In the view of the Consulting Surveyor to the Government the value of the land could not be less than Rs. 6,000/- per acre. The Sub-Divisional Officer of Sholapur wrote on July 27, 1957 to the City Survey Officer that the land may be purchased from the appellant at the rate of Rs. 6,000/- per acre and an agreement may be obtained from him. Negotiations were then started and on November 20, 1957 a formal agreement was executed by the appellant and the Collector for sale of the land to the Government of Bombay at the rate of Rs. 5,000/- per acre for the Polytechnic Institute. Possession of the land was delivered pursuant to the agreement. But this agreement was not executed in the manner required by Article 299 (1) of the Constitution and was on that account not enforceable against the Government. The State authorities apparently sought to take advantage of this infirmity.

4. The Deputy Secretary to the Government of Bombay, Education Department, wrote to the Collector of Sholapur on March 7, 1958, the following letter:

"Subject:— District Polytechnic, Sholapur — Acquisition of land for locating of the — Reference:— Your letter No. X/337 dated the 15th February, 1958, on the subject mentioned above.

2. The private property enforcement agreement executed between you and the owners of the land proposed to be acquired for locating the District Polytechnic, Sholapur, is not expressed to be made by the Governor as required by Article 299 (1) of the Constitution and is not binding on Government. In view of this you are requested to direct the Land Acquisition Officer as under:—

(1) In case the amount under the award would be less than the amount of agreement, he should not recognise the agreement and recommend to Government or sanctioning authority the lower amount i.e., the amount under the award.

(2) In case the amount under the award is higher than the amount of the agreement he should accept the lower amount and recommend to Government or sanctioning authority the lower amount under the agreement.

(3) x x x x
Sd/-

Dy. Secy. to the Govt. of Bombay, Education Department."

A copy of the letter was forwarded to the Prant Officer, Sholapur Division for "immediate necessary action" and it was intimated that the instructions given by Government should be very rigidly followed and compliance reported early.

5. Execution of the agreement to purchase the property is admitted in the letter. The Collector was asked to "direct" the Land Acquisition Officer not to "recognise the agreement" if the amount of compensation payable under the award was less than the rate stipulated in the agreement, and to hold the appellant bound by the agreement if in his view the amount of compensation was "higher" than the stipulated rate. This letter establishes that on behalf of the Government of Bombay the Collector had agreed to purchase the land. There is no dispute that the rate agreed upon was Rs. 5,000/- per acre. This agreement was executed only a few months before the date of the notification under Section 4. The agreement related to the land itself and was strongly probative of the value of the land at Rs. 5,000/- per acre. It is clear from the record that the Collector acted with authority. The Government of Bombay was informed of the agreement, and it never protested against the agreement. If the appellant claimed compensation at a rate higher than the agreed rate his claim would obviously not have been entertained. We fail to see why the rate at which the Government agreed through its Collector to purchase the land is not good and strong evidence of the value of the land. A suit instituted for enforcement of the agreement may not have been enforceable, because the agreement was not executed in the manner required by Article 299 (1) of the Constitution, but the agreement furnished strong evidence of the offer made by the Collector to purchase the land on behalf of the Government at the rate of Rs. 5,000/- per acre.

6. Unfortunately the Trial Court as well as the High Court failed to appreciate the full significance of the letter dated March 7, 1958 which the Deputy Secretary to the Government of Bombay, Education Department, wrote to the Collector. It was undoubtedly open to the Land Acquisition Officer to establish that the Collector had with a view to benefit the claimant entered into an agreement at an inflated rate. But no such attempt was made. We see no reason to hold that evidence furnished by the letter dated March 7, 1958 of the value of the land under acquisition should be ignored and the value of the land should be determined on the basis of transactions relating to other pieces of land far removed from the date on which the notification under Section 4 of the Land Acquisition Act was issued.

7. The appeals are allowed. The appellant is entitled to compensation at the rate of Rs. 5,000/- per acre, inclusive of 15% solatium. The appellant will be entitled to interest on the amount of compensation at the rate of 4% per annum from the date on which possession was taken. The State will pay the cost of the appellant in this Court as well as in the High Court. One hearing fee.

Appeals allowed.

AIR 1970 SUPREME COURT 852 (V 57 C 185)

J. C. SHAH, V. RAMASWAMI
AND A. N. GROVER, JJ.

Pushkar Mukherjee and others, Petitioners v. The State of West Bengal, Respondent.

Writ Petn. No. 179 of 1968, D/- 7-11-1968.

(A) Public Safety — Preventive Detention Act (1950), Section 3 (1) (a) and (2) — Preventive detention — Satisfaction of detaining authority — Subjective and not objective, and hence not justiciable — Validity of detention can, however, be challenged on ground of mala fides or that grounds supplied are irrelevant or vague — (Constitution of India, Article 22.)

The satisfaction of the detaining authority to which Section 3 (1) (a) refers is subjective and not objective satisfaction, and so is not justiciable. Therefore, it would not be open to the detenu to ask the Court to consider the question as to whether the said satisfaction of the detaining authority can be justified by the application of objective tests. The reasonableness of the satisfaction of the detaining authority cannot be questioned in a Court of law; the adequacy of the material on which the said satisfaction purports to rest also cannot be examined in a Court of law, except where some of the grounds furnished to the detenu are found to be vague or irrelevant while considering the application of Cls. (i) to (iii) of Section 3 (1) (a) and in that sense are foreign to the Act. AIR 1951 SC 157 Rel. on.

(Paras 5, 6)

The detenu may also challenge the validity of his detention on the ground of mala fides. The detenu may say that the passing of the order of detention was an abuse of the statutory power and was for a collateral purpose. In support of the plea of mala fides, the detenu may urge that along with other facts which show mala fides, the grounds served on him cannot rationally support the conclusion drawn against him by the detaining authority. It is only in this incidental manner that this question can become justiciable; otherwise the reasonableness or propriety of the said satisfaction contemplated by Section 3 (1) (a) cannot be questioned before the Courts.

(Para 7)

(B) Public Safety — Preventive Detention Act (1950), Section 3 (1) — 'Public order', meaning of — Detention can be ordered to prevent subversion of public order but not in aid of maintenance of law and order.

The contravention of any law always affects order but before it can be said to affect public order, it must affect the community or the public at large. In this connection a line of demarcation must be drawn between serious and aggravated forms of disorder which directly affect the community or injure the public interest and the relatively minor breaches of peace of a purely local significance which primarily injure specific individuals, and only in a secondary sense public interest. A mere disturbance of law and order leading to disorder is thus not necessarily sufficient for action under the Preventive Detention Act but a disturbance which will affect public order comes within the scope of the Act. A District Magistrate is therefore entitled to take action under Section 3 (1) of the Act to prevent subversion of public order but not in aid of maintenance of law and order under ordinary circumstances. AIR 1966 SC 740 Rel. on.

(Para 8)

(C) Public Safety — Preventive Detention Act (1950), Sections 3 and 7 — Order of preventive detention — Grounds supplied to detenu containing valid and invalid grounds — Order of detention is illegal — It is not possible to gauge in such cases to what extent bad reasons operated on mind of detaining authority — (Constitution of India, Articles 22 (5) and 32) AIR 1966 SC 740 and AIR 1954 SC 179, Rel. on. (Para 10)

(D) Constitution of India, Articles 22 (5) and 32 — Order of preventive detention — One of grounds extremely vague and not giving sufficient particulars — Constitutional guarantee is infringed — Detention is illegal.

Where the ground of preventive detention supplied to the detenu is extremely vague and gives no particulars to enable the petitioner to make an adequate representation against the order of detention it infringes the Constitutional safeguard provided under Article 22 (5). AIR 1951 SC 157, Rel. on. (Para 14)

The Constitutional requirement that the grounds must not be vague must be satisfied with regard to each of the grounds communicated to the person detained subject to the claim of privilege under Cl. (6) of Article 22 of the Constitution and therefore even though one ground is vague and the other grounds are not vague, the detention is not in accordance with procedure established by law and is therefore illegal. AIR 1953 SC 318 Rel. on. (Para 15)

Cases Referred: Chronological Paras

(1966) AIR 1966 SC 740 (V 53) =
1966-1 SCR 709 = 1966 Cri LJ
608, Ram Manohar Lohia v. State of Bihar 8

(1954) AIR 1954 SC 179 (V 41) =
1954 SCR 418 = 1954 Cri LJ
456, Shibbanlal Saksena v. State of U. P. 10

(1953) AIR 1953 SC 318 (V 40) =
1953 SCR 708 = 1953 Cri LJ
1241, Ram Krishan Bhardwaj v.
State of Delhi 15

(1951) AIR 1951 SC 157 (V 38) =
1951 SCR 167 = 52 Cri LJ 373,
State of Bombay v. Atma Ram
Shridhar Vaidya 5, 14

Mr. R. L. Kohli, Advocate, amicus curiae, for Petitioners; Mr. Debabrata Mukherjee, Sr. Advocate, (Mr. P. K.
Chakravarti, Advocate, with him), for Respondent.

The following Judgment of the Court
was delivered by

RAMASWAMI, J.: In this case the petitioners have obtained a rule calling upon the respondent, viz., the State of West Bengal to show cause why a writ of habeas corpus should not be issued under Article 32 of the Constitution directing their release from detention under orders passed under Section 3 (2) of the Preventive Detention Act, 1950 (Act IV of 1950), hereinafter called the 'Act'.

2. Cause has been shown by Mr.
Debabrata Mukherjee and other Counsel on behalf of the respondent to whom notice of the rule was ordered to be given.

3. The case of the petitioners will be considered in the following three groups:
(1) Petitioners Nos. 2, 4, 5, 6, 16, 17, 20
and 26, (2) Petitioners Nos. 1, 3, 7, 10,
12, 13, 19 and 22, (3) Petitioners Nos. 8,
9 and 21. By the order of this Court dated October 18, 1968, the cases as regards Petitioners Nos. 11, 14, 15, 18, 23, 24, 25, 27 to 30 were dismissed as they were reported to have been released.

4. As regards Petitioner No. 5, Subhas Chandra Bose @ Kanta Bose, the order of detention was made on January 20, 1968 by the District Magistrate, Howrah and reads as follows:

"No. 202/C Dated, Howrah, the 20th
January, 1968.

WHEREAS I am satisfied with respect to the person known as Shri Kanta Bose @ Subhas Chandra Bose son of Shri
Sishir Kumar Bose of 26, Milmoni Mallick Lane, P. S. and Distt. Howrah, that with a view to preventing him from acting in any manner prejudicial to the maintenance of public order it is necessary so to do; I, therefore, in exercise of the powers conferred by Section 3 (2) of the Preventive Detention Act, 1950 (Act IV of 1950), I make this order directing that the said Shri Kanta Bose @ Subhas
Chandra Bose be detained.

Given under my hand and seal of office.
Sd/- D. C. Mookherjee
District Magistrate
Howrah."

On the same date the following grounds of detention were communicated to the detenu:

"You are being detained in pursuance of a detention order made under subsection (2) of Section 3 of the Preventive Detention Act, 1950 (Act IV of 1950)
on the following grounds:

2. You have been acting in a manner prejudicial to the maintenance of public order by commission of offences of rio-tous conduct, criminal intimidation and assault as detailed below:—

(a) That on 8-11-65 at about 17.30 hrs. you assaulted Shri Ashutosh Dutta son of Shri Pyari Mohan Dutta of 55, M. C. Ghosh Lane, P. S. Howrah at the crossing of Panchanantala Road and M. C. Ghosh Lane, with knife causing bleeding injuries on his hand.

(b) That on 8-10-60 at about 16.00 hrs. which Shri Mahesh Prosad Bhagat son of Balgobinda Bhagat of 16, Bellilious Road P. S. Howrah was playing in an open field, you along with your associates demanded money from him and on his refusal you hurled cracker on him causing grievous injury on his right leg.

(c) That on 8-6-67 at about 11.40 hrs. you accosted one Sushanta Kumar Ghosh son of Manmatha Ghosh of 2/1/I, Danesh Sk. Lane inside a saloon at 255, Panchanantala Road on previous grudge and being intervened by Shri Shyamal Biswas son of Sandhya Biswas of 255, Panchanantala Road, P. S. Howrah, you whipped out a dagger and assaulted Shri Biswas with the dagger causing injury on his hand.

(d) That on 23-11-67 at about 22.45 hrs. you hurled cracker on A. S. I. B. Kundu of Bantra P. S. while he was coming to Howrah along Panchanantala Road in a wireless van and caused injury to the A. S. I. and damages to the wireless van.

(e) That on 7-1-68 at about 18-20 hrs. you threatened one Satya Narayan Prosad son of Late Purnasattam Prosad of 10, Debnath Banerjee Lane, P. S. Howrah with assault at the crossing of M. C. Ghosh Lane and Bellilious Road.

3. You are hereby informed that you may make a representation to the State Government within 30 days of the receipt of the detention order and that such representation should be addressed to the Assistant Secretary to the Government of West Bengal, Home Department Special Section, Writers' Buildings, Calcutta and forwarded through the Superintendent of the Jail in which you are detained.

4. You are also informed that under Section 10 of the Preventive Detention Act, 1950 (Act IV of 1950) the Advisory Board shall if you desire to be heard in person and that if you desire to be so heard by the Advisory Board you should intimate such desire in your representation to the State Government.

Sd/- D. G. Mookerjee
District Magistrate
Howrah.

On March 19, 1968 the Advisory Board made a report under Section 10 of the Act stating that there was sufficient cause for detention of Sri Kanta Bose @ Subhas Ch. Bose. On March 30, 1968 the Governor of West Bengal confirmed the detention order under Section 11 (1) of the Act.

5. Section 3 of the Act provides:

"3. (1) The Central Government or the State Government may:—

(a) If satisfied with respect to any person that with a view to preventing him from acting in any manner prejudicial to:—

(i) the defence of India, the relation of India with foreign powers or the security of India, or

(ii) the security of the State or the maintenance of public order, or

(iii) the maintenance or supplies and services essential to the community, or

(b) if satisfied with respect to any person who is a foreigner within the meaning of the Foreigners Act 1946 (XXXI of 1946), that with a view to regulating his continued presence in India or with a view to making arrangements for his expulsion from India, it is necessary so to do, make an order directing that such person be detained.

(2) Any of the following officers, namely,—

(a) District Magistrates,

(b) Additional District Magistrates specially empowered in this behalf by the State Government,

(c) the Commissioner of Police for Bombay, Calcutta, Madras or Hyderabad, (d) Collector in the State of Hyderabad, may if satisfied as provided in sub-cl. (2) and (3) of Clause (a) of sub-section (1) exercise powers conferred by the said sub-section.

(3) When any order is made under this section by an officer mentioned in sub-section (2) he shall forthwith report the fact to the State Government to which he is subordinate together with grounds on which the order has been made and such other particulars as in his opinion have a bearing on the matter, and no such order made after the commencement of the Preventive Detention (Second Amendment) Act, 1952, shall remain in force for more than twelve days after the making thereof unless in the meantime it has been approved by State Government.

(4) When any order is made or approved by the State Government under this section, the State Government shall, as soon as may be, report the fact to the Central Government together with the grounds on which the order has been made and such other particulars as in the opinion of the State Government have bearing on the necessity for the order."

Section 7 is to the following effect:

"7. (1) When a person is detained in pursuance of a detention order, the authority making the order shall, as soon as may be, but not later than five days from the date of detention, communicate to him the grounds on which the order has been made, and shall afford him the earliest opportunity of making a representation against the order to the appropriate Government.

(2) Nothing in sub-section (1) shall require the authority to disclose facts which it considers to be against the public interest to disclose".

It will be noticed that before an order of detention can be validly made by the detaining authorities specified by Section 3 (2) of the Act, the authority must be satisfied that the detention of the person is necessary in order to prevent him from acting in any prejudicial manner as indicated in Clauses (i) to (iii) of Section 3 (1) (a). It is well settled that the satisfaction of the detaining authority to which Section 3 (1) (a) refers is a subjective satisfaction, and so is not justiciable. Therefore it would not be open to the detenu to ask the Court to consider the question as to whether the said satisfaction of the detaining authority can be justified by the application of objective tests. It would not be open, for instance, to the detenu to contend that the grounds supplied to him do not necessarily or reasonably lead to the conclusion that if he is not detained, he would indulge in prejudicial activities. The reasonableness of the satisfaction of the detaining authority cannot be questioned in a Court of law; the adequacy of the material on which the said satisfaction purports to rest also cannot be examined in a Court of law. That is the effect of the true legal position in regard to the satisfaction contemplated by Section 3 (1) (a) of the Act — See the decision of this Court in the State of Bombay v. Atma Ram Shridhar Vaidya, 1951 SCR 167 = (AIR 1951 SC 157).

6. But there is no doubt that if any of the grounds, furnished to the detenu are found to be irrelevant while considering the application of Clauses (i) to (iii) of Section 3 (1) (a) and in that sense are foreign to the Act, the satisfaction of the detaining authority on which the order of detention is based is open to challenge and the detention order liable to be quashed. Similarly, if some of the grounds supplied to the detenu are so vague that they would virtually deprive the detenu of his statutory right of making a representation, that again may make the order of detention invalid. If, however, the grounds on which the order of detention proceeds are relevant and germane to the matters which fall to be considered under Section 3 (1) (a) of the Act, it would not be open to the detenu to challenge the order of detention by arguing that the satisfaction of the detaining authority is not reasonably based on any of the said grounds.

7. It is also necessary to emphasise in this connection that though the satisfaction of the detaining authority contemplated by Section 3 (1) (a) is the subjective satisfaction of the said authority, cases may arise where the detenu may challenge the validity of his detention on the ground of mala fides. The detenu may say that the passing of the order of detention was an abuse of the statutory power and was for a collateral purpose. In support of the plea of mala fides the detenu may urge that along with other facts which show mala fides, the grounds served on him cannot rationally support the conclusion drawn against him by the detaining authority. It is only in this incidental manner that this question can become justiciable; otherwise the reasonableness or propriety of the said satisfaction contemplated by Section 3 (1) (a) cannot be questioned before the Courts.

8. The question to be considered in the present case is whether grounds (a), (b) and (c) served on Subhas Chandra Bose are grounds which are relevant to "the maintenance of public order". All these grounds relate to cases of assault on solitary individuals either by knife or by using crackers and it is difficult to accept the contention of the respondent that these grounds have any relevance or proximate connection with the maintenance of public order. In the present case we are concerned with detention under Section 3 (1) of the Preventive Detention Act which permits apprehension and detention of a person likely to act in a manner prejudicial to the maintenance of public order. Does the expression "public order" take in every kind of infraction of order or only some categories thereof? It is manifest that every act of assault or injury to specific persons does not lead to public disorder. When two people quarrel and fight and assault each other inside a house or in a street, it may be said that there is disorder but not public disorder. Such cases are dealt with under the powers vested in the executive authorities under the provisions of ordinary criminal law but the culprits cannot be detained on the ground that they were disturbing public order. The contravention of any law always affects order but before it can be said to affect public order, it must affect the community or the public at large. In this connection we must draw a line of demarcation between serious and aggravated forms of disorder which directly affect the community or injure the public interest and the relatively minor breaches of peace of a purely local significance which primarily injure specific individuals and only in a secondary sense public interest. A mere disturbance of law and order leading to disorder is thus not necessarily sufficient for action under the Preventive Detention Act but a disturbance which will affect public order comes within the scope of the Act. A District Magistrate is therefore entitled to take action under Section 3 (1) of the Act to prevent subversion of public order but not in aid of maintenance of law and order under ordinary circumstances. In Ram Manohar Lohia v. State of Bihar, 1960-1 SCR 709 = (AIR 1960 SC 740), it was held by the majority decision of this Court that the expression "public order" was different and does not mean the same thing as "law and order". The question at issue in that case was whether the order of the District Magistrate, Patna under Rule 30 (1) (b) of the Defence of India Rules, 1962 against the petitioner was valid. Rule 30 (1) (b) provided that a State Government might, if it was satisfied with respect to a person that with a view to preventing him from acting in a manner prejudicial to 'public safety and maintenance of public order' it is necessary to do so, order him to be detained. The order of the District Magistrate stated that he was satisfied that with a view to prevent the petitioner from acting in any manner prejudicial to the 'public safety and the maintenance of law and order', it was necessary to detain him. Prior to the making of the order the District Magistrate had, however, recorded a note stating that having read the report of the Police Superintendent that the petitioner's being at large was prejudicial to 'public safety' and 'maintenance of public order', he was satisfied that the petitioner should be detained under the rule. The petitioner moved this Court under Article 32 of the Constitution for a writ of habeas corpus directing his release from detention, contending that though an order of detention to prevent acts prejudicial to public order may be justifiable an order to prevent acts prejudicial to law and order would not be justified by the rule. It was held by the majority judgment that what was meant by maintenance of public order was the prevention of disorder of a grave nature, whereas, the expression 'maintenance of law and order' meant prevention of disorder of comparatively lesser gravity and of local significance. At page 746 of the Report, Hidayatullah, J., as he then was, observed as follows in the course of his judgment:

"It will thus appear that just as 'public order' in the rulings of this Court (earlier cited) was said to comprehend disorders of less gravity than those affecting 'security of State, law and order' also comprehends disorder of less gravity than those affecting 'public order'. One has to imagine three concentric circles. Law and order represents the largest circle within which is the next circle representing public order and the smallest circle represents security of State. It is then easy to see that an act may affect law and order but not public order just as an act may affect public order but not security of the State. By using the expression 'maintenance of law and order' the District Magistrate was widening his own field of action and was adding a clause to the Defence of India Rules." The order no doubt mentioned another ground of detention, namely, the prevention of acts prejudicial to public safety, and in so far as it did so, it was clearly within the rule. But the order of detention must be held to be illegal, though it mentioned a ground on which a legal order of detention could have been based because it could not be said in what manner and to what extent the valid and invalid grounds operated on the mind of the authority concerned and contributed to the creation of his subjective satisfaction. It was accordingly held that the order of detention made by the District Magistrate was invalid and the petitioner should be set at liberty. In our opinion, the principle laid down in this case governs the decision in the present case also and the order of the District Magistrate, Howrah dated January 20, 1968 must be held to be ultra vires and illegal.

9. The difference between the concepts of 'public order' and 'law and order' is similar to the distinction between 'public' and 'private' crimes in the realm of jurisprudence. In considering the material elements of crime, the historic tests which each community applies are intrinsic wrongfulness and social expediency which are the two most important factors which have led to the designation of certain conduct as criminal. Dr. Allen has distinguished 'public' and 'private' crimes in the sense that some offences primarily injure specific persons and only secondarily the public interest, while others directly injure the public interest and affect individuals only remotely—(See Dr. Allen's Legal Duties, p. 249). There is a broad distinction along these lines, but differences naturally arise in the application of any such test. The learned author has pointed out that out of 331 indictable English offences 203 are public wrongs and 128 private wrongs.

10. The argument was, however, stressed by Mr. Mukherjee on behalf of the respondent that the other grounds, viz., (c) and (d) mentioned in the order of the District Magistrate dated January 20, 1968 are more serious in character and may be held prejudicial to public order. We shall assume in favour of the respondent that grounds (c) and (d) are matters prejudicial to public order. But even upon that assumption the order of detention must be held to be illegal. It is now well established that even if any one of the grounds or reasons that led to the satisfaction is irrelevant, the order of detention would be invalid even if there were other relevant grounds, because it can never be certain to what extent the bad reasons operated on the mind of the authority concerned or whether the detention order would have been made at all if only one or two good reasons had been before them. — (See the decisions of this Court in Shibban Lal Saxena v. The State of Uttar Pradesh, 1954 SCR 418 = (AIR 1954 SC 179) and Dr. Ram Manohar Lohia v. State of Bihar, 1966-1 SCR 709 = (AIR 1966 SC 740).)

11. For these reasons we hold that the order of detention made by the District Magistrate, Howrah under S. 3 (2) of the Act dated January 20, 1968 against the petitioner Subhas Chandra Bose @ Kanta Bose and the consequent order made by the Governor dated March 30, 1968 confirming the order of detention under Section 11 (1) of the Act must be declared to be illegal and accordingly the petitioner, Subhas Chandra Bose @ Kanta Bose is entitled to be released from custody forthwith.

12. In the case of petitioners 2, Sukumar Chaudhury, No. 4, Tarapada Bhowmick, No. 6, Golam Rasul Mollick, No. 16 Sk. Sharafat, No. 17, Hanif Mirza, No. 20, Sk. Mana, and No. 26, Chittaranjan Majhi, the orders of detention suffer from the same defect as that in the case of petitioner No. 5, Subhas Chandra Bose @ Kanta Bose. For the reasons already given we hold that the orders of detention made under Section 3 (2) of the Act and the orders of confirmation by the State Government under S. 11 (1) of the Act in the case of all these petitioners are illegal and ultra vires and these petitioners are also entitled to be set at liberty forthwith.

13. We pass on to consider the case of the petitioners mentioned in Group 2. As regards Pushkar Mukherjee, Petitioner No. 1, the order of detention was made by the District Magistrate, 24-Parganas on September 19, 1967 and reads as follows:

"Whereas I am satisfied with respect to the person known as Shri Puskar Mukherjee, son of Late Jaladhar Mukherjee, Madhyamgram (Bireshpally), P. S. Baraset, Dist. 24-Parganas that with a view to preventing him from acting in a manner prejudicial to the maintenance of public order, it is necessary so to do.

And, therefore, in exercise of the power conferred by Section 3 (2) of the Preventive Detention Act, 1950 (Act IV of 1950) I make this order directing that the said Shri Puskar Mukherjee, son of Late Jaladhar Mukherjee be detained.

Sd/- B. Majumdar,
District Magistrate
24-Parganas."

The grounds of detention were served upon the detenu on the same date and are to the following effect:

"Grounds for detention under sub-section (2) of Section 3 of the Preventive Detention Act 1950 (Act IV of 1950). —

To

Shri Pushkar Mukherjee,
s/o Late Jaladhar Mukherjee, of Madhyamgram (Biresb Pally),
P. S. — Baraset, District, 24-Parganas,

In pursuance of the provision of Section 7 of the Preventive Detention Act, 1950 (Act IV of 1950) as amended by the Preventive Detention (Amendment) Acts, 1952 and 1954, you Shri Puskar Mukherjee, s/o Late Jaladhar Mukherjee of Madhyamgram (Biresb Pally), P. S. Baraset, 24-Parganas are hereby informed that you are being detained under Section 3 (1) (a) (ii) of the Preventive Detention Act, 1950 on the following grounds:

I. That you have been acting in a manner prejudicial to the maintenance of public order by the commission of offences of riotous conduct, criminal intimidation and assault as detailed below:—

(i) That on 26-3-1967 at about 11.00 hrs. you along with your associates Harisikesh Samadder and others being armed with dagger, spear and iron rods demanded money for drinks from Shri Joy Nath Roy in his Khatal at Katakhal Ganga Nagar, P. S. Baraset and on his refusal to pay the money you along with your associates dragged him out of his room and assaulted him and his friend Sudhir Ghose causing injuries on their persons.

(ii) That on 19-6-1967 evening you along with your associates threatened Sushil Kumar Chakraborty of Madhyamgram with assault when he was returning home from New Barrackpore Rly. Station apprehending that he might inform the police for your arrest in connection with Baraset P. S. Case No. 58 dated 24-3-1967 u/s 302/394 I. P. C. which was pending investigation.

(iii) That on 8-7-1967 at about 22.00 hrs. you along with your associates Kalyan Chakraborty and others again threatened Shri Sushil Kumar Chakraborty of Madhyamgram with assault out of previous grudge when he was returning to his house from New Barrackpore Rly. Stn.

(iv) That you were detained for your rowdy activities u/s 30 (1) of the D. I. Rules 1902 from 22-4-1964 under Government Order No. 1233 H. S. dated 15-4-1964 and was released from detention on 4-10-1965.

(v) That for your rowdy activities you were detained on 19-9-1963 under P. D.

Order No. 163/66 which was confirmed under Govt. Order No. 8999 H. S. dated 26-11-1966 and you were released from such detention on 13-3-1967 under Order No. 1095 H. S. dated 13-3-1967, during general release.

II. Thus from your activities subsequent to your release from detention under the P. D. Act on 13-3-1967 it appears that the detention did not produce the sobering effect on you. You have become a menace to the society and there have been disturbance and confusion in the lives of peaceful citizens of Baraset and Khardah P. S. areas under 24-Parganas District and the inhabitants thereof are in constant dread of disturbances of public order.

III. For the above reasons, I am satisfied that you are likely to act in a manner prejudicial to the maintenance of public peace and order, and therefore, I have passed an order for your detention to ensure the maintenance of Public Order.

IV. You are further informed that you have right to make a representation in writing against this order under which you are detained. If you wish to make such a representation, you should address it to the Assistant Secretary Govt. of West Bengal (Home Special) Department Writers' Buildings, Calcutta through the Superintendent of your Jail as soon as possible. Your case will be submitted to the Advisory Board within 30 days of your detention and your representation if received later, may not be considered by the Board.

V. You are also informed that under Section 10 of the Preventive Detention Act 1950 (Act IV of 1950), the Advisory Board, shall, if you desire to be heard, hear you in person and that if you desire to be so heard by the Advisory Board you should intimate such desire in your representation to the State Government.

Sd/- B. Majumdar

District Magistrate, 19-9-67.
24-Parganas."

On May 23, 1968, the Advisory Board reported that there was sufficient cause for detention of the detenu. On June 12, 1968 the Government of West Bengal confirmed the order of detention under Section 11 (1) of the Act.

14. It appears to us that ground No. 2 is extremely vague. Ground No. 2 states "You have become a menace to the society and there have been disturbances" and confusion in the lives of peaceful citizens of Baraset and Khardah P. S. areas under 24-Parganas District and the inhabitants thereof are in constant dread of disturbances of public order." It is manifest that this ground is extremely vague and gives no particulars to enable the petitioner to make an adequate representation against the order of detention and thus infringes the Constitutional safeguard provided under Article 22 (5). Reference may be made in this connection to the decision of this Court in 1951 SCR 167 = (AIR 1951 SC 157) in which Kania, C. J., observed as follows:

"What is meant by vague? Vague can be considered as the antonym of 'definite'. If the ground which is supplied is incapable of being understood or defined with sufficient certainty it can be called vague. It is not possible to state affirmatively more on the question of what is vague. It must vary according to the circumstances of each case. It is however improper to contend that a ground is necessarily vague if the only answer of the detained person can be to deny it. That is a matter of detail which has to be examined in the light of the circumstances of each case. If on reading the ground furnished it is capable of being intelligently understood and is sufficiently definite to furnish materials to enable the detained person to make a representation against the order of detention it cannot be called vague. The only argument which could be urged is that the language used in specifying the ground is so general that it does not permit the detained person to legitimately meet the charge against him because the only answer which he can make is to say that he did not act as generally suggested. In certain cases that argument may support the contention that having regard to the general language used in the ground he has not been given the earliest opportunity to make a representation against the order of detention. It cannot be disputed that the representation mentioned in the second part of Article 22 (5) must be one which on being considered may give relief to the detained person."

15. It was, however, argued by Mr. Debabrata Mukherjee on behalf of the respondent that even though ground No. 2 may be vague, the other grounds supplied to the detenu are not vague and full and adequate particulars have been furnished. But it is well established that the Constitutional requirement that the grounds must not be vague must be satisfied with regard to each of the grounds communicated to the person detained subject to the claim of privilege under clause (6) of Article 22 of the Constitution and therefore even though one ground is vague and the other grounds are not vague, the detention is not in accordance with procedure established by law and is therefore illegal—(See the decision of this Court in Ram Krishan Bhardwaj v. The State of Delhi, 1953 SCR 708 = (AIR 1953 SC 318). For these reasons we hold that the order of detention made against the petitioner, Pushkar Mukherjee by the District Magistrate, 24-Parganas on September 19, 1967 and the consequent order of the Governor of West Bengal dated June 12, 1968 confirming the order of detention were illegal and ultra vires and the petitioner is entitled to be set at liberty forthwith.

16. In the case of Petitioners No. 3, Barun Kumar Hore, No. 7, Kartick Dey, No. 10, Ajit Basak, No. 12, Sk. Idris, No. 13, Shamsuddin Khan, No. 19, Khokan Nitra and No. 22, Ranjit Kumar Ghosal, the orders of detention suffer from the same legal defect as the order of detention in the case of Petitioner No. 1, Pushkar Mukherjee. For the reasons already stated, we hold that the orders of detention and the orders of confirmation made by the State Government under Section 11 (1) of the Act in the case of these seven petitioners also are illegal and ultra vires and these petitioners are also entitled to be set at liberty forthwith.

17. As regards the cases of the remaining petitioners, Nos. 8, 9 and 21, Chandan P. Sharma, Sk. Sahajahan and Bind Parmeshwar Prasad alias Binde-swari Prasad respectively, we have perused the orders of detention and the grounds supplied to these petitioners. It is not shown by learned Counsel on their behalf that there is any illegality in the orders of detention or in the subsequent procedure followed for confirming these orders. In our opinion, no ground is made out for grant of a writ of habeas corpus so far as these petitioners are concerned. Their applications for grant of a writ of habeas corpus are accordingly rejected.

18. We desire to say that we requested Mr. Kohli to assist us on behalf of the petitioners and we are indebted to him for his assistance.

Order accordingly.

AIR 1970 SUPREME COURT 860
(V 57 C 186)

(From: Industrial Tribunal—Andhra Pradesh)*

J. M. SHELAT, V. BHARGAVA AND
C. A. VAIDIALINGAM, JJ.

Workmen of the Indian Leaf Tobacco Development Co., Ltd., Guntur, Appellants v. The Management of Indian Leaf Tobacco Development Co. Ltd., Guntur, Respondent.

Civil Appeal No. 556 of 1960, D/- 27-9-1968.

Industrial Disputes Act (1947), Section 10 (1) (d) — Industrial Tribunal — Powers to entertain reference — Decision by Company to close down some of its depots — Tribunal cannot interfere with it — Retrenchment whether justified can, however, be considered.

No Industrial Tribunal, even in a reference under Section 10 (1) (d) can interfere with discretion exercised by a company in the matter of closing down some of its branches or depots. Even if such closure may not amount to closure of business of the Company, the Tribunal has no power to issue orders directing a Company to reopen a closed depot or branch, if the Company, in fact, closes it down and that closure is genuine and real. The closure may be treated as stoppage of part of the activity or business of the Company. Such stoppage of part of a business is an act of management which is entirely in the discretion of the Company carrying on the business. Of course, if a Company closes down a branch or a depot the question can always arise as to the relief to which the workmen of that branch or depot are entitled and, if such a question arises and becomes the subject-matter of an industrial dispute, an Industrial Tribunal is fully competent to adjudicate on it, and it is competent for the Tribunal to decide whether the claim of the workmen that they should not be retrenched is justified. AIR 1957 SC 95 and 1953 Lab AC 563, Explained.

(Paras 4, 6, 7 and 8)

Where the closure of some depots by a Company is genuine and real and not only a device adopted for carrying on the same business in a different manner,

* (Industrial Dispute No. 41 of 1963, D/- 13-8-1964—Indl. Tribunal — Andhra Pra.)

the workmen who are retrenched due to such closure are entitled to retrenchment compensation only and cannot claim any re-employment or reinstatement.

(Para 10)

Cases Referred: Chronological Paras
(1957) AIR 1957 SC 95 (V 41)=

1950 SCR 872, Pipraich Sugar Mills Ltd. v. Pipraich Sugar Mills Mazdoor Union 4, 8

(1953) 1953 Lab AC 563, Employees of M/s. India Reconstruction Corporation Ltd., Calcutta v. M/s. India Reconstruction Ltd., Calcutta 4, 8

Mr. M. K. Ramamurthi, Mrs. Shyamala Pappu and Mr. Vineet Kumar, Advocates, for Appellants; M/s. K. Srinivasamurthy and Naunit Lal, Advocates, for Respondent.

The Judgment of the Court was delivered by

BHARGAVA, J.: This appeal, by special leave, has arisen out of an award made by the Industrial Tribunal, Andhra Pradesh, at Hyderabad in an industrial dispute between the respondent, the Indian Leaf Tobacco Development Company Limited, Guntur (hereinafter referred to as 'the Company'), and its workmen. Admittedly, the Company is an associate of the Imperial Tobacco Company Ltd., and the main business carried on by the Company is that of purchasing tobacco of all varieties and qualities, stemming, grading and packing of tobacco and supplying it to the Imperial Tobacco Company as well as exporting the tobacco to various foreign countries in the world. The Company has been carrying on this business for about 40 years and handles almost 35 per cent of the tobacco grown in the State of Andhra Pradesh. For the work of stemming, grading and packing tobacco, the Company has two factories, one at Anaparthi in East Godavari District, and the other at Chirala in Guntur District. In connection with this business, the Company, in the year 1962, was maintaining 21 depots where, according to the workmen, the appellants, the Company was carrying on the work of collecting tobacco though the Company's case was that the principal work done at these depots was that of handling the tobacco purchased at other places and only included the work of purchasing tobacco on a small scale.

2. On 16th August, 1963, the Company gave a notice to the Union of the appellant workmen that 8 out of 21 depots mentioned therein would be closed down with effect from 30th September, 1963. Thereafter, an industrial dispute was raised by the workmen which related to the closure of these 8 depots, as well as to a number of other demands, including revision of basic wages and dearness allowance, additional discomfort allowance, etc. The State Government, by its order dated 14th November, 1963, referred the dispute for adjudication under Section 10 (1) (d) of the Industrial Disputes Act, 1947 to the Industrial Tribunal, Hyderabad. The first issue, which was referred for adjudication, was as follows:—

“How far the demands of the union, viz., (i) that no depot which worked during 1962 season should be closed, and (ii) that no workman who worked in 1962 season should be retrenched are justified?” There were ten other issues, but we need not reproduce them, as we are not concerned with them in this appeal.

3. In the proceedings for adjudication, the Company took a preliminary objection that the closure of the depots was a managerial function, that there could not be an industrial dispute over such closure, that the Government, therefore, had no power to refer this issue for adjudication, and that the Tribunal also had no power to adjudicate on it. Thereupon, the Tribunal framed a preliminary issue as to “whether the employer is justified in alleging that Issue No. 1 framed by the Government cannot be deemed to relate to an industrial dispute, and as such, whether the Government had the power to refer it for adjudication.” The Tribunal decided this preliminary issue by giving an interim award on the 13th August, 1964. The preliminary objection was allowed and a further direction was made that the effect of this decision on Issue No. 1 will be decided later after hearing the parties. Thereafter, the Tribunal proceeded to hear the reference on this question as well as on all other issues referred to it and ultimately, gave its award on 11th December, 1964. In that award, both the parts of issue No. 1 were decided against the workmen. The workmen have now come up in this appeal against the interim award dated 13th August, 1964 as well as against the final award insofar as it relates to issue No. 1.

4. The decision given by the Tribunal in the interim award, holding that the reference covered by issue No. 1 was not competent, has been challenged by learned counsel for the appellants on the ground that the closure of a depot does not amount to closure of business in law and, since the same business was continued by the Company at at least 13 other depots, the closure of the 8 depots in question was unjustified. For the proposition that the closure of the depots did not amount to closure of business, learned counsel relied on the views expressed by this Court in Pipraich Sugar Mills Ltd. v. Pipraich Sugar Mills Mazdoor Union, 1956 SCR 872 = (AIR 1957 SC 95), where the Court explained the reason for the decision given by the Labour Appellate Tribunal in the case of Employees of M/s. India Reconstruction Corporation Ltd., Calcutta v. M/s. India Reconstruction Corporation Ltd., Calcutta, 1953 Lab AC 563. It, however, appears to us that this question raised on behalf of the appellants is totally immaterial insofar as the question of the jurisdiction of the Tribunal to decide the first part of issue No. 1 is concerned. The closure of the 8 depots by the Company, even if it is held not to amount to closure of business of the Company, cannot be interfered with by an Industrial Tribunal if, in fact that closure was genuine and real. The closure may be treated as stoppage of part of the activity or business of the Company. Such stoppage of part of a business is an act of management which is entirely in the discretion of the Company carrying on the business. No Industrial Tribunal, even in a reference under S. 10 (1) (d) of the Industrial Disputes Act, can interfere with discretion exercised in such a matter and can have any power to direct a Company to continue a part of the business which the Company has decided to shut down. We cannot possibly accept the submission made on behalf of the appellants that a Tribunal under the Industrial Disputes Act has power to issue orders directing a Company to reopen a closed depot or branch, if the Company, in fact, closes it down.

5. An example may be taken of a case where a Bank with its headquarters in one place and a number of branches at different places decides to close down one of the branches at one of those places where it is functioning. We cannot see how, in such a case, if the employees of that particular branch raise an industrial dispute, the Bank can be directed by the Industrial Tribunal to continue to run that branch. It is for the Bank to decide whether the business of the branch should be continued or not, and no Bank can be compelled to continue a branch which it considers undesirable to do.

6. In these circumstances, it is clear that the demand contained in the first part of Issue No. 1 was beyond the powers and jurisdiction of the Industrial Tribunal and was incorrectly referred for adjudication to it by the State Government.

7. Of course, if a Company closes down a branch or a depot, the question can always arise as to the relief to which the workmen of that branch or depot are entitled and if such a question arises and becomes the subject-matter of an industrial dispute, an Industrial Tribunal will be fully competent to adjudicate on it. It is unfortunate that, in this case, when dealing with the preliminary issue, the Tribunal expressed its decision in the interim award in general words, holding that Issue No. 1 as a whole was beyond its jurisdiction. If the reasoning in the interim award is taken into account, it is clear that the Tribunal on that reasoning only came to the conclusion that it was not competent to direct reopening of the 8 depots which had been closed, so that the Tribunal should have held that the first part of Issue No. 1 only was outside its jurisdiction.

8. So far as the second part of that issue is concerned, as we have said above it was competent for the Tribunal to go into it and decide whether the claim of the workmen that they should not be retrenched was justified. On an examination of the interim award and the final award, we, however, find that the Tribunal in fact did do so. The case reported in Pipraich Sugar Mills Ltd., 1956 SCR 572 = (AIR 1957 SC 95) (supra) was also concerned only with the question as to the relief that can be granted to workmen when there is closure of a business. No question arose either before the Court or in the cases considered by the Court, of an Industrial Tribunal making a direction to the employers to continue to run or to reopen a closed branch of the business. The Labour Appellate Tribunal in the case of Employees of Messrs. India Reconstruction Corporation Ltd., Calcutta 1953 Lab AC 563 (supra) was dealing with the question of retrenchment compensation as a result of the closure of one of the units of the company concerned, and it held that the workmen were entitled to retrenchment compensation in accordance with law. This Court in the case of Pipraich Sugar Mills Ltd., 1956 SCR 572 = (AIR 1957 SC 95) (supra) only explained why the Labour Appellate Tribunal was justified in granting retrenchment compensation in that case. The opinion expressed by the Court was that, though there is discharge of workmen both when there is retrenchment and closure of business, the compensation is to be awarded under the law, not for discharge as such but for discharge on retrenchment, and if, as is conceded, retrenchment means in ordinary parlance discharge of the surplus, it cannot include discharge on closure of business. It was in this context that the Court went on to add that in the case of Employees of M/s. India Reconstruction Corporation Ltd., Calcutta, 1953 Lab AC 563 (supra) what had happened was that one of the units of the Company had been closed which would be a case of retrenchment and not a case of closure of business. It may be noted that, at the time when this decision was given, Section 25FF and Section 25FFF had not been introduced in the Industrial Disputes Act, and the only right to retrenchment compensation granted to the workmen was conferred by Section 25F. It was in the light of the law then prevailing that the Court felt that the decision of the Labour Appellate Tribunal in the case of Employees of M/s. India Reconstruction Corporation Ltd., 1953 Lab AC 563 (supra) granting retrenchment compensation could be justified on the ground that the services of the workmen had not been dispensed with as a result of closure of business, but as a result of retrenchment. That question does not arise in the case before us. Since then, as we have indicated above, Section 25FF and Section 25FFF have been added to the Industrial Disputes Act, and the latter section specifically lays down what rights a workman has when an undertaking is closed down. In a case where a dispute may arise as to whether workmen discharged are entitled to compensation under Section 25F or Sec. 25FFF, it may become necessary to decide whether the closure, as a result of which the services have been dispensed with, amounts to a closure in law or not. In the case before us, it was admitted by learned counsel for both parties that the workmen, who have been discharged as a result of the closure of the 8 depots of the Company, have all been paid retrenchment compensation at the higher rate laid down in Section 25F, so that, in this case, it is not necessary to decide the point raised on behalf of the workmen.

9. In connection with the second part of issue No. 1, it was also urged by learned counsel for the appellants that the business, which was being carried on at the 8 depots, had not in fact been closed down and had merely been transferred to buying points situated in and around the closed depots, including two new buying points established by the Company after the closure of these 8 depots. The argument was that the workmen were old employees who had served the Company for a long time and were entitled to certain benefits as a result of that long service. The Company closed these 8 depots mala fide with the object of depriving the workmen of those benefits and merely altered the nature of the business by closing the depots and carrying on the same business at the buying points. This point urged by learned counsel cannot, however, be accepted in view of the findings of fact recorded by the Tribunal.

10. The Tribunal examined in detail the allegations made on behalf of the workmen in this respect. In fact, the interim award mentions that, for the purpose of deciding the preliminary issue and the first issue, evidence was recorded by the Tribunal for more than a week and arguments of Advocates of the parties were heard for even a longer period. After examining the evidence, the Tribunal came to the conclusion that the stoppage of the work at the depots was genuine and that the work which was being carried on at the depots had not been transferred to the buying points established by the Company. The closure of the business at the depots was necessitated by reasons of expediency inasmuch as the Company had to reduce its purchases in its quest for quality and its desire to run the business economically. The principal work, which used to be done at the depots, was not that of purchasing tobacco, but of handling it and that work was not transferred at all to any buying point. The Tribunal, thus, came to the finding that the closure of these depots was real and genuine and that the suggestion of the appellants that only a device was adopted of carrying on the same business in a different manner had no force at all. If the same business had been continued, though under a different guise, the claim of the workmen not to be retrenched could possibly be considered by the Tribunal; but, on the finding that there was a genuine closure of the business that used to be carried on at the depots, no question could arise of the retrenchment being set aside by the Tribunal. The Tribunal could not ask the Company to re-employ or reinstate the workmen, because there was no business for which the workmen could be required. In these circumstances all that the workmen could claim was compensation for loss of their service and in that respect, as we have indicated above, the workmen have received adequate compensation.

11. Consequently, the appeal has no force and is dismissed; but we make no order as to costs.

Appeal dismissed.

AIR 1970 SUPREME COURT 863
(V 57 C 187)

(From: Calcutta)*

J. C. SHAH AND V. RAMASWAMI, JJ.

Alamohan Das and others, Appellants
v. The State of West Bengal, Respondent.

Criminal Appeal No. 129 of 1966, D/-
26-10-1968.

(A) Criminal P. C. (1898), Ss. 439,
207A — Revision against order of commitment — Interference when justified.

Normally the High Court in a revision application filed against the order of commitment under Section 207A does not enter upon a reappraisal of the evidence on which the order of commitment is made. Interference in revision is justified only where a substantial question of law arises on which the correctness of the order of commitment may be effectively challenged, where there is no evidence on which the order of commitment could be made, where there has been denial of a right to fair trial, where there is reason to think because of failure to comply with the rules of procedure or conditions precedent to initiation of criminal proceedings, where by ignoring the substantive law which constitutes the offence, or misconception of evidence on matters of importance grave injustice has resulted, and on similar other grounds. But in other cases, interference with the order of the Magistrate committing the accused for trial may not be justified and the trial before the Court of Session should be allowed to run its course. Criminal Revn. No. 309 of 1966, D/- 23-3-1966 (Cal), Affirmed. (Para 7)

*(Criminal Revn. No. 309 of 1966, D/- 21-3-1966 — Cal.)

CN/CN/F504/68/DVT/A

(B) Criminal P. C. (1898), Secs. 207A, 209 — Enquiry preparatory to commitment — Object — Accused when can be discharged.

In terms Section 209 applies to cases which are instituted otherwise than on a police report. But the principle underlying that section applies to cases which are instituted on a police report. A Magistrate holding an enquiry preparatory to commitment is not intended to act merely as a recording machine. He is entitled to sift and weigh the materials on record, but only for seeing whether there is sufficient evidence for commitment, and not whether there is sufficient evidence for conviction. If there is no prima facie evidence or the evidence is totally unworthy of credit, it is his duty to discharge the accused; if there is some evidence on which a conviction may reasonably be based, he must commit the case. The Magistrate at that stage has no power to evaluate the evidence for satisfying himself of the guilt of the accused. The question before the Magistrate at that stage is whether there is some credible evidence which would sustain a conviction. (Para 10)

M/s. A. K. Sen, Senior Advocate, (M/s. P. K. Chatterjee, M. M. Kshatriya and G. S. Chatterjee, Advocates, with him), for Appellants; Mr. B. Sen, Senior Advocate (Mr. P. K. Chakravarti, Advocate, with him), for Respondent.

The Judgment of the Court was delivered by

SHAH, J.:— Mahendra Lal and Prokhat Kumar Sarkar were the promoters, and Alamohan Das was the first Chairman of the Board of Directors of the Great Indian Steam Navigation Company Ltd., Messrs. Das Brothers of which Alamohan Das was the sole proprietor became the managing agents of the Company in 1945. On July 2, 1951, Das Group Ltd. of which also Alamohan Das was the principal Director took over the managing agency.

2. The Registrar of Companies West Bengal filed a complaint in the Court of the Chief Presidency Magistrate alleging that sometime between March 1, 1945 and December 31, 1947 a sum of Rupees 7,23,031-9-6 was advanced by the Company to the Managing Agents, Messrs. Das Brothers; that on July 2, 1951 Messrs. Das Brothers resigned from the managing agency and Messrs. Das Group Ltd., took over the managing agency; that Alamohan Das was at all material times a director of the company and also a director of Messrs. Das Group Ltd., and the sole proprietor of Messrs. Das Brothers; and that the complainant had reason to believe that Alamohan Das with other directors of the company had committed offences under Sections 86-D and 87-D of the Indian Companies Act, 1913. The complainant requested that a thorough investigation be made to the matter. The Chief Presidency Magistrate, Calcutta, referred the case to the police for investigation.

3. In the course of investigation of the complaint referred to him, Sub-Inspector J. N. Mukherjee filed a First Information against eight persons (including the five appellants in this appeal) charging them with having conspired to commit criminal breach of trust in respect of the company's funds, falsification of accounts and making false returns, balance-sheets and accounts, and in furtherance of the object of the conspiracy with committing offences punishable under Sections 409 and 477-A I. P. Code and under Section 282 of the Indian Companies Act, 1913. After investigation Sub-Inspector Mukherjee submitted on February 29, 1958, a report under Section 173 of the Code of Criminal Procedure in the Court of the Chief Presidency Magistrate for those offences against seven persons including the five appellants.

4. The Presidency Magistrate, 8th Court, to whom the case was transferred for trial, rejected the contention raised by counsel for the defence that to a charge made against a director in relation to the affairs of the company, the Indian Penal Code can have no application, and the prosecution, if any, may be instituted under the provisions of the Indian Companies Act alone. The Magistrate also held that it was open to the police officer to whom the case was referred for investigation to submit a charge-sheet of his own initiative and that the Court had jurisdiction to enquire into the charge so made without the sanction of the High Court. A revision application was filed in the High Court of Calcutta against that order, but the application was rejected.

5. Proceedings were then resumed by the Magistrate on December 5, 1961, and a large number of witnesses were examined before him and several documents were tendered in evidence. On December 3, 1963, the Presidency Magistrate committed the accused to stand trial for offences under S. 120B read with Ss. 409 and 477A, I. P. Code before the Court of Session. He observed:

"...having regard to the entire evidence on record and facts and circumstances of the case, I am convinced prima facie that good grounds exist for framing charge under Section 409 I. P. C. against accused Alamohan Das with charge under Sec. 120B read with Section 409, I. P. Code against (1) Alamohan Das, (2) Sisir K. Das (3) Nara Singha Pal, (4) Mohendra Lal Kundu and (5) Provat Kumar Sarkar, another charge under Section 467 read with Section 34 I. P. Code against (1) Alamohan Das, (2) Nara Singh Pal, and (3) Mohendra L. Kundu for forging Ext. 5, and last under Section 477A against (1) Alamohan Das, (2) Nara Singha Pal, (3) Mohendra Lal Kundu, (4) Pravat Kumar Sarkar and (5) Sisir Kumar Das in respect of falsification of shareholders minute book (Ext. 18) purporting to ratify the action of Alamohan Das regarding the funds of the G. I. S. N. and Co. Ltd."

6. Against this order, a revision application was filed in the High Court of Calcutta which was rejected in limine. Against the order passed by the High Court, this Appeal has been filed with special leave.

7. In the present case the order of commitment was made under Sec. 207A of the Code of Criminal Procedure. Normally the High Court in a revision application filed against the order of commitment under Section 207A will not enter upon a reappraisal of the evidence on which the order of commitment is made. The High Court would be justified in exercising its revisional jurisdiction where a substantial question of law arises on which the correctness of the order of commitment may be effectively challenged, where there is no evidence on which the order of commitment could be made, where there has been denial of a right to fair trial, where there is reason to think because of failure to comply with the rules of procedure or conditions precedent to initiation of criminal proceedings, where by ignoring the substantive law which constitutes the offence or misconception of evidence on matters of importance grave injustice has resulted, and on similar other grounds. But in other cases, interference with the order of the Magistrate committing the accused for trial may not be justified and the trial before the Court of Session should be allowed to run its course.

8. Counsel for the appellants submitted that there was no evidence on which the order of commitment could be made. We do not think that there is any ground for so holding. It was the prosecution case that in order to commit criminal breach of trust in respect of an amount exceeding Rs. 5 lakhs by allowing it to remain with Messrs. Das Brothers — the previous managing agents of the company of which Alamohan Das was the sole proprietor and from whom Messrs. Das Group Ltd., took over the managing agency — a conspiracy was entered into between the seven named persons; and the minutes book of the meeting of the Board of Directors and the shareholders' minutes book were fabricated and criminal breach of trust was committed in respect of the funds belonging to the Company. It is true that in the balance-sheet Ext. 137 for the year ending December 31, 1952, on the assets side in an item 'Sundry Advances (Unsecured)' inclusive of Rs. 5,78,941-7-0 due by a firm in which a Director of the Company was a partner. But this, it is the case of the prosecution, was not supported by any resolution passed by the Board of Directors. By letter dated June 21, 1956, the Additional Registrar of Companies asked the Company to furnish a certified copy of the minutes of the Board of Directors in which the loan had been made to the managing agents of the Company. In reply thereto by letter dated July 12, 1956, the Managing Agents wrote that as the money was held by the managing agent and was not given or treated as a loan, there was no resolution of the Board of Directors in that connection. On September 29, 1956, Additional Registrar of Companies again wrote a letter to the Company enquiring whether the amount of Rs. 5,78,941-7-0 which was lying with the previous managing agents of the Company Messrs. Das Brothers had since been realised, and if so, the evidence adjusting the liability, and if not, to intimate with material evidence whether any steps had since been taken by the Company for the realization of the dues and how the matter stood in the course of the investigation the officer-in-charge attached a director's minutes book Ext. 5 which contains the minutes of a resolution authorising Alamohan Das to retain the funds of the Company. Therefore, there was some evidence on which the charge for fabrication of the Directors' Minutes Book may be sustained.

9. In dealing with the charge for fabricating the Shareholders' Minutes Book the learned Magistrate has observed that the materials on the record made out a strong prima facie case that Shareholders' Minutes Book Ext. 18 is also a forged document. The circumstances which lent colour to the prosecution, in the view of the learned Magistrate were — (1) that Ext. 18 starts from February 28, 1915, although the Company was incorporated in 1912, (2) in many meetings the signatures of the shareholders were not taken although in some meetings the shareholders signed the minutes book, (3) resolutions of Amaresh Pramanik and Sudhir Kanti Sarkar are not incorporated in the minutes books, (4) some portions in the last page in the agreement (Ext. 20) with the managing agency firm Das Group appear to have been erased out and the agreement was thus tampered with, (5) the minute book Ext. 18 does not incorporate the relevant questions, and there appeared tampering with pagination, (6) the evidence of P. Ws. 8 & 10 regarding their presence or absence, and (7) the testimony of P. Ws. 15 & 24 suggested that most of the persons shown to have attended meetings were at the "beck and call of the accused Alamohan Das". Whether this evidence may justify a conviction cannot be enquired into at this stage. The evidence was prima facie sufficient to frame a charge. The Presidency Magistrate was of the view that a case for framing a charge for committing the case to the Court of Session was made out and the High Court has summarily dismissed the revision application in exercise of its jurisdiction.

10. It was contended before us that under Section 209 (1) of the Code of Criminal Procedure, a charge may be framed only if in the view of the committing Magistrate the evidence on record is sufficient to justify conviction of the accused. Section 209 of the Code provides:

"When the evidence referred to in Section 208, sub-sections (1) and (3), has been taken, and he has (if necessary) examined the accused for the purpose of enabling him to explain any circumstances appearing in the evidence against him, such Magistrate shall, if he finds that there are not sufficient grounds for committing the accused person for trial, record his reasons and discharge him, unless it appears to the Magistrate that such person should be tried before himself or some other Magistrate, in which case he shall proceed accordingly."

In terms Section 209 applies to cases which are instituted otherwise than on a police report. But the principle underlying that section applies to cases which are instituted on a police report. A Magistrate holding an enquiry is not intended to act merely as a recording machine. He is entitled to sift and weigh the materials on record, but only for seeing whether there is sufficient evidence for commitment, and not whether there is sufficient evidence for conviction. If there is no prima facie evidence or the evidence is totally unworthy of credit, it is his duty to discharge the accused: if there is some evidence on which a conviction may reasonably be based, he must commit the case. The Magistrate at that stage has no power to evaluate the evidence for satisfying himself of the guilt of the accused. The question before the Magistrate at that stage is whether there is some credible evidence which would sustain a conviction.

11. We do not agree with counsel for the appellants that there was no evidence on which a charge could be framed against the appellants or that the evidence was so totally unworthy of credit that an order recording the conviction against the accused could not be made thereon.

12. The appeal fails and is dismissed. We trust that the case which has been held up for a very long time will be taken up by the Court of Session for trial with the least practicable delay.

Appeal dismissed.

AIR 1970 SUPREME COURT 867

(V 57 C 188)

(From: Industrial Tribunal Punjab)*

V. BHARGAVA AND C. A.

VAIDIALINGAM, JJ.

Management of the Fertilizer Corporation of India Ltd., Appellant v. The Workmen, Respondents.

Civil Appeal No. 131 of 1968, D/- 15-11-1968.

(A) Companies Act (1956), Section 26 — Articles of Association of the Fertilizer Corporation of India Ltd. — Arts. 67 and 110 — Effect — Exercise of powers of the Board of Directors of the Company held was subject to directives by President of India — Company held bound to implement Circular of Central Government dated 26-12-1965 — Company held bound to pay ex gratia payment of bonus to workers.

Reading Articles 67 and 110 together, the exercise of the powers of the Board, of Directors of the company was apart from other restrictions subject to the directives issued by the President of India from time to time, with regard to the conduct of the business of the company or Directors. Any direction given by the President might, in like manner, be varied and annulled. The Directors were bound to give immediate effect to the directives so issued. (Para 23)

On December 21, 1965 the Government of India addressed a communication to the Chairman and Managing Director of the company on the subject of bonus payable to employees in the public sector undertakings.

The Central Cabinet's decision was made known to the workmen who were given the option either to accept Cabinet decision, as conveyed to the Company or the production bonus scheme as formulated by the Company. The workmen declined to opt for the production bonus scheme, but, on the other hand, insisted that bonus must be paid to them according to the Cabinet's decision. Held that the ex gratia payments, claimed by the workmen, were saved by Section 34 (3) of the Bonus Act. As the Company was bound to implement the Circular of the Central Government, dated December 21, 1965, was bound to pay the ex gratia payment of bonus to the workmen. (Paras 24, 26, 27, 30, 32)

(B) Industrial Disputes Act (1947), Section 24 — Right to strike — Strike held unjustified — Award of Industrial Tribunal Punjab in Reference No. 44 of 1966, Reversed.

The management was prepared to pay at all times the bonus as per the Bonus Act. They had also announced the introduction of the production bonus scheme. They were actively taking part in the conciliation proceedings. The management also made to the Union certain proposals on October 15, 1966 at the conference which 'proposals' the representatives of the workmen promised to discuss with the workmen and give a reply to the management. But, on October, 16, 1966, at a meeting of the workmen, they were incited to go on strike. The receipt of one telegram requesting the Union to put off going on strike by one day was admitted by the President of the Union, but that request was not complied with by the workmen.

Held that all these circumstances clearly showed that the demand of the Union regarding ex gratia bonus could not be considered to be of an 'urgent and serious nature'. They also showed that the launching of the strike was unjustified. Therefore the workmen were not entitled to any wages for the period of the strike. Award of Industrial Tribunal Punjab in Reference No. 44 of 1966, Reversed. (Para 45)

Cases Referred: Chronological Paras (1960) AIR 1960 SC 902 (V 47) = 1960-3 SCR 451, Management of Chandramalai Estate, Ernakulam v. Its Workmen 43

Mr. H. R. Gokhale, Sr. Advocate, (Dr. Anand Prakash, Advocate, Mr. J. B. Dadachanji, Advocate, M/s. J. B. Dadachanji and Co., and Mr. K. P. Bhandare and Miss Bhuvnesh Kumari, Advocates, with him), for Appellant; Mr. A. K. Sen, Sr. Advocate, (M/s. Rameshwar Nath and Mahinder Narain, Advocates of M/s. Rajinder Narain and Co., with him), for Respondents.

The Judgment of the Court was delivered by VAIDIALINGAM, J.:— This appeal, by special leave, is directed against the award dated November 24, 1967 of the Industrial Tribunal, Punjab, Chandigarh, in Reference No. 44 of 1966.

2. The President of India, by order dated October 31, 1966 referred the fol-

* (Ref. No. 44 of 1966, D/- 8-12-1967 — Ind. Tri. Punjab)

lowing issues for adjudication under Section 10 (1) (d) of the Industrial Disputes Act, 1947 to the Industrial Tribunal, Punjab, Chandigarh:

"1. Whether the workmen are justified in demanding the minimum bonus payable for the years 1964-65, 1965-60 and future years being fixed @ Rs. 110/- and the maximum @ Rs. 360/- per worker? If so, with what details?

2. Whether the action of the management in treating 4 days advance bonus paid for the year 1965-60 as deductible from bonus payable in future years is justified? If so, are any conditions or stipulations necessary and if so with what details?

3. Whether there is any justification for making any amendments in the production bonus-scheme introduced by the management in such a way that it enables payment of bonus to the lower paid workers at higher rates and higher paid workers at lower rates? If so, with what details?

4. Whether the workers are entitled to any wages or compensation for the period of strike viz., 12th October to 31st October, 1963."

It may be stated at the outset that this Court is not concerned with issue No. 3. The question of introduction of production bonus scheme arises only to a limited extent in so far as it has got a bearing on a contention raised by the appellant that the production bonus scheme has been introduced in substitution of ex gratia payment of bonus which was being made by the management. Even as regards the strike period mentioned in issue No. 4, parties were agreed before the Tribunal that the period of strike in respect of which wages or compensation were claimed by the workmen was from 17th October to 31st October 1963 and not from 12th October as stated in issue.

3. The circumstances under which the reference came to be made by the President of India may be stated. The appellant Fertiliser Corporation of India is a limited company incorporated under the Companies Act 1956 and it is also a Government company, as defined in Section 617 of that Act. The Nangal unit of the appellant went into production for the first time during the financial year 1962-63. On October 29, 1963, the appellant issued a Circular regarding the grant of ad hoc bonus of the year 1962-

63. The General Manager states, in the Circular that the management has sanctioned payment of ad hoc bonus to employees of Nangal unit for good performance during the year 1962-63 and that bonus will be payable to all employees who are on the rolls of the Corporation on October 30, 1963 and had completed 1 year's service on March 31, 1963 and whose basic salary on that date did not exceed Rs. 500/- per mensem. The Circular proceeds to state that the amount of bonus payable will be 1 month's basic salary plus dearness allowance, subject to the condition that no employee will get less than Rs. 100/- or more than Rs. 300/-.

4. On December 17, 1964, the appellant issued a circular regarding the grant of bonus and ex gratia payment for the year 1963-64. This circular states that the management has decided to sanction bonus and ex gratia payment to the employees of the Nangal unit on the basis mentioned therein. The principles laid down in this circular regarding payment of bonus and ex gratia payment are: (1) Bonus is being paid to all eligible employees strictly in conformity with the Bonus Commission's recommendation, as accepted by the Central Government, and the said bonus is the minimum bonus payable as per the Bonus Commission's recommendations, equivalent to 4% of the total basic wage and dearness allowance (excluding all other allowances etc.) paid during the year 1963-64. The employees eligible for these payments are those who draw a total basic pay and dearness allowance up to Rs. 1,600/- per mensem and the quantum payable to employees drawing over Rs. 750/- of basic pay and dearness allowance will be limited to what they would get if their pay and dearness allowance were only Rs. 750/- per month. (2) An additional ex gratia payment to be made to all workers drawing basic pay up to Rs. 500/- per month, to the extent that such payment, together with the bonus indicated earlier is equivalent to at least one month's full salary (basic pay plus dearness allowance); and the total payment, i.e., bonus and ex gratia in the case of workers drawing basic pay up to Rs. 500/- per month would be subject to a minimum of Rs. 100/- and maximum of Rs. 300/-. (3) The minimum qualifying service for ex gratia payment will be 3 months and minimum qualifying service for payment of bonus as per Bonus Commissions recommendation is 30 days.

5. On December 30, 1964 the appellant issued another circular stating that the minimum limit of Rs. 100/- in respect of bonus and ex gratia payment for the year 1963-64, as per its circular dated December 17, 1964 is raised to Rs. 110/- and that the enhanced amount will be paid along with the salary for the month of December 1964.

6. Regarding the grant of bonus for the year 1964-65, another circular was issued by the appellant on September 27, 1965. In this circular it is stated that bonus for the year 1964-65 has been decided to be paid strictly in accordance with legal obligations arising out of the payment of bonus under the Payment of Bonus Ordinance 1965, (Ordinance No. 3 of 1965) (hereinafter referred to as the Ordinance). According to that Ordinance, bonus that is payable is the minimum bonus which will be equivalent to 4% of the total basic pay and dearness allowance (excluding all other allowances) paid during the year 1964-65, or Rs. 40/- whichever is higher. The employees eligible for the bonus will be those who draw a total basic pay and dearness allowance up to Rs. 1,600/- per month, but the quantum of bonus payable to employees drawing total pay and dearness allowance over Rs. 750/- per month will be limited to what it would be if their pay and dearness allowance are only Rs. 750/- per mensem. It may be stated at this stage that the Ordinance was promulgated on May 29, 1965 and the Payment of Bonus Act 1965 (Act XXI of 1965) (hereinafter called the Bonus Act) came into force on September 25, 1965.

7. On December 9, 1965 the Minister of Labour and Employment made a statement in the Lok Sabha regarding a decision having been taken by the Central Cabinet on December 2, 1965. In this statement the Minister has referred to the fact that with the specific approval of the Cabinet ex gratia payments had been allowed in the past by way of bonus to employees drawing upto Rupees 500/- per mensem in some undertakings in the public sector. After referring to the recommendations of the Bonus Commission, the Minister announced the decision of the Cabinet dated December 2, 1965. As the said decision of the Cabinet has been circulated to the appellant, the matters referred to in the said decision will be adverted to by us when we refer to the letter of the Government addressed to the appellant.

8. On December 21, 1965 the Government of India addressed a communication to the Chairman and Managing Director of the appellant company on the subject of bonus payable to employees in the public sector undertakings. As the claim of the labour in the case, for bonus being paid for 1964-65 and 1965-66 is substantially based upon the decision of the Central Cabinet dated December 2, 1965 and as according to the appellant this communication cannot be considered to be a direction or an order, it is desirable to quote, in extenso, the said communication:

“ No. CH/COORD/64/65
GOVERNMENT OF INDIA
Ministry of Petroleum & Chemicals
(Department of Chemicals)
New Delhi, the 21st December, 1965

To,
Shri Satish Chandra,
Chairman & Managing Director,
Fertilizer Corporation of India Ltd.,
F-43, New Delhi South Extension, Pt. I,
New Delhi.

Subject: Bonus-payable to employees in the Public Sector undertakings—
Sir,

I am directed to refer to the Payment of Bonus Act, 1965 (No. 21 of 1965) which provides for the payment of bonus to persons employed in certain establishments and for matter connected therewith. “Establishment in public sector” is defined in Section 2 (16) of the Act. Further, sub-section (1) of Section 20 lays down that if in any accounting year an establishment in public sector sells any goods produced or manufactured by it or renders any services, in competition with an establishment in private sector, and the income from such sale or services or both is not less than twenty per cent of the gross income of the establishment in public sector for that year, then the provisions of this Act shall apply in relation to such employment in public sector as they apply in relation to a like establishment in private sector. It follows that the provisions of the Act do not apply to such of the establishments in private sector. Notwithstanding the provisions of the Act, it has been decided by Government as a matter of policy that non-competitive public sector undertaking should also make ex gratia payments to their employees of a minimum of 4 (four) per cent of annual gross earnings of the employees on the same lines as bonus will be payable by public sector undertakings falling within the provisions of the aforesaid act. The benefit of six-year bonus holiday (vide Section 10 of the Act) should be available to non-competitive public sector undertakings.

2. Government have further decided that the following should be the guiding principles for determining the quantum of ex gratia payments to employees of non-competing public sector undertakings:

(i) all non-competing public sector undertakings should pay ex gratia to their employees amounts which they would be liable to pay as bonus if they were to fall within the purview of the Payment of Bonus Act;

(ii) where such an undertaking has made ex gratia payment in the past, the amount of such payment should be treated as absorbed in the amount determined as in (i) above. In other words, any claim of employees to payment determined on the lines of the Bonus Law as an addition to payment on the scale of ex gratia payments in the past, should not be accepted. If the past ex gratia payment had been higher than the amount as worked out as in (i) above, the level of past ex gratia payment should be maintained;

(iii) the principle in (ii) above, shall also be followed in the case of competing public sector undertakings; and

(iv) the applicability of (ii) and (iii) above should be conditional upon the maintenance of the level of performance of the undertaking in individual cases. It is requested that the decisions of Government referred to, may be noted for guidance and necessary action.

Yours faithfully .

Sd/- Nakul Sen

Secretary to Government of India.*

9. Again, on September 9, 1966 the appellant issued a circular regarding payment of bonus for the year 1965-1966. It is stated therein that the management has decided to pay bonus to the employees of the Nangal units for the year 1965-1966 and that statutory bonus equivalent to 4% of basic pay and dearness allowance would be paid strictly in accordance with the provisions of the Bonus Act, 1965. It is further mentioned that in addition to this bonus it has been decided to pay production bonus at 3% of wages to employees whose maximum scale of pay does not exceed Rs. 1,400/- per mensem. Then the letter proceeds to state as to how exactly the production bonus is to be calculated and paid. The circular further states that in addition to the statutory bonus and production bonus the employees will also be paid '4 days' wages in the form of advance production bonus to be adjusted as and when total bonus payable to the workers exceeds 30 days' wages in future. There was a note appended to this circular on the subject of bonus payments, for the information of workers. That note proceeds to state that as production for the year 1962-63 exceeded the target the management has decided to pay ad hoc bonus equivalent to a month's salary for employees drawing upto Rs. 580/- per month.

10. For the year 1963-64 the employees were entitled to the minimum bonus of 4%, according to the recommendations of the Bonus Commission and that amount of bonus was paid. Though legally the workmen were not entitled to anything more, nevertheless, as the Nangal unit again exceeded the production target for the year 1963-64, the management decided to give an ex gratia payment for good performance so that the bonus as per the Bonus Commission's Report plus the ex gratia payment worked out to a month's wage. But during the year 1964-65 the production exceeded the target and the management decided to pay, in addition to the bonus payable under the Ordinance a performance reward equivalent to half a month's wages. The management was considering to introduce a production bonus scheme to provide an incentive for increased production. This became necessary in view of the advice given by the Labour Law Officer of the company that ex gratia payments should be avoided. The management further states that production bonus scheme has been approved by the Government of India and under that scheme employees are entitled to sums varying from 3% to 3.5% of their wages.

11. In the year 1965-66 the production had not exceeded the target and the employees of Nangal unit became entitled only to the statutory bonus of 4% of their wages, under the Bonus Act and production bonus was not admissible. Ex gratia payment also was ruled out in view of the advice of the Labour Officer and because of the fact that with the introduction of production bonus scheme all ex gratia payments stood eliminated. But, inasmuch as the workers in the Nangal unit have maintained peace and good industrial relations, the management decided, as a special case, to award production bonus of 3% under the production bonus scheme. The note summed up the position by stating that for the year 1965-66 the Nangal workers were eligible to (a) statutory bonus at 4% of the annual wages under the Bonus Act; (b) production bonus at 3% of the annual wages and (c) 4 days' wages in the form of advance production bonus to give the workmen a month's wages in all, which was to be adjusted as and when the total bonus payable to the workers exceeds 30 days' wages in future.

12. From the circular letters dated September 27, 1965 and September 9, 1966 it will be seen that the management offered to pay only the statutory bonus under the Ordinance and the Bonus Act and that ex gratia payment of bonus has been discontinued. In particular, in the note annexed to the circular of September 9, 1966 the management has taken the specific stand that a production bonus scheme has been introduced and that the said scheme has been approved by the Government of India. They also maintained that with the introduction of the production bonus scheme all ex gratia payments are eliminated.

13. As the appellant did not pay bonus for the years 1964-65 and 1965-66 at the rate at which it was paid for the year 1963-64, the Union submitted a charter of demands to the appellant on August 19, 1966. The Union demanded that bonus should be paid for the years 1964-65 and 1965-66 at the same rate as it had been paid in previous years and that the appellant was bound to act according to the decision of the Central Cabinet, dated December 2, 1965 and communicated to it by the circular letter of the Government of India dated December 21, 1965. That is according to the Union the minimum bonus that a worker was entitled to get was Rs. 110/-. There were certain other demands which are not necessary to consider in this appeal. By this letter the Union also indicated that if the demands were not met within 15 days, it would be forced to adopt agitational approaches to seek compliance with its demands. The management did not comply with this demand regarding payment of bonus and attempts at mediation failed and the workmen went on strike from October 17, 1966 and the reference to adjudication was made on November 2, 1966.

14. Before the Tribunal the workmen pressed their claim for bonus on the basis contained in their charter of demands. They also raised the plea that the introduction of production bonus scheme had no effect regarding the ex gratia payment of bonus made by the appellant. As the management had not complied with the reasonable demands of the labour and as it was acting in violation of the Cabinet decision, the workmen were justified in going on strike from October 17, 1966 and they were entitled to full wages for the strike period.

15. The appellant resisted the claims of the Union. They raised certain objections regarding the jurisdiction of the Industrial Tribunal to entertain the suit, but that again is not the subject of the present appeal. The management pleaded that the claim for bonus for the years 1964-65 and 1965-66 had to be considered and adjudication made only according to the provisions of the Bonus Act and that the workmen were not entitled to claim anything beyond what was provided in the said Act. No legal claim could be based on ex gratia payments of bonus in the previous years. They accepted the position that under Article 110 of the Articles of Association of the company the President of India could issue directions which become binding on the company, but pleaded that no such directive had been issued by the President. Even assuming that such direction had been issued by the President to the company, the workmen, who were third parties, could not seek to enforce any rights based upon such directives. The appellant Corporation is a public limited company and as such an autonomous statutory body. They further pleaded that the rate of bonus mentioned in the Cabinet decision would become payable only if the level of performance or production was properly maintained and in the case of the Nangal unit the level had not been kept up.

16. The management further averred that in consultation and with the approval of the Central Government the appellant introduced the production bonus scheme with effect from 1965-66 and the said scheme replaced the previous system of ex gratia payments, made on an ad hoc basis for the initial two years of the Nangal Unit's operation. The production bonus is payable in addition to the statutory bonus which the workmen are entitled to under the Bonus Act. As the Central Government had approved the scheme of payment of statutory bonus and production bonus, in lieu of the past system of making ex gratia and ad hoc payments, the management pleaded that the Cabinet decision of December 2, 1965 stood modified to that extent.

17. Regarding the treating of the 4 days' advance bonus paid for the year 1965-66 as deductible from bonus payable in future years the management pleaded that in order to keep industrial peace and as the new production bonus scheme substituting the old ex gratia payment had come into force the appellant decided to pay advance bonus of 4 days' wages. This advance bonus was specifically stated as being deductible when the total bonus payable to workers in future years exceeded 30 days. Therefore the management averred that they were entitled to adjust this advance payment in future years.

18. The management further pleaded that there was absolutely no justification for the workmen starting agitation from August 27, 1966 nor for going on strike from October 17, 1966. The conciliation proceedings started under the Act had not terminated and the appellant also was participating in the conciliation proceedings and was anxious to meet the demands of the workmen if it was otherwise possible. The production bonus scheme for the year 1965-66 had been announced on September 9, 1966. The strike was both illegal and unjustified and hence the workmen were not entitled to any wages during the strike period.

19. The Industrial Tribunal in its award has held that the appellant was bound to comply with the Cabinet decision dated December 2, 1965 and communicated to it by the Government by its Circular letter dated December 21, 1965. The decision of the Central Cabinet had been publicly announced by the Minister concerned in the Lok Sabha on December 9, 1965. The principles laid down for ex gratia payments by non-competitive public sector undertakings had been made applicable to competitive public sector undertakings also. The Tribunal held that as the appellant was a competitive public sector undertaking and the directions regarding ex gratia payments of bonus as well as the principles for determining the quantum of such payments had all been laid down in the Circular letter of December 21, 1965 and the appellant was bound to implement those directions, the claim of the labour for such payments for the years in question was perfectly justified. The ex gratia payment to be made under the Cabinet decision was to be in accordance with the level of past ex gratia payments. No doubt such payments were to be made provided the level of performance was maintained.

20. On the materials placed before it, the Tribunal held that the said condition was satisfied. The Tribunal rejected the claim of the appellant that production bonus scheme was introduced in consultation and with the approval of the Central Government and it further held that the introduction of that scheme was not in lieu of the ex gratia payments made on an ad hoc basis in the previous years. The Tribunal has further held that as the decision of the Central Cabinet, dated December 2, 1965 stands and has not been modified in any way by the Government, the management was bound to continue the ex gratia payments. It further held that the striking down, by this Court, of sub-section (2) of Section 34 of the Bonus Act had no effect on the claim made by the Union because the claim of the Union was sufficiently safeguarded by sub-section (3) of Section 34. Ultimately the Tribunal accepted the claim of the workmen for payment of minimum bonus for the years 1964-65 and 1965-66 being fixed at Rs. 110/- and regarding the maximum the Tribunal held that that was a matter of calculation, having regard to the wages of an employee; but it restricted its direction in this regard to the two years in question and declined to express any opinion regarding future years. The Tribunal also negatived the claim of the appellant to treat the 4 days' bonus paid in advance for the year 1965-66 as deductible from the bonus payable in future years. Regarding the wages claimed by the workmen for the period October 17 to October 31, 1966, the Tribunal held that the strike was both legal and justified and it directed the management to pay the workmen half their wages for that period.

21. The same stand that has been taken before the Tribunal by the parties has been urged before us by Mr. Gokhale, the learned Counsel for the appellant-management and Mr. A. K. Sen the learned counsel for the Union.

22. We shall first consider the correctness of the decision of the Industrial Tribunal regarding the claim of the workmen for ex gratia payment of bonus. We are not inclined to accept the contention of Mr. Gokhale that the appellant was not bound to implement the directions contained in the Circular letter of the Government dated December 21, 1965, containing the Cabinet decision of December 2, 1965, nor his further contention that the claim of the workmen for bonus should have been adjudicated upon exclusively as per the provisions of the Bonus Act without reference to the Cabinet decision.

23. The appellant company, registered under the Companies Act, is no doubt an autonomous unit; but there are several articles in the Articles of Association of the appellant Corporation which give power to the President of India and the Central Government to give directions in the working of the appellant. In fact, it may not be necessary to deal elaborately with this matter as the appellant itself, in sub-paragraph (1) of paragraph 8 of its reply dated January 25, 1967 filed before the Industrial Tribunal, has categorically admitted the position that under article 110 of the Articles of Association of the company the President of India can issue directives which become binding on the company; but the stand taken therein is that no such directive was ever issued by the President. The further stand taken by the appellant is that the production bonus scheme was introduced with the consent and approval of the Central Government and that, on its introduction, the ex gratia payments of bonus were eliminated and, to that extent, the decision of the Central Cabinet, dated December 2, 1965 stood modified. Even in respect of the Central Cabinet decision, relied on by the Union, the stand taken by the appellant, in its letter dated September 21, 1966 to the Chief Conciliation Officer, Punjab was that the Nangal unit had not so far received any instructions from the controlling Ministry regarding the Cabinet decision and that the position with regard to the Cabinet decision would be checked up by the management with their Head Office and the Ministry. Therefore, it will be seen that it was not the case of the appellant that it will not be bound by the Cabinet decision if the decision was there as a fact. We will only refer to Articles 67 and 110 of the Articles of Association of the appellant. Under Article 67 the Board of Directors of the company are entitled to exercise all such powers and to do all such acts and things as the company is authorised to exercise and do, but subject to the provisions of the Act and the directives, if any, the President may issue from time to time as contained in Article 110. Article 110 is as follows:

"110. Notwithstanding anything contained in any of these articles, the President may, from time to time, issue such directives as he may consider necessary in regard to the conduct of the business of the Company or Directors thereof and in like manner may vary and annul any such directive. The Directors shall give immediate effect to directives so issued." Reading the two articles together, the position is very clear that the exercise of the powers of the Board of Directors of the company is, apart from other restrictions, subject to the directives, if any, issued by the President from time to time with regard to the conduct of the business of the company or Directors. Any direction given by the President may, in like manner, be varied and annulled. The Directors are bound to give immediate effect to the directives so issued.

24. As we are of opinion that the draft letter of October 14, 1966 (which is discussed later on by us) constitutes an offer made by the appellant to the workmen to opt for payment of bonus either according to the Cabinet decision or according to the production bonus scheme, it becomes unnecessary for us to investigate the nature of the power that is exercised either by the President or the Central Government when giving directions to the appellant company, under the Articles of Association. For the same reason the question as to whether the circular letter of the Central Government, dated December 21, 1965 is a direction or order, as envisaged by the Articles of Association, does not also arise for consideration.

25. The decision of the Central Cabinet dated December 2, 1965 has been announced by the Minister in the Lok Sabha on December 9, 1965 and this decision has been communicated to the appellant by the concerned Ministry by Circular letter dated December 21, 1965. There is no controversy that if the Cabinet decision is given effect to, the claim of the workmen of ex gratia payment of bonus as in previous years will have to be accepted, unless the appellant is able to establish its plea that the production bonus scheme was introduced with the consent and approval of the Central Government in lieu of ex gratia payment of bonus. As to whether the appellant has succeeded in establishing this plea is an aspect which will be adverted to by us at a later stage.

26. In this case it is not necessary to consider the wider question as to how far, without anything else, the workmen would be able to lay any claim on the basis of any decision communicated by the Government to the appellant alone. As pointed out by Mr. Sen, it is clear that the Central Cabinet's decision was made known to the workmen who were given the option either to accept Cabinet decision, as conveyed to the appellant by the Circular letter of December 21, 1965 or the production bonus scheme as formulated by the appellant corporation.

27. Mr. Sen, the learned counsel for the Union, has invited our attention to the draft of a letter, dated October 14, 1966, which was intended to be sent by the workmen to the appellant. That letter, which is addressed to the appellant Corporation states:

"You have given us the option of accepting either the Cabinet decision conveyed to you vide Department of Chemical's letter No. CH/COORD/64/65 dated 21st December 1965, the terms of which are annexed to this letter, or the Production Bonus Scheme as formulated by the FCI Board....."

That the Circular letter of December 21, 1965 of the Government was made known to the workmen is clear from the evidence of the appellant's witness R. W. 7 Shri Wadhwa. He has categorically stated that he joined the discussions between the representatives of the workmen and the Managing Director of the appellant corporation which took place at Delhi on October 15, 1966. He further states that he came to know at that time that on October 14, 1966, during the discussions between the labour and the management at which he was not present, the workmen's representative had desired that the Cabinet's directions may be made applicable to them with regard to bonus. This witness further states that the Managing Director made an offer during the discussions and that offer is contained in the draft letter dated October 14, 1966, to which we have already referred. The witness further states that the workmen declined to accept the offer of the management to opt for the production bonus scheme. His evidence clearly shows that the management has communicated to the workmen the Cabinet decision, as conveyed by the Circular letter of the Government dated December 21, 1965. This evidence further makes it clear that the workmen declined to opt for the production bonus scheme, but, on the other hand, insisted that bonus must be paid to them according to the Cabinet's decision.

28. Mr. Gokhale attempted to explain away the effect of the draft letter of October 14, 1966 by urging that the Cabinet decision has been communicated only after the Union had submitted its charter of demands as early as August 19, 1966. So long as the Cabinet decision has been communicated and option was given to the workmen, it does not in our opinion matter at what stage the communication was made to the labour. Under the circumstances, it is idle for the management to contend either that the appellant is not bound to comply with the Cabinet decision or that the workmen are not entitled to make any claim on the basis of that decision.

29. That leaves us with the alternative contention, raised by the management, that production bonus scheme was introduced with the consent and approval of the Central Government and that on its introduction the ex gratia payment of bonus stood eliminated. No doubt this is the stand that has been taken in the note attached by the appellant in its Circular letter dated September 9, 1966. We have already adverted to that note in the earlier part of our judgment. No materials, whatsoever, have been placed by the appellant in support of this contention. The production bonus scheme, itself does not state that it is in lieu of all other ex gratia payments. There is no order of Government on record to show that the Circular letter of December 21, 1965 has been modified by the Government in any manner whatsoever. The only evidence relied on by the appellant in this connection was the statement of R. W. 7, Shri Wadhwa. He says that after a consideration of all the relevant factors and in consultation and with the approval of the Central Government, a production bonus scheme was introduced by the appellant with effect from year 1965-66 and that he was himself present at a meeting in the Ministry when a decision was taken that the Corporation might introduce the production bonus scheme and that the workmen should be paid production bonus in addition to the bonus payable under the Bonus Act. He further speaks to the fact that production bonus scheme replaced the ad hoc ex gratia bonus made in the past years. Excepting this bare statement in the oral evidence, no order of the Central Government to this effect, or modifying its previous decision, has been placed before the Tribunal. Under those circumstances, the Tribunal was perfectly justified in holding that the appellant has not established that on the introduction of the production bonus scheme, all payments of ex gratia bonus ceased.

30. The striking down of sub-section (2) of Section 34 of the Bonus Act, by this Court, has no effect, as rightly held by the Tribunal, in recognising the claim of the workmen. When once it is established, as in this case, that the Cabinet decision regarding ex gratia payment of bonus has been communicated to the workmen with an option to accept the said decision or the production bonus scheme and the labour wanted the Cabinet decision to be implemented, it follows that the agreement, under Section 34 (3) of the said Act has come into effect and it is valid. Hence we are in agreement with the views expressed by the Tribunal that the ex gratia payments, claimed by the workmen, are saved by sub-section (3) of Section 34 of the Bonus Act.

31. There was a feeble argument, attempted to be raised by Mr. Gokhale, that the application of the Cabinet decision is conditional upon the maintenance of the level of performance of undertaking in individual cases. The Tribunal has held that the level of performance of workmen, in the years in question, has been maintained. In this connection among other matters, it has referred to a statement made in the April-May, 1966 issue of the "FCI News", a journal published by the appellant. This journal is issued after the year has come to an end and there is a statement to the effect that the Nangal Fertilizer factory has exceeded the revised production targets fixed for Calcium Ammonium Nitrate

(CAN) and Heavy Water and the said performance, despite the serious handicap suffered because of the severe power cuts enforced since November 1965, was commendable. We are satisfied that the finding recorded by the Tribunal, on this point, is justified.

32. Once it is held, as we do, in agreement with the Tribunal, that the appellant was bound to implement the Circular of the Central Government, dated December 21, 1965, it follows that the appellant was bound to pay the ex gratia payment of bonus, as claimed by the workmen for the years in question and that the appellant is further not entitled to deduct the advance wages of 4 days paid for the year 1965-66. The decision of the Tribunal, on this aspect is correct and is affirmed.

33. Before we take up the question regarding the wages for the strike period, it is necessary to give a clarification regarding an observation made by the Tribunal regarding the production bonus scheme. While discussing the claim of the Union regarding ex gratia payment of bonus as per the Cabinet decision, the Tribunal has observed that the production bonus scheme introduced by the appellant is in addition to the ex gratia payment which the workmen are entitled to. We do not express any opinion regarding the correctness or otherwise of this view of the Tribunal, excepting to state that the opinion expressed by the Tribunal was uncalled for and outside the scope of the reference.

34. This leaves us with the question of the claim of labour for wages for the strike period from October 17 to October 31, 1966. The Tribunal has held that the strike was both legal and justified and it has awarded the workmen half the wages for that period. This finding of the Tribunal is attacked on behalf of the appellant by Mr. Gokhale. The learned counsel did not urge that the strike was illegal, but on the other hand he pressed before us that the strike was thoroughly unjustified and the finding of the Tribunal was contrary to the evidence on record and also perverse. The counsel urged that various items of evidence which have a very vital bearing on a consideration of this question had not been adverted to at all by the Tribunal. On the other hand, Mr. Sen, learned counsel for the Union, pointed out that the Union made various attempts for having its claim regarding bonus ami-day, and then return to Delhi and report the reaction of the workmen regarding the proposals discussed during the negotiations. But, instead of keeping this promise the representatives of workmen addressed a public meeting on the evening of October 16, 1966 and incited the workmen to strike work from October 17, 1966. The strike was actually commenced from October 17. Mr. Wadehra also stated that a telegram from the Secretary of the Labour Ministry inviting all the parties to attend the conciliation meeting at Chandigarh on October 17, 1966 was received but the labour did not care to attend that meeting.

39. We have referred to some of the incidents which have taken place prior to October 17, 1966 only to show the attitude that the labour was adopting in respect of their demands. There is a further circumstance that a telegram, dated October 13, 1966 had been sent by the Labour Commissioner fixing conciliation proceedings for October 17, 1966, at Chandigarh and a telegram was also sent by Shri Vidhyalankar, who was representing the workmen, to the Union President requesting him to stay the strike for a day. So far as the telegram stated to have been sent by Shri Vidhyalankar, the receipt of the same is admitted, but the Union is not prepared to accept the receipt of the telegram, dated October 13, 1966 stated to have been sent by the Labour Commissioner. We will presently show that the plea of the Union in this regard cannot be accepted because there is sufficient evidence on record to show that the telegram had been sent by the Labour Commissioner and must have been received by the President of the Union.

40. We have already referred to the statement of Shri Wadehra about the receipt, by the management, of the said telegram fixing conciliation proceedings for October 17, 1966. The telegram is Exhibit RW3/1 which is dated October 13, 1966 and sent from Chandigarh. The telegram is sent to the appellant and to the Union. The Labour Commissioner requests the attendance of the parties to the conciliation meeting on October 17, at 11 a. m.

41. Exhibit R. W. 14 is a letter dated October 13, 1966 sent by the Labour Commissioner to the appellant and the unions concerned containing a copy of the telegram sent by him on that date regarding the conciliation proceedings being fixed on October 17, at Chandigarh and requesting the parties to appear before him. That the said telegram and letter have been sent is proved by the evidence of R. W. 1 who is an Assistant in the Labour Commissioner's Office at Chandigarh and who has produced the necessary file pertaining to the same. That the telegram sent by the Labour Commissioner has been delivered is also proved by R. W. 3 who has produced the delivery sheets in respect of the telegram. Relying upon these circumstances quite naturally, Mr. Gokhale strenuously urged that the receipt of the telegram issued by the Labour Commissioner is purposely denied by the Union to profess ignorance about the conciliation proceedings being taken up on October 17, 1966, because the Union was in no mood to participate in those proceedings.

42. Mr. Sen, no doubt relied upon the evidence of the workmen's witness No. 3, Shri Ramthirtha, President of the Union, that no telegram was received from the Labour Commissioner regarding conciliation proceedings to take place on October 17, 1966, but this witness himself accepts that the telegram sent by Mr. Vidhyalankar was received by him. We are inclined to accept the contention of Mr. Gokhale that the denial by the Union of the receipt of the telegram sent by the Labour Commissioner cannot be accepted.

43. Mr. Gokhale, learned counsel, referred us to the decision of this Court in The Management of Chandramalai Estate, Ernakulam v. Its Workmen, 1960-3 SCR 451 = (AIR 1960 SC 902) and particularly to the following observations at p. 455 (of SCR) = (at p. 904 of AIR).

"While on the one hand it has to be remembered that strike is a legitimate and sometimes unavoidable weapon in the hands of labour it is equally important to remember that indiscriminate and hasty use of this weapon should not be encouraged. It will not be right for labour to think that for any kind of demand a strike can be commenced with impunity without exhausting reasonable avenues for peaceful achievement of their objects. There may be cases where the demand is of such an urgent and serious nature that it would not be reasonable to expect labour to wait till after asking the Government to make a reference. In such cases, strike even before such a request has been made may well be justified."

Mr. Gokhale urged that there was absolutely no urgency in the case before us because the management was prepared to pay the bonus as admitted by them and the controversy was really regarding the additional ex gratia payment. Further, counsel pointed out that the Conciliation Officer had not made any report about conciliation having failed and in fact the telegram sent by the Labour Commissioner as late as October 13, 1960 clearly showed that he was still continuing the proceedings. Counsel also pointed out that after having separated from the Delhi meeting on October 15, 1960, promising to consider the proposals put before it by the management and communicate the same to the management, the leaders of the workmen incited them to go on strike at the meeting held the very next day and actually the strike itself commenced from October 17, 1960. No doubt Mr. Sen, learned counsel, pointed out that there was nothing for the management to consider in their meeting the demands of the workmen, because the Cabinet decision was well known. He also urged that the workmen obviously felt that the management was not adopting a reasonable attitude and hence they resorted to a strike which was justified under the circumstances.

44. We may also indicate that there is evidence, let in by the management, to show that during the strike period and even prior to that, several of the workmen resorted to violence and other acts of indecency. Evidence has also been let in to show that the workmen continued the strike even after a notification, dated October 31, 1960 was issued by the President of India prohibiting the strike and requiring the workers to report for duty. We do not propose to dwell on these matters, because we have only to consider the justification or otherwise of the strike from October 17, to October 31, 1960.

45. The management was prepared to pay at all times the bonus as per the Bonus Act. They had also announced on September 9, 1960 the introduction of the production bonus scheme. They were actively taking part in the conciliation proceedings. The appellant also made to the Union certain proposals on October 15, 1960 at the conference held at Delhi which proposals the representatives of the workmen promised to discuss with the workmen and give a reply to the appellant. But, on October 16, 1960, at a meeting of the workmen, they were incited to go on strike. The receipt of the telegram of October 13, 1960 of the Labour Commissioner, fixing October 17, 1960 for further discussions and inviting the Union and the management to attend the meeting, is falsely denied by the Union. The receipt of Sri Vidhyalankar's telegram requesting the Union to put off going on strike by one day is admitted by the President of the Union, but that request was not complied with by the workmen. Sri Vidhyalankar, it must be remembered, was representing the workmen in certain conciliation meetings. All these circumstances clearly show that the demand of the Union regarding ex gratia bonus cannot be considered to be of an 'urgent and serious nature'. They also show that the launching of the strike was unjustified. It therefore follows that the workmen are not entitled to any wages for the period of the strike viz., from October 17 to October 31, 1960. To this extent the award of the Industrial Tribunal will have to be set aside.

46. In the result, we set aside the award of the Industrial Tribunal in so far as it directs the appellant to pay the workmen half the wages for the strike period from October 17 to October 31, 1960, and, to that extent, the appeal is allowed. In other respects the appeal will stand dismissed. As the appellant has failed on the substantial question, it will pay the costs of the respondent-workmen.

Appeal partly allowed.

AIR 1970 SUPREME COURT 578
(V 57 C 189)

(From: Industrial Tribunal Andhra Pradesh)*

J. M. SHELAT, V. BHABGAVA AND
C. A. VAIDIALINGAM, JJ.

The Workmen of Shri Bajrang Jute Mills Ltd., Appellants v. The Employers of Shri Bajrang Jute Mills Ltd., Respondents.

Civil Appeal No. 923 of 1960, D/- 31-10-1968.

* (I. D. No. 12 of 1964, D/- 29-5-1965—Industrial Tribunal—Andh. Pra.)

CN/CN/F527/68/D11Z/D

Industrial Disputes Act (1947), S. 2 (rr), Third Sch. Item 1 — Wages — Fair wages — Fixation of — Considerations — Central Wage Board for Jute industry — Held Board had not followed the essential pre-requisites of deciding wage structure.

So far as fair wage is concerned, while the lower limit must obviously be the minimum wage, the upper limit is equally said to be what may broadly be called the 'capacity of the industry to pay'. The capacity of the industry to pay should be gauged on an industry-cum-region basis, after taking a fair cross-section of that industry and in a given case it may be even permissible to divide the industry into appropriate classes and then deal with the capacity of the industry to pay class-wise. AIR 1958 SC 578 and AIR 1963 SC 1327 and AIR 1964 SC 489, Rel. on. (Para 9)

There is an obligation on the Wage Board to follow correctly and apply the principles laid down by the Supreme Court in the matter of fixation of wages and dearness allowance. As the Wage Board was fixing a fair wage for the entire jute industry it may not have been strictly necessary to consider the financial capacity of each individual unit. But the requirement of considering the capacity of each individual unit to pay may not become necessary if the industry is divided into different classes. Even if the industry is divided into different classes it will still be necessary to consider the capacity of the respective classes to bear the burden imposed on them. For this purpose a cross-section of these respective classes may have to be taken for careful consideration for deciding what burden the class considered as a whole can bear.

Where no attempt had been made by the Wage Board to divide the industry into classes, no cross-section of such classes had been taken for investigation to decide what burden the units in each class could bear, the approach of the Wage Board to determine uniform wage scales for the entire industry suffered from an inherent weakness. Conditions, such as easy access to raw materials, transport, nearness of markets for disposal of the manufactured product, availability of labour, the type of market whether within or outside the country for which the manufactured articles were intended and diverse other factors must vary from region to region. Likewise, economic conditions affecting the consumer prices must differ from region to region, depending largely upon whether a particular region was self-sufficient or not in the elemental needs of its citizens and these in turn were bound to affect living standards. It would therefore be too artificial and unrealistic an approach to be oblivious of these differences and to attempt to group together all establishments and factories and device common wage-scales applicable to all of them disregarding the peculiar features of the industry in a particular region. Instead of attaining harmony there would as a result arise inevitably a feeling of discrimination. It would be enough to take a representative cross-section of the industry for assessment; the cross-section to be a truly representative one and capable of giving a true picture of the conditions of both the industry and labour must be one from each region where establishments of the industry in question are situate. Where what the Wage Board, however, did was that instead of proceeding region-wise and selecting a representative cross-section from each region, it selected 20 mills from West Bengal and clubbed them with 9 reporting mills from the rest of the regions, viz., Bihar, U. P., Madhya Pradesh and Andhra Pradesh where a few mills were scattered and considered these 29 mills as representing a cross-section of the industry, these mills so clubbed together could not truly reflect the economic and other conditions prevailing in the mills in different regions with their peculiar problems and differing conditions. That is not a proper approach and is bound to result in injustice especially in view of the peculiar feature of the jute industry that it was predominantly concentrated in West Bengal and was export-oriented. Besides, the jute industry in the other regions suffered from a distinct disadvantage as the raw materials had to be transported from a distance at considerable cost. Another difficulty in accepting the Wage Board's recommendations would arise where the Board equated the cotton textile industry in West Bengal with the jute industry there and finding the wage-scales in the jute industry lower than those in the cotton textile industry, raised the scales in the jute industry so as to bring them to the level of the cotton textile industry and having so done the next step which it took was to raise also the wage-scales in mills outside West Bengal to bring them in line with the scales proposed by it for the mills in West Bengal. This meant that the Board gave a go-by to the well established principle of industry-cum-region consistently applied by Industrial Tribunals whenever wage-scales had to be determined. The Board ought to have selected comparable units from each of the regions where the jute mills were situate and after their examination arrive at common wage-scales for each of those regions instead of grouping together 20 mills from West Bengal and 9 mills from the other regions and treating them as constituting a cross-section representing the industry. (Paras 8, 36 to 42, 44)

Cases Referred: Chronological Paras

- (1964) AIR 1964 SC 489 (V 51) =
 (1964) 1 SCR 362, Greaves Cotton and Co. v. Their Workmen 9
 (1963) AIR 1963 SC 1327 (V 50) =
 (1963) Supp 2 SCR 16, French
 Motor Car Co. Ltd. v. The
 Workmen 9
 (1959) AIR 1958 SC 578 (V 45) =
 1959 SCR 12, Express Newspaper
 (Private) Ltd. v. Union of India 9
 30, 33

Mr. M. K. Ramamurti, Mrs. Shyamala Pappu and Vineat Kumar, Advocates, for Appellants; M/s. K. Srinivasamurthy, Naunit Lal and B. P. Singh, Advocates, for Respondents.

The following Judgment of the Court was delivered by VAIDIALINGAM, J.: The workmen of Shri Bajrang Jute Mills Ltd., in this appeal by special leave, attack the correctness of the award dated May 29, 1965 of the Industrial Tribunal, Andhra Pradesh, Hyderabad, I. D. No. 12 of 1964, by which it held that the demand of the workmen for implementation of the recommendations of the Central Wage Board for Jute Industry (hereinafter referred to as the Wage Board), was not justified.

2. In view of the fact that the respondent-management declined to accede to the demand of the appellants to pay wages in accordance with the recommendations of the Wage Board, the State of Andhra Pradesh, by its order dated March 21, 1964, referred for adjudication to the Industrial Tribunal, Hyderabad, the following question:

"Whether the demand of the workmen in Sri Bajrang Jute Mills, Limited, Guntur, for implementation of the recommendations of the Central Wage Board for Jute Industry is justified, and if so, to what extent?"

3. The Wage Board was constituted by the Central Government for determining, among other matters, a wage structure, based on the principles of fair wages payable in the jute industry. The Wage Board consisted of a Chairman, two independent Members, two Members representing the employers and two Members representing the workers. It may be noted that the Members representing the industry and labour were not chosen by the representative bodies of the industry or the labour but were appointed by Government. In fact, neither the industry nor the labour had any voice in the choice by the Government of any of the members of the Wage Board. The Wage Board submitted its report to the Government, making recommendations about the wage structure and laying down principles for awarding bonus for the year 1962-63 and the subsequent years.

3-A. It appears from the Wage Board's report that, at the very outset, the Wage Board selected 20 mills from West Bengal and 9 reporting mills from outside West Bengal which it considered to form a representative cross-section of the industry for a detailed study. The Wage Board took into account the financial position of the said mills and also collected other data and information not only from the mills concerned but also from other quarters. The Wage Board took into account the growth of paid-up capital, gross block depreciation, profits made and dividends paid by the mills and other allied matters and came to the conclusion that the industry's position was satisfactory and its future was bright. The Wage Board was not required to fix a wage structure on the peculiar financial position of any particular unit, although it was bound to take a fair cross-section of the industry represented by units reflecting the general conditions prevailing in the industry as a whole. The Wage Board also considered the principles for determination of bonus and recommended payment of bonus for the year 1963 on the basis of the basic wages drawn by the worker for the year 1962. It also recommended that for future years the bonus was to be paid according to the wages drawn in the preceding year. It further recommended certain rules for determination of the quantum of bonus. According to the appellants, the respondent was bound to implement the recommendations of the Wage Board in all respects and its refusal to do so was illegal and unjustified.

4. The respondent pleaded that the recommendations of the Wage Board could not be implemented as the Mill had no financial capacity to bear the burden of the wage scales recommended by the Wage Board. The respondent made an attempt to implement the Wage Board's recommendations to some extent at least, provided the labour agreed for revision of work loads, but the labour was not willing for such revision. It was further stated that the respondent company, though started in 1907, had been running at a loss for a number of years and its loom-strength was only 120. The mill was located at Guntur, which is not a jute-growing area, and in consequence almost all raw materials had to be brought from Vijayanagaram, in Visakhapatnam District, and from Calcutta. As the raw materials and other products had to be brought from outside, it involved the mill in considerable expense due to freight charges etc. The products manufactured in the mill were only cement bags and twine and cement companies were its only customers. The company had furnished replies to the questionnaire issued by the Wage Board and had made it clear that the wages paid by it were reasonable and it could not bear any additional burden in that regard. Even the interim relief, recommended by the Wage Board, was implemented with considerable difficulty though it involved the company in an additional revenue expenditure of Rs. 1,53,000/- a year.

5. The Wage Board's recommendations fixed the wage scales, dearness allowance etc., for all the employees working in all the jute mills situated in the country, irrespective of the financial position of individual mills. If the recommendations of the Wage Board were to be implemented the company would be put to further expenditure of Rupees 2,75,385.60 in the first year, Rs. 3.25 lakhs in the second year and Rs. 3.75 lakhs in the third year in addition to the existing wage bill which the company had to meet. The company has been making only negligible profits and it could not pay any dividend on its equity shares for nearly 7 years. Its reserves also have been dwindling. The financial position of the company, therefore, is such that it is impossible for it to bear the burden of the additional wage structure, dearness allowance etc., as recommended by the Wage Board. The company further pleaded that the Wage Board committed a serious mistake when it compared the financial position of the respondent along with two other large mills in the Andhra area viz., Nellimarla and Chittavalasa Jute Mills. Further the wage scales fixed by the Wage Board are on the basis of the position occupied by big Jute mills in West Bengal, having upto 2,561 looms and 13,580 spindles. The Wage Board did not attempt to make any distinction between small and uneconomic mills and large mills, nor was any classification made in that manner.

6. Regarding payment of bonus, the company pleaded that this was covered by a settlement and the workmen were not entitled to the same in view of the financial position of the company and as there was no available surplus. The wage structure, dearness allowance etc., fixed by the Wage Board were not in accordance with the principles laid down by this Court in several decisions. According to the decisions of this Court, no fair wage can be fixed unless the unit in question has the financial capacity to meet the additional burden; and, in fixing the wage scale and dearness allowance, the principle of industry-cum-region has to be applied. Small and struggling units should not be compared with large, flourishing concerns. The extent of business carried on by them, the labour force, the capital invested, quantum of reserves, dividends declared and profits made, have all to be taken into account to see whether the units could be compared for wage fixation. All these circumstances have not been given due weight and consideration by the Wage Board. The respondent mill has only 120 looms and it has been compared with not only the very big mills in West Bengal but also with the Nellimarla and Chittavalasa Jute Mills which have 500 and 316 looms respectively. No classification was made by the Wage Board of the various jute mills as large, medium and small units; and in prescribing uniform scales for all types of units no distinction has been made between economic and uneconomic units. Small and struggling units have been treated in the same way as large and prosperous units. Finally, the respondents pleaded that in view of the circumstances indicated above, the Wage Board's recommendations could not be implemented by it and the labour's claims, on the basis of the Wage Board's recommendations, were not justified.

7. The Industrial Tribunal, in its award under attack, accepted the pleas taken by the management. While recognising the fact that the Wage Board's recommendations were made, after collecting considerable data, the Tribunal was of the view that the Wage Board committed an error in comparing the respondent mill with other big mills, not only in Andhra Pradesh but also outside that State. The Tribunal was also of the view that the principles laid down by this Court that the fixation of wage scales should be on an industry-cum-region basis and that small units should not be compared with large and flourishing concerns, were not given due regard by the Wage Board. On the materials placed before it, the Tribunal accepted the claim of the respondent that it was a small concern considered from any point of view, viz., of looms, paid up capital, reserves, or the profits. In respect of the capacity to pay, the Tribunal was of the view that the Wage Board had not approached the question in the light of the principles laid down by this Court. The Tribunal came to the conclusion that the respondent, which is a fairly small unit, has not the financial capacity to adopt the wage-structure fixed by the Wage Board. The Tribunal accepted the claim of the respondent regarding the additional financial burden it would have to bear, even according to the phased programme fixed by the Wage Board and has held that the financial position of the company is such that it cannot bear this burden. The Tribunal also came to the conclusion that as the Wage Board has devising a fair-wage, the capacity of the particular industry to bear the additional burden — which is one of the essential circumstances to be taken into consideration — has not been taken into account. On the other hand, all jute mills, wherever situate, big or small, prosperous or struggling, economic or uneconomic, have all been treated alike and a uniform wage structure applicable to all mills has been fixed. There has been no attempt at classification of small and uneconomic mills for the purpose of finding out their financial capacity. The Tribunal finally came to the conclusion that the demand of the workmen for implementation of the recommendations of the Wage Board was not justified.

8. The same stands, taken before the Tribunal by the management and the workmen as mentioned earlier, have been reiterated before us by Mr. M. K. Ramamurthy, learned counsel for the Union, attacking the award and Mr. K. Srinivasamurthy, learned counsel for the management, in support of the award. Before we refer to the circumstances under which the Wage Board was constituted, as well as the approach made by it in the fixation of wage-scales and other matters, it is necessary to refer to the principles laid down by this Court in that regard and to examine whether the Wage Board has properly applied those principles. Mr. Ramamurthy, learned counsel for the appellant, has accepted the position that there is an obligation on the Wage Board to follow correctly and apply the principles laid down by this Court in the matter of fixation of wages and dearness allowance. But his contention is that the Wage Board has, in its recommendations, followed those principles.

9. In Express Newspapers (Private) Ltd. v. Union of India, 1939 SCR 12 = (AIR 1938 SC 578) this Court has elaborately considered the concept of (i) living wage; (ii) fair wage; and (iii) minimum wage, as well as the machinery for fixation of wages, adopted in various countries. So it is not necessary to cover the ground over again. So far as fair wage is concerned, this Court has stated that while the lower limit must obviously be the minimum wage, the upper limit is equally said to be what may broadly be called the 'capacity of the industry to pay'. It has further been stated that that capacity of the industry to pay should be gauged on an industry-cum-region basis, after taking a fair cross-section of that industry and that in a given case it may be even permissible to divide the industry into appropriate classes and then deal with the capacity of the industry to pay class-wise. This Court further laid down the principles in that regard as follows, at p. 92 (of SCR) = (at p. 605 of AIR):

"The principles which emerge from the above discussion are:

(1) that in the fixation of rates of wages which include within its compass the fixation of scales of wages also, the capacity of the industry to pay is one of the essential circumstances to be taken into consideration except in cases of bare subsistence or minimum wage where the employer is bound to pay the same irrespective of such capacity;

(2) that the capacity of the industry to pay is to be considered on an industry-cum-region basis after taking a fair cross-section of the industry; and

(3) that the proper measure for gauging the capacity of the industry to pay should take into account the elasticity of demand for the product, the possibility of tightening up the organisation so that the industry could pay higher wages without difficulty and the possibility of increase in the efficiency of the lowest paid workers resulting in increase in production considered in conjunction with the elasticity of demand for the product—no doubt against the ultimate background that the burden of the increased rate should not be such as to drive the employer out of business.”

The discussion on the question of capacity of an industry to pay is wound up at p. 191 (of SCR) = (at p. 642 of AIR) with the following observations:

“Industrial adjudication is familiar with the method which is usually adopted to determine the capacity of the employer to pay the burden sought to be imposed on him. If the industry is divided into different classes, it may not be necessary to consider the capacity of each individual unit to pay but it would certainly be necessary to consider the capacity of the respective classes to bear the burden imposed on them. A cross-section of these respective classes may have to be taken for careful examination and all relevant factors may have to be borne in mind in deciding what burden the class considered as a whole can bear. If possible, an attempt can also be made, and is often made, to project the burden of the wage structure into two or three succeeding years and determine how it affects the financial position of the employer.”

In French Motor Car Co., Ltd. v. Workmen, (1963) Supp 2 SCR 16 = (AIR 1963 SC 1327) this Court observed at p. 20 (of SCR) = (at p. 1329 of AIR):

“It is now well settled that the principle of industry-cum-region has to be applied by an industrial court, when it proceeds to consider questions like wage structure, dearness allowance and similar conditions of service. In applying that principle industrial courts have to compare wage scales prevailing in similar concerns in the region with which it is dealing, and generally speaking similar concerns would be those in the same line of business as the concern with respect to which the dispute is under consideration. Further, even in the same line of business, it would not be proper to compare (for example) a small struggling concern with a large flourishing concern.”

The principle that the basis of fixation of wages and dearness allowance is industry-cum-region was reiterated in Greaves Cotton and Co. v. Their Workmen, (1964) 1 SCR 362 = (AIR 1964 SC 489).

10. According to Mr. Ramamurthy, the learned counsel for the appellant, the principles laid down by the decisions, referred to above have been borne in mind by the Wage Board when it fixed the wage structure and dearness allowance. Learned counsel also urged that when a wage structure was fixed for the industry as such, it is not necessary that the capacity of individual units should also be considered and that on the other hand it would be enough if a fair cross-section of the industry was taken into account for this purpose as was done by the Wage Board in the present case.

11. On the other hand, according to Mr. Srinivasamurthy, the learned counsel for the management, inasmuch as a fair wage was being fixed, the wage Board was bound to apply the principle of industry-cum-region in fixing the wage structure and dearness allowance and the Wage Board has committed an error in not classifying the various units as large, medium and small units and prescribing different scales for different types of units.

12. We shall now proceed to consider the circumstances under which the Wage Board was constituted, its composition and the approach made by it in fixing the wage structure and dearness allowance.

13. In Chapter XXVII, paragraph 25, of the Second Five Year Plan of the Government of India, it is stated that statistics of industrial disputes show that wages and allied matters are the major source of friction between employers and workers and that an acceptable machinery for settling wage disputes will be one which gives the parties themselves a more responsible role in reaching decisions. It is further stated that an authority like a tripartite wage board, consisting of equal representatives of employers and workers and an independent chairman would probably ensure more acceptable decisions and that such wage boards should be constituted for individual industries in different areas. In pursuance of this recommendation, the Government of India, by its Resolution No. WB-5(1)/60 dated August 25, 1960, set up a Central Wage Board for Jute Industry. The Board consisted of a Chairman, two independent Members and two Members representing employers and two Members representing employees. The terms of reference of the Board were:

"(a) to determine the categories of employees (manual, clerical, supervisory, etc.) who should be brought within the scope of the proposed wage fixation;

(b) to work out a wage structure based on the principles of fair wages as set forth in the report of the Committee on Fair Wages."

In evolving a wage structure, the Board was also required to take into account the needs of the industry in a developing economy, the special features of the jute industry as an export industry, the requirements of social justice and the need for adjusting wage differentials in such a manner as to provide incentives to workers for advancing their skill. The Wage Board was also required, within two months from the date of its starting work, to submit its recommendations regarding the demands of labour in respect of interim relief, pending its final report.

14. The Wage Board recommended to the Central Government the grant of interim relief of Rs. 2.85 from October 1 to December 31, 1960 and Rs. 3.42 from January 1, 1961 in respect of all jute mills in India, excepting the Katihar Jute Mill in respect of which the interim relief at the rate of Rs. 3.42 was granted from September 1, 1961. The Central Government accepted this recommendation, by its Resolution No. WB-5(3)/61 dated January 25, 1961 and requested the jute mills to implement the same as soon as possible. There is no controversy that the respondent mill complied with this request though it involved the company in an additional expenditure of Rs. 1,53,000/-. This claim of the company has been accepted by the Industrial Tribunal. The Wage Board submitted to the Central Government on September 4, 1963 its final recommendations dated August 31, 1963 and recommended that the new wage structure should be given effect to from July 1, 1963. The Central Government by its Resolution No. WB-5(16)/63 dated September 27, 1963 accepted the report and made a request to the employers, the workers and the State Government to implement the same expeditiously. The standardised basic wages of various categories of workers of jute mills for a month of 26 days or 208 hours are specified in Appendix XI of the Report; and there is no controversy that the basic wages of all categories of workers in the employ of the respondent jute mill is the same as the standardised basic wage contained in Appendix XI. But, there is a further recommendation that so far as the appellant jute mill and another jute mill, viz., Sri Krishna Jute Mill, were concerned, the wage increase was to be on a phased basis.

15. We may refer now to the various aspects dealt with by the Wage Board in its report. Chapter III deals generally with the Industry. In para 3.5 it is stated that there is an overwhelming concentration of jute industry in West Bengal and only a sprinkling of it is to be found elsewhere in India. It is also noted that the loomage at the time of the report in the whole of India stood at 72,916 looms. The reasons for the heavy concentration in West Bengal of jute mills are stated to be factors like abundant supply of raw material, proximity of coal fields in Raniganj, navigability of the Hooghly and the availability of the required type of labour in the neighbourhood. So far as jute mills at other places in India are concerned, in para 3.6 of the Report it is stated that small jute mills have come up in other States, including Andhra Pradesh, but the total loomage of all such mills outside West Bengal is only 3,242 looms, and the mills are distributed in various places.

16. Appendix VII of the Report contains a statement showing the mills operating, number of looms and spindles in the whole of India. So far as West Bengal is concerned, the total number of looms is given as 65,383, in Andhra Pradesh as 1,072; in Bihar 1,059; Uttar Pradesh 891 and Madhya Pradesh 220. It will be noted from Appendix VII that in Andhra Pradesh there are two fairly big units, the Nellimarla and Chitavalsa having 316 and 500 looms respectively, whereas the respondent mill has only 120 looms. We are particularly referring to this aspect because it is the grievance of the respondent that the Wage Board has compared it with the Nellimarla and Chitavalsa and other big units in West Bengal. A perusal of Appendix VII shows that there are several jute mills having more than 1,000 looms and some having more than 2,000 looms, in West Bengal.

17. Chapter IV deals with the scope of enquiry. In para 4.1 it is stated that the Board's recommendations will apply to all the jute mills then existing and also to those that might be started thereafter, and a list of all mills then in existence is given in Appendix VII.

18. Chapter V deals with minimum wages in the jute industry. In para 5.4, the Wage Board takes note of the fact that the minimum wages in Nellimarla and Chitavalsa jute mills in Andhra Pradesh are found to be the highest in the jute industry. In para 5.26, the minimum wages in West Bengal Jute Mills from 1948 and as obtaining from January 1, 1961 have been referred to. Such minimum wages from January 1, 1961 including Rs. 3.42 granted as interim relief by the Wage Board and the dearness allowance, are stated to be Rs. 75.59, comprised of basic wages of Rs. 34.67 + Rs. 3.42 (interim relief) + Rs. 32.50 (dearness allowance.) Regarding the jute mills in Andhra Pradesh, it is stated in para 5.35 that Nellimarla and Chitavalsa Jute Mills were paying from January 1, 1961, the total emoluments of Rs. 81.21 per month to the lowest category of workers for 208 working hours, inclusive of Rs. 3.42 interim relief granted by the Wage Board.

19. In para 5.38, it is stated that the respondent mill, from January 1, 1961, is paying total emoluments of Rs. 52.17 per month, comprised of Rs. 19.50 (basic) + Rs. 3.42 (interim relief) + Rs. 29.25 (dearness allowance). The Jute mills in Bihar State, as will be seen from para 5.43 were paying total monthly emoluments ranging from Rs. 69.98 to Rs. 70.59.

20. Chapter VI deals with the industry's capacity to pay. In para 6.1 it is stated that two matters which received the highest consideration in the course of the deliberations of the Wage Board were the needs of the workers and the capacity of the industry to pay those needs. It is further stated that the consequence of a fair wage upon the employer or the capacity of the industry to maintain production efficiently, have received the special attention of the Wage Board. In para 6.8, reference is made to the Fair-Wages Committee's Report that in determining the capacity of the industry to pay, it is wrong to take the capacity of a particular unit or the capacity of the entire industry in the country and that the practical method is to take a fair cross-section of the Jute industry. In this connection the Wage Board refers to the claims advanced by the workers and the industry. The workers appear to have suggested the names of mills which were well established and whose financial position was never in doubt, whereas the industry urged that the capacity of the weaker and marginal units should not be ignored as the wages that are to be fixed by the Wage Board should be such as could be paid without difficulty by all units of the industry.

21. In para 6.9 it is stated that the Wage Board was of the view that the only proper and practical method was to take a cross-section of the industry which could be considered as fair in its view. Accordingly, twenty jute mills in West Bengal were selected by it as representing a fair cross-section of the industry in that region. The Wage Board also decided to make a census survey of 9 reporting mills outside the West Bengal region. Accordingly it selected all the three in Andhra Pradesh, two in Bihar, three in Uttar Pradesh and one in Madhya Pradesh. A list of the jute mills in West Bengal and outside West Bengal region considered as forming a representative cross-section of the jute mills is given in Annexure A to the Report. So far as Andhra Pradesh is concerned, all the three mills situate in the State have been taken into account, being Nellimarla, Chitavalsa and the respondent. The Wage Board then considers the capital formation, bonus issue, total paid up capital, reserves and surplus, percentage of dividend declared profits made; but, under each of these heads, the Wage Board grouped together all the mills in West Bengal, Andhra Pradesh, Bihar, Uttar Pradesh and Madhya Pradesh.

22. In para 6.44, the Wage Board expresses the view that it would be possible for the industry to bear the extra burden arising from the new wage structure recommended by it without much difficulty and without affecting the economy of the industry adversely.

23. In Chapter VII the Wage Board considers the principles by which the Tribunals and other wage-fixing authorities were guided in fixation of wages in West Bengal and outside that State. In para 7.19 the Wage Board proceeds to state that it has to devise a fair wage structure. It refers to the report of the Committee on Fair Wages that with regard to a fair wage, the lower limit must obviously be the minimum wage and the upper limit is equally set by what may broadly be called the capacity of the industry to pay. In para 7.25 the Wage Board refers to the claim of the workers that the minimum wages at Calcutta, at prices prevailing in 1960 should be Rupees 125/- and that the minimum wage at Kanpur, in Uttar Pradesh, should be Rs. 140/- per month; while, on the other hand, the Indian Jute Mills Association appears to have pressed that the then existing wages in the jute industry for all categories of workers were fair.

24. In Para 7.34 the Wage Board refers to the fact that the wages in the jute industry had not kept pace with wages in cotton textile and engineering industries in West Bengal, as would be seen from the fact that in 1959, while in the jute industry the minimum wages had gone up by 40% over the 1946 wages it had gone up in cotton textile and engineering industries by 69.71% and 77.50% respectively. It further notes the fact that the minimum wages in cotton textile mills in West Bengal on April 1, 1963 were Rs. 83.50 and in the engineering industry Rs. 82/- per month. On the other hand, the wages in the jute industry on April 1, 1963 were Rs. 70.59. On this reasoning the Wage Board comes to the conclusion in para 7.35 that there was a prima facie case for increase in the wages of the jute workers. The Wage Board expresses the opinion that the concept of the paying capacity of the jute industry is not the same as it is generally understood in the case of other industries, in view of the fact that the jute industry is principally an export-oriented industry, depending upon the fluctuating foreign markets.

25. In para 7.40 the Wage Board states that in fixing the wage structure for the jute industry it has taken into consideration the prevailing wage structure in the cotton textile industry and the engineering industry in West Bengal. It has noted that in West Bengal, as on April 1, 1963, the minimum wage in the cotton textile industry was Rs. 84.10 per month and in engineering industry Rs. 82/- per month. As in the opinion of the Wage Board there is a great similarity in the nature and condition of work between cotton textile industry and jute industry, in para 7.43 it decides to devise a wage structure in the jute industry keeping in view the pattern of wages existing in the cotton textile industry in West Bengal.

26. Regarding dearness allowance, the Wage Board in para 7.44 decides to introduce a system of variable dearness allowance linked with the consumer price index.

27. In para 7.45 the Wage Board refers to the special representations made by the jute mills outside West Bengal that in comparison with the mills in West Bengal they have to pay higher freight charges on coal, batching oil and that mill stores and electricity charges are higher for them, that their productivity is low and that most of them have no export trade. The Wage Board states that it has considered these problems and though there are these locational difficulties for individual jute mills, it has decided that the wage level in the jute industry should as far as possible be uniform throughout the country. The Wage Board further states that the wages in some of these jute mills were very low and in order to obviate their financial difficulties in consequence of the raising of wage level, it has decided that the wage level in these mills should be raised in a phased manner.

28. Having decided that the wage level in the Jute Industry should be uniform throughout the country, the Wage Board, in para 7.52 decides that the total minimum wage in West Bengal should be fixed at Rs. 81/- per month, consisting of (i) basic wage; (ii) Wage Board increment; and (iii) variable dearness allowance. The Wage Board further, in para 7.56, states that in addition to basic wages, all categories of workers should be paid an increase of Rs. 8.33 per month inclusive of interim relief of Rs. 3.42 already granted by it and accepted by the Central Government. This increment of Rs. 8.33 per month is desired to be shown as a separate item under the heading 'Wage Board increment' in the case of all categories of workers and that increment should be treated as part of the basic wages for all purposes like bonus, provident fund etc.

29. In para 7.57 the Wage Board states that the dearness allowance of Rs. 32.50 that was being paid then should be considered as the dearness allowance fixed at the working class consumer price index number of 425, for Calcutta with base year 1939 as 100. It is further stated that the dearness allowance should be a variable one and the rate of increase or decrease should be at 0.20 np. per point rise or fall in the average working class consumer price index number for Calcutta. The dearness allowance is also directed to be revised every six months in the months of February and August of each year.

30. On the basis of these calculations, in para 7.58 the Wage Board fixes the total monthly minimum wage payable at

During the first 24 months from the date on which the recommendations of the Board will be effective

During the next 12 months

During the next 12 months

Thereafter

32. In paragraph 7.66 the Wage Board directs that all categories of workers in jute mills situated outside West Bengal should also be paid the Wage Board increment of Rs. 8.33 per month, inclusive of interim relief of Rs. 3.42 already granted.

33. In para 7.67 (c) it is stated that the rates of dearness allowance of all categories of workers in the respondent mill and in Sri Krishna Mills is fixed at Rs. 32.50 at the average working class consumer price index number of 560 for Eluru for the last six months in 1962 with base year 1935-36 as 100. It is further stated that the dearness allowance should be a variable dearness allowance and the rate

Rs. 81/- comprised of (a) Rs. 40.17 basic wage; (b) Rs. 8.33 Wage Board increment; and (c) Rs. 32.50 being variable dearness allowance. In para 7.59, the Wage Board states that the standardised basic wages of various categories of workers of a jute mill for a month of 26 days or 208 hours are enumerated in Appendix XI to the Report.

31. When considering the wage structure for jute mills outside West Bengal, in para 7.65 (a) the Wage Board states that the basic wages of all categories of workers in the jute mills mentioned by it, outside West Bengal, which includes the respondent mill, should be the same as those in jute mills in West Bengal mentioned in Appendix XI. Therefore, it is clear that the minimum basic wage fixed for the mills in West Bengal has been applied to all the mills outside West Bengal, including the respondent. But, so far as the respondent mill is concerned, the Wage Board, in the same paragraph, gives a direction that the standardised basic wages mentioned in Appendix XI of the Report is to be adopted in a phased manner as follows:

Basic wages of all categories of workers should be 20 per cent less than the standardised wages shown in Appendix XI

Basic wages of all categories of workers should be 10 per cent less than the standardised wages shown in Appendix XI

Basic wages of all categories of workers should be 5 per cent less than standardised wages shown in Appendix XI of increase or decrease should be 0.20 nP. per point of rise or fall in the average working class consumer price index number for Eluru and that it should be revised every six months in the months of February and August.

Basic wages of all categories of workers should be the same as standardised wages shown in Appendix XI.

34. Chapter VIII deals with bonus in jute industry and in para 8.18 the Wage Board makes a recommendation that in the jute industry the payment of bonus should be governed by the rules mentioned therein.

35. Lastly, in para 10.8 of Chapter X, the Wage Board states that the new wage structure recommended by it should come into force from July 1, 1963; and it is provided in para 10.9 that the payment of wages at the new rates should start in any case not later than the week ending November 2, 1963.

36. We have fairly exhaustively dealt with the various matters considered by the Wage Board in its Report. It is no doubt true that the Wage Board has gone elaborately in the matter of fixing of the wage structure in the jute industry. We have earlier referred to the various principles laid down by this Court which should govern the fixing of wages and dearness allowance. The Board itself states that it was fixing a fair wage for the industry. We have adverted to the fact that in the Express Newspapers Case, 1959 SCR 12 = (AIR 1958 SC 578) this Court has held that in the case of fixation of fair wage, the upper limit may broadly be stated to be the capacity of the industry to pay. It has been further laid down that the capacity of the industry to pay should be gauged on an industry-cum-region basis, after taking a fair cross-section of that industry and that, in a given case, it may be even permissible to divide the industry into appropriate classes and then deal with the capacity of the industry to pay classwise. As the Wage Board was fixing a fair wage for the entire jute industry it may not have been strictly necessary to consider the financial capacity of each individual unit. But, as pointed out in the Express Newspapers Case, 1959 SCR 12 = (AIR 1958 SC 578) the requirement of considering the capacity of each individual unit to pay may not become necessary if the industry is divided into different classes. Even if the industry is divided into different classes, it will still be necessary to consider the capacity of the respective classes to bear the burden imposed on them. For this purpose a cross-section of these respective classes may have to be taken for careful consideration for deciding what burden the class considered as a whole can bear.

37. The question is whether the Wage Board has adopted these principles when it fixed the wage structure for the entire jute industry. From the various matters dealt with by the Wage Board and the manner of approach made by it as referred to above, we are satisfied that no attempt has been made by the Wage Board to divide the industry into classes. It is also clear that no cross-section of such classes has been taken for investigation to decide what burden the units in each class can bear.

38. The approach of the Wage Board to determine uniform wage scales for the entire industry must suffer from an inherent weakness. Conditions, such as easy access to raw materials, transport, nearness of markets for disposal of the manufactured product, availability of labour, the type of market whether within or outside the country for which the manufactured articles are intended and diverse other factors must vary from region to region. Likewise, economic conditions affecting the consumer prices must and do differ as is well known, from region to region, depending largely upon whether a particular region is self-sufficient or not in the elemental needs of its citizens and these in turn are bound to affect living standards. It would therefore be too artificial and unrealistic an approach to be oblivious of these differences and to attempt to group together all establishments and factories and device common wage-scales applicable to all of them disregarding the peculiar features of the industry in a particular region. Favourable conditions prevailing in one region would place industrial concerns there in a position better than those in other regions where such conditions do not occur. Similarly, in regions where consumer prices are lower, labour would be better off than in the rest of the regions where the living index is higher; yet, the wage scales would be the same in all the regions. Uniformity of wage-scales, irrespective of differences in conditions would place both the employees and the employers in regions where such favourable conditions prevail in an unfairly advantageous position over the employees and employers in the other regions. Instead of attaining harmony there would as a result arise inevitably a feeling of discrimination. Though, as stated by this Court in Express Newspapers Case, 1959 SCR 12 = (AIR 1958 SC 578), it may not be possible or even necessary for a Wage Board to scrutinise all the establishments separately and it would be enough to take a representative cross-section of the industry for assessment, the cross-section to be a truly representative one and capable of giving a true picture of the conditions of both the industry and labour must be one from each region where establishments of the industry in question are situate.

39. What the Wage Board, however, did was that instead of proceeding region-wise and selecting a representative cross-section from each region, it selected 20 mills from West Bengal and clubbed them with 9 reporting mills from the rest of the regions, viz., Bihar, U. P., Madhya Pradesh and Andhra Pradesh where a few mills are scattered. The Board considered these 29 mills as representing a cross-section of the industry. It is obvious that these mills so clubbed together could not truly reflect the economic and other conditions prevailing in the mills in different regions with their peculiar problems and differing conditions. That in our view was not a proper approach and was bound to result in injustice especially in view of the peculiar feature of the jute industry that it is predominantly concentrated in West Bengal and is export-oriented. Besides, the jute industry in the other regions suffers from a distinct disadvantage as the raw materials have to be transported from a distance at considerable cost. Taking the 20 mills from West Bengal and the 9 mills from outside as forming a representative cross-section was manifestly incorrect as the West Bengal Mills cannot truly be said to be comparable units for the rest of the mills.

40. Another difficulty in accepting the Wage Board's recommendations arises from the fact that the Board equated the cotton textile industry in West Bengal with the jute industry there and finding the wage-scales in the jute industry lower than those in the cotton textile industry the Board raised the scales in the jute industry so as to bring them to the level of the cotton textile industry. Having so done, the next step which the Wage Board took was to raise also the wage-scales in mills outside West Bengal to bring them in line with the scales proposed by it for the mills in West Bengal. This process gave rise to two infirmities: (i) that the Board treated cotton textile concerns in West Bengal as comparable to those in jute industry; and (ii) it treated the jute mills in West Bengal as comparable to those outside, although conditions in the different regions where they were situate were obviously different. This meant that the Board gave a go-by to the well established principle of industry-cum-region consistently applied by Industrial Tribunals whenever wage-scales had to be determined.

41. Such a disharmony in the approach to the problem of determination of wage scales by a Wage Board on the one hand and an Industrial Tribunal on the other must inevitably occur because whereas the attempt of a Board would be to uniformise wage scales for the entire industry, though it is spread over different parts of the country where conditions can rarely be expected to be similar or the same, the concern of a Tribunal would principally be to determine equitably the wage scales of a single unit with which it is for the time being concerned. The difficulty would be all the more felt by such a Tribunal where it is faced with the dilemma whether or not it should follow the Board's recommendations arrived at on principles different from (as in the present case) those consistently followed in industrial adjudication. One should have thought that this difficulty would have been realised before the recommendations of the Wage Board were accepted by Government.

42. The difficulty referred to above arising from the difference in the functions of the two bodies could well have been obviated if the Wage Board instead of laying down uniform scales for the entire industry, irrespective of where its several units were situate and of the different conditions prevailing in various areas, had considered the units in each area separately and determined the wage-scales for each such area by taking from that area a representative cross-section of the industry where possible or where that was not possible by taking comparable units from other industries within that area, thus following the principle of industry-cum-region. It is true that in doing so uniformity of wage-scales for the entire industry would not have been attained. But in a vast country like ours, where conditions differ often radically from region to region and even the index of living differs within a fairly wide range, such a target cannot always be just or equitable. If the wage-scales had been determined by the Board in the manner aforesaid, even though the Board is not a statutory body and consequently its decisions are of a recommendatory character, it would be possible for industrial tribunals to give due weight to its recommendations as such recommendations would have been in conformity with the principle of industry-cum-region, a principle binding on the tribunals. It would be difficult in that event for any unit in the industry in that region to propound a grievance that its capacity to pay was not taken into account as the scales so framed would have been determined after taking into consideration scales prevailing in comparable units, whether in that industry or other industries in that region depending on whether in a particular area the accent was on the industry part or the region part of the principle of industry-cum-region. The Board, therefore, ought to have selected comparable units from each of the regions where the jute mills are situate and after their examination arrive at common wage-scales for each of those regions instead of grouping together 20 mills from West Bengal and 9 mills from the other region and treating them as constituting a cross-section representing the industry. The position in which a Tribunal called upon to fix wage-scales would be placed would not be an enviable one for it would find itself in an embarrassing situation where it had either to accept the wage-scales fixed by the Board though they were fixed in contravention of the principle of industry-cum-region, or discard them and proceed to fix them on its own on the principle of industry-cum-region, a principle which, as the industrial law stands today, it is bound to follow.

43. We have already pointed out that the Wage Board has taken the view that the wage level in the entire jute industry should be uniform throughout the country. It has also stated that the wage structure for the jute industry in West Bengal has to be devised having regard to the pattern of wage-structure existing in the cotton textile industry in that area. It is on this basis, and after a comparison of the wage structure prevailing in the cotton textile industry in that area, that the Wage Board has come to the conclusion that the minimum monthly emoluments of a worker in West Bengal must be fixed at Rs. 81/- taking in the basic wages, the Wage Board increment and the variable dearness allowance. The standardised basic wages enumerated in Appendix XI has been made applicable to all the jute mills outside West Bengal also, including the respondent mill. We have already referred to the recommendation of the Wage Board in para 7.65 (c) that the respondent jute mill should adopt the standardised basic wages fixed in Appendix XI, in a phased manner. Over and above that basic wage, the Wage Board has given an increase of Rs. 8.33 per month, as Wage Board increment and a variable dearness allowance of Rs. 32.50 per month. Though it had been pressed by the jute mills outside West Bengal, that they had to pay higher freight charges on coal, batching oil etc., and that mill stores and electricity charges were higher for them, the Wage Board insisted that the wage level in the jute industry should be uniform throughout the country. The result of the Wage Board's recommendations, if they are to be given effect to by the respondent mill, will be that as against the minimum monthly wage of Rs. 52.17 that was being paid by the respondent there is a very sharp rise in its wage bill. The claim of the respondent that the recurring expenditure for implementation of the recommendation of the Wage Board is over Rs. 3,75,000/-, and that it has not the financial capacity to bear this burden, has been accepted by the Industrial Tribunal and that finding has not been challenged before us by the appellant. The respondent mill, which has only 120 looms, has been compared with the two big mills in Andhra Pradesh, viz., Nellimarla and Chitavals, having 326 and 500 looms respectively, as also with very large mills in West Bengal, some of whose loom capacity is more than 2000. That clearly shows that all mills, small as well as large, economic as well as uneconomic, have been clubbed together and treated alike by the Wage Board. In considering the capacity, the Wage Board has taken 20 jute mills in West Bengal as representing a fair cross-section of the industry in that region and it has taken 9 reporting mills outside West Bengal for this purpose. Three mills selected in Andhra Pradesh were the Nellimarla, Chitavals and the respondent mills. We have already shown the large disparity that exists between the mills in West Bengal as also between the Nellimarla and Chitavals and the respondent mill. We have also referred to the decisions of this Court that to compare wage scale comparable establishments in the region should be taken into account and that a small struggling concern should not be compared with a large, flourishing one. But this is exactly what has happened, when the Wage Board treated alike the respondent mill not only with Nellimarla and Chitavals jute mills but also with some of the very big and prosperous mills in West Bengal.

44. The various aspects, dealt with above, establish that the essential prerequisite of deciding the wage structure, viz., to consider the capacity of the industry to pay on the principles laid down by this Court, is absent in the recommendations of the Wage Board and that introduces a fatal infirmity in its decision.

45. The question of bonus does not arise for our consideration as the respondent has stated that the management has entered into a settlement with its workmen and that they will be entitled for bonus only if the net profits exceed Rs. 75,000/-. It has further been stated that there is no available surplus to warrant the payment of bonus. These statements have not been controverted on behalf of the appellant.

46. To conclude, the award of the Industrial Tribunal that the demand of the workmen for implementation of the recommendations of the Wage Board is not justified, is correct. The appeal fails and is dismissed. In the circumstances of the case, there will be no order as to costs. Appeal dismissed.

AIR 1970 SUPREME COURT 891
(V 57 C 190)

(From: Madras)*

S. M. SIKRI AND K. S. HEGDE, JJ.

(1) In Civil Appeals Nos. 2251 and 2252 of 1968, M/s. Tarapore and Co., Madras, Appellant v. M/s. V/O Tractoroexport Moscow and another, Respondents.

(2) In Civil Appeals Nos. 2305 and 2306 of 1968, M/s. V/O Tractoroexport, Moscow, Appellant v. M/s. Tarapore & Co., Madras and another, Respondents.

Civil Appeals Nos. 2251, 2252, 2305 and 2306 of 1968, D/- 26-11-1968.

(A) Banking Regulation Act (1949), Section 6 — International trade — Irrevocable letters of credit — Nature of — Mechanism of such letter is of great importance in international trade — Courts should refrain from interfering — (Specific Relief Act (1963), Section 38) — (Constitution of India, Sch. VII, List 1, Item 41) — Applications Nos. 1760 & 2455 of 1967 (in C. S. No. 118 of 1967), D/- 12-4-1968 (Mad), Reversed.

An irrevocable letter of credit has a definite implication. It is a mechanism of great importance in international trade. Any interference with that mechanism is bound to have serious repercussions on the international trade. Except under very exceptional circumstances, the courts should not interfere with that mechanism.

*((1) 82 Mad LW 361, (2) Applns. Nos. 1760 and 2455 of 1967, in C. S. No. 118 of 1967, D/- 12-4-1968 — Mad.)

(Para 7)

Where in pursuance of a contract with a Russian Firm for supply of machinery, an Indian Firm opened a confirmed, irrevocable and divisible letter of credit with a Bank in favour of the Russian Firm, in a suit by the Indian Firm alleging that machinery supplied was not upto the contract, the Court will not be justified in granting temporary injunction restraining the Bank as well as the Russian Firm from taking any further steps in pursuance of that letter of credit. Applns. Nos. 1760 & 2455 of 1967 (in C. S. No. 118 of 1967), D/- 12-4-1968 (Mad), Reversed; (1969) 82 Mad LW 361, Affirmed.

(Para 8)

Opening of a confirmed letter of credit constitutes a bargain between the banker and the vendor of the goods, which imposes upon the banker an absolute obligation to pay, irrespective of any dispute there may be between the parties as to whether the goods are upto contract or not. A vendor of goods selling against a confirmed letter of credit is selling under the assurance that nothing will prevent him from receiving the price. If the buyer has an enforceable claim that adjustment must be made by way of refund by the seller and not by the way of retention by the buyer. The letter of credit is independent of and unqualified by the contract of sale or underlying transaction. The autonomy of an irrevocable letter of credit is entitled to protection. As a rule Courts refrain from interfering with that autonomy. (1958) 2 QB 127 & (1922) 1 KB 318 & Federal Reporter 2nd Series, 298 p. 836, Rel. on.

(Paras 10, 11)

(B) Constitution of India, Article 133 — Interim orders of Court — Interference with, by Supreme Court.

Ordinarily Supreme Court does not interfere with interim orders. But where legal principles of great importance affecting international trade are involved and the orders of Court, if allowed to stand are bound to have their repercussion on our international trade, the Supreme Court will interfere with the interim orders of Court below. (Para 8)

Cases Referred: Chronological Paras (1958) 1958-2 QB 127 = 1958-1 All ER 262, Hamzeh Walas and Sons v. British Imex Industries Ltd.

(1953) AIR 1953 SC 198 (V 40)=
 1953 SCR 1159, Asrumati Devi
 v. Kumar Rependra Deb 5
 (1922) 1922-1 KB 318= 91 LJKB
 274, Urquhart Lindsay and Co. Ltd.
 v. Eastern Bank Ltd. 10
 Federal Reporter 2nd Series 293
 p. 830, Dulico Steel Products Ins., of Washington v. Bankers Trust
 Co. 11

Mr. M. C. Setalvad, Senior Advocate,
 (M/s. V. P. Raman and D. N. Mishra,
 Advocates, and Mr. J. B. Dadachanji,
 Advocate of M/s. J. B. Dadachanji and Co., with him), for Appellant (In Civil Appeals Nos. 2251 and 2252 of 1968), and Respondent No. 1 (In Civil Appeals Nos. 2305 and 2306 of 1968); Mr. S. Mohan
 Kumaramangalam, Senior Advocate, Mr.
 M. K. Ramamurthi, Mrs. Shyamla Pappu and Mr. Vineet Kumar, Advocates, with him), for Respondent No. 1 (In Civil Appeals Nos. 2251 and 2252 of 1968), and Appellant (In Civil Appeals Nos. 2305 and 2306 of 1968); M/s. Rameshwar Nath and Mahinder Narain, Advocates of M/s.
 Rajinder Narain and Co., for Respondent No. 2 (In all the Appeals).

The Judgment of the Court was delivered by

HEGDE, J.— These are connected appeals. They arise from Civil Suit No. 118 of 1967 on the original side of the High Court of Judicature at Madras. Herein the essential facts are few and simple though the question of law that arises for decision is of considerable importance.

2. The suit has been brought by M/s.
 Tarapore & Co., Madras (hereinafter referred to as the "Indian Firm"). That firm had taken up on contract the work of excavation of a canal as a part of the Farakka Barrage Project. In that connection they entered into a contract with
 M/s. V/O Tractors Export, Moscow (which will hereinafter be referred to as the "Russian Firm") for the supply of construction machinery such as Scrapers and Bulldozers. In pursuance of that contract, the Indian Firm opened a confirmed, irrevocable and divisible letter of credit with the Bank of India, Limited for the entire value of the equipment i.e. Rs. 68,09,372/- in favour of the Russian Firm negotiable through the Bank for Foreign Trade of the U. S. S. R., Moscow. Under the said letter of credit the Bank of India was required to pay to the Russian Firm on production of the documents particularised in the letter of credit along with the drafts. One of the conditions of the letter of credit was that 25 per cent of the amount should be paid on the presentation of the specified documents and the balance of 75 per cent to be paid one year from the date of the first payment. The agreement entered into between the Bank of India and the Russian Firm under the letter of credit was "subject to the Uniform Customs and Practice for Documentary Credits (1962 Revision), International Chamber of Commerce Brochure No. 222." Article 3 of the brochure says that:

"An irrevocable credit is a definite undertaking on the part of an issuing bank and constitutes the engagement of that bank to the beneficiary or, as the case may be, to the beneficiary and bona fide holders of drafts drawn and/or documents presented thereunder, that the provisions for payment, acceptance or negotiation contained in the credit will be duly fulfilled, provided that all the terms and conditions of the credit are complied with.

An irrevocable credit may be advised to a beneficiary through another bank without engagement on the part that other bank (the advising bank), but when an issuing bank authorises another bank to confirm its irrevocable credit and the latter does so, such confirmation constitutes a definite undertaking on the part of the confirming bank either that the provisions for payment or acceptance will be duly fulfilled or, in the case of a credit available by negotiation of drafts, that the confirming bank will negotiate drafts without recourse to drawer.

Such undertakings can neither be modified nor cancelled without the agreement of all concerned."

Article 8 of the Brochure says:—

"In documentary credit operations all parties concerned deal in documents and not in goods.

Payment, acceptance or negotiation against documents which appear on their face to be in accordance with the terms and conditions of a credit by a bank authorised to do so, binds the party giving the authorisation to take up the documents and reimburse the bank which has effected the payment, acceptance or negotiation.....

The only other Article in that brochure which is relevant for our present purpose is Article 9 which reads:

"Banks assume no liability or responsibility for the form, sufficiency, accuracy, genuineness, falsification or legal effect of any documents, or for the general and/or particular conditions stipulated in the documents or superimposed thereon; nor do they assume any liability or responsibility for the description, quantity, weight, quality, condition, packing, delivery, value or existence of the goods represented thereby, or for the good faith or acts and/or omissions, solvency, performance or standing of the consignor, the carriers or the insurers of the goods or any other person whomsoever."

On the strength of the aforementioned contract, the Russian Firm supplied all the machinery it undertook to supply by about the end of December 1960, which were duly taken possession of by the Indian Firm and put to work at Farakka Barrage Project. They are still in the possession of the Indian Firm. After the machinery was used for sometime, the Indian Firm complained to the Russian Firm that the performance of the machinery supplied by it was not as efficient as represented at the time of entering into the contract and consequently it had incurred and continues to incur considerable loss. In that connection there was some correspondence between the Indian Firm and the Russian Firm. Thereafter the Indian Firm instituted a suit on the original side of the High Court of Madras seeking an injunction restraining the Russian Firm from realizing the amount payable under the letter of credit. During the pendency of that suit the parties arrived at an agreement on August 14, 1966 at Delhi (which shall be hereinafter referred to as the Delhi agreement). The portion of that agreement which is relevant for our present purpose reads as follows:

Tarapore and Co., Madras, agree to withdraw immediately the Court case filed by them against "Tractoroexport," Moscow, in the Madras High Court.

2. Immediately on Tarapore withdrawing the case, V/O "Tractoroexport" agree to instruct the Bank for Foreign Trade of the USSR in Moscow, not to demand any further payment against L. C. established by Tarapore and Co., Madras, for a period of six months from the due dates in the first instance. During this period both the parties shall do their best to reach an amicable settlement.

3. In case the settlement between the two parties is not completed within this period of six months V/O Tractoroexport shall further extend the period of payment by further period of six months for the settlement to be completed.

4. Tarapore and Co., shall authorise their Bank to keep the unpaid portions L. C. valid for the extended period as stated above."

At this stage it may be mentioned that the Russian Firm had received from the Bank of India 25 per cent of the money payable under the letter of credit very soon after it supplied to the Indian Firm the machinery mentioned earlier. In pursuance of the aforementioned agreement the Indian Firm withdrew the suit. Thereafter there were attempts to settle the dispute. In the meantime the Indian Rupee was devalued. The contract between the Indian Firm and the Russian Firm contains the following term:

"Payment for the delivered goods shall be made by the Buyers in Indian Rupee in accordance with the Trade Agreement between the USSR and India dated 10th June, 1963. All the prices, are stated in Indian rupee. One Indian Rupee is equal to 0.186621 grammes of pure gold. If the above gold content of Indian Rupee is changed the prices and the amount of this contract in Indian Rupee shall be revalued accordingly on the date of changing the gold parity of the Indian Rupee."

This clause will be hereinafter referred to as the 'Gold Clause'. In view of that clause, the price fixed for machinery supplied stood revised. Consequently under the contract the Indian Firm had to pay to the Russian Firm an additional sum of about rupees twenty-six lacs. Accordingly the bankers of the Russian Firm called upon the Indian Firm to open an additional letter of credit for payment of the extra price payable under the contract. They also intimated the Indian Firm that the extension of time for the payment of the price of the machinery supplied, agreed to at Delhi will be given effect to only after the Indian Firm arrange for the additional letter of credit asked for. The Indian Firm objected to this demand as per its letter of 20th September, 1966. The relevant portion of that letter reads:

"We are rather surprised to see this, because, by our arrangement dated the 14th August, 1966, at New Delhi you had agreed to give further time for the payments on the withdrawal of the Madras High Court case. That was the only condition that was talked about and incorporated in our written agreement. If you will be good enough to refer to the agreement dated the 14th Aug., 1966, you will find that we were obliged to withdraw the Madras suit pending talks of settlement and immediately on our withdrawing this suit, you agreed to instruct your Bankers not to demand any further payment under the letter of credit. There is absolutely no reference in that agreement to our having to open any additional letter of credit in view of the devaluation of the Indian rupee..... We would therefore request you to immediately instruct your Bankers in Moscow to advise our Bankers regarding the extension of time for payment under the letter of credit without any reference to any additional letters of credit in view of devaluation..... Moreover, when the entire question is open for amicable settlement between us, it is not possible to determine what exactly will be amount payable and unless that amount is known, it is not possible to open additional letters of credit to give effect to the gold clause.....

3. On November 1, 1960, the Russian Firm sent to the Indian Firm addendum No. 1 modifying the original contract in accordance with the gold clause. The last clause of that addendum recited that "all other terms and conditions are as stated in the above mentioned contract" (original contract). The Indian Firm objected to that addendum as well as to the demand for opening an additional letter of credit. In that connection the Russian Firm wrote a letter to the Indian Firm on November 29, 1966. As considerable arguments were advanced on the basis of that letter we shall quote the relevant portion of that letter:

"..... We confirm that you have signed with us the addendum No. 1 to our Contract No. 61/Tarapore-220/65 dated the 2nd Feb., 1965, at our request for the sole and specific purpose of satisfying our bankers. We confirm further that this addendum will not in any manner prejudice the arrangement we have come to in Delhi on the 14th August, 1966, and is without prejudice to your claims and points of controversy regarding which we shall have further discussions with a view to reach an amicable settlement.

Under this addendum, the company will extend the letter of credit for one year and accept the drafts for the difference in value of 57.5% due to devaluation. The final amount payable will be in accordance with the settlement."

Thereafter the Russian Firm appears to have drawn drafts on the Indian firm for the excess amount payable under the gold clause. For one reason or the other, no settlement as contemplated by the Delhi agreement was reached. The Indian firm complained that the Russian Firm never made any serious attempt to resolve the dispute whereas the Russian Firm alleged that it found no substance in the complaint made by the Indian Firm as regards the machinery supplied. In the suit as brought, as well as in these appeals that controversy is not open for examination. Suffice it to say that the parties did not amicably settle the dispute in question. When the extended time granted under the Delhi agreement was about to come to a close, the Indian Firm instituted the suit from which these appeals have arisen. In that suit the only substantive relief asked for is that the Bank of India as well as the Russian Firm should be restrained from taking any further steps in pursuance of the letter of credit opened by the Indian Firm in favour of the Russian Firm. Therein temporary injunctions were asked for in the very terms in which the permanent injunctions were prayed for. At a subsequent stage a further injunction restraining the Russian Firm from enforcing its right under the gold clause was also prayed for. The Russian Firm opposed those applications but the trial Judge granted the temporary injunctions asked for. The Russian Firm took up the matter in appeal to the Appellate Bench of that High Court which reversed the order of the trial judge by its Order dated October 9, 1968 but it certified that they are fit cases for appeal to this Court. When the applications in the appeals seeking interim orders came up for consideration by this Court the Russian Firm entered its caveat. It not only opposed the interim reliefs prayed for it further challenged the validity of the certificate granted by the High Court on the ground that the orders appealed against are not final orders within the meaning of Article 133 of the Constitution. Evidently as a matter of abundant caution, the Indian Firm had filed two separate applications seeking special leave to appeal against the orders of the Appellate Bench of the Madras High Court. After hearing the parties this Court revoked the certificates granted holding that the orders appealed against are not final orders but at the same time granted special leave to the Indian Firm to appeal against the orders of the Madras High Court. Civil Appeals Nos. 2051 and 2052 of 1968 are appeals filed by the Indian Firm.

4. Before the Appellate Bench of the High Court of Madras, the Indian Firm had objected to the maintainability of the appeals filed by the Russian Firm on the ground that orders appealed against are not judgments within the meaning of Clause 15 of the Letters Patent of the Madras High Court but that objection had been overruled by the Appellate Bench following the earlier decisions of that High Court. That contention was again raised in the appeals filed by the Indian Firm in this Court. To obviate any difficulty the Russian Firm applied to this Court for special leave to appeal against the interim orders passed by the trial judge. We allowed those applications and consequently Civil Appeals Nos. 2305 and 2306 of 1968 came to be filed.

5. In view of the appeals filed by the Russian Firm in this Court against the interim orders made by the trial judge it is not necessary to decide whether the appeals filed by the Russian Firm before the Appellate Bench of the Madras High Court were maintainable? On that question judicial opinion is sharply divided as could be seen from the decision of this Court in Asumati Debi v. Kumar Rupendra Deb, 1953 SCR 1159 = (AIR 1953 SC 198). Hence we shall confine our attention to the question whether the temporary injunctions issued by the trial judge are sustainable?

6. The scope of an irrevocable letter of credit is explained thus in Halsbury's Laws of England (Vol. 34, Paragraph 319 at Page 185):

"It is often made a condition of a mercantile contract that the buyer shall pay for the goods by means of a confirmed credit, and it is then the duty of the buyer to procure his bank, known as the issuing or originating bank, to issue an irrevocable credit in favour of the seller by which the bank undertakes to the seller, either directly or through another bank in the seller's country known as the correspondent or negotiating bank, to accept drafts drawn upon it for the price of the goods, against tender by the seller of the shipping documents. The contractual relationship between the issuing bank and the buyer is defined by the terms of the agreement between them under which the letter opening the credit is issued; and as between the seller and the bank, the issue of the credit duly notified to the seller creates a new contractual nexus and renders the bank directly liable to the seller to pay the purchase price or to accept the bill of exchange upon tender of the documents. The contract thus created between the seller and the bank is separate from, although ancillary to, the original contract between the buyer and the seller, by reason of the bank's undertaking to the seller, which is absolute. Thus the bank is not entitled to rely upon terms of the contract between the buyer and the seller which might permit the buyer to reject the goods and to refuse payment therefor; and, conversely, the buyer is not entitled to an injunction restraining the seller from dealing with the letter of credit if the goods are defective."

Chalmers on "Bills of Exchange" explains the legal position in these words:

"The modern commercial credit serves to interpose between a buyer and seller a third person of un-questioned solvency, almost invariably a banker of international repute; the banker on the instructions of the buyer issues the letter of credit and thereby undertakes to act as paymaster upon the seller performing the conditions set out in it. A letter of credit may be in any one of a number of specialised forms and contains the undertaking of the banker to honour all bills of exchange drawn thereunder. It can hardly be over-emphasised that the banker is not bound or entitled to honour such bills of exchange unless they, and such accompanying documents as may be required thereunder, are in exact compliance with the terms of the credit. Such documents must be scrutinised with meticulous care, the maxim de minimis non curat lex cannot be invoked where payment is made by the letter of credit. If the seller has complied with the terms of the letter of credit, however, there is an absolute obligation upon the banker to pay irrespective of any disputes there may be between the buyer and the seller as to whether the goods are up to contract or not."

Similar are the views expressed in 'Practice and Law of Banking' by H. B. Sheldon, "the Law of Bankers Commercial Credits" by H. C. Gutteridge, "the Law Relating to Commercial Letters of Credit" by A. G. Davis, "the Law Relating to Bankers' Letters of Credit" by B. C. Mitra and in several other text books read to us by Mr. Mohan Kumaramangalam, learned Counsel for the Russian firm. The legal position as set out above was not controverted by Mr. M. C. Setalvad, learned Counsel for the Indian Firm. So far as the Bank of India is concerned it admitted its liability to honour the letter of credit and expressed its willingness to abide by its terms. It took the same position before the High Court.

7. The main grievance of the Indian Firm is that if the Russian Firm is allowed to take away the money secured to it by the letter of credit, it cannot effectively enforce its claim arising from the breach of the contract it complains of. It was urged on its behalf that the Russian Firm has no assets in this country and therefore any decree that it may be able to obtain cannot be executed. Therefore, it was contended that the Trial Court was justified in issuing the impugned orders. The allegation that Russian Firm has no assets in this country was not made in the pleadings. That apart in the circumstances of this case that allegation has no relevance. An irrevocable letter of credit has a definite implication. It is a mechanism of great importance in international trade. Any interference with that mechanism is bound to have serious repercussions on the international trade of this country. Except under very exceptional circumstances, the Courts should not interfere with that mechanism.

8. For our present purpose we shall assume without deciding that the allegations made by the Indian Firm are true. We shall further assume that the suit as brought is maintainable though Mr. Kumaramangalam seriously challenged its maintainability. But yet, in our judgment, the learned trial Judge was not justified in law in granting the temporary injunctions appealed against. Ordinarily this Court does not interfere with interim orders. But herein legal principles of great importance affecting international trade are involved. If the orders impugned are allowed to stand they are bound to have their repercussion on our international trade.

9. We have earlier referred to several well-known treaties on the subject. Now we shall proceed to consider the decided cases bearing on the question under consideration.

10. A case somewhat similar to the one before us came up for consideration before the Queens Bench Division in England in Hamzeh Walas and Sons v. British Imex Industries Ltd., 1958-2 QB 127. Therein the plaintiffs, a Jordanian firm contracted to purchase from the defendants, a British firm, a large quantity of reinforced steel rods, to be delivered in two instalments. Payment was to be effected by opening in favour of the defendants of two confirmed letters of credit with the Midland Bank Ltd., in London, one in respect of each instalment. The letters of credit were duly opened and the first was realized by the defendants on the delivery of the first instalment. The plaintiffs complained that that instalment was defective and sought an injunction to bar the defendants from realizing the second letter of credit. Donovan, J., the trial Judge refused the application. In appeal Jenkins, Sellers and Pearce L., JJ. confirmed the decision of the Trial Judge. In the course of his judgment Jenkins, L. J., who spoke for the Court observed thus:

"We have been referred to a number of authorities, and it seems to be plain enough that the opening of a confirmed letter of credit constitutes a bargain between the banker and the vendor of the goods, which imposes upon the banker an absolute obligation to pay, irrespective of any dispute there may be between the parties as to whether the goods are up to contract or not. An elaborate commercial system has been built up on the footing that bankers' confirmed credits are of that character, and, in my judgment, it would be wrong for this Court in the present case to interfere with that established practice.

There is this to be remembered, too. A vendor of goods selling against a confirmed letter of credit is selling under the assurance that nothing will prevent him from receiving the price. That is of no mean advantage when goods manufactured in one country are being sold in another. It is, furthermore, to be observed that vendors are often reselling goods bought from third parties. When they are doing that, and when they are being paid by a confirmed letter of credit, their practice is—and I think it was followed by the defendants in this case—to finance the payments necessary to be made to their suppliers against the letter of credit. That system of financing these operations, as I see it, would break down completely if a dispute as between the vendor and the purchaser was to have the effect of "freezing" if I may use that expression the sum in respect of which the letter of credit was opened”.

In Urquhart Lindsay and Co. Ltd. v. Eastern Bank Ltd., 1922-1 KB 318 the King's Bench held that the refusal of the defendants bank to take and pay for the particular bills on presentation of the proper documents constituted a repudiation of the contract as a whole and that the plaintiffs were entitled to damages arising from such a breach. It may be noted that in that case the price quoted in the invoices was objected to by the buyer and he had notified his objection to the bank. But under the terms of the letter of credit the bank was required to make payments on the basis of the invoices tendered by the seller. The Court held that if the buyers had an enforceable claim that adjustment must be made by way of refund by the seller and not by the way of retention by the buyer.

11. Similar opinions have been expressed by the American Courts. The leading American case on the subject is Dulien Steel Products Inc., of Washington v. Bankers Trust Co., Federal Reporter 2nd Series, 298 p. 836. The facts of that case are as follows:

The plaintiffs, Dulien Steel Products Inc., of Washington, contracted to sell steel scrap to the European Iron and Steel Company. The transaction was put through M/s. Marco Polo Group Project, Ltd. who were entitled to commission for arranging the transaction. For the payment of the commission to Marco Polo, plaintiffs procured an irrevocable letter of credit from Seattle First National Bank. As desired by Marco Polo this letter of credit was opened in favour of one Sica. The defendant-bankers confirmed that letter of credit. The credit stipulated for payment against (1) a receipt of Sica for the amount of the credit and (2) a notification of Seattle Bank to the defendants that the plaintiffs had negotiated documents evidencing the shipment of the goods. Sica tendered the stipulated receipt and Seattle Bank informed the defendants that the Dulien had negotiated documentary drafts. Meanwhile after further negotiations between the plaintiffs and the vendees the price of the goods sold was reduced and consequently the commission payable to Marco Polo stood reduced but the defendants were not informed of this fact. Only after notifying the defendants about the negotiation of the drafts drawn under the contract of sale, the Seattle Bank informed the defendants about the changes underlying the transaction and asked them not to pay Sica the full amount of the credit. The defendants were also informed that Sica was merely a nominee of Marco Polo and has no rights of his own to the sum of the credit. Sica, however, claimed payment of the full amount of the credit. The defendants asked further instructions from Seattle Bank but despite Seattle Bank's instructions decided to comply with Sica's request. After informing Seattle Bank of their intention, they paid Sica the full amount of the credit. Plaintiffs thereupon brought an action in the District Court of New York for the recovery of the moneys paid to Sica. The action was dismissed by the trial Court and that decision was affirmed by the Court of Appeals. That decision establishes the well known principle that the letter of credit is independent of and unqualified by the contract of sale or underlying transaction. The autonomy of an irrevocable letter of credit is entitled to protection. As a rule Courts refrain from interfering with that autonomy.

12. A half-hearted attempt was made on behalf of the Indian Firm to persuade us not to apply the principles noticed above as in these appeals we are dealing with a complaint of fraud. The facts pleaded in the plaint do not amount to a plea of fraud despite the assertions of the Indian Firm that the Russian Firm was guilty of fraud.

13. Evidently with a view to steer clear of the well-established legal position Mr. Setalvad, learned Counsel for the Indian Firm urged that the letter of credit was no more enforceable as the original contract stood modified as a result of the Delhi agreement and the subsequent correspondence between the parties. It was urged that according to the modified contract the Indian Firm is only liable to pay the price that may be settled between the buyer and the seller. This contention has not been taken either in the plaint or in the arguments before the trial Judge or before the Appellate Bench. It is taken for the first time in this Court. This is not purely a legal contention. The contention in question bears on the intention of the parties who entered into the agreement. No one could have known the intention better than plaintiff who was a party to the contract. If there was such an intention, the plaintiff would have certainly pleaded the same. That apart, we are unable to accept the contention that either the Delhi agreement or the subsequent correspondence between the parties modified the original contract. The Delhi agreement merely provided that the parties will try and settle the dispute out of Court, if possible. Much was made of the letter written by the Russian Firm to the Indian Firm on 29-11-1966 wherein, as seen earlier, it was stated:

"that the final amount payable will be in accordance with the settlement". This letter has to be read along with the other letters that passed between the parties. If so read, it is clear that the statement that the final payment will be made in accordance with the settlement is subject to the condition that the parties are able to arrive at a settlement. Otherwise the parties continue to be bound by the original contract subject to the extension of the time granted under the Delhi agreement for the payment of the price. As regards the additional payment demanded by the Russian Firm, there is no occasion for issuing any temporary injunction. If the Indian Firm does not comply with that demand the law will take its course. It is for that Firm to choose its course of action.

14. In the result we allow Civil Appeals Nos. 2305 and 2306 of 1968 with the costs of the appellant therein and set aside the temporary injunctions granted by the trial judge. The other appeals are dismissed with no order as to costs. The costs to be paid by the Indian company.

Order accordingly.

AIR 1970 SUPREME COURT 898
(V 57 C 191)

M. HIDAYATULLAH, C. J., S. M. SIKRI, R. S. BACHAWAT, G. K. MITTER AND K. S. HEGDE, JJ.

M/s. Tilokchand Motichand and others, Petitioners v. H. B. Munshi, Commissioner of Sales Tax, Bombay and another, Respondents.

Writ Petn. No. 53 of 1968. D/- 22-11-1968.

Constitution of India, Article 32 — Instances of self-restraint of Supreme Court under Article 32 — Existence of other ordinary remedy — Delay — No rules of limitation — Exercise of power under Article 32 is discretionary — State cannot put fetters on Court's powers — Payment under mistake of law — Recovery of, under Section 72 Contract Act — Limitation Act prescribes limitation on grounds of public policy which has to be respected in enforcement of fundamental right — Section 12A (4), Bombay Sales Tax Act (1946) declared invalid in 1964 — Payment towards tax made in 1959 and 1960 — Petition for recovery made 6 months after declaration of invalidity of Section 12A (4) — Petition held barred — Limitation Act (1963), Article 24 — Contract Act (1872), Section 72 — Civil P. C. (1908), Section 11 — Previous petition under Article 226 dismissed not on merits — Subsequent petition under Article 32 is not barred.

CN/DN/G183/GS/RGD/B

Article 32 gives the right to move the Supreme Court by appropriate proceedings for enforcement of the rights conferred by Part III of the Constitution. The State cannot place any hindrance in the way of an aggrieved person seeking to approach the Supreme Court. But the guarantee goes no further on the terms of Art. 32. Where the matter has reached the Supreme Court the extent or manner of interference is for the Court to decide. Interference must always depend upon the facts of each case.

(Para 4)

This Court does not convert civil and criminal actions into proceedings for the obtainment of writs. It is in rare cases, where the ordinary process of law appears inefficacious, that this Court interferes even where other remedies are available.

(Para 5)

Then again this Court refrains from acting under Article 32 if the party has already moved the High Court under Article 226, with a similar complaint and for the same relief and failed. This Court insists on an appeal to it and does not allow fresh proceedings. In this the principle of res judicata is applied, although the expression is somewhat inapt and unfortunate. The rule is based on public policy but the motivating factor is the existence of another parallel jurisdiction in another Court. Where an order is not speaking or the matter has been disposed of on some other ground at the threshold this Court in a suitable case entertains the application before itself. This Court also does not allow a new ground to be taken in appeal. Similarly, this Court has refrained from taking action when a better remedy is to move the High Court under Article 226 which can go into the controversy more comprehensively than this Court can under Art. 32.

(Para 6)

This Court will not inquire into belated and stale claims or take note of evidence of neglect of one's own rights for a long time. The party claiming Fundamental Rights must move the Court before other rights of innocent parties emerge by reason of delay on the part of the person moving the Court.

(Para 7)

English and American practice indicated.

(Para 8)

A petition under Article 32 is not a suit and it is also not a petition or an application to which the Limitation Act applies. Legislative curbs might be questioned under Article 13 (2). A short period of limitation might well frustrate the Fundamental Right. Too long a period might enable stale claims to be made to the detriment of other rights which might emerge.

(Para 9)

Utmost expedition is the sine qua non for such claims. The party aggrieved must explain satisfactorily all semblance of delay. No period can be indicated which may be regarded as the ultimate limit of action for that would be taking upon itself legislative functions. In England a period of 6 months has been provided statutorily, but that could be because there is no guaranteed remedy and the matter is one entirely of discretion. In India each case will have to be considered on its own facts. Avoidable delay affecting the merits of the claim, will disentitle a party to invoke the extraordinary jurisdiction.

(Para 10)

The question is one of discretion for this Court to follow from case to case. This Court need not necessarily give the total time to the litigant to move this Court under Article 32, even though he may be within statutory limitation. Similarly in a suitable case this Court may entertain a petition even after limitation. It will all depend on what the breach of the Fundamental Right and the remedy claimed are and how the delay arose.

(Para 11)

The Sales Tax Officer, on 17-3-1958, ordered a forfeiture under Section 21 (4) of the Bombay Sales Tax Act (Bombay Act III of 1953), which provision is similar to Section 12A (4) of the Bombay Sales Tax Act, 1946. Petitioner's writ petition and then his appeal before the Division Bench failed on 7-7-1959. The petitioner paid the sum due in various instalments upto 8-8-1960. Meanwhile on September 29, 1967, the Supreme Court in AIR 1968 SC 445 in a case from Gujarat in 16 STC 973 struck down S. 12-A on ground that it infringed Art. 19 (1) (f). On 9-2-1968, the petitioner filed a petition praying that the order dated March 17, 1958, be quashed.

Before the Bombay High Court the petitioner did not set out the ground on which ultimately Section 12A (4) was struck down in the Gujarat Case, nor did he file an appeal before the Supreme Court.

Held, (Per Majority: Sikri and Hegde, JJ, contra) that the petitioner could not take advantage of the Supreme Court decision in the Gujarat case after a lapse of a number of years. His contention that the ground on which the statute was struck down was not within his knowledge and therefore he could not pursue it in this Court would not stand, since the law will presume that he knew the exact ground of unconstitutionality. It was his duty to have brought the matter before the Supreme Court for consideration. In any event having set the machinery of law in motion he could not abandon it to resume it after a number of years. There was no question here of a mistake of law entitling the petitioner to invoke analogy of the Article in the Limitation Act.

(Paras 12, 33, 37)

Per Bachawat, Mitter and Hegde, JJ.: As the earlier petition filed in the High Court was not dismissed on the merits, the present petition was not barred by res judicata or principle analogous thereto.

(Paras 29, 54, 57)

Per Mitter, J.:— A claim for money paid under coercion is covered by Article 113 of the Limitation Act, 1963 giving a period of three years from the 1st of January 1964 on which date the Act came into force and the suit would have to be filed by the 1st January 1967. The facts negative any claim of payment under a mistake of law and are only consistent with a claim for money paid under coercion. As the petitioners have come to this Court in February, 1968 long after the date when they could have properly filed a suit, the application must be rejected.

(Para 53)

Per Sikri, J. (Contra) — That the petitioner was under a mistake of law, when be paid up, the mistake being that he thought that Section 12A (4) was a valid provision in spite of its imposing unreasonable restrictions. This mistake he discovered like all assessee when this Court struck down Section 12A (4) of the Bombay Sales Tax Act. He came to this Court within six months of that day and there was no delay. (Para 27)

Per Hegde, J. (Contra): A mere impression of a party that a provision of law might be ultra vires the Constitution could not be equated to knowledge that the provision is invalid. Hope and desire are not the same things as knowledge. A law passed by a competent legislature is bound to be presumed to be valid until it is struck down by a competent Court. The fact that after a futile attempt to get the provision in question declared invalid the petitioners gave up their fight and submitted to the law which was apparently valid is no proof of the fact that they knew that the provision in question is invalid.

(Para 63)

Cases Referred: Chronological Paras

- (1968) AIR 1968 SC 445 (V 55) =
21 STC 174 = Civil Appeal No.
128 of 1966, Kantilal Babulal v.
H. C. Patel 20, 30, 43,
58, 63
- (1967) AIR 1967 SC 1643 (V 54) =
1967-2 SCR 762, Golaknath v.
State of Punjab 61
- (1967) W. P. No. 163 of 1966, D/- 12-3-1967 (SC), Indian Sugar and Refineries Ltd. v. Union of India 59
- (1966) AIR 1966 Bom 36 (V 53) =
67 Bom LR 85, Kamalabai Harjiwandas Parekh v. T. B. Desai 59
- (1965) AIR 1965 SC 1514 (V 52) =
1965-2 SCR 808, Joseph v. State of Kerala 54, 59
- (1965) AIR 1965 SC 1773 (V 52) =
1965-2 SCR 577, A. Venkata
Subba Rao v. State of Andhra Pradesh 34, 52
- (1965) 16 STC 689 = 1965-2 SCWR
109, State of Kerala v. Aluminium
Industries 18, 35, 47
- (1965) 18 STC 973 (Cuj), Kantilal
Babulal v. H. C. Patel 20, 63
- (1964) AIR 1964 SC 1008 (V 51) =
1964-6 SCR 261, State of M. P.
v. Bhaailal Bhai 18, 35, 37,
46, 51, 62, 63
- (1964) AIR 1964 SC 1013 (V 51) =
1965 Mah LJ 1013, Amalgamated
Coal Fields Ltd. v. Janapada
Sabha Chindwara 14

- (1963) AIR 1963 SC 640 (V 50) =
(1963) Supp (1) SCR 99, Sobhraj
Odharmaal v. State of Rajasthan 37-A
- (1963) AIR 1963 SC 1295 (V 50) =
1964-1 SCR 332, Kharak Singh
v. State of U. P. 53
- (1961) AIR 1961 SC 1457 (V 48) =
1962-1 SCR 574, Daryao v. State of U. P. 3, 4, 36, 37A,
54, 57
- (1959) AIR 1959 SC 135 (V 46) =
1959 SCR 1350, Sales Tax Officer
v. Kanhaiyalal Mukundlal Saraf
18, 25, 32,
46, 63
- (1959) AIR 1959 SC 149 (V 46) =
(1959) Supp (1) SCR 528, Bashe-shar Nath v. Commr. of L. T.
Delhi, Rajasthan 60
- (1956) AIR 1956 Madh Bha 214
(V 43) = 1956 Madh BLJ 687,
Mohd. Siddique v. State of Madh. Bha. 46
- (1954) AIR 1954 SC 459 (V 41) =
1955-1 SCR 243, S. T. O. Pilibhit
v. Budh Prakash Jai Prakash 40
- (1952) AIR 1952 SC 196 (V 39) =
1952 SCR 597, State of Madras
v. V. C. Rao 58
- (1952) AIR 1952 All 764 (V 39) =
ILR (1952) 2 All 58, Budh Prakash
Jaiprakash v. S. T. O. Kanpur 40
- (1951) 1951 AC 251 = 1950-2 All
ER 1137, Ministry of Health v.
Simpson 65
- (1949) AIR 1949 PC 297 (V 36) =
76 Ind App 244, Shiba Prasad
Singh v. Srisb Chandra Nandi 32,
33, 46
- (1948) 1948 Ch 465 = 1948 LJR
1670, In re, Diplock 35
- (1872) LR 5 H L 650 = 42 LJ Ch
234, Knox v. Cye 37
- (1851-52) 5 Moo Ind App 234,
Rackmaboy v. Lulloobhoy Shund
Mottick Shund 37A
- 11 A L R 634 = 274 N W 310,
Morgan v. Jasper County 35
- M/s. H. K. Shah and B. Datta, Advocates and Mr. J. B. Dadachanji, Advocate of M/s. J. B. Dadachanji and Co., for Petitioners; Mr. C. K. Daphtary,
Attorney-General for India, (M/s. R.
Gopalakrishnan, R. H. Dhebar and S. P.
Nayar, Advocates, with him), for Respondents.
- The following Judgments of the Court were delivered by
- HIDAYATULLAH, C. J.: This petition has led to a sharp division of opinion among my brethren; Sikri and Hegde, JJ.

would allow the petition and Bachawat and Mitter, JJ., would dismiss it. They have differed on the question whether the petition deserves to be dismissed on the ground of delay. I agree in the result reached by Bachawat and Mitter, JJ., and would also dismiss it. I wish to state briefly my reasons.

2. At the threshold it appears to me that as there is no law which prescribes a period of limitation for such petitions, each of my brethren has really given expression to the practice he follows or intends to follow. I can do no more than state the views I hold on this subject and then give my decision on the merits of the petition in the light of those views.

3. The problem divides itself into two. The first part is a general question to be considered in two aspects: (a) whether any limit of time at all can be imposed on petitions under Article 32, and (b) whether this Court would apply by analogy an article of the Indian Limitation Act appropriate to the facts of the case or any other limit? The second is what is to be done in this case? I shall begin by stating my views on the first question.

4. There appears to be some confusion about the scope of Article 32. That Article gives the right to move the Supreme Court by appropriate proceedings for enforcement of the rights conferred by Part III of the Constitution. The provision merely keeps open the doors of this Court, in much the same way, as it used to be said, the doors of the Chancery Court were always open. The State cannot place any hindrance in the way of an aggrieved person seeking to approach this Court. This is logical enough for it is against State action that Fundamental Rights are claimed. But the guarantee goes no further at least on the terms of Article 32. Having reached this Court, the extent or manner of interference is for the Court to decide. It is clear that every case does not merit interference. That must always depend upon the facts of the case. In dealing with cases which have come before it, this Court has already settled many principles on which it acts. A few of them may be mentioned here.

5. This Court does not take action in cases covered by the ordinary jurisdiction of the civil courts, that is to say, it does not convert civil and criminal actions into proceedings for the obtainment of writs. Although there is no rule or provision of law to prohibit the exercise of its extraordinary jurisdiction this Court has always insisted upon recourse to ordinary remedies or the exhaustion of other remedies. It is in rare cases, where the ordinary process of law appears to be inefficacious, that this Court interferes even where other remedies are available. This attitude arises from the acceptance of a salutary principle that extraordinary remedies should not take the place of ordinary remedies.

6. Then again this Court refrains from acting under Article 32 if the party has already moved the High Court under Article 226. This constitutes a comity between the Supreme Court and the High Court. Similarly, when a party had already moved the High Court with a similar complaint and for the same relief and failed, this Court insists on an appeal to be brought before it and does not allow fresh proceedings to be started. In this connection the principle of res judicata has been applied, although the expression is somewhat inapt and unfortunate. The reason of the rule no doubt is public policy which Coke summarised as "interest reipublicae res judicatas non rescindi" but the motivating factor is the existence of another parallel jurisdiction in another Court and that Court having been moved, this Court insists on bringing its decision before this Court for review. Again this Court distinguishes between cases in which a speaking order on merits has been passed. Where the order is not speaking or the matter has been disposed of on some other ground at the threshold, this Court in a suitable case entertains the application before itself. Another restraint which this Court puts on itself is that it does not allow a new ground to be taken in appeal. In the same way, this Court has refrained from taking action when a better remedy is to move the High Court under Article 226 which can go into the controversy more comprehensively than this Court can under Article 32.

7. It follows, therefore, that this Court puts itself in restraint in the matter of petitions under Article 32 and this practice has now become inveterate. The question is whether this Court will inquire into belated and stale claims or take note of evidence of neglect of one's own rights for a long time? I am of opinion that not only it would (not ?) but also that it should (not ?). The party claiming Fundamental Rights must move the Court before other rights come into existence. The action of courts cannot harm innocent parties if their rights emerge by reason of delay on the part of the person moving the Court. This principle is well-recognised and has been applied by Courts in England and America.

8. The English and American practice has been outlined in Halsbury's Laws of England and Corpus Juris Secundum. It has been mentioned by my brethren in their opinions and I need not traverse the same ground again except to say this that Courts of Common Law in England were bound by the Law of Limitation but not the Courts of Chancery. Even so the Chancery Courts insisted on expedition. It is trite learning to refer to the maxim "delay defeats equity" or the latin of it that the Courts help those who are vigilant and do not slumber over their rights. The Courts of Chancery, therefore, frequently applied to suits in equity the analogy of the law of Limitation applicable to actions at law and equally frequently put a special limitation of their own if they thought that the suit was unduly delayed. This was independently of the analogy of law relating to limitation. The same practice has been followed in the United States.

9. In India we have the Limitation Act which prescribes different periods of limitation for suits, petitions or applications. There are also residuary Articles which prescribe limitation in those cases where no express period is provided. If it were a matter of a suit or application, either an appropriate article or the residuary article would have applied. But a petition under Art. 32 is not a suit and is also not a petition or an application to which the Limitation Act applies. To put curbs in the way of enforcement of Fundamental Rights through legislative action might well be questioned under Article 13 (2). The reason is also quite clear. If a short period of limitation were prescribed the Fundamental Right might well be frustrated. Prescribing too long a period might enable stale claims to be made to the detriment of other rights which might emerge.

10. If then there is no period prescribed what is the standard for this Court to follow? I should say that utmost expedition is the sine qua non for such claims. The party aggrieved must move the Court at the earliest possible time and explain satisfactorily all semblance of delay. I am not indicating any period which may be regarded as the ultimate limit of action for that would be taking upon myself legislative functions. In England a period of 6 months has been provided statutorily, but that could be because there is no guaranteed remedy and the matter is one entirely of discretion. In India I will only say that each case will have to be considered on its own facts. Where there is appearance of avoidable delay and this delay affects the merits of the claim, this Court will consider it and in a proper case hold the party disentitled to invoke the extraordinary jurisdiction.

11. Therefore, the question is one of discretion for this Court to follow from case to case. There is no lower limit and there is no upper limit. A case may be brought within Limitation Act by reason of some Article but this Court need not necessarily give the total time to the litigant to move this Court under Art. 32. Similarly in a suitable case this Court may entertain such a petition even after a lapse of time. It will all depend on what the breach of the Fundamental Right and the remedy claimed are and how the delay arose.

12. Applying these principles to the present case what do I find? The petitioner moved the High Court for relief on the ground that the recovery from him was unconstitutional. He set out a number of grounds but did not set out the ground on which ultimately in another case recovery was struck down by this Court. That ground was that the provisions of the Act were unconstitutional. The question is: can the petitioner in this case take advantage, after a lapse of a number of years, of the decision of this Court? He moved the High Court but did not come up in appeal to this Court. His contention is that the ground on which his petition was dismissed was different and the ground on which the statute was struck down was not within his knowledge and therefore he did not know of it and pursue it in this Court. To that I answer that law will presume that he knew the exact ground of unconstitutionality. Everybody is presumed to know the law. It was his duty to have brought the matter before this Court for consideration. In any event, having set the machinery of law in motion he cannot abandon it to resume it after a number of years, because another person more adventurous than him in his turn got the statute declared unconstitutional, and got a favourable decision. If I were to hold otherwise, then the decision of the High Court in any case once adjudicated upon and acquiesced in may be questioned in a fresh litigation revived only with the argument that the correct position was not known to the petitioner at the time when he abandoned his own litigation. I agree with the opinion of my brethren Bachawat and Mitter, JJ., that there is no question here of a mistake of law entitling the petitioner to invoke analogy of the Article in the Limitation Act. The grounds on which he moved the Court might well have impressed this Court which might have also decided the question of the unconstitutionality of the Act as was done in the subsequent litigation by another party. The present petitioner should have taken the right ground in the High Court and taken it in appeal to this Court after the High Court decided against it. Not having done so and having abandoned his own litigation years ago, I do not think that this Court should apply the analogy of the Article in the Limitation Act and give him the relief now. The petition, therefore, fails and is dismissed with costs.

13. SIKRI, J.: I have had the advantage of reading the drafts of the judgments prepared by Mitter, J., and Bachawat, J. I agree with Mitter, J., in his conclusion that the rule laid down in Daryao v. State of U. P., 1962-1 SCR 574 = (AIR 1961 SC 1457) is inapplicable to the facts of the case, but for the reasons I will presently give, in my opinion the petition should be allowed.

14. Article 32 (2) of the Constitution confers a judicial power on the Court. Like all judicial powers unless there is an express provision to the contrary, it must be exercised in accordance with fundamental principles of administration of justice. General principles of res judicata were accordingly applied by this Court in 1962-1 SCR 574 = (AIR 1961 SC 1457), and Amalgamated Coalfields Ltd. v. Janapada Sabha, Chindwara, AIR 1964 SC 1013 at p. 1018. I understand that one of the fundamental principles of administration of justice is that, apart from express provisions to the contrary, stale claims should not be given effect to. But what is a stale claim? It is not denied that the Indian Limitation Act does not directly apply to a petition under Article 32. Both the English Courts and the American Courts were confronted with a similar problem. In the United States the Federal Courts of Equity solved the problem thus:

"Except perhaps, where the statute by its express terms applies to suits in equity as well as to actions at law, or where the jurisdiction of law and equity is concurrent, the rule appears to be that Federal courts sitting in equity are not bound by State statutes of limitation. Nevertheless, except where unusual conditions or extraordinary circumstances render it equitable to do so, the Federal courts usually act in analogy to the State statutes of limitation applicable to cases of like character." (Vol. 34, American Jurisprudence, Limitation of Actions, S. 54)". In Courts of Admiralty, where the statutes of limitation do not control proceedings, the analogy of such statutes is ordinarily followed unless there is something exceptional in the case. (ibid)

15. Story on Equity Jurisprudence states the legal position thus:

"It was, too, a most material ground, in all bills for an account, to ascertain whether they were brought to open and correct errors in the account recenti facto; or whether the application was made after a great lapse of time. In cases of this sort, where the demand was strictly of a legal nature, or might be cognizable at law, courts of equity governed themselves by the same limitations as to entertain such suits as were prescribed by the Statute of Limitations in regard to suits in courts of common law in matters of account. If, therefore, the ordinary limitation of such suits at law was six years, courts of equity would follow the same period of limitation. In so doing, they did not act, in cases of this sort (that is, in matter of concurrent jurisdiction) so much upon the ground of analogy to the Statute of Limitations, as positively in obedience to such statute. But where the demand was not of a legal nature, but was purely equitable, or where the bar of the statute was inapplicable; courts of equity had another rule, founded sometimes upon the analogies of the law, where such analogy existed, and sometimes upon its own inherent doctrine, not to entertain stale or antiquated demands, and not to encourage laches and negligence. Hence, in matters of account, although not barred by the Statute of Limitations, courts of equity refused to interfere after a considerable lapse of time, from considerations of public policy, from the difficulty of doing entire justice, when the original transactions had become obscure by time and the evidence might have been lost, and from the consciousness that the repose of titles and the security of property are mainly promoted by a full enforcement of the maxim, Vigilantibus, nondormientibus jura subveniunt. Under peculiar circumstances, however, excusing or justifying the delay, courts of equity would not refuse their aid in furtherance of the rights of the party; since in such cases there was no pretence to insist upon laches or negligence, as a ground for dismissal of the suit; and in one case carried back the account over a period of fifty years." (Third Edition, page 224, S. 529).

16. In England, as pointed out by Bachawat, J., the Court of Chancery acted on the analogy of Statute of Limitation (vide Halsbury, Vol. 14, p. 647, art. 1190).

17. It seems to me, however, that the above solution is not quite appropriate for petitions under Article 32. A delay of 12 years or 6 years would make a strange bed-fellow with a direction or order or writ in the nature of mandamus, certiorari and prohibition. Bearing in mind the history of these writs I cannot believe that the Constituent Assembly had the intention that five Judges of this Court should sit together to enforce a fundamental right at the instance of a person, who had without any reasonable explanation slept over his rights for 6 or 12 years. The history of these writs both in England and the U. S. A. convinces me that the underlying idea of the Constitution was to provide an expeditious and authoritative remedy against the inroads of the State. If a claim is barred under the Limitation Act, unless there are exceptional circumstances, prima facie it is a stale claim and should not be entertained by this Court. But even if it is not barred under the Indian Limitation Act, it may not be entertained by this Court if on the facts of the case there is unreasonable delay. For instance, if the State had taken possession of property under a law alleged to be void, and if a petitioner comes to this Court 11 years after the possession was taken by the State, I would dismiss the petition on the ground of delay, unless there is some reasonable explanation. The fact that a suit for possession of land would still be in time would not be relevant at all. It is difficult to lay down a precise period beyond which delay should be explained. I favour one year because this Court should not be approached lightly, and competent legal advice should be taken and pros and cons carefully weighed before coming to this Court. It is common knowledge that appeals and representations to the higher authorities take time; time spent in pursuing these remedies may not be excluded under the Limitation Act, but it may ordinarily be taken as a good explanation for the delay.

18. It is said that if this was the practice the guarantee of Article 32 would be destroyed. But the article nowhere says that a petition, howsoever late, should be entertained and a writ or order or direction granted, howsoever remote the date of infringement of the fundamental right. In practice this Court has not been entertaining stale claims by persons who have slept over their rights. There is no need to depart from this practice and tie our hands completely with the shackles imposed by the Indian Limitation Act. In the case of applications under Article 226 this Court observed in State of Madhya Pradesh v. Bhailal Bhai, 1964-6 SCR 261 at pp. 271-72 = (AIR 1964 SC 1003 at p. 1011):

"It may however be stated as a general rule that if there has been unreasonable delay the court ought not ordinarily to lend its aid to a party by this extraordinary remedy of mandamus. Again, where even if there is no such delay the Government or the statutory authority against whom the consequential relief is prayed for raises a prima facie triable issue as regards the availability of such relief on the merits on grounds like limitation, the Court should ordinarily refuse to issue the writ of mandamus for such payment. In both these kinds of cases it will be sound use of discretion to leave the party to seek his remedy by the ordinary mode of action in a civil court and to refuse to exercise in his favour the extraordinary remedy under Art. 226 of the Constitution."

In State of Kerala v. Aluminium Industries (1965) 18 STC 689 at p. 692 (SC) Wanchoo, J., speaking on behalf of a large Bench of this Court, observed

"There is no doubt in view of the decision of this Court in Sales Tax Officer v. Kanhalayalal, 1959 SCR 1350 = (AIR 1959 SC 135) that money paid under a mistake of law comes within the word "mistake" in Section 72 of the Contract Act and there is no question of estoppel when the mistake of law is common to both the parties, which was the case here inasmuch as the respondent did not raise the question relating to Article 286 of the Constitution and the Sales Tax Officer had no occasion to consider it. In such a case where tax is levied by mistake of law it is ordinarily the duty of the State subject to any provision in the law relating to sales tax (and no such provision has been brought to our notice) to refund the tax. If refund is not made, remedy through court is open subject to the same restrictions and also to the period of limitation (see Article 96 of the Limitation Act, 1908), namely, three years from the date when the mistake becomes known to the person who has made the payment by mistake (see 1964-6 SCR 261 = (AIR 1964 SC 1006)). In this view of the matter it was the duty of the State to investigate the facts when the mistake was brought to its notice and to make a refund if mistake was proved and the claim was made within the period of limitation.

But these cases cannot directly apply to petitions under Article 32 because they proceed from the premise that the remedy is discretionary under Article 226.

19. Coming to the facts of this case, which have been stated in detail by Mitter, J., it seems to me that the delay in coming to this Court has been adequately explained. In brief, the facts are these: The Sales Tax Officer, by his order dated March 17, 1958, forfeited a sum of Rs. 26,563.50 under Section 21 (4) of the Bombay Sales Tax Act (Bombay Act III of 1953), which provision is similar to Section 12A (4) of the Bombay Sales Tax Act, 1946. The petitioner promptly filed a writ petition in the Bombay High Court challenging this order. His petition was dismissed on November 28, 1958. He also failed in appeal before the Division Bench on July 7, 1959. An order of attachment followed. The petitioner paid the sum of Rs. 26,563.50 in various instalments from October 3, 1959, to August 8, 1960. By letter dated January 9, 1962, the petitioner was called upon to pay a penalty amounting to Rs. 12,517/68 on account of late payment of Sales Tax dues but this order of penalty was ultimately cancelled.

20. The Gujarat High Court (Shelat, C. J., and Bhagwati, J.) in Kantilal Babulal v. H. C. Patel, Sales Tax Officer, (1965) 16 STC 973 (Guj) held on December 2, 1963, that Section 12A (4) of the Bombay Sales Tax Act, 1946, was valid and did not violate Article 19 (1) (f) as it was saved by Article 19 (5). On September 29, 1967, this Court, on appeal, in Kantilal Babulal v. H. C. Patel, Sales Tax Officer, 21 STC 174 = (AIR 1968 SC 445) struck down this provision as it infringed Article 19 (1) (f). On February 9, 1968, four petitioners — hereinafter compendiously referred to as the petitioner — filed this petition praying that the order dated March 17, 1958, and the notice and order dated December 18, 1958, and December 24, 1958, be quashed.

21. There is no doubt that under Section 72 of the Contract Act the petitioner would be entitled to the relief claimed and the refund of the amount if he paid the money under mistake of law. I find it difficult to appreciate why the payment was not made under a mistake of law. In my opinion the petitioner was mistaken in thinking that the money was liable to be refunded under a valid law. Nobody has urged before us that the grounds which he had raised before the High Court were sound.

22. The petitioner had attempted to raise before the Bombay High Court the following grounds:

1. Inasmuch as the sum of Rs. 26,563.50 was paid by way of refund under the Bombay Sales Tax Act 1946, the taxing authorities had exceeded their power under Section 21 (4) of the Act of 1953, in forfeiting the said sum of money.

2. Assuming that the respondent had power to forfeit the sum under the Act of 1953 it was strictly limited to taxes payable under the provisions of the Act and as no tax was payable on outside sales the authorities had no power to forfeit the sum of Rs. 26,563.50.

3. xx xx xx xx

4. Even assuming while denying that the respondent had power to forfeit the sum of Rs. 26,563.50, the power to forfeit an amount as a tax presupposes a power to impose a tax and inasmuch as on a proper construction of the relevant provisions of the Constitution no State Legislature had at any time a power to impose tax on the aforesaid transactions, the power to forfeit tax in respect of those transactions is ultra vires the State Legislature."

23. The learned Single Judge held:

"This appears to me to be a gross case where even if I was of the opinion that the order is invalid and involved violation of fundamental rights I would not in my discretion interfere by way of issuing a writ. I am not depriving the petitioner of any other appropriate remedy. I have, therefore, decided to dismiss this petition on that single ground."

24. The Division Bench, on appeal, decided on the limited ground that "Mr. Justice K. K. Desai having exercised his discretion no case is made out for interference with the exercise of that discretion." The petitioner rightly did not file an appeal to this Court for he would have had little chance of succeeding.

25. Suppose a petitioner challenges a provision of the Sales Tax Act before the High Court on the ground that it does not fall within List II or List III of the Seventh Schedule. He fails and pays the tax and does not appeal to the Supreme Court. Ultimately, in another petition the provision is struck down under Article 14 or Article 19, a point which he and his lawyers never thought of. All assesseees who had paid tax without challenging the provision would be entitled to approach this Court under Article 32 and claim a refund (see 1959 SCR 1350 = (AIR 1959 SC 135)). But why not the assessee who applied to the High Court? The answer given is that he had thought at one time that the law was bad, though on wrong grounds. If a law were framed sanctioning the above discrimination, I believe, it would be difficult to sustain it under Article 14, but yet this is the discrimination which the respondent wants me to sanction.

26. The grounds extracted above show that it never struck the petitioner that the provision could be challenged on the ground ultimately accepted by this Court. If the petitioner had not thought of going to the Bombay High Court on the points he did, and had paid on demand, as most of the assesseees do, he would, I imagine, have been entitled to maintain this petition. But it is now said that the petitioner's position is worse because he exercised his right to approach the High Court under Article 226. The contention seems to be that when a petitioner approaches a High Court and fails, he can no longer suffer from any mistake of law even if the point on which this Court ultimately strikes down the provisions, never struck him or his lawyer or the Court. I cannot uphold this contention.

27. In my opinion the petitioner was under a mistake of law, when he paid up, the mistake being that he thought that Section 12A (4) was a valid provision in spite of its imposing unreasonable restrictions. This mistake he discovered like all assesseees when this Court struck down Section 12A (4) of the Bombay Sales Tax Act. He has come to this Court within six months of that day and there is no delay.

28. The petition is accordingly allowed and the impugned order dated March 17, 1958, quashed and the respondent directed to refund the amount. Under the circumstances there will be no order as to costs.

29. BACHAWAT, J.:— I have had the advantage of reading the judgment prepared by G. K. Mitter, J. For the reasons given in this judgment, I agree with the order proposed by him. As the earlier petition filed in the High Court was not dismissed on the merits, the present petition is not barred by res judicata or principle analogous thereto.

30. The petitioners realised Rupees 26,563.50 P. from their customers outside Bombay on account of sales tax. The Sales Tax Officer by his order dated March 17, 1958 forfeited this sum under Section 21 (4) of the Bombay Sales Tax Act 3 of 1953. On March 28, 1958 the petitioners filed a writ petition in the Bombay High Court seeking to restrain the Sales Tax Officer from recovering the amount. They pleaded that they were not liable to pay the amount, that Section 21 (4) was ultra vires the powers of the State legislature and that the order of forfeiture was violative of Articles 19 (1) (f) and 365 of the Constitution and was invalid. On November 28, 1958, K. K. Desai, J., dismissed the petition. He held that the petitioners having defrauded other persons were not entitled to any relief. The petitioners filed an appeal against the order. In the memorandum of appeal they pleaded that the threatened levy was in violation of Articles 19 (1) (f) and 31 of the Constitution. The appeal was dismissed on July 13, 1959. In the meantime on December 24, 1958 the Collector of Bombay attached the petitioners' properties. Between August 3, 1959 and August 8, 1960 the petitioners paid the sum of Rs. 26, 563.50 P. to the Collector of Bombay. In Civil Appeal No. 126 of 1966, decided on September 29, 1967 = (reported in AIR 1968 SC 445) this Court struck down Section 12-A (4) of the Bombay Sales Tax Act, 1946 as unconstitutional and violative of Article 19 (1) (f). The arguments in the present appeal proceeded on the assumption that Section 21 (4) of the Bombay Sales Tax Act, 1953 is liable to be struck down on the same ground. On February 9, 1968 the petitioners filed the present writ petition under Article 32 of the Constitution claiming refund of Rs. 26,563.50 P. under Section 72 of the Indian Contract Act 1872. They alleged that they paid this sum to the Collector under coercion and/or mistake of law, and that they discovered the mistake on September 29, 1967.

31. The points arise for decision in this writ petition: (1) Would the claim be barred by limitation if it were the subject-matter of a suit in February 1968 and (2) if so, are the petitioners entitled to any relief in this petition under Article 32 of the Constitution.

32. Subject to questions of limitation, waiver and estoppel, money paid under mistake or coercion may be recovered under Section 72 of the Indian Contract Act. The right to relief under Section 72 extends to money paid under mistake of law, i.e., "mistake in thinking that the money paid was due when, in fact, it was not due," Shiba Prasad Singh v. Srish Chandra Nandi, 76 Ind App 244 at p. 254 = (AIR 1949 PC 297 at p. 302), 1959 SCR 1350 at pp. 1361, 1362 = (AIR 1959 SC 135 at p. 143).

33. In my opinion, the petitioners were not labouring under any mistake of law when they made the payments. As early as March 1958 they filed a writ petition for restraining the levy under the order dated March 17, 1958, claiming that the order was invalid and that Section 21 (4) of the Bombay Sales Tax Act, 1953 was ultra vires and unconstitutional. They might not have then known the precise ground upon which the Court subsequently struck down a similar provision of law, but they had discovered presumably under legal advice that they were not legally bound to make any payment. After the writ petition was dismissed their properties were attached and they made the payments under coercion in 1959 and 1960. The payments were not made under a mistake of law or as pointed out in Shiba Prasad Singh's case, 76 Ind App 244 = (AIR 1949 PC 297) (supra) under a mistake in thinking that the money was due. They cannot claim any relief on the ground of mistake.

34. As we are assuming in favour of the petitioners that S. 21 (4) of the Bombay Sales Tax Act 1953 as invalid, we must hold that they made the payments under coercion. A suit for the recovery of the money on this ground instituted on January 1, 1964 would be governed by Article 24 of the Limitation Act, 1963 and the period of limitation would be three years from the dates in 1959 and 1960 when the money was received by the respondents. The petitioners cannot obtain an extension of the period under Section 30 (a) of the Limitation Act, 1963 as Article 62 of the Indian Limitation Act, 1908 prescribed the same period of limitation. A suit for recovery of tax or other levy illegally collected was governed by Article 62 and not by Article 120, see A. Venkata Subba Rao v. State of Andhra Pradesh, 1965-2 SCR 577 at pp. 612, 620 = (AIR 1965 SC 1773 at pp. 1790-1793). Accordingly a suit for the recovery of money instituted in February 1968 would be barred by limitation.

35. If the petitioners could claim relief on the ground of mistake, the suit would be governed by Article 96 of the Indian Limitation Act, 1908 and time would begin to run from the date when the mistake becomes known to the plaintiff. In 1964-6 SCR 261 at p. 274 = (AIR 1964 SC 1006 at p. 1012) and State of Kerala v. Aluminium Industries Ltd., 1965-16 STC 689 at p. 692 (SC), it was held that Article 96 applied to a suit for recovery of money paid under a mistake of law. Section 17 (1) (c) of the Limitation Act 1963 now provides that in the case of a suit for relief from the consequences of a mistake the period of limitation does not begin to run until the plaintiff has discovered the mistake or could with reasonable diligence have discovered it. Section 17 (1) (c) corresponds to Section 26 (c) of the Limitation Act, 1939 (2 & 3 Geo. 6, c. 21). It was held in In Re Diplock, 1948 Ch. 465 at pp. 515, 516 that Section 26 (c) applied by analogy to a suit for recovery of money paid under mistake of law. On appeal, the House of Lords said that the section presented many problems and refrained from saying more about it, see Ministry of Health v. Simpson, 1951 AC 251 at p. 277. In some American States, it has been held that a mistake of law cannot be regarded as a mistake within a similar statute and time ran from the date of the accrual of the cause of action, see Corpus Juris Secundum, vol. 54, Limitation of Actions, Article 198, page 202, Morgan v. Jasper County, 11 ALR 634= 274 NW 310, and the cases referred to therein. It is not necessary to pursue the matter any further as the petitioners cannot claim relief on the ground of mistake. Accordingly, I express no opinion on the scope of Section 17 (c) of the Limitation Act, 1963. For the reasons already stated a suit for the recovery of the money instituted in February 1963 would be barred by limitation.

36. The next and the more fundamental question is whether in the circumstances the Court should give relief in a writ petition under Article 32 of the Constitution. No period of limitation is prescribed for such a petition. The right to move this Court for enforcement of fundamental rights is guaranteed by Article 32. The writ under Article 32 issues as a matter of course if a breach of a fundamental right is established. Technical rules applicable to suits like the provisions of Section 60 of the Code of Civil Procedure are not applicable to a proceeding under Article 32. But this does not mean that in giving relief under Article 32 the Court must ignore and trample under foot all laws of procedure, evidence, limitation, res judicata and the like. Under Article 143 (1) (c) rules may be framed for regulating the practice and procedure in proceedings under Article 32. In the absence of such rules the Court may adopt any reasonable rule of procedure. Thus a petitioner has no right to move this Court under Article 32 for enforcement of his fundamental right on a petition containing misleading and inaccurate statements, and if he files such a petition the Court will dismiss it, see W. P. No. 183 of 1966, Indian Sugar and Refineries Ltd. v. Union of India decided on March 12, 1967 (SC). On grounds of public policy it would be intolerable if the Court were to entertain such a petition. Likewise the Court held in 1962-1 SCR 574= (AIR 1961 SC 1457) that the general principles of res judicata applied to a writ petition under Article 32. Similarly, this Court has summarily dismissed innumerable writ petitions on the ground that it was presented after unreasonable delay.

37. The normal remedy for recovery of money paid to the State under coercion or mistake of law is by suit. Articles 32 and 226 of the Constitution provide concurrent remedy in respect of the same claim. The extraordinary remedies under the Constitution are not intended to enable the claimant to recover monies, the recovery of which by suit is barred by limitation. Where the remedy in a writ application under Article 32 or Article 226 corresponds to a remedy in an ordinary suit and the latter remedy is subject to the bar of a statute of limitation, the Court in its writ jurisdiction acts by analogy to the statute, adopts the statute as its own rule of procedure and in the absence of special circumstances imposes the same limitation on the summary remedy in the writ jurisdiction. On similar grounds the Court of Chancery acted on the analogy of the Statutes of limitation in disposing of stale claims though the proceeding in a Chancery was not subject to any express statutory bar, see Halsbury's Laws of England, vol. 14, page 647, Article 1190, Knox v. Gye, 5 HL 656 at p. 674. Likewise, the High Court acts on the analogy of the statute of limitation in a proceeding under Article 226 though the statute does not expressly apply to the proceeding. The Court will almost always refuse to give relief under Article 226 if the delay is more than the statutory period of limitation, see 1964-6 SCR 261= (AIR 1964 SC 1006) (supra) at pp. 273-274 (of SCR)= (at p. 1012 of AIR).

37-A. Similarly this Court acts on the analogy of the statutes of limitation in respect of a claim under Article 32 of the Constitution though such claim is not the subject of any express statutory bar of limitation. If the right to a property is extinguished by prescription under Section 27 of the Limitation Act, 1963 the petitioner has no subsisting right which can be enforced under Article 32, see Sobhraj Odharmal v. State of Rajasthan, (1963) Supp (1) SCR 99 at p. 111= (AIR 1963 SC 640 at p. 845). In other cases where the remedy only and not the right is extinguished by limitation, it is on grounds of public policy that the Court refuses to entertain stale claims under Article 32. The statutes of limitation are founded on sound principles of public policy. As observed in Whitley Stoke's Anglo-Indian Codes, vol. 11 p. 940: "The law is founded on public policy, its aim being to secure the quiet of the community, to suppress fraud and perjury, to quicken diligence, and to prevent oppression." In Her Highness Ruckmaboye v. Lulloobhoy Mottickshund, (1851-52) 5 Moo Ind App 234 the Privy Council observed that the object of the statutes of limitation was to give effect to the maxim, "interest reipublicoe ut sit finis litium" (co litt 303) — the interest of the State requires that there should be a limit to litigation. The rule of res judicata is founded upon the same rule of public policy, see 1962-1 SCR 574= (AIR 1961 SC 1457) (supra) at p. 584 (of SCR)= (at p. 1462 of AIR). The other ground of public policy upon which the statutes of limitation are founded is expressed in the maxim "vigilantibus non dormientibus jura subveniunt" (2 Co. Inst. 690) — the laws aid the vigilant and not those who slumber. On grounds of public policy the Court applies the principles of res judicata to writ petitions under Article 32. On like grounds the Court acts on the analogy of the statutes of limitation in the exercise of its jurisdiction under Art. 32. It follows that the present petition must be dismissed.

38. MITTER, J.:— The facts leading up to the filing of the petition under Article 32 of the Constitution are as follows.

38-A. The first petitioner before us is a registered partnership firm (hereinafter referred to as 'the firm') carrying on business in Bombay and the other petitioners are partners of the said firm. The firm has been carrying on business as a dealer in and a trader of textiles and art silk etc. It was registered as a dealer and has held registration certificates under the various sales tax laws prevailing in the State of Bombay from 1946 onwards including the Bombay Sales Tax Act 5 of 1946, the Bombay Sales Tax Act 3 of 1963 and the Bombay Sales Tax Act 51 of 1959.

39. In the course of assessment for the assessment period commencing on April 1, 1949, and ending on 31st October 1952, the firm contended that its sales of the value of Rs. 13,42,165-15-6 were not liable to be taxed under the provisions of the Bombay Sales Tax Act then in force as the goods were delivered as a direct result of such sales for purposes of consumption outside the State of Bombay. The firm claimed that it was entitled to a refund of the amount which it had collected from its customers and paid on account of the aforesaid sales at the time of submitting the returns of its turnover. The Sales Tax Officer did not accept this contention but on appeal the Assistant Collector of Sales Tax upheld the firm's contention after examining the details submitted by it and found that the sales involving the sum of Rupees 26,563-8-0 realised by way of tax were protected under Article 286 of the Constitution. He therefore directed that the said sum be refunded to the firm on a proper application. This appellate order was passed on November 7, 1956. The firm preferred an application for refund of Rs. 26,563-50 on November 13, 1956 whereupon the Assistant Collector (the appellate authority) simultaneously with the issue of a cheque for the above amount by way of refund wrote a letter dated May 11, 1957 to the effect that the petitioner should produce before him within one month of the date of the cheque receipt totalling Rs. 26,563.50 from its customers outside Bombay State to show that the refund had been passed on to them. It appears that the petitioner did not fulfil this condition and a notice dated 28th January 1958 was issued calling upon the firm to show cause why the said sum of Rs. 26,563.50 should not be forfeited under Section 21 (4) of the Bombay Sales Tax Act, 1953. In reply thereto, the firm stated by letter dated February 7, 1958 that it had collected from its customers outside the State of Bombay the said sum of money and "under an honest mistake of law had paid the same to the sales tax authorities." The firm went on to add that the order for refund had been made only when the authorities were satisfied that it was not liable to pay the said sum but the latter had insisted upon a condition that the firm should in its turn refund the said amount to its customers from whom the collection had been made. The letter records that the firm "had agreed to that condition under coercion even though in law the authorities were bound to refund the said amount without any such condition." Further the firm's case in that letter was that the authorities had "no right to forfeit any amount collected by a dealer under a mistake of law in respect of these transactions" and the threat to forfeit the amount on the ground that it had not been refunded to the firm's customers was without the authority of law.

40. The order on the show cause notice passed on March 17, 1958 records that though given sufficient opportunity to produce stamped receipts from its customers the firm had failed to do so and had thereby contravened the provisions of Section 21 (2) of the Bombay Sales Tax Act. The firm was directed to refund the said sum to the Reserve Bank of India on or before April 1, 1958 failing which it would be recoverable as arrears of land revenue from the firm together with penalty. The order was purported to be passed under Section 21 (4) of the Bombay Sales Tax Act, 1953.

41. Within a few days thereafter i.e., on March 28, 1958, the firm presented an application to the High Court of Bombay under Article 226 of the Constitution for the issue of a writ in nature of certiorari quashing the above mentioned order of forfeiture and for incidental reliefs. In paragraph 4 of the petition it was stated that the order of forfeiture was "without the authority of law and therefore in violation of Article 19 (1) (g) and Article 265 of the Constitution."

42. It appears that a similar application had been presented on behalf of Pasha Bhai Patel and Co. (P) Ltd., to the Bombay High Court and the application of the firm along with the first mentioned application were disposed of by a learned single Judge of the Bombay High Court on November 28, 1958. The main judgment was delivered in Pasha Bhai Patel and Company's case. The learned Judge observed in the course of his judgment that there was no merit whatsoever in it and "justice did not lie on his (the petitioner's) side and this was a matter in which the Court should not interfere by way of a writ and give relief to the petitioner-company." The Judge further observed that "the petitioner has not referred to fundamental rights of any kind in the petition and said:

"This appears to me to be a gross case where even if I was of the opinion that the order is invalid and involved violation of fundamental rights, I would not in my discretion interfere by way of issuing a writ. I am not depriving the petitioner of any other appropriate remedy. I have therefore decided to dismiss this petition on that single ground."

No copy of the petition in Pasha Bhai Patel and Company's case is before us but the present petitioner, as shown already, did complain of violation of Article 19 (1) (g) and Article 265 of the Constitution besides contending that the order was "ultra vires" bad and inoperative in law." Dealing with the petition of the firm the learned Judge said that "there was no merit in the case and justice did not lie on the side of the petitioner" and for reasons given in Pasha Bhai Patel and Co.'s case the petition was dismissed.

43. The firm went up in appeal to the same High Court. A note may be taken of some of the grounds in the memorandum of appeal filed by the firm. They were inter alia:—

"(13) The learned Judge erred in not deciding the petition on merits even when there was a question of violation of fundamental rights.

(16) The learned Judge erred in holding that this was a gross case where even if he had been of the opinion that the order was invalid or that it involved violation of fundamental rights, he would not in his discretion interfere by way of issuing a writ.

(30) The learned Judge failed to appreciate that the order of forfeiture was nothing but the deprivation of property without the authority of law and the action of the respondent was an unreasonable restriction on the fundamental rights of the petitioner under Article 19 (1) (f) and Article 31 of the Constitution of India."

In dismissing the appeal the learned Judges of the Division Bench observed:

"The appellant claims to retain with himself amounts to which he has no claim and the appellant is seeking to come before this Court to retain with himself amounts which he has obtained from the sales tax authorities on a representation that he is going to refund the same and which he has not refunded. Mr. Justice K. K. Desai was of the view that the claim made by the appellant was a gross claim and even if it involved violation of fundamental rights, in exercise of his discretion, he will not interfere by issuing a writ. The learned Judge having exercised his discretion which he undoubtedly was entitled to exercise, we do not think sitting in appeal we would be justified in exercising our powers as an appellate Court in interfering with the order under appeal. We may observe that we are not dealing with this case on the merits at all. We have not considered the question whether the appellant is entitled in law to retain the moneys which he has obtained from the sales tax department. We have decided this appeal on the limited ground that Mr. Justice K. K. Desai having exercised his discretion, no case is made out for our interference with the exercise of that discretion."

It is therefore amply clear from the above that the learned Judges of the Bombay High Court did not examine the merits of the firm's contention that the order of refund was without the authority of law or ultra vires or in violation of any fundamental rights of the partners of the firm. They merely exercised their discretion on the question of issue of a writ under Article 226 of the Constitution in view of the firm's conduct in obtaining an order for refund of the amount mentioned and later on refusing to fulfil the condition imposed.

44. It does not appear that the firm took any further steps in the Court of Law for vindicating its position before filing the present writ petition. It received a notice dated December 18, 1958, under the Bombay City Land Revenue Act 2 of 1876 calling upon it to pay the said sum of Rs. 26,563.50 to the State of Bombay failing which proceedings were threatened to be taken by attachment and sale of its property and by other remedies provided by Section 13 of the Land Revenue Act. It appears that the Collector of Bombay actually issued an order of attachment on the right, title and interest of two of the partners of the firm including the goodwill and tenancy right in the premises where the business was carried on. The firm paid the sum of Rs. 26,563.50 in various instalments beginning on October 3, 1959 and ending on August 8, 1960.

45. In paragraph 8 of the present petition to this Court it is submitted that the petitioners "paid the sum to the State of Bombay under coercion and/or mistake of law." The petitioners also state they "did not know that the sections of the Sales Tax Acts under which the said sum was sought to be forfeited and/or recovered and/or retained were ultra vires." In paragraph 10 of the petition it is stated that the petitioners discovered their mistake in law when they came to know of the decision of this Court dated September 29, 1967 that Section 12A (4) of the Bombay Sales Tax Act 5 of 1946 was ultra vires. In paragraph 14 of the petition the firm also states "that the said sum had been forfeited and/or recovered and/or retained by the respondents from the petitioners in violation of Article 265, Article 31 and Article 19 (1) (f) of the Constitution. The fundamental rights of the petitioners have thus been violated. The petitioners submit that they have been deprived of their property, to wit, the said sum, by the respondents without any authority in law and contrary to the fundamental rights guaranteed to the petitioners by Articles 19 (1) (f) and 31 of the Constitution." The grounds of law under which the firm claimed that the actions of the State of Bombay and the respondents in recovering, retaining, forfeiting and not returning the said sum were void and invalid in law are set forth in paragraph 15 of the petition. In the view which we take of the firm's claim and in view of the decision of this Court in 21 STC 174= (AIR 1968 SC 445) dated September 29, 1967, it is not necessary to examine the validity or otherwise of the provisions of Section 12A (4) of the Act of 1946 or the corresponding section of the Act of 1953 i. e., Section 21 (4). The appeal of 21 STC 174= (AIR 1968 SC 445) (supra) decided by this Court on September 29, 1967 was from a decision of the High Court of Gujarat reported in 16 Sales Tax Cases 973. The Gujarat High Court had held that Section 12A (4) was saved by Article 19 (5) of the Constitution. The appeal by the assessee was allowed by this Court on the short ground that assuming that Section 12A (4) was a penal provision within the legislative competence of the legislature, it was violative of Article 19 (1) (f) inasmuch as it did not lay down any procedure for ascertaining whether in fact the dealer concerned had collected any amount by way of tax from his purchasers outside the State and if so what that amount was. It was further observed that the section did not contemplate any adjudication nor did it provide for making any order and on a reasonable interpretation of the impugned provision it was observed "that the power conferred under Section 12A (4) was unguided, uncanalised and uncontrolled." On the above reasoning the Court held that the provisions in Section 12A (4) were not a reasonable restriction on the fundamental right guaranteed under Article 19 (1) within the meaning of Article 19 (5).

tioners (the Madhya Pradesh Sales Tax Act) infringed Article 301 of the Constitution and did not come within the special provision of Article 304 (a). In all the petitions a prayer was made for refund of the taxes collected. The High Court allowed the prayer for refund in 24 applications but rejected the same in the other applications. This Court agreed with the decision of the High Court that the imposition of the tax contravened the provisions of Article 301 of the Constitution and was not within the saving provisions of Article 304 (a) and on that view observed that the payment was made under a mistake within Section 72 of the Indian Contract Act and so the government to whom the payment had been made must repay it. The tax provisions under which these taxes had been assessed and paid were declared void by the High Court of Madhya Pradesh in their decision in Mohammad Siddique v. State of M. P., on 17th January, 1956, (reported in AIR 1956 Madh Bha 214). The respondents claimed to have discovered their mistake in making the payments after they came to know of these decisions. Sixteen of the applications out of 31 were made to the High Court within three years from 17th January 1956 and the High Court took the view that this was not an unreasonable delay and in that view ordered refund. The High Court also ordered refund in seven other applications made more than three years eight months after the said 17th January, 1956.

47. This Court although of opinion that the High Court had power for the purpose of enforcement of fundamental rights and statutory rights to give consequential relief by ordering repayment of money realised by the Government without the authority of law, observed:

"At the same time we cannot lose sight of the fact that the special remedy provided in Article 226 is not intended to supersede completely the modes of obtaining relief by an action in a Civil Court or to deny defences legitimately open in such actions. It has been made clear more than once that the power to give relief under Article 226 is a discretionary power. This is specially true in the case of power to issue writs in the nature of mandamus. Among the several matters which the Courts rightly take into consideration in the exercise of that discretion is the delay made by the aggrieved party in seeking this special remedy and what excuse there is for it. Thus, where, as in these cases, a person comes to the Court for relief under Article 226 on the allegation that he has been assessed to tax under a void legislation and having paid it under a mistake is entitled to get it back, the Court, if it finds that the assessment was void, being made under a void provision of law, and the payment was made by mistake, is still not bound to exercise its discretion directing repayment. Whether repayment should be ordered in the exercise of this discretion will depend in each case on its own facts and circumstances. It is not easy nor is it desirable to lay down any rule of universal application. It may however be stated as a general rule that if there has been unreasonable delay the Court ought not ordinarily to lend its aid to a party by this extraordinary remedy of mandamus. Again, where even if there is no such delay the Government or the statutory authority against whom the consequential relief is prayed for raises a prima facie triable issue as regards the availability of such relief on the merits on grounds like limitation, the Court should ordinarily refuse to issue the writ of mandamus for such payment. In both these kinds of cases it will be sound use of discretion to leave the party to seek his remedy by the ordinary mode of action in a civil Court and to refuse to exercise in his favour the extraordinary remedy under Article 226 of the Constitution."

In (1965) 16 STC 689 (SC) the respondents after submitting returns under the Sales Tax Act for the period May 30, 1950 to March 31, 1951 showing a net turnover exceeding Rs. 23 lakhs and depositing necessary sales tax claimed a refund on the ground of having discovered their mistake soon after March 7, 1951. The petition to the Kerala High Court under Article 226 of the Constitution was opposed on behalf of the State on various grounds. Holding that money paid under a mistake of law was recoverable, this Court called for a finding from the Sales Tax Officer on the question whether the writ petition was within three years of the date on which the mistake first became known to the respondent so that a suit for refund on that date would not be barred under Article 96 of the Indian Limitation Act of 1908.

48. Speaking for myself I am not satisfied that the petitioners in this case had made a mistake in thinking that the money paid was due when in fact it was not due. As already noted, in their reply to the show cause notice dated February 7, 1958 the petitioners' case was that the threat of the sales tax authorities to forfeit the amount was without the authority of law and that the firm had agreed to the condition of refunding the amount received to its own customers under coercion even though in law the authorities were bound to refund without any such condition. The petitioners did not content themselves merely by opposing the claim of the sales tax authorities to forfeit the amount but suited their action to their belief by presenting a writ petition to Bombay High Court describing the order of forfeiture as without the authority of law and in violation of Article 19 (1) (g) and Article 265 of the Constitution and praying for the necessary reliefs. They did not accept the decision of the learned Single Judge of the Bombay High Court under Article 226 of the Constitution but filed their appeal raising practically the same contentions as they have done in the present petition except that they did not state having discovered any mistake on a perusal of the decision of any Court of law. The grounds of appeal to the Divisional Bench of the Bombay High Court are illustrative of the frame of mind and view point of the petitioners then. They complained about the violation of their fundamental rights, the illegality of the order of forfeiture and in particular mentioned the unreasonable restriction on their fundamental rights enshrined in Article 19 (1) (f) of the Constitution. Further, they had the benefit of the judgment of the appeal Bench of the Bombay High Court that the case was not being decided on the merits at all and even if there was any violation of the fundamental rights of the petitioners the exercise of discretion by the learned Single Judge would not be interfered with in appeal.

49. It was therefore clear to the petitioners that there was no adjudication as to their fundamental rights or the merits of their claim and there was nothing to prevent the petitioners then from coming up to this Court by preferring an appeal from the judgment of the Bombay High Court or by instituting a suit for declaration of the order of forfeiture illegal and ultra vires and for an injunction restraining the State from giving effect thereto. Before the Bombay High Court the petitioners questioned the legality of the order of forfeiture, and prayed for quashing it on the ground of the threatened invasion of their fundamental rights. On these facts it is idle to suggest that the petitioners ever entertained any belief or thought that the money was legally due from them. The way they asserted their position under the law precludes any inference that they were ever influenced by a mistake of law or that they ever failed to appreciate the correct position under the law. Even after the decision of the Bombay High Court they did not willingly pay up the amount forfeited but only made disbursements after an attachment had been levied on the business including the tenancy of the premises and its good-will. They protested against the order of forfeiture not only out of Court but in Court and only paid after the issue of a legal process.

50. It is therefore not possible to hold that the payments complained of following the order of forfeiture were made in mistake of law. They were payments under compulsion or coercion. A payment under coercion has to be treated in the same way for the purpose of a claim to refund as a payment under mistake of law, but there is an important distinction between the two. A payment under mistake of law may be questioned only when the mistake is discovered but a person who is under no misapprehension as to his legal rights and complains about the illegality or the ultra vires nature of the order passed against him can immediately after payment formulate his cause of action as one of payment under coercion.

51. The Limitation Acts do not in terms apply to claims against the State in respect of violation of fundamental rights. A person complaining of infraction of any such right has one of three courses open to him. He can either make an application under Article 226 of the Constitution to a High Court or he can make an application to this Court under Article 32 of the Constitution, or he can file a suit asking for appropriate reliefs. The decision of various High Courts in India have firmly laid down that in the matter of the issue of a writ under Article 226 the Courts have a discretion and may in suitable cases refuse to give relief to the person approaching it even though on the merits the applicant has a substantial complaint as regards violation of fundamental rights. Although the Limitation Act does not apply, the Courts have refused to give relief in cases of long unreasonable delay. As noted above in Bhailal Bhai's case, 1964-6 SCR 261= (AIR 1964 SC 1006) (supra), it was observed that the "maximum period fixed by the legislature as the time within which the relief by a suit in a civil court must be brought may ordinarily be taken to be a reasonable standard by which delay in seeking remedy under Article 226 can be measured." On the question of delay, we see no reason to hold that a different test ought to be applied when a party comes to this Court under Article 32 from one applicable to applications under Article 226. There is a public policy behind all statutes of limitation and according to Halsbury's Laws of England (Third Edition Vol. 24) Article 330 at Page 181:

"The Courts have expressed at least three different reasons supporting the existence of statutes of limitation, namely, (1) that long dormant claims have more of cruelty than justice in them, (2) that a defendant might have lost the evidence to disprove a stale claim and (3) that persons with good causes of action should pursue them with reasonable diligence."

52. In my view, a claim based on the infraction of fundamental rights ought not to be entertained if made beyond the period fixed by the Limitation Act for the enforcement of the right by way of suit. While not holding that the Limitation Act applies in terms I am of the view that ordinarily the period fixed by the Limitation Act should be taken to be a true measure of the time within which a person can be allowed to raise a plea successfully under Article 32 of the Constitution. Article 16 of the Limitation Act of 1908 fixed a period of one year for a suit against Government to recover money paid under protest in satisfaction of a claim made by the revenue authorities on account of arrears of revenue or on account of demands recoverable as such arrears, from the date when the payment was made. As an attachment was levied under Section 13 of the Bombay City Land Revenue Act II of 1876 it is a moot question as to whether the payments made in 1959 and 1960 in this case would not attract the said article of the Limitation Act of 1908. It was held by this Court in 1965-2 SCR 577=(AIR 1965 SC 1773) that the period of limitation for a suit to recover taxes illegally collected was governed by Article 62 of the Limitation Act of 1908 providing a space of three years from the date of payment. But taking the most favourable view of the petitioners' case Article 120 of the Limitation Act of 1908 giving a period of six years for the filing of a suit would apply to the petitioners' claim. The period of six years would have expired some time in 1966 but the Limitation Act of 1908 was repealed by the Limitation Act of 1963 and by Section 30 (a) of the Act of 1963 it was provided that:

"Notwithstanding anything contained in this Act—

(a) any suit for which the period of limitation is shorter than the period of limitation prescribed by the Indian Limitation Act, 1908, may be instituted within a period of five years next after the commencement of this Act, or within the period prescribed for such suit by the Indian Limitation Act, 1908, whichever period expires earlier:

(b) xx xx xx xx"

53. A claim for money paid under coercion would be covered by Article 113 of the Limitation Act, 1963 giving a period of three years from the first of January 1964 on which date the Act came into force. The period of limitation for a suit which was formerly covered by Article 120 of the Act of 1908 would in case like this be covered by Article 113 of the new Act and the suit in this case would have to be filed by the 1st January, 1967. As the petition to this Court was presented in February 1968 a suit, if filed, would have been barred and in my view the petitioners' claim in this case cannot be entertained having been preferred after the 1st of January, 1967. The facts negative any claim of payment under a mistake of law and are only consistent with a claim for money paid under coercion. As the petitioners have come to this Court long after the date when they could have properly filed a suit, the application must be rejected.

54. I may also note in brief another contention urged on behalf of the respondents that the present petition is barred by principles analogous to res judicata. It was contended by learned counsel for the respondents that the decisions of the Bombay High Court were speaking orders and even if the petition to the Bombay High Court had been dismissed in limine there would be a decision on the merits. I am unable to uphold this contention.

It was held in 1962-1 SCR 574= (AIR 1961 SC 1457), that when a petition under Article 226 is dismissed not on the merits but because of laches on the party applying for the writ or because an alternative remedy is available to him, such dismissal is no bar to the subsequent petition under Article 32 except in cases where the facts found by the High Court might themselves be relevant under Article 32. It was pointed out in Joseph v. State of Kerala, AIR 1965 SC 1514 that:

"Every citizen whose fundamental right is infringed by the State has a fundamental right to approach this Court for enforcing his right. If by a final decision of a competent Court his title to property has been negatived, he ceases to have the fundamental right in respect of that property and, therefore, he can no longer enforce it. In that context the doctrine of res judicata may be invoked. But where there is no such decision at all, there is no scope to call in its aid."

The judgment of the Bombay High Court in 1958 clearly shows that the merits of the petitioners' claim were not being examined. I can however find no merit in the contention that because there is an invasion of a fundamental right of a citizen he can be allowed to come to this Court, no matter how long after the infraction of his right he applies for relief. The Constitution is silent on this point; nor is there any statute of limitation expressly applicable, but nevertheless, on grounds of public policy I would hold that this Court should not lend its aid to a litigant even under Article 32 of the Constitution in case of an inordinate delay in asking for relief and the question of delay ought normally to be measured by the periods fixed for the institution of suits under the Limitation Acts.

55. The petition therefore fails and is dismissed with costs.

56. HEGDE, J.—I had the advantage of studying the judgments just delivered by my brothers Sikri, Bachawat and Mitter, JJ. The facts of the case are fully set out in those judgments. I shall not restate them.

57. I agree with the decision of Mitter, J., that to the facts of this case the rule laid down by this Court in 1962-1 SCR 574= (AIR 1961 SC 1457) is inapplicable. The principle underlying that decision as I understand, is that the right claimed by the petitioner therein had been negatived by a competent Court and that decision having become final as it was not appealed against, he could not agitate the same over again. It is in that context the principle of res judicata was relied on. A fundamental right can be sought to be enforced by a person who possesses that right. If a competent Court holds that he had no such right, that decision is binding on him. The binding character of judgments of Courts of competent jurisdiction is in essence a part of the rule of law on which administration of justice depends.

58. In view of the decision of this Court in 21 STC 174= (AIR 1963 SC 445) that Section 12A (4) of the Bombay Sales Tax Act, 1948 is violative of Article 19 (1) (f) of the Constitution on the grounds that that section did not lay down any procedure for ascertaining whether in fact the dealer concerned had collected any amount by way of tax from its purchasers outside the State and if so what amount that was; neither the section nor any rule framed under the Act contemplated any enquiry much less a reasonable enquiry in which the dealer complained of could plead and prove his case or satisfy the authorities that their assumptions were wholly or partly wrong and further the section also did not provide for any enquiry on disputed questions of fact or law or for making an order, it follows that the impugned collection was without the authority of law and consequently the same is an exaction resulting in the infringement of one of the proprietary rights of the petitioners guaranteed to them under Article 19 (1) (f) of the Constitution. Hence the petitioners have a fundamental right to approach this Court under Article 32 of our Constitution for appropriate relief and this Court has a duty to afford them appropriate relief. In Kahrak Singh v. The State of U. P., 1964-1 SCR 332 = (AIR 1963 SC 1205) Rajagopala Ayyangar, J., speaking for the majority observed that once it is proved to the satisfaction of this Court that by State action the fundamental right of a petitioner has been infringed it is not only the right but the duty of this Court under Article 32 to afford relief to him by passing appropriate orders in that behalf. The right given to the citizens to move this Court under Article 32 is itself a fundamental right and the same cannot be circumscribed or curtailed except as provided by the Constitution. It is inappropriate to equate the duty imposed on this Court to the powers of the Chancery Court in England or the equitable jurisdiction of the American Courts. A duty imposed by the Constitution cannot be compared with discretionary powers. Under Article 32 the mandate of the Constitution is clear and unambiguous and that mandate has to be obeyed. It must be remembered, as emphasized by several decisions of this Court that this Court is charged by the Constitution with the special responsibility of protecting and enforcing the fundamental rights under Part III of the Constitution. If I may with respect, borrow the felicitous language employed by Chief Justice Patanjali Sastri in State of Madras v. V. G. Rao, 1952 SCR 597 = (AIR 1952 SC 196) that as regards fundamental rights this Court has been assigned the role of a Sentinel on the qui vive. The anxiety of this Court not to whittle down the amplitude of the fundamental rights guaranteed has found expression in several of its judgments. It has not allowed its vision to be blurred by the fact that some of the persons who invoked its powers had no equity in their favour. It always took care to see that a bad case did not end in laying down a bad law. I am not unaware of the fact that the petitioners before us have no equity in their favour but that circumstance is irrelevant in deciding the nature of the right available to an aggrieved party under Article 32 of the Constitution.

59. All of us are unanimous on the question that the impugned collection amounts to an invasion of one of the fundamental rights guaranteed to the petitioners. Our difference primarily centres round the question whether their right to get relief under Article 32 is subject to any limitation or to be more accurate whether this Court has any discretion while exercising its jurisdiction under that Act? As mentioned earlier a right to approach this Court under Article 32 is itself a fundamental right. In that respect our Constitution makes a welcome departure from many other similar Constitutions. As seen earlier a party aggrieved by the infringement of any of its fundamental rights has a right to get relief at the hands of this Court and this Court has a duty to grant appropriate relief—see AIR 1965 SC 1514. The power conferred on this Court by that Article is not a discretionary power. This power is not similar to the power conferred on the High Courts under Article 226 of the Constitution. Hence laches on the part of an aggrieved party cannot deprive him of the right to get relief from this Court under Article 32. A Division Bench of the Bombay High Court in Kamalabai Harjivandas Parekh v. T. B. Desai, 67 Bom LR 85 = (AIR 1966 Bom 36) held that where a constitutional objection to the validity of a legislation is taken in a petition under Article 226, the question of mere delay will not affect the maintainability of that petition. Law reports do not show a single instance, where this Court had refused to grant relief to a petitioner in a petition under Article 32 on the ground of delay.

60. There has been some controversy whether an aggrieved party can waive his fundamental right. That question was elaborately considered in Basheshar Nath v. The Commissioner of Income Tax, Delhi, Rajasthan, (1959) Supp (1) SCR 528 = (AIR 1959 SC 149) by a Constitution Bench consisting of S. R. Das, C. J. and Bhagwati, S. K. Das, S. L. Kapur and Subba Rao, JJ. The learned Chief Justice and Kapur, J. held that there could be no waiver of a fundamental right founded on Article 14. Bhagwati and Subba Rao JJ. held that no fundamental right can be waived and S. K. Das, J. held that only such fundamental rights which are intended to the benefit of a party can be waived. I am mentioning all these aspects to show how jealously this Court has been resisting every attempt to narrow down the scope of the rights guaranteed under Part III of our Constitution.

61. Admittedly the provisions contained in the Limitation Act do not apply to proceedings under Article 226 or Art. 32. The Constitution makers wisely, if I may say with respect, excluded the application of those provisions to proceedings under Articles 226, 227 and 32 lest the efficacy of the constitutional remedies should be left to the tender mercies of the legislatures. This Court has laid down in I. C. Golaknath v. State of Punjab, 1967-2 SCR 762 = (AIR 1967 SC 1643) that the Parliament cannot by amending the Constitution abridge the fundamental rights conferred under Part III of the Constitution. If we are to bring in the provisions of Limitation Act by an indirect process to control the remedies conferred by the Constitution it would mean that what the Parliament cannot do directly it can do indirectly by curtailing the period of limitation for suits against the Government. We may console ourselves by saying that the provisions of the Limitation Act will have only persuasive value but they do not limit the power of this Court but the reality is bound to be otherwise. Very soon the line that demarcates the rule of prudence and binding rule is bound to vanish as has happened in the past. The fear that forgotten claims and discarded rights may be sought to be enforced against the Government after lapse of years if the fundamental rights are held to be enforceable without any time limit appears to be an exaggerated one. It is for the party who complains the infringement of any right to establish his right. As years roll on his task is bound to become more and more difficult. He can enforce only an existing right. A right may be lost due to an earlier decision of a competent court or due to various other reasons. If a right is lost for one reason or the other there is no right to be enforced. In this case we are dealing with an existing right even if it can be said that the petitioners' remedy under the ordinary law is barred. If the decision of Bachawat and Mitter, JJ. is correct, startling results are likely to follow. Let us take for example a case of a person who is convicted and sentenced to long period of imprisonment on the basis of a statute which had been repealed long before the alleged offence was committed. He comes to know the repeal of the statute long after the period prescribed for filing appeal expires. Under such a circumstance according to the decision of Bachawat and Mitter, JJ. he will have no right—the discretion of the Court apart—to move this Court for a writ of habeas corpus.

62. Our Constitution makers in their wisdom thought that no fetters should be placed on the right of an aggrieved party to seek relief from this Court under Article 32. A comparison of the language of Article 226 with that of Article 32 will show that while under Article 226 a discretionary power is conferred on the High Courts the mandate of the Constitution is absolute so far as the exercise of this Court's power under Article 32 is concerned. Should this Court an institution primarily created for the purpose of safeguarding the fundamental rights guaranteed under Part III of the Constitution, narrow down those rights? The implications of this decision are bound to be far-reaching. It is likely to pull down from the high pedestal now occupied by the fundamental rights to the level of other civil rights. I am apprehensive that this decision may mark an important turning point in downgrading the fundamental rights guaranteed under the Constitution. I am firmly of the view that a relief asked for under Article 32 cannot be refused on the ground of laches. The provision of the Limitation Act have no relevance either directly or indirectly to proceedings under Article 32. Considerations which are relevant in proceedings under Article 226 are wholly out of place in a proceeding like the one before us. The decisions of this Court referred to in the judgment of Bachawat and Mitter, JJ. where this Court has taken into consideration the laches on the part of the petitioners are not apposite for our present purpose. None of those cases deal with proceedings under Article 32 of the Constitution. The rule enunciated by this Court in 1964-6 SCR 261 = (AIR 1964 SC 1006) is only applicable to proceedings under Art. 226. At page 271 of the report Das Gupta, J. who spoke for the Court specifically referred to this aspect when he says:

"that it has been made clear more than once that power to relief under Art. 226 is a discretionary power".

Therefore those decisions are of no assistance to us in deciding the present case. Once it is held that the power of this Court under Article 32 is a discretionary power—that in my opinion is the result of the decision of Bachawat and Mitter, JJ.—then it follows that this Court can refuse relief under Article 32 on any one of the grounds on which relief under Article 226 can be refused. Such a conclusion militates not only against the plain words of Article 32 but also the lofty principle underlying that provision. The resulting position is that the right guaranteed under that Article would cease to be a fundamental right.

63. Assuming that the rule enunciated by this Court in Sales Tax Officer v. Kanhaiya Lal Makund Lal Saraf, 1959 SCR 1350 = (AIR 1959 SC 135) and further refined by this Court in 1964-6 SCR 261 = (AIR 1964 SC 1006) can apply to the facts of this case even then I am of opinion that the petitioners are entitled to the relief that they have asked for. As could be gathered from the decision of Bachawat and Mitter JJ., the Bombay High Court did not decide the merits of the case in the writ petition filed by the petitioners. In that petition the Court refused to exercise its discretion in favour of the petitioners. The grounds on which the petitioners challenged the validity of Section 12-A (4) of the Bombay Sales Tax Act, 1946 before the High Court of Bombay have now been found to be unsustainable by Gujarat High Court in (1965) 16 STC 973 (SC). In the appeal against that decision this Court did not examine those grounds. It struck down S. 12A(4) on a wholly different ground, a ground not put forward by the petitioners in their writ petition before the Bombay High Court. A mere impression of a party that a provision of law may be ultra vires the Constitution cannot be equated to knowledge that the provision is invalid. Hope and desire are not the same things as knowledge. A law passed by a competent legislature is bound to be presumed to be valid until it is struck down by a competent court. The fact after a futile attempt to get the provision in question declared invalid the petitioners gave up their fight and submitted to the law which was apparently valid is no proof of the fact that they knew that the provision in question is invalid. As seen earlier that none of the grounds urged by the petitioners in support of their contention that the provision in question is invalid has been accepted by any court till now. Under these circumstances I see no justification to reject the plea of the petitioners that they became aware of the provision only after the decision of this Court in Kantilal Babulal's case, 21 STC 174 = (AIR 1968 SC 445) (supra) which decision was rendered on September 29, 1967. This petition was filed very soon thereafter. Hence this case under any circumstance falls within the rule laid down by this Court in Bhailal Bhai's case, 1964-6 SCR 261 (supra).

64. For the reasons mentioned above I allow this petition and grant the relief prayed for by the petitioners.

ORDER

65. In accordance with the opinion of the majority, the petition fails and is dismissed with costs.

Petition dismissed.

AIR 1970 SUPREME COURT 919 (V 57 C 192)

(From: Industrial Tribunal — Delhi)*
J. C. SHAH, V. RAMASWAMI AND
A. N. GROVER, JJ.

The Delhi Cloth and General Mills Co. Ltd. etc., Appellants v. The Workmen and others etc., Respondents.

Civil Appeals Nos. 2168, 2569 of 1966, 76, 123 and 560 of 1967, D/- 27-9-1968.

(A) Industrial Disputes Act (1947), Third Sch. Item 5 — Gratuity — Agreement between management of company and workmen — Held Industrial Tribunal was not incompetent to grant gratuity if the company acquired financial stability.

After the dispute was referred to the Industrial Tribunal, there were negotiations between the management and workmen represented by the Unions and an agreement was reached. Clause relating to the claim for gratuity read:

"The workmen agree not to claim any further increase in wages, basic or dearness, or make any other demand involving financial burdens on the company either on their initiative or as a result of any award till such time as the working of the mills results in profits." But in making the final award the Tribunal did not specifically refer to the settlement.

Held that the terms of the settlement clearly showed that if it be found that the company had acquired financial stability, it will be liable to pay gratuity to the workmen. It was not intended by the parties that the adjudication proceedings against the company should be dropped and after the company became financially stable a fresh claim should be made by the workmen on which a reference may be made by the Government for adjudication of the claim for gratuity against the company. The tribunal was not incompetent to determine the gratuity payable to the workmen of the company. (Para 12)

(B) Industrial Disputes Act (1947), Third Schedule Item 5 — Gratuity — Region-cum-industry principle or unit-wise basis can be adopted according to requirements of each case.

Region-cum-industry principle cannot be adopted in all cases in fixing the rates of gratuity. Rates of gratuity can be fixed unitwise also according to the circumstances.

* (I. D. No. 70 of 1958, D/- 30-6-1966 — Industrial Tribunal, Delhi.)

Where the tribunal observed: "If a common scheme is framed for the entire textile industry of Delhi i. o. for all the four units the quantum of benefits under that scheme will naturally have to be much lower in consideration of the financial condition of the Ajudhia Textile Mill, than if a unitwise scheme is framed. Moreover in a common scheme of gratuity the quantum of benefits to be provided will have to be lower than the benefits already available to workmen in the D. C. M. and S. B. M. units for the most important contingencies for which gratuity benefits are meant, namely death and retirement on account of physical or mental incapacity. Such a lowering of the quantum of benefits would not be desirable as it would create legitimate discontent."

Held that no serious objection might be raised against the reasons set out by the Tribunal in support of the view that unitwise approach should be adopted in the reference before it and not the region-cum-industry approach. AIR 1960 SC 833 and AIR 1963 SC 839 and AIR 1962 SC 673, Rel. on. (Para 14)

(C) Industrial Disputes Act (1947), Third Sch. Item 5 — Gratuity — Gratuity scheme can be effective though not accompanied by the fixation of the age of superannuation for the workmen in the industry. (Para 15)

(D) Industrial Disputes Act (1947), Section 10 — Reference not referring to fixing of age of superannuation — Tribunal is incompetent to do so.

By the express terms of reference the Tribunal was called upon to adjudicate on the question of fixation of gratuity; there was no reference either expressly or by implication to the fixation of the age of superannuation.

Held that in the absence of any reference relating to the fixation of the age of superannuation, the Tribunal was not competent to fix the age of superannuation. An enquiry into the question of fixing the age of superannuation did not arise out of the terms of reference. No such claim was made by workmen and even in the written statement filed by the employers no direct reference was made to the fixation of the age of superannuation, nor was there any plea that before framing a gratuity scheme the Tribunal should provide for the age of superannuation. Fixation of the age of superannuation was not incidental to the framing of the gratuity scheme. (Para 16)

(E) Industrial Disputes Act (1947), Third Sch. Item 5 — Gratuity — Object of.

Gratuity in its etymological sense means a gift especially for services rendered or return for favours received. For some time in the early stages in the adjudication of industrial disputes, gratuity was treated as a gift made by the employer at his pleasure and the workmen had no right to claim it. But since then there has been a long line of precedents in which it has been ruled that a claim for gratuity is a legitimate claim which the workmen may make and which in appropriate cases may give rise to an industrial dispute. Gratuity paid to workmen is intended to help them after retirement on superannuation, death, retirement, physical incapacity, disability or otherwise. The object of providing a gratuity scheme is to provide a retiring benefit to workmen who have rendered long and unblemished service to the employer and thereby contributed to the prosperity of the employer. It is one of the efficiency devices, and is considered necessary for an orderly and human elimination from industry of superannuated or disabled employees who, but for such retiring benefits, would continue in employment even though they function inefficiently. It is not paid to an employee gratuitously or merely as a matter of boon. AIR 1907 SC 1280 and AIR 1962 SC 673 and AIR 1960 SC 833, Rel. oo. (Paras 17, 18)

(F) Industrial Disputes Act (1947), Third Sch. Item 5 — Gratuity — Whether should be computed not on the consolidated wage but only on basic wage — (1957) 2 Lab LJ 420 (LATI-Bom), Overruled; Award of Industrial Tribunal, Delhi in I. D. No. 70 of 1958, D/- 30-6-1960, Reversed.

In determining the scope of an industrial reference it cannot be held that the words used either in the claim advanced or in the order of reference made by the Government under Section 10 of the Industrial Disputes Act must of necessity have the meaning they have under the Industrial Disputes Act. Merely because the expression 'wages' includes dearness allowance within the meaning of the Industrial Disputes Act, the Tribunal is not obliged to base a gratuity scheme on consolidated wages. Normally gratuity is based not on the consolidated wage but on basic wage. The Tribunal is not justified in introducing a fundamental change in the concept of a benefit granted to the workmen in the textile industry all over the country by numerous schemes. The appropriate remedy is to introduce reservations protecting benefits already acquired and to frame a scheme consistent with the normal pattern prevailing in the industry. (Paras 20, 22)

If all over the country in the textile centres payment of gratuity is related to the basic wages and not on consolidated wages, any innovation in the Delhi region is likely to give rise to serious industrial disputes in other centres all over the country. If maintenance of industrial peace is a governing principle of industrial adjudication, it would be wise to maintain a reasonable degree of uniformity in the diverse units all over the country and not to make a fundamental departure from the prevailing pattern. Case law discussed. (1957) 2 Lab LJ 426 (LATI—Bom.), Overruled; (1962) 1 Lab LJ 388 (SC) not regarded as effective precedent — Award of Industrial Tribunal, Delhi in I. D. No. 70 of 1958, D/-30-6-1966, Reversed. (Para 32)

(G) Industrial Disputes Act (1947), Section 15 — Duty of Tribunal stated.

In adjudication of industrial disputes settled legal principles have little play; the awards made by industrial tribunals are often the result of ad hoc determination of disputed questions, and each determination forms a precedent for determination of other disputes. An attempt to search for principle from the law built upon those precedents is a futile exercise. In the branch of law relating to industrial relations the temptation to be crusaders instead of adjudicators must be firmly resisted. (1960) 363 US 593, Rel. on. (Paras 23, 24)

(H) Industrial Disputes Act (1947), Third Sch. Item 5 — Gratuity — Conditions for grant of, stated.

There is undoubtedly no statutory direction for payment of gratuity as it is in respect of provident fund and retrenchment compensation. The conditions for the grant of gratuity are: (i) financial capacity of the employer; (ii) his profit making capacity; (iii) the profits earned by him in the past; (iv) the extent of his reserves; (v) the chances of his replenishing them; and (vi) the claim for capital invested by him. But these are not exhaustive and there may be other material considerations which may have to be borne in mind in determining the terms and conditions of the gratuity scheme. Existence of other retiring benefits such as provident fund and retrenchment compensation or other benefits do not destroy the claim to gratuity; its quantum may however have to be adjusted in the light of the other benefits. (Para 26)

(I) Industrial Disputes Act (1947), Third Sch. Item 5 — Gratuity — Termination of employment on ground of misconduct — When gratuity should be granted.

In a case of termination of employment on ground of misconduct a distinction should be made between technical misconduct which leaves no trial of indiscipline, misconduct resulting in damage to the employer's property which may be compensated by forfeiture of gratuity or part thereof and serious misconduct which though not directly causing damage such as acts of violence against the management or other employees or riotous or disorderly behaviour, in or near the place of employment is conducive to grave indiscipline. The first should involve no forfeiture; the second may involve forfeiture of an amount equal to the loss directly suffered by the employer in consequence of the misconduct and the third may entail forfeiture of gratuity due to the workmen. (Para 35)

(J) Industrial Disputes Act (1947), Third Sch. Item 5 — Gratuity — Voluntary retirement — Qualifying length of service for voluntary retirement should be 10 years. (Paras 36, 37)

(K) Industrial Disputes Act (1947), Third Sch. Item 5 — Gratuity — Badli workmen — Period of work.

The direction that gratuity shall be paid to Badli workmen for only those years in which a workman has worked for 240 days is correct. As gratuity is to be paid for service rendered merely because for maintaining his name on the record of the Badli workmen, a workman is required to attend the Mills he cannot be deemed to have rendered service and cannot on that account be entitled to claim gratuity. (Para 38)

(L) Industrial Disputes Act (1947), Third Sch. Item 5 — Gratuity — Scheme — Expression 'average of the basic wage' — Meaning.

The expression "average of the basic wage" can only mean the wage earned by a workman during a month divided by the number of days for which he has worked and multiplied by 26 in order to arrive at the monthly wage for the computation of gratuity payable.

(Para 39)

(M) Industrial Disputes Act (1947), Third Sch. Item 5 — Gratuity — Reference in 1958 — Award by Tribunal given effect to from 1-1-1964 — Held giving the scheme effect before January 1, 1964, might rake up cases in which the workmen had left the establishments many years ago — It would not be conducive to industrial peace to allow such questions to be raised after long delay.

(Para 40)

(N) Industrial Disputes Act (1947), Third Sch. Item 5 — Gratuity — Uniformity in fixation of gratuity — Duty of legislature.

A departure made from the prevailing pattern in one region is likely to give rise to claims all over the country for modification of the gratuity schemes in operation, and have been accepted as fixing the basis gratuity schemes. If, having regard to the deteriorating value of the rupee, it is thought necessary that more generous benefits should be available to the workmen by way of gratuity, the remedy lies not before the adjudicators or the courts, but before the legislative branch of the State. Even in respect of gratuity a reasonably uniform scheme may be evolved by the Legislatures which could prevent resort to the adjudicators in respect of this complicated matter of dispute between the employers and the employees. It may not be difficult to evolve a scheme which would meet the legitimate claims of both the employers and the employees.

(Para 42)

Cases Referred: Chronological Paras

(1969) AIR 1969 SC 182 (V 56) =

Civil Appeal No. 1934 of 1967,

D/- 30-4-1968, Hydro (Engineers)

Private Ltd. v. Workmen 36

(1968) 1968-2 Lab LJ 542 = (1963)

1 SCR 164, Remington Rand of

India Ltd. v. The Workmen 27, 35

(1967) AIR 1967 SC 678 (V 54) =

(1967) 2 Lab LJ 94, May and

Baker (India) Ltd. v. Their

Workmen 27

(1967) AIR 1967 SC 913 (V 54) =

(1967) 1 Lab LJ 114, Hindustan

Antibiotics Ltd. v. Their Work-

men 27

(1967) AIR 1967 SC 1286 (V 54) =

(1967) 2 Lab LJ 1, Calcutta Insurance Ltd. v. Their Workmen 13

(1966) AIR 1966 SC 732 (V 53) =

1968-1 Lab LJ 407, British Paints

(India) Ltd. v. Its Workmen 27, 36

(1965) AIR 1965 SC 839 (V 52) =

(1965) 1 Lab LJ 453, Burhanpur

Tapti Mills Ltd. v. Burhanpur Tapti

Mills Mazdoor Sangh 8, 14, 15

(1965) 1965-2 Lab LJ 139 = (1965)

11 Fac LR 4 (SC), Motipur

Zamindari (P.) Ltd. v. Their

Workmen 34, 35

(1965) 1965-2 Lab LJ 556 = (1965)

10 Fac LR 244, British India Corporation v. Its Workmen 27.

(1964) AIR 1964 SC 864 (V 51) =

(1963) 2 Lab LJ 403, Wenger and

Co. v. Their Workmen 8, 35, 36

(1964) 1964-1 Lab LJ 638, (Industrial

Tri.—Mad.), Coimbatore District

Mill Workers' Union v. Raja-lakshmi Mill Ltd. 29

(1962) AIR 1962 SC 673 (V 49) =

(1961) 1 Lab LJ 513, Carment

Cleaning Works v. Its Work-

men 14, 18, 34, 35.

(1962) 1962-1 Lab LJ 888 = (1962)

Supp 3 SCR 516, D. C. M. Chemical Works v. Its Workmen 30

(1960) AIR 1960 SC 251 (V 47) =

(1959) 2 Lab LJ 830, Indian Hume

Pipe Co. Ltd. v. Their Work-

men 8, 36

(1960) AIR 1960 SC 833 (V 47) =

(1960) 3 SCR 329, Bharatkhand

Textile Manufacturing Co. Ltd.

v. Textile Labour Association,

Ahmedabad 14, 28, 23

(1960) 363 U S 593 = 4 Law Ed.

2nd 1424, United Steel Workers of America v. Enterprise Wheel and Car Corporation 24

(1958) 1958-1 Lab LJ 349 (Industrial

Tri.—Bom), Textile Labour

Association, Ahmedabad v.

Ahmedabad Millowners' Association 23, 34

(1957) 1957-2 Lab LJ 426 (LATI —Bom.), Rajalakshmi Mill Ltd.

v. Their Workmen 23

(1957) 1957 Industrial Court Rep.

561, Rashtriya Mill Mazdoor

Sangh, Bombay v. Millowners'

Association, Bombay 23, 34

Mr. S. T. Desai, Senior Advocate (M/s.

Rameshwar Nath and Mahinder Narain,

Advocates of M/s. Rajinder Narain and

Co. with him), for Appellant (In C. A.

No. 2163 of 1966 and Respondents Nos.

1 and 2 — As. Nos. 123 & 560 of 1967),

M/s. H. R. Gokhale and A. K. Sen, Senior Advocate (Mr. R. P. Kapur, Advocate for Mr. I. N. Shroff, Advocate with them), for Appellant (In C. A. No. 2569 of 1966 and Respondent No. 3 in C. As. Nos. 123 and 560 of 1967); Mr. B. Sen, Senior Advocate (Mr. I. D. Gupta, Advocate, and Mr. M. N. Shroff, Advocate for Mr. I. N. Shroff, Advocate with him), for Appellant (In C. A. No. 76 of 1967); M/s. M. K. Ramamurthi, Madan Mohan, Mrs. Shyamala Pappu and Mr. Vineet Kumar Advocates, for Appellant; (In C. A. No. 123 of 1967), Respondents Nos. 1 (a) and 4 (a), (In C. A. No. 2168 of 1966), Respondent No. 1 (In C. A. No. 2569 of 1966), Respondent No. 1 (In C. A. No. 76 of 1967) and Respondent No. 5 (In C. A. No. 560 of 1967); M/s. V. C. Parashar and O. P. Sharma, Advocates, for Appellant (In C. A. No. 560 of 1967) Respondents Nos. 1 (b) and 4 (b) (In C. A. No. 2168 of 1966), Respondent No. 2 (In C. A. No. 2569 of 1966) and Respondent No. 2 (In C. A. No. 76 of 1967).

The following Judgment of the Court was delivered by

SHAH, J.: These appeals arise out of an award made by the Industrial Tribunal, Delhi, in I. D. Reference No. 70 of 1958: the first three appeals are filed by the employers, and the last two by the employees. By its award the Industrial Tribunal, Delhi, has framed two schemes relating to payment of gratuity to the workmen employed in four textile units in the Delhi region. The employers and the workmen are dissatisfied with the schemes and they have filed these appeals challenging certain provisions of the schemes.

2. In the Delhi region there are four textile units: the Delhi Cloth Mills—which will be referred to as D. C. M.; Swatantra Bharat Mills—which will be referred to as S. B. M.; Birla Cotton Mills—which will be referred to as B. C. M.; and Ajudhia Textile Mills—which will be referred to as A. T. M. The D. C. M. and S. B. M. are under one management. On March 4, 1958 the Chief Commissioner of Delhi made a reference under Sections 10 (1) (d) and 12 (5) of the Industrial Disputes Act, 1947, relating to four matters in dispute, first of which is as follows:

"Whether a gratuity for retirement benefit scheme should be introduced for all workmen on the following lines and what directions are necessary in this respect?

1. for service less than .. Nil
5 years
2. for service between .. 15 days'
5-10 years wages for every year of service
3. for service between .. 21 days'
10-15 years wages for every year of service
4. for service over 15 .. one month's years wages for every year of service."

The reference related to workmen only and did not apply to the clerical staff or mistries.

3. There are two workmen's Unions in the Delhi region—the Kapra Mazdoor Ekta Union—hereinafter called 'Ekta Union', and the other, the Textile Mazdoor Union. The Ekta Union made a claim principally for fixation of gratuity in addition to the benefit of provident fund admissible to the workmen under the Employees' Provident Funds Act, to be computed on the consolidated wages inclusive of dearness allowance. The Ekta Union submitted by its statement of claim that a gratuity scheme based on the region-cum-industry principle i. e. a uniform scheme applicable to all the four units be framed. The Textile Mazdoor Union also supported the claim for the framing of a gratuity scheme on the basis of the consolidated wages of workmen but claimed that the scheme should be unit-wise. At the trial, it appears that both the Unions pressed for a unit-wise scheme of gratuity.

4. The Tribunal entered upon the reference in respect of the fixation of gratuity scheme in February 1964 and made an award on June 30, 1966, operative from January 1, 1964. The award was published on August 4, 1966. By the award two schemes were framed—one relating to the D. C. M. and S. B. M., and another relating to the B. C. M. and A. T. M. Under the second scheme the digit by which the number of completed year of service was to be multiplied in determining the total gratuity was smaller than the digit applicable in the case of the D. C. M. and the S. B. M. The distinction was made between the two sets of units, because the D. C. M. and S. B. M. were, in the view of the Tribunal more prosperous units than the

B. C. M. and A. T. M. The A. T. M., it was found was a new-comer in the field of textile manufacture, and had for many years been in financial difficulties.

5. The D. C. M. employs more than 8000 workmen in its textile unit; the S. B. M. has on its roll 5000 workmen; the B. C. M. has 6271 workmen and the A. T. M. has 1500 workmen. The D. C. M. and S. B. M. have a common retirement benefit scheme in operation since the year 1940. Under the scheme gratuity payable to workmen is determined by the length of service before retirement. The scheme of gratuity in operation in the D. C. M. and S. B. M. is as follows:

"In case of retirement from service of the Mills as a result of physical disability due to overage or on account of death after a minimum of seven years' service in the concern:

7 years	Rs. 350/-
8 years	Rs. 425/-
9 years	Rs. 500/-
10 years	Rs. 575/-
11 years	Rs. 650/-
12 years	Rs. 725/-
13 years	Rs. 800/-
14 years	Rs. 875/-
15 years	Rs. 950/-
16 years	Rs. 1050/-
17 years	Rs. 1150/-
18 years	Rs. 1250/-
19 years	Rs. 1350/-
20 years	Rs. 1500/-

The scale of gratuity, it is clear, is independent of the individual wage scale of the workman. In the B. C. M. and A. T. M. units there are no such schemes.

6. Till the year 1958 there were no standardised wages in the textile industry. According to the Report of the Central Wage Board for the Cotton Textile Industry which was published on November 22, 1959, there were in India 39 regions in which the textile industry was located. The basic monthly wages of the workmen in the year 1958 varied between Rs. 18/- in Patna and Rs. 30/- in various centres like Bombay, Indore, Madras, Coimbatore, Madurai, Bhiwani, Hissar, Ludhiana, Cannanore and certain regions in Rajasthan and Delhi. The Wage Board recommended in Paragraph 106 of its Report:

"The Board has come to the conclusion that an increase at the average rate of Rs. 8 per month per worker shall be given to all workers in mills of category I, from 1st January, 1960, and a further flat increase of Rs. 2 per month per worker shall be given to them from 1st January, 1962. Likewise an increase at the average rate of Rs. 6 per month per worker shall be given to all the workers in mills of category II from 1st January, 1960, and a further flat increase of Rs. 2 per month per worker shall be given to them from 1st January, 1962. These increases are subject to the condition that the said sums of Rs. 8 and Rs. 6 shall ensure not less than Rs. 7 and Rs. 5 respectively to the lowest paid, and that the increase of Rs. 2 from 1st January, 1962 shall be flat for all."

Category I included the Delhi region. Since January 1, 1962, the basic minimum wage in the Delhi region is, therefore, Rs. 40/- according to the recommendations of the Wage Board. In Bombay City and Island (including Kurla), the basic wage, according to the Report of the Wage Board, was also Rs. 30/- and by the addition of Rs. 10 the basic wage of a workman came to Rs. 40. The workmen in other important textile centres also get the same rates.

7. The Tribunal was of the view that the average basic wage of the workman is Rs. 60/- since the implementation of the Wage Board in the Delhi region. No argument was advanced before this Court challenging the correctness of that assumption; by the employers or the workmen. It was also common ground that practically uniform basic wage levels prevail in all the large textile centres like Bombay, Ahmedabad, Coimbatore and Indore.

8. Besides the basic wage the workmen receive dearness allowance under diverse awards made by the Industrial Tribunals which "seek to neutralize the cost of living index." There is also a provident fund scheme under the Employees' Provident Funds Act, 1952, whereunder 8 1/3% of the basic wage and the dearness allowance and the retaining allowance for the time being in force is contributed by the employees. Besides, there is a right to retrenchment compensation under the Industrial Disputes Act, 1947 (S. 25 FFF) and the Employees Insurance Scheme. In view of the observations of this Court in Burhanpur Tapti Mills Ltd. v. Burhanpur Tapti Mills Mazdoor Sangh, (1965) 1 Lab LJ 453 = (AIR 1965 SC 839), that "It is no longer open to doubt that a scheme of gratuity can be introduced in concerns where there already exist other schemes such as provident fund or retrenchment compensation. This has been ruled in a number of cases of this Court and recently again in Wenger and Co. v. Their Workmen, (1963) 2 Lab LJ 403 = (AIR 1964 SC 864) and Indian Hume Pipe Co. Ltd. v. Their Workmen, (1959) 2 Lab LJ 830 = (AIR 1960 SC 251). It is held in these cases that although provident fund and gratuity are benefits available at retirement they are not the same and one can exist with the other", no serious argument was advanced that the existence of these additional benefits disentitled the workmen to obtain benefits under a gratuity scheme if the employer is able to meet the additional burden.

9. But on behalf of all the employers it was urged that (1) in determining the quantum of gratuity, basic wage alone could be taken into account and not the consolidated wage; and (2) it was necessary for the Tribunal to fix when introducing a gratuity scheme the age of superannuation. On behalf of the D. C. M., S. B. M. and B. C. M. it was urged in addition that a uniform scheme applicable to the entire industry on the region-cum-industry basis should have been adopted and not a scheme or schemes applicable to individual units. On behalf of the A. T. M. it was urged that its financial condition is not and has never been stable and the burden of payment of gratuity to workmen dying or disabled or on voluntary retirement from service or when their employment is terminated is excessive and the Unit was unable, to bear that burden. It was also urged on behalf of the A. T. M. that in view of a settlement which was reached between the management and workmen it was not open to the Tribunal to ignore that settlement and to impose a scheme for payment of gratuity in favour of the workmen in this reference.

10. While broadly supporting the award of the Tribunal the workmen claim certain modifications. They claim that a shorter period of qualifying service for workmen voluntarily retiring should be provided and gratuity should be worked out by the application of a larger multiple of days for each completed year of service; that the ceiling of gratuity should be related to a larger number of months' wages; that gratuity should be awarded for dismissal even for misconduct; that provision should be made for payment of gratuity to Badli workmen irrespective of the number of days for which they work in a year; that the expression "average of the basic wage" should be appropriately clarified to avoid disputes in the implementation of the gratuity scheme, and that the award should be made operative not from January 1, 1964, but from the date of the reference to the Tribunal.

11. The two schemes which have been framed may be set out:

ANNEXURE 'A'

"Gratuity scheme applicable to the Delhi Cloth Mills and the Swatantra Bharat Mills.

Gratuity will be payable to the employees concerned, in this reference, on the scale and subject to the conditions laid down below:

1. On the death of employee while in the service of the mill company or on his becoming physically or mentally incapacitated for further service:

- (a) After 5 years' continuous ... 12 days wages for service and less than each completed 10 years' service year of service.
- (b) After continuous service of ... 15 days' wages for each completed 10 years. year of service.

"The gratuity will be paid in each case under Clauses 1 (a) and 1 (b) to the employees, his heirs or executors, or nominee as the case may be:

Provided that in no case will an employee, who is in service on the date on which this scheme is brought into operation, be paid an amount less than what he would have been entitled to under the pre-existing scheme of the Employees' Benefit Fund Trust.

(ii) Provided further that the maximum payment to be made shall not exceed the equivalent of 15 months wages.

(iii) Provided further that gratuity under this scheme will not be payable to any employee who has already received gratuity under the pre-existing scheme of the Employees' Benefit Fund Trust.

- 2. On voluntary retirement or ... 15 days' wages resignation after 15 years' for each completed service. year of service.

Provided that the maximum payment to be made shall not exceed the equivalent of 15 months' wages.

- 3. On termination of service ... As in Clauses 1(a) on any ground whatsoever and 1 (b) above. except on the ground of misconduct.

Provided that the maximum payment to be made shall not exceed the equivalent of 15 months' wages.

4. Definitions:

(a) "Wages"

The term "wages" in the scheme will mean the average of the basic wage plus the dearness allowance drawn during the 12 months next preceding death, incapacitation, voluntary retirement, resignation or termination of service and will not include overtime wages.

(b) "Basic wages"

The term "basic wage" will have the meaning as defined in paragraph 110 of the Report of the First Central Wage Board for Cotton Textile Industry.

(c) "Continuous service"

"Continuous service" means un-interrupted service and includes service which may be interrupted on account of sickness authorised leave, strike which is not illegal, lockout, or cessation of work which is not due to any fault on the part of the employee:

Provided that interruption in service upto six months' duration at any one time and 18 months' duration in the aggregate of the nature other than those specified above shall not cause the employee to lose the credit for previous service in the mills for the purpose of calculation of gratuity, but at the same time shall not entitle him to claim benefit of gratuity for period of such interruption. Service for the purposes of gratuity will include service under the previous management whether in the particular mill or other sister mill under the same management.

(d) "Resignation"

The word "resignation" will include abandonment of service by an employee provided he submits his resignation within a period of three months from the first day of absence without leave.

(e) "Length of service"

For counting "length of service" fraction of a year exceeding six months shall count as one full year, and six months or less shall be ignored.

5. "Application for gratuity"

Any person eligible to claim payment of gratuity under this scheme shall, so far as possible, send a written application to the employer within a period of six months from the date its payment becomes due.

6. "Payment of gratuity"

The employer shall pay the amount of gratuity to employee and in the event of his death before the payment to the person or persons entitled to it under clause 1 above within a period of 90 days of the claim being presented to the employer and found valid.

7. "Claims by persons who are no longer in service"

Claims by persons who are no longer in service of the Company on the date of the publication of this award shall not be entertained unless the claims are preferred within six months from the date of publication of this award.

8. "Badli service"

Gratuity shall be paid for only those years of Badli service in which the employee has worked for not less than 240 days.

9. "Proof of incapacity"

In proof of physical or mental incapacity it will be necessary to produce a certificate from any one of the Medical Authorities out of a panel to be jointly drawn up by the parties.

10. "Nomination"

(a) Each employee shall, within six months from the date of the publication of this award make a nomination conferring the right to receive the amount of gratuity that may be due to him in the event of his death, before payment has been made.

(b) A nomination made under sub-clause (a) above may, at any time, be modified by the employee after giving a written notice of his intention of doing so. If the nominee pre-deceases the employee, the interest of the nominee shall revert to the employee who may make a fresh nomination in respect of such interest.

ANNEXURE 'B'

Gratuity scheme applicable to the Birla Cotton Spg. & Wvg. Mills and the Ajudhia Textile Mills.

Gratuity will be payable to the employees concerned in this reference, on the scale and subject to the conditions laid down below:—

1. On the death of an employee while in the service of the Mill company or on his becoming physically or mentally incapacitated for further service:

(a) After 5 years' continuous service and less than 10 years' service.

One-fourth month's wages for each completed year of service.

(b) After continuous service of 10 years.

One-third month's wages for each completed year of service.

"The gratuity will be paid in each case under Clauses 1 (a) and 1 (b) to the employee, his heirs or executors, or nominee, as the case may be.

Provided that the maximum payment to be made shall not exceed the equivalent of 12 months' wages.

2. On voluntary retirement, ... On the same or resignation after 15 scale as in cl. 1 (b) yca s' service. above.

Provided that the maximum payment to be made shall not exceed the equivalent of 12 months' wages.

3. On termination of service ... As in clauses 1 (a) by the employer for any and 1 (b) above. reason whatsoever except on the ground of misconduct.

Provided that the maximum payment to be made shall not exceed the equivalent of 12 months' wages."

[Clauses 4 to 10 of Annexure 'B' are the same as in Annexure 'A' and need not be reported.]

Whether against the A.T.M. the Tribunal was incompetent to make an award framing a scheme for payment of gratuity may first be considered. Counsel for the A. T. M. urged that there was a settlement between the workmen and the management of the A. T. M. in consequence of which the Tribunal was incompetent to make an award. The facts on which reliance was placed are these. After the dispute was referred to the Industrial Tribunal, there were negotiations between the management of the A. T. M. and workmen represented by the two Unions and an agreement was reached, the terms whereof were recorded in writing. Clauses 6 and 11 (4) of the agreement relate to the claim for gratuity:

"6 The workmen agree not to claim any further increase in wages, basic or dearness, or make any other demand involving financial burdens on the Company either on their initiative or as a result of any award, till such time as the working of the mills results in profits.

11. The parties hereto agree to jointly withdraw in terms of this settlement, the following pending cases and proceedings before the Courts, Tribunals and Authorities and more especially—

x x x x x x x
(4) With regard to I. D. No. 70 of 1953 the workers agree not to claim any benefits that may be granted under the above reference by the Hon'ble Industrial Tribunal in case the award is given in favour of the workmen, subject to Cl. 7 above.

(It is common ground that reference to Clause 7 is erroneous: it should be to Clause 6.)"

The workmen and the management of the unit submitted an application before the Tribunal on December 28, 1959, admitting that there had been an "overall settlement" of all the pending disputes between the management of A. T. M. and its workmen represented by the two Unions, and requested that an interim award be made in terms of the agreement insofar as the dispute related to the A. T. M. No order was passed by the Tribunal on that application. On June 4, 1962, the Manager of the A. T. M. applied to the Tribunal that an interim award be pronounced in terms of the agreement. The workmen had apparently changed their attitude by that time and filed a written statement and requested that the prayer contained in paragraph-3 of the application "be rejected as impermissible in law." The Tribunal made an order on November 26, 1962, and observed:

".....the only interpretation that can be given to clause 11 (4) of the settlement read with Clause 7 is that the workers of the Ajudhia Textile Mills had bound themselves not to claim any benefits that might be granted by the tribunal in the award on the present reference, if it turns out to be in favour of the workmen unless and until the working of the Mills results in profit. The fact that the passing of an award on the demands was envisaged under the settlement goes to show that the demands were to be adjudicated upon in any case.

The main case will now proceed in respect of all the mills and the effect of the settlement and of the application dated 28th December, 1959, and of the 5th July 1962 will be considered at the time of the final award."

12. But in making the final award the Tribunal did not specifically refer to the settlement. The terms of Clause (6) of the settlement clearly show that if it be found that the A. T. M. had acquired financial stability, it will be liable to pay gratuity to the workmen. We are unable to agree with the contention of counsel for the A. T. M. that it was intended by the parties that the adjudication proceedings against the A. T. M. should be dropped, and after the A. T. M. became financially stable a fresh claim should be made by the workmen on which a reference may be made by the Government for adjudication of the claim for gratuity against the A. T. M. The contention by the management of the

A. T. M. that the Tribunal was incompetent to determine the gratuity payable to the workmen of the A. T. M. must therefore fail.

13. The other contention raised on behalf of the A. T. M. that its financial position was "unstable" need not detain us. The Tribunal has held that the A. T. M. was working at a loss since the year 1953-54 and the losses aggregated to Rs. 6.22 lakhs in the year 1958-59, but thereafter the financial position of the unit improved. The trading account for the period ending March 31, 1966, showed profits amounting to Rs. 3.10 lakhs. In 1960-61 there was a surplus of Rs. 11.18 lakhs out of which adjusting the depreciation, development rebate reserve and reserve for bad and doubtful debts, there was a balance of Rs. 7.10 lakhs. In 1961-62 the net profits of the Unit amounted to Rs. 7.48 lakhs and the A. T. M. distributed Rs. 52,500 as dividend. In 1962-63 there was a gross profit of Rs. 4.18 lakhs and after adjusting depreciation and development rebate reserve there was a net deficit of Rs. 30,517. In 1963-64 there was a gross profit of Rs. 14.29 lakhs and after adjusting depreciation, reserve for doubtful debts, bonus to employees and development rebate reserve, there remained a net profit of Rs. 4.71 lakhs. The Tribunal observed that by 1961-62 all previous losses of the Unit were wiped out and that even during the year 1962-63 in which there was labour unrest the gross profits were substantial and taking into consideration the reserves built by the Company "the picture was not disheartening and from the great progress that had been made since 1959-60 there was every reason to think that the Mill had achieved stability and reasonable prosperity and that it had an assured future", and the Company was in a position to meet the burden of a modest gratuity scheme. We see no reason to disagree with the finding recorded by the Tribunal on this question.

14. On behalf of the D. C. M., S. B. M. and B. C. M. it was urged that normally gratuity schemes are framed on the region-cum-industry principle, i. e. a uniform scheme applicable to all units in an industry in a region is framed, and no ground for departure from that rule was made out. It was urged that this Court has accepted invariably the region-cum-industry principle in fixing the rates at which gratuity should be paid. In our judgment no such rule has been enunciated by this Court. In Bharatkhand Tex- files Mfg. Co. Ltd. v. Textile Labour Association, Ahmedabad, (1960) 3 SCR 329 = (AIR 1960 SC 833) this Court in dealing with the question whether the Industrial Court had committed an error in dealing with the claim for gratuity on industry-wise basis negatived the contention of the employers that the unit-wise basis was the only basis which could be adopted in fixing the rates of gratuity. It was observed at p. 345 (of SCR) = (at p. 840 of AIR):

"Equality of competitive conditions is in a sense necessary from the point of view of the employers themselves; that in fact was the claim made by the Association which suggested that the gratuity scheme should be framed on industry-wise basis spread over the whole of the country. Similarly equality of benefits such as gratuity is likely to secure contentment and satisfaction of the employees and lead to industrial peace and harmony. If similar gratuity schemes are framed for all the units of the industry migration of employees from one unit to another is inevitably checked, and industrial disputes arising from unequal treatment in that behalf are minimised. Thus, from the point of view of both employers and employees industry-wise approach is on the whole desirable."

It is clear that the Court rejected in that case the argument that rates of gratuity should be determined unit-wise; the Court did not rule that in all cases the region-cum-industry principle should be adopted in fixing the rates of gratuity. That was made explicit in a later judgment of this Court in (1965) 1 Lab LJ 453 = (AIR 1965 SC 839). This Court observed at p. 456 (of Lab LJ) = (at p. 841 of AIR):

"...it has been laid down by this Court that there are two general methods of fixing the terms of a gratuity scheme. It may be fixed on the basis of industry-cum-region or on the basis of units. Both systems are admissible but regard must be had to the surrounding circumstances to select the right basis. Emphasis must always be laid upon the financial position of the employer and his profit-making capacity whichever method is selected."

In Garment Cleaning Works v. Its Workmen, (1961) 1 Lab LJ 513 = (AIR 1962 SC 673) this Court observed at p. 515:

"....It is one thing to hold that the gratuity scheme can, in a proper case, be framed on industry-cum-region basis, and another thing to say that industry-cum-region basis is the only basis on which gratuity scheme can be framed. In fact, in a large majority of cases gratuity schemes are drafted on the basis of the units and it has never been suggested or held that such schemes are not permissible."

The Tribunal in the award under appeal observed:

"There are x x certain peculiar features in the textile industry in this region which militate against an industry-cum-region approach. Apart from the fact that one of the four units, namely, the Ajudhia Textile Mills is a much weaker unit than the rest and has passed through a chequered career during its existence, it has to be borne in mind that two of the units namely D. C. M. and S. B. M. which are sister concerns, already have some sort of a gratuity scheme providing for two important retiral benefits, namely death and physical disablement on a scale which is independent of wage variations and is not unsubstantial at least for categories in the lower levels." The Tribunal further observed:

"If a common scheme is framed for the entire textile industry at Delhi i. e., for all the four units the quantum of benefits under that scheme will naturally have to be much lower in consideration of the financial condition of the Ajudhia Textile Mill than if a unit-wise scheme is framed. Moreover in a common "scheme of gratuity the quantum of benefits to be provided will have to be lower than the benefits already available to workmen in the D. C. M. and S. B. M. units for the most important contingencies for which gratuity benefits are meant, namely, death and retirement on account of physical or mental incapacity. Such a lowering of the quantum of benefits would not in my view be desirable as it would create legitimate discontent."

In our judgment, no serious objection may be raised against the reasons set out by the Tribunal in support of the view that unitwise approach should be adopted in the reference before it and not the region-cum-industry approach. No case is therefore made out for interference with the award made determining the rates of gratuity unit-wise.

15. We also agree with the Tribunal that on the terms of the reference it was incompetent to fix the age of superannuation for workmen. We are unable to hold that a gratuity scheme may be implemented only if the age of superannuation of the workmen is determined by the award. Support was sought to be derived by counsel for the employers in support of his plea from the observations made by this Court in Burhanpur Tapti Mills Ltd.'s case, 1965-1 Lab LJ 453 = (AIR 1965 SC 839), where in examining the nature of gratuity, it was observed:

"The voluntary retirement of an inefficient or old or worn out employee on the assurance that he is to get a retiral benefit leads to the avoidance of industrial disputes, promotes contentment among those who look for promotions, draws better kind of employees and improves the tone and morale of the industry. It is beneficial all round. It compensates the employee who as he grows old knows that some compensation for the gradual destruction of his wage-earning capacity is being built up. By inducing voluntary retirement of old and worn out workmen it confers on the employer a benefit akin to the replacing of old and worn out machinery."

There is, in our judgment, nothing in these observations which justifies the view that a gratuity scheme cannot be effective unless it is accompanied by the fixation of the age of superannuation for the workmen in the industry.

16. There is another objection to the consideration of this claim made on behalf of the employers. By the express terms of reference the Tribunal is called upon to adjudicate on the question of fixation of gratuity: there is no reference either expressly or by implication to the fixation of the age of superannuation and in the absence of any reference relating to the fixation of the age of superannuation, the Tribunal was not competent to fix the age of superannuation. A gratuity scheme may, in our judgment, be implemented even without fixing the age of superannuation. The gratuity scheme in operation in the D. C. M. and S. B. M. has been effectively in operation without any age of superannuation for the workmen in the two units. An enquiry into the question of fixing the age of superannuation did not arise out of the terms of reference. No such claim was made by workmen and even in the written statement filed by the employers no direct reference was made to the fixation of the age of superannuation, nor was there any plea that before framing a gratuity scheme the Tribunal should provide for the age of superannuation. We agree with the Tribunal that fixation of the age of superannuation was not incidental to the framing of the gratuity scheme and it was neither necessary nor desirable that it should be fixed.

17. Counsel for the employers urged that the Tribunal committed a serious error in relating the computation of gratuity payable to the workmen on retirement on the consolidated monthly wage and not on the basic wage. "Gratuity" in its etymological sense means a gift especially for services rendered or return for favours received. For some time in the early stages in the adjudication of industrial disputes, gratuity was treated as a gift made by the employer at his pleasure and the workmen had no right to claim it. But since then there has been a long line of precedents in which it has been ruled that a claim for gratuity is a legitimate claim which the workmen may make and which in appropriate cases may give rise to an industrial dispute.

18. In Garment Cleaning Works' case, (1961) 1 Lab LJ 513 = (AIR 1962 SC 673) it was observed that gratuity is not paid to the employees gratuitously or merely as a matter of boon. It is paid to him for the service rendered by him to the employer. The same view was expressed in Bharatkhand Textile Mfg. Ltd.'s case, (1960) 3 SCR 329 = (AIR 1960 SC 833) and Calcutta Insurance Ltd. v. Their Workmen, 1967-2 Lab LJ 1 = (AIR 1967 SC 1286). Gratuity paid to workmen is intended to help them after retirement on superannuation, death, retirement, physical incapacity, disability or otherwise. The object of providing a gratuity scheme is to provide a retiring benefit to workmen who have rendered long and unblemished service to the employer and thereby contributed to the prosperity of the employer. It is one of the 'efficiency devices' and is considered necessary for an 'orderly and human elimination' from industry of superannuated or disabled employees who, but for such retiring benefits, would continue in employment even though they function inefficiently. It is not paid to an employee gratuitously or merely as a matter of boon; it is paid to him for long and meritorious service rendered by him to the employer.

19. On the findings recorded by the Tribunal all the textile units in the Delhi region are able to meet the additional financial burden, resulting from the imposition of a gratuity scheme. The D. C. M. and S. B. M. have their own schemes which enable the workmen to obtain substantial benefit on determination of employment. The B. C. M. though a weaker unit is still fairly prosperous and is able to bear the burden; so also the A. T. M.

20. But the important question is whether these four units should be made liable to pay gratuity computed on the consolidated wage i.e., basic wage plus the dearness allowance. The Tribunal was apparently of the view that in determining the question the definition of the word "wages" in the Industrial Disputes Act, 1947, would come to the aid of workmen. The expression "wages" as defined in Section 2 (rr) of the Industrial Disputes Act means all remuneration, capable of being expressed in terms of money, which would, if the terms of employment, expressed or implied, were fulfilled, be payable to a workman in respect of his employment or of work done in such employment, and includes, among other things, such allowances (including dearness allowance) as the workman is for the time being entitled to. But we are unable to hold that in determining the scope of an industrial reference, words used either in the claim advanced or in the order of reference made by the Government under Section 10 of the Industrial Disputes Act must of necessity have the meaning they have under the Industrial Disputes Act. Merely because the expression "wages" includes dearness allowance within the meaning of the Industrial Disputes Act the Tribunal is not obliged to base a gratuity scheme on consolidated wages.

21. The Tribunal has observed that the basic average wage of a workman in the textile industry in the Delhi region may be taken at Rs. 60/- per month, and the dearness allowance at Rs. 100/- per month, and even if full one month's basic wage is adopted as the minimum quantum of benefits to be allowed in the case of wage group with service of five years and more the scale of benefit would be very much lower than the present scale in the two contingencies provided in the Employees Benefit Fund Trust Scheme in operation in the D. C. M. and S. B. M. And observed the Tribunal:

"In view of the limitations of the terms of the reference, the quantum cannot exceed 15 days' wages for every year of service from 5 to 10 years and 21 days' wages for every year of service from 10 to 15 years. Any scheme framed within the limitations of the terms of reference on the basis of basic wage alone will therefore mean a scale of benefits much lower than even the present scheme under the Employees Benefit Fund Trust. Such a scheme cannot, therefore, be framed without causing grave injustice and acute discontent, because it will mean the deprivation of even the present scale of benefits in the case of large body of workers. In order to maintain, so far as possible, the present level of benefits I have, therefore, no alternative but to frame for these two units a scheme based on basic wage plus dearness allowance."

A scheme of gratuity based on consolidated wages was also justified in the view of the Tribunal because it "was also necessary to compensate for the ever diminishing market value of the rupee."

22. The Tribunal did however observe that normally gratuity is based not on the consolidated wage but on basic wage. But since 13000 workmen out of a total of 20000 workmen in the region would stand to lose the benefits granted to them under a voluntary scheme introduced by the D. C. M. and S. B. M. a departure from the normal pattern should be made and gratuity should be based on the consolidated monthly wage. In our judgment, the conclusion of the Tribunal cannot be supported. The primary object of industrial adjudication is, it is said, to adjust the relations between the employers and employees or between employees inter se with the object of promoting industrial peace, and a scheme which deprives workmen of what has been granted to them by the employer voluntarily would not secure industrial peace. But on that account the Tribunal was not justified in introducing a fundamental change in the concept of a benefit granted to the workmen in the textile industry all over the country by numerous schemes. The appropriate remedy is to introduce reservations protecting benefits already acquired and to frame a scheme consistent with the normal pattern prevailing in the industry.

23. We consider it right to observe that in adjudication of industrial disputes settled legal principles have little play: the awards made by industrial tribunals are often the result of ad hoc determination of disputed questions, and each determination forms a precedent for determination of other disputes. An attempt to search for principle from the law built up on those precedents is a futile exercise. To the Courts accustomed to apply settled principles to facts determined by the application of the judicial process, an essay into the unsurveyed expanses of the law of industrial relations with neither a compass nor a guide, but only the pillars of precedents is a disheartening experience. The Constitution has however invested this Court with power to sit in appeal over the awards of Industrial Tribunals which are, it is said, founded on the somewhat hazy background of maintenance of industrial peace, which secures the prosperity of the industry and improvement of the conditions of workmen employed in the Industry and in the absence of principles precedents may have to be adopted as guides — somewhat reluctantly to secure some reasonable degree of uniformity of harmony in the process.

24. But in the branch of law relating to industrial relations the temptation to be crusaders instead of adjudicators must be firmly resisted. It would not be out of place to remember the statement of the law made in a different context — but nonetheless appropriate here — by Douglas, J., of the Supreme Court of the United States in United Steel Workers of America v. Enterprise Wheel and Car Corporation, (1960) 363 US 593:

"..... as arbitrator x x x does not sit to dispense his own brand of industrial justice. He may of course look for guidance from many sources, yet his award is legitimate only so long as it draws its essence from the collective bargaining agreement. When the arbitrator's words manifest an infidelity to this obligation, Courts have no choice but to refuse enforcement of the award."

We may at once state that we are not for a moment suggesting that the law of industrial relations developed in our country has proceeded on lines parallel to the direction of the law in the United States.

25. One of the grounds which appealed to the Tribunal in relating the rate of gratuity to the consolidated wage was the existence of a gratuity scheme in the D. C. M. and S. B. M. and the assumption that the Tribunal adjudicating a dispute is always, in exercise of its jurisdiction, limited when determining the rate of gratuity to the multiple number of days of service in the order of reference, and cannot depart therefrom. We are unable to hold that Industrial Tribunal is subject to any such restriction. Its power is to adjudicate the dispute. It cannot proceed to adjudicate disputes not referred; but when called upon to adjudicate whether a certain scheme "on the lines indicated" should be framed the basic guidance cannot be deemed to impose a limit upon its jurisdiction.

26. As already stated, gratuity is not in its present day concept merely a gift made by the employer in his own discretion. The workmen have in course of time acquired a right to gratuity on determination of employment, provided the employer can afford, having regard to his financial condition, to pay it. There is undoubtedly no statutory direction for payment of gratuity as it is in respect of provident fund and retrenchment compensation. The conditions for the grant of gratuity are, as observed in Bharatkhanda Textile Mfg. Co., Ltd's case, (1960) 3 SCR 329 = (AIR 1960 SC 833, (i) financial capacity of the employer; (ii) his profit making capacity; (iii) the profits earned by him in the past; (iv) the extent of his reserves; (v) the chances of his replenishing them; and (vi) the claim for capital invested by him. But these are not exhaustive and there may be other material considerations which may have to be borne in mind in determining the terms and conditions of the gratuity scheme. Existence of other retiring benefits such as provident fund and retrenchment compensation or other benefits do not destroy the claim to gratuity: its quantum may however have to be adjusted in the light of the other benefits.

27. We may repeat that in matters relating to the grant of gratuity and even generally in the settlement of disputes arising out of industrial relations, there are no fixed principles, on the application of which the problems arising before the Tribunal or the Courts may be determined and often precedents of cases determined ad hoc are utilised to build up claims or to resist them. It would in the circumstances be futile to attempt to reduce the grounds of the decisions given by the Industrial Tribunals, the Labour Appellate Tribunals and the High Courts to the dimensions of any recognized principle. We may briefly refer to a few of the precedents relating to the grant of gratuity. In May and Baker (India) Ltd. v. Their Workmen, (1961) 2 Lab LJ 94=

(AIR 1967 SC 678) the claim of the workmen to fix gratuity on the basis of gross salary was rejected by the Industrial Tribunal and the quantum was related to basic salary i.e., excluding dearness allowance. The view taken by the Tribunal was affirmed by this Court. In British India Corporation v. Its Workmen, (1965) 2 Lab LJ 556 (SC) the existing gratuity scheme directed payment of gratuity in terms of consolidated wages. The Tribunal however modified the scheme while retaining the basis of consolidated wages which was held to be justified and reasonable. This Court observed that prima facie gratuity is awarded not by reference to consolidated wages but on basic wages and the Tribunal had made a departure from that. But in the view of the Court no interference with the scheme framed by the Tribunal was called for. In British Paints (India) Ltd. v. Its Workmen, (1966) 1 Lab LJ 407 = (AIR 1966 SC 732), the Court followed the judgment in May and Baker (India) Ltd., (1961) 2 Lab LJ 94 = (AIR 1967 SC 678) that it would be proper to follow the usual pattern of fixing the quantum of gratuity on basic wage excluding dearness allowances. But same principle was not adhered to in all cases. For instance in Hindustan Antibiotics Ltd. v. Their Workmen, (1967) 1 Lab LJ 114 = (AIR 1967 SC 948), it was observed:

"The learned counsel for the Company then argued that there is a flagrant violation or departure from the accepted norms in fixing the wage structure and the dearness allowance and therefore, as an exceptional case, we should set aside the award of the Tribunal and direct it to re-fix the wages."

In that case the Tribunal had awarded gratuity related to consolidated wages and without any contest the order of the Tribunal was confirmed. In Remington Rand of India Ltd. v. The Workmen, (1963) 1 Lab LJ 542 (SC) it was contended on behalf of the employer that the Tribunal was not justified in awarding gratuity on the basis of consolidated wages and should have awarded it on the basic wages alone. In dealing with that plea this Court observed that the Tribunal was on the facts of the case justified in proceeding in that way.

28. It is not easy to extract any principle from these cases, as precedents they are conflicting. If the matter rested there, we could not interfere with the conclusion of the Tribunal, but the Tribunal has failed to take into account the prevailing pattern in the textile industry all over the country. The Textile industry is spread over the entire country, in pockets some large other small. There are large and concentrated pockets in certain regions and smaller pockets in other regions. Except in two or three of the smaller States, textile units are to be found all over the country. It is a country-wide industry and in that industry, except in one case to be presently noticed, gratuity has never been granted on the basis of consolidated wages. Out of 39 centres in which the textile industry is located there is no centre in which gratuity payable to workmen in the textile industry pursuant to awards or settlements is based on consolidated wages. In the two principle centres, viz., Bombay and Ahmedabad, schemes for payment of gratuity to workmen in the textile industry the rates of gratuity are related to basic wages. The B. C. M. have tendered before the Tribunal a chart setting out the names of textile units in which the gratuity is paid to the workmen on basic wages. These are — the Textile Units Bhavnagar (Gujarat); Shahu Chhatrapati Mills Kolhapur (Maharashtra); Jivajirao Cotton Mills, Gwalior (Madhya Pradesh); Madhya Pradesh Mills-owners' Association, (Indore) Bombay, Ahmedabad (Gujarat); New Sherrock Spg. & Wvg. Co. Ltd., Nadiad (Gujarat); Raja Bahadur Motilal Mills, Poona (Maharashtra); Shree Gajanan Wvg. Mills, Sangli (Maharashtra); T. I. T. Bhiwani (Haryana); Jagatjeet Cotton Mills, Phagwada (Punjab); 36 Textile Mills in West Bengal; and Umed Mills (Rajasthan). It is true that the chart does not set out the gratuity schemes, if any, in all the 39 centres referred to in the Report of the First Wage Board, but the chart relates to a fairly representative segment of the industry. No evidence has been placed before the Court to prove that in determining gratuity payable under any other scheme in a textile unit the rate is related to consolidated wages. The two large centres in which the industry is concentrated are Bombay and Ahmedabad. In Rashtriya Mill Mazdoor Sangh, Bombay v. Millowners' Association, Bombay, 1957 Industrial Court Reporter 561 a scheme was framed by the Industrial Court, exercising power under the Bombay Industrial Relations Act 11 of 1947, in which the quantum of gratuity was related to the basic wages alone. In paragraph 27 at p. 583 the Tribunal rejected the argument advanced by counsel for the workmen that since benefits like provident Fund, retrenchment compensation, State Insurance Scheme, are granted in terms of monthly wages, gratuity should also be related to consolidated wages. They observed that in a large majority of awards of the Labour Appellate Tribunal and Industrial Tribunals gratuity had been awarded in terms of basic wages, and that,

"The basic wages reflect the differentials between the workers more than the total wages, as dearness allowance to all operatives is paid at a flat rate varying with the cost of living index. The gratuity schemes for the supervisory and technical staff as well as for clerks are also in terms of basic wages."

They accordingly related gratuity with the average basic wage earned by the workman during the twelve months preceding death, disability, retirement, resignation or termination of service. The scheme in the Bombay region was adopted in the dispute between the Textile Labour Association and the Ahmedabad Mill Owners' Association. The award is reported in the Textile Labour Association, Ahmedabad v. Ahmedabad Mill-owners' Association, 1958-1 Lab LJ 349. The question whether gratuity should be fixed on the basis of consolidated wages was apparently not mooted, but it was accepted on both the sides that gratuity should be related to basic wages. An appeal against that decision in the Ahmedabad Mill Owners' Association case, (1958) 1 Lab LJ 349 was brought before this Court in Bharatkhand Textile Manufacturing Co., Ltd.'s case, (1960) 3 SCR 329= (AIR 1960 SC 833), but no objection was raised to the award relating gratuity to basic wages. In the report of the Central Wage Board for the Cotton Textile Industry, 1959, in paragraph 110 gratuity was directed to be given on the basis of wages plus the increases given under paragraph 106, but excluding the dearness allowance.

29. The only departure from the prevailing pattern to which our attention is invited was made by the Labour Appellate Tribunal in regard to the textile units in the Coimbatore Region: Rajalakshmi Mills Ltd. v. Their Workmen, (1957) 2 Lab LJ 426. There was apparently no discussion on the question about the basis on which gratuity should be awarded. The Labour Appellate Tribunal observed:

2. "In all the appeals there is a contest by the mills on the subject of gratuity, and it is contended that the gratuity as awarded is too high. Both sides had much to say on the subject to the gratuity scheme as given by the adjudicator. During the course of the bearing we indicated to the parties the lines on which the gratuity scheme could be suitably altered to meet their respective points of view."

3. "We accordingly give the following scheme in substitution of the scheme at Paragraph 85 of the award:

All persons with more than five years and less than ten years' continuous service to their credit, on termination of their service by the company, except in cases of dismissals for misconduct involving moral turpitude, shall be paid gratuity at the rate of ten days' average rate of pay inclusive of dearness allowance for each completed year of service."

xx xx xx xx
But this award was modified later by the Industrial Tribunal in Coimbatore District Mill Workers' Union v. Rajalakshmi Mills Ltd., 1964-1 Lab LJ 638. The earlier award made in 1957 was sought to be reviewed before the Industrial Tribunal. The Tribunal observed that it would be the duty of the Tribunal to modify a gratuity scheme based upon some agreement or settlement if the terms of that agreement are found to be onerous and oppressive. The Tribunal stated that the original scheme was not applicable to all the units and taking into consideration the statutory provident fund scheme and "the fact that recently basic wages and dearness allowance have leaped up", there was no justification for including the dearness allowance in any new scheme that might be framed for the new Mills; and that it would be most undesirable to have two sets of gratuity schemes in the same region with varying rates. In the view of the Tribunal there should be a uniform scheme for all the Mills, old and new, and on that ground also the retention of the dearness allowance under the old scheme must be refused.

50. Counsel for the workmen relied upon an award made by the Industrial Tribunal in the Chemical Unit belonging to the D. C. M. which is published in D. C. M. Chemical Works v. Its Workmen, (1962) 1 Lab LJ 383 (SC). In that case gratuity was related to consolidated wages. The unit though belonging to the D. C. M. is entirely independent of the textile unit. The Company was treating the unit as separate from the textile unit and distinct for the purpose of recruitment of labour, sales and conditions of service for the workmen employed therein. The Chemical Unit had separate muster-rolls for its employees and transfers from one unit to the other even where such transfers were possible, considering the utterly different kinds of businesses carried on in the different units, usually took place with the consent of the employee concerned. In upholding the gratuity scheme which was based on the consolidated wages, this Court observed:

"As to the burden of the scheme, we do not think that, looking at it from a practical point of view and taking into account the fact that there are about 800 workmen in all in the concern, the burden per year would be very high, considering that the number of retirements is between three to four per centum of the total strength."

The gratuity scheme was in a chemical unit, and not in a textile unit. The judgment of this Court merely affirmed the award of the Tribunal and sets out no reasons why gratuity should be related to consolidated wages. We do not regard the affirmance by this Court to the award of the Industrial Tribunal as an effective or persuasive precedent justifying a variation from the normal pattern of gratuity schemes in operation in the textile industry all over the country.

31. It is clear that in the gratuity schemes operative at present to which our attention has been invited, in force in the textile industry payment of gratuity is related not to consolidated wages but to basic wages. It is true that under the scheme which is in operation in the D. C. M. and S. B. M. payment which is related to the length of service may in some cases exceed the maximum awardable under a scheme of gratuity benefit related to basic wages. That cannot be a ground for making a vital departure from the prevailing pattern in the other textile units in the country. But it may be necessary to protect the interest of the members governed by the original scheme.

32. Determination of gratuity is not based on any definite rules. In each case it must depend upon the prosperity of the concern, needs of the workmen and the prevailing economic conditions, examined in the light of the auxiliary benefits which the workmen may get on determination of employment. If all over the country in the textile centres payment of gratuity is related to the basic wages and not on consolidated wages, any innovation in the Delhi region is likely to give rise to serious industrial disputes in other centres all over the country. The award if confirmed would not ensure industrial peace if it is likely to foment serious unrest in other centres. If maintenance of industrial peace is a governing principle of industrial adjudication, it would be wise to maintain a reasonable degree of uniformity in the diverse units all over the country and not to make a fundamental departure from the prevailing pattern. We are, therefore, of the view that the Tribunal's award granting gratuity on the basis of consolidated wage cannot be upheld. This modification will not, however, affect the existing benefits which are available under the schemes framed by the D. C. M. and S. B. M. insofar as those two units are concerned.

33. Mr. Ramamurthi for the workmen also contended that in the matter of relating gratuity to wages — consolidated or basic — the principle of region-cum-industry should be applied and an "overall view of similar and uniform conditions in the industry in different centres" should not be adopted. It was also urged that the basic wage is very low and the class of wage to which gratuity was related played a very important part in the determination of gratuity. The basic wage is however low in all the centres and if it does not play an important part in other centres, we see no reason why it should play only in the Delhi region a decisive part so as to make vital departure from the scheme in operation in the other centres in the country. We are strongly impressed by the circumstances that acceptance of the award of the Tribunal in the present case is likely to create conditions of great instability all over the country in the textile industry. In that view, we decline to uphold the order of the Tribunal fixing gratuity on the basis of consolidated wages inclusive of dearness allowance.

34. We may refer to the contentions advanced by counsel for the workmen in the two appeals filed by them. It was urged that the Tribunal was in error in denying to the workmen gratuity when employment is determined on the ground of misconduct. It was urged that it is now a rule settled by decisions of this Court that the employer is bound to pay gratuity notwithstanding termination of employment on the ground of misconduct. It may be noticed that in the Rashtriya Mill Mazdoor Sangh's case, 1957 Industrial Court Reporter 561 and in the Ahmedabad Millowners' Association case, 1958-1 Lab LJ 349 provision was expressly made denying gratuity to the workmen dismissed for misconduct. But in later cases a less rigid approach was adopted. In Garment Cleaning Works case, (1961) 1 Lab LJ 513 = (AIR 1962 SC 673) this Court observed:

"On principle, if gratuity is earned by an employee for long and meritorious service, it is difficult to understand why the benefit thus earned by long and meritorious service should not be available to the employee even though at the end of such service he may have been found guilty of misconduct which entails his dismissal. Gratuity is not paid to the employee gratuitously or merely as a matter of boon. It is paid to him for the service rendered by him to the employer, and when it is once earned, it is difficult to understand why it should necessarily be denied to him whatever may be the nature of misconduct of his dismissal."

In later judgments also the Courts upheld the view that denial of the right to gratuity is not justified even if employment is determined for misconduct. In Motipur Zamindari (P) Ltd. v. Their Workmen, (1965) 2 Lab LJ 139 (SC), this Court opined that the workmen should not be wholly deprived of the benefit earned by long and meritorious service, even though at the end of such service he may be found guilty of misconduct entailing his dismissal, and therefore the condition in a gratuity scheme that no gratuity should be payable to a workman dismissed "for misconduct involving moral turpitude" should be held unjustified. The Court therefore modified the condition and directed that while paying gratuity to a workman who was dismissed for misconduct only such amount should be deducted from the gratuity due to him in respect of which the employer may have suffered loss by the misconduct of the employee.

35. A similar view was expressed in Ramington Rand of India Ltd.'s case, 1968-2 Lab LJ 542 (SC). In Calcutta Insurance Co. Ltd.'s case, 1967-2 Lab LJ 1 = (AIR 1967 SC 1286) however protest was raised against acceptance of this rule without qualification. Mitter, J., observed at p. 9, (of Lab LJ)= (at p. 1293 of AIR) that it was difficult to concur in principle with the opinion expressed in the Garment Cleaning Works case, 1961-1 Lab LJ 513= (AIR 1962 SC 673). Mitter, J., observed:

"We are inclined to think that it (gratuity) is paid to a workman to ensure good conduct throughout the period he serves the employer. 'Long and meritorious service' must mean long and unbroken period of service meritorious to the end. As the period of service must be unbroken, so must the continuity of meritorious service be a condition for entitling the workman to gratuity. If a workman commits such misconduct 'as causes financial loss to his employer, the employer would, under the general law, have a right of action against the employee for the loss caused, and making a provision for withholding payment of gratuity where such loss was caused to the employer does not seem to aid to the harmonious employment of labourers or workmen. Further, the misconduct may be such as to undermine the discipline in the workers — a case in which it would be extremely difficult to assess the financial loss to the employer."

"Misconduct" spreads over a wide and bazy spectrum of industrial activity: the most seriously subversive conduct rendering an employee wholly unfit for employment to mere technical default are (sic) covered thereby. The Parliament enacted the Industrial Employment (Standing Orders) Act, 1946, which by Sec. 15 has authorised the appropriate Government to make rules to carry out the purposes of the Act and in respect of additional matters to be included in the Schedule. The Central Government has framed certain model standing rules by notification dated December 18, 1946, called "The Industrial Employment (Standing Orders) Central Rules, 1946". In Schedule I—Model Standing Orders—Clause 14 provides:

(1) x x x x
(2) A workman may be suspended for a period not exceeding four days at a time, or dismissed without notice or any compensation in lieu of notice, if he is found to be guilty of misconduct.

(3) The following acts and omissions shall be treated as misconduct:—

(a) wilful insubordination or disobedience, whether alone or in combination with others, to any lawful and reasonable order of a superior,

(b) theft, fraud or dishonesty in connection with the employer's business or property,

(c) wilful damage to or loss of employer's goods or property,

(d) taking or giving bribes or any illegal gratification,

(e) habitual absence without leave or absence without leave for more than 10 days,

(f) habitual late attendance,

(g) habitual breach of any law applicable to the establishment,

(h) riotous or disorderly behaviour during working hours at the establishment or any act subversive of discipline,

(i) habitual negligence or neglect of work,

(j) frequent repetition of any act or omission for which a fine may be imposed to a maximum of 2 per cent. of the wages in a month,

(k) striking work or inciting others to strike work in contravention of the provisions of any law, or rule having the force of law."

A hare perusal of the Schedule shows that the expression "misconduct" covers a large area of human conduct. On the one hand are the habitual late attendance, habitual negligence and neglect of works; on the other hand are riotous or disorderly behaviour during working hours at the establishment or any act subversive of discipline, wilful insubordination or disobedience. Misconduct falling under several of these latter heads of misconduct may involve no direct loss or damage to the employer, but would render the functioning of the establishment impossible or extremely hazardous. For instance, assault on the Manager of an establishment may not directly involve the employer in any loss or damage which could be equated in terms of money, but it would render the working of the establishment impossible. One may also envisage several acts of misconduct not directly involving the establishment in any loss, but which are destructive of discipline and cannot be tolerated. In none of the cases cited any detailed examination of what type of misconduct would or would not involve to the employer loss capable of being compensated in terms of money was made: it was broadly stated in the cases which have come before this Court that notwithstanding dismissal for misconduct a workman will be entitled to gratuity after deducting the loss occasioned to the employer."

If the cases cited do not enunciate any broad principle we think that in the application of those cases as precedents a distinction should be made between technical misconduct which leaves no trial of indiscipline, misconduct resulting in damage to the employer's property, which may be compensated by forfeiture of gratuity or part thereof, and serious misconduct which though not directly causing damage, such as acts of violence against the management or other employees or riotous or disorderly behaviour, in or near the place of employment is conducive to grave indiscipline. The first should involve no forfeiture: the second may involve forfeiture of an amount equal to the loss directly suffered by the employer in consequence of the misconduct and the third may entail forfeiture of gratuity due to the workmen. The precedents of this Court e.g., (1963) 2 Lab LJ 403 = (AIR 1964 SC 864), Ramington Rand of India Ltd. case, (1968) 2 Lab LJ 542 (SC) and Motipur Zamindari (P) Ltd's case, 1965-2 Lab LJ 139 (SC) do not compel us to hold that no misconduct however grave may be visited with forfeiture of gratuity. In our judgment, the rule set out by this Court in Wenger & Co.'s case, 1963-2 Lab LJ 403 = (AIR 1964 SC 864) and Motipur Zamindari (P) Ltd's case, 1965-2 Lab LJ 139 (SC) applies only to those cases where there has been by action wilful or negligent any loss occasioned to the property of the employer and the misconduct does not involve acts of violence against the management or other employees, or riotous or disorderly behaviour in or near the place of employment. In these exceptional cases—the third class of cases—the employer may exercise the right to forfeit gratuity: to hold otherwise would be to put a premium upon conduct destructive of maintenance of discipline.

36. It was urged on behalf of the workmen that the minimum period of 15 years fixed for voluntary retirement is too long and it should be reduced to 10 years. In 1959-2 Lab LJ 830 = (AIR 1960 SC 251) and Hydro (Engineers) Private Ltd. v. Workmen, Civil Appeal No. 1934 of 1967, D/- 30-4-1968 = (reported in AIR 1969 SC 182) the minimum period for qualifying for gratuity on voluntary retirement was fixed at 15 years. In other cases a shorter period of 10 years was adopted: Garment Cleaning Works, 1961-1 Lab LJ 513 = (AIR 1962 SC 673), British Paints (India) Ltd., 1966-1 Lab LJ 407 = (AIR 1966 SC 732), Calcutta Insurance Co. Ltd., 1967-2 Lab LJ 1 = (AIR 1967 SC 1286) and Wenger & Co., (1963) 2 Lab LJ 403 = (AIR 1964 SC 864).

37. Counsel for the employers have accepted that qualifying length of service for voluntary retirement should be reduced to 10 years. Counsel for the employers have also accepted that having regard to all the circumstances, notwithstanding the direction given by the Tribunal and the schemes prevailing in the other parts of the country in the textile industry, the maximum gratuity should not exceed 20 months' basic wages and not 15 months' as directed by the Tribunal. Further counsel for the D. C. M. and S. B. M. have agreed that in case of termination of employment on voluntary retirement one full month's basic wages for each completed year of service not exceeding 20 months' wages should be granted to workmen. Counsel for the B. C. M. has agreed that gratuity at the rate of 21 days' wages for each completed year of service in case of voluntary retirement or resignation after 10 years' service may be awarded as gratuity to the workmen. Counsel for the A. T. M. has shown no disinclination to fall in line with this suggestion. Counsel for the A. T. M. has also not objected to appropriate adjustments in view of the concessions made by management of the D. C. M., S. B. M. and B. C. M.

38. It was urged by counsel for the workmen that in providing that gratuity shall be paid to Badli workmen for only those years in which a workman has worked for 240 days, the Tribunal has committed an error. It was urged that a Badli workman has to register himself with the management of the textile unit and is required every day to attend the factory premises for ascertaining whether work would be provided to him, and since a Badli workman has to remain available throughout the year when the factory is open, a condition requiring that the Badli workman has worked for not less than 240 days to qualify for gratuity is unjust. We are unable to agree with that contention. If gratuity is to be paid for service rendered, it is difficult to appreciate the grounds on which it can be said that because for maintaining his name on the record of the Badli workmen, a workman is required to attend the Mills he may be deemed to have rendered ed service and would on that account be entitled also to claim gratuity. The direction is unexceptionable and the contention must be rejected.

39. It was also urged by Mr. Ramamurthi that the expression "average of the basic wage" in the definition of "wages" in Clause 4 of the Schemes is likely to create complications in the implementation of the schemes. He urged that if the wages earned by a workman during a month are divided by the total number of working days, the expression "wages" will have an artificial meaning and especially where the workman is old or disabled or incapacitated from rendering service, gratuity payable to him will be substantially reduced. We do not think that there is any cause for such apprehension. The expression "average of the basic wage" can only mean the wage earned by a workman during a month divided by the number of days for which he has worked and multiplied by 28 in order to arrive at the monthly wage for the computation of gratuity payable. Counsel for the employers agree to this interpretation.

40. It was then urged that whereas the reference to the Industrial Tribunal was made by the Delhi Administration sometime in March 1958, the award is given effect to from January 1, 1964, and for a period of nearly six years the workmen have been deprived of gratuity, when the delay in the disposal of the proceedings was not due to any fault or delaying tactics on the part of the workmen. The reference was made in the first week of March, 1958. The Textile Mazdoor Union then applied to be impleaded on September 15, 1959, the D. C. M. and S. B. M. moved the High Court of Punjab at Delhi and obtained an order for stay of proceedings in writ petition filed against the order of the Tribunal impleading the Textile Mazdoor Union. That writ petition was dismissed in February 1961 and the proceedings were resumed on December 12, 1962. Thereafter preliminary issues were decided and on December 3, 1963, an interim award relating to other disputes was made. It must, however, be noticed that there were four claims and the claim relating to gratuity was taken in hand by the Tribunal after disposal of the other claims. Neither party was dilatory in the prosecution of any claim before the Tribunal. It has also to be noticed that in the D. C. M. and S. B. M. there was in fact a gratuity scheme already in operation. The liability of the A. T. M. to pay gratuity arises after that unit acquired sufficient financial stability and it is not suggested that the unit had acquired financial stability before January 1, 1964. The issue remains a live issue only in respect of the B. C. M. It is true that the gratuity scheme of the D. C. M. and S. B. M. was related only to the length of service and did not take into account the varying rates of wages received by the workmen. But the question if at all would be one of making minor adjustment in the liability of the two units to pay gratuity in the event of gratuity being payable under this award at a higher rate than the gratuity awardable under the scheme already in operation in the two units. If in respect of the A. T. M. which had no scheme of gratuity for all practical purposes becomes operative from January 1, 1964, we do not see any reason why in respect of the B. C. M. any different rule should be provided for. Again the Tribunal has fixed January 1, 1964, as the date for the commencement of the schemes. Giving the schemes effect before January 1, 1964, may rake up cases in which the workmen have left the establishments many years ago. It would not be conducive to industrial peace to allow such questions to be raised after this long delay. The question is not capable of solution on the application of any principle and must be decided on the consideration of expediency. We do not think that any ground is made out for altering the award of the Industrial Tribunal in this behalf.

41. It was then urged that in any event the workmen of the D. C. M. and S. B. M. should not be deprived of the right to gratuity under the scheme of the two units, if gratuity at a higher rate is payable to them under the voluntary scheme. This contention must be accepted. We direct that in respect of all workmen of the D. C. M. and S. B. M. who were employed before January 1, 1964, and continued to remain employed till that date, gratuity at the higher of the two rates applicable to each workman when he becomes entitled to gratuity either computed under the Employees Benefit Fund Trust scheme of the D. C. M. and S. B. M. or under the terms of this award shall be paid. Workmen employed after January 1, 1964, will be entitled to the benefit of this award alone.

42. Industrial disputes have given rise to considerable strife holding up development of industry and the economic welfare of the nation. Awards have been made by the Tribunals often on consideration ad hoc and based on no principle and Courts have upheld or modified those awards without enunciation of any definite or generally accepted principle. In the present case we have been largely guided by the consideration of securing a reasonable degree of uniformity in the fixation of gratuity in the textile industry, for, in our view, a departure made from the prevailing pattern in one region is likely to give rise to claims all over the country for modification of the gratuity schemes in operation, and have been accepted as fixing the basis of gratuity schemes. If, having regard to the deteriorating value of the rupee, it is thought necessary that more generous benefits should be available to the workmen by way of gratuity, the remedy lies not before the adjudicators or the Courts, but before the legislative branch of the State. In respect of the bonus, provident fund, retrenchment compensation, State Insurance Schemes as well as medical benefits, legislation has been introduced bringing a reasonable degree of certainty in the law governing the various benefits available to the workmen and we are of the view that even in respect of gratuity a reasonably uniform scheme may be evolved by the Legislatures which could prevent resort to the adjudicators in respect of this complicated matter of dispute between the employers and the employees. It may not be difficult to evolve a scheme which would meet the legitimate claims of both the employers and the employees and which might, while eliminating cause for friction, simultaneously conduce to greater certainty in the administration of the law governing industrial disputes, and secure benefits to the employers as well as the employees and conduce to the prosperity of the industry as well as of the workmen.

43. We propose to summarise the effect of our judgment:

(1) A unit-wise approach in framing the gratuity scheme for the four units was appropriate, and on the terms of the references the plea of the employees to fix the age of superannuation was beyond the scope of reference. The financial condition of the D. C. M., S. B. M. and B. C. M. justifies imposition of gratuity schemes as from January 1, 1964. Even the A. T. M. which is the weakest of the four units is financially stable from the date on which the award becomes operative;

(2) The settlement between the workmen and the A. T. M. did not operate to bar the jurisdiction of the Tribunal to make the scheme of gratuity payable to the workmen of the A. T. M.;

(3) That the Tribunal was in error in relating gratuity awardable to the workmen to the consolidated wage;

(4) That the minimum period for qualifying for voluntary retirement should be reduced to 10 years and one month's basic wage in the case of D. C. M. and S. B. M. and 21 days' basic wage in the case of B. C. M. and A. T. M. for each completed year of service should be paid but not exceeding 20 months' wages in the aggregate. (This direction is made with the consent of the Advocates of the employers);

(5) That workmen dismissed or discharged from service for misconduct will not be entitled to gratuity if guilty of conduct involving acts of violence against the management or other employees, or riotous or disorderly behaviour in or near the place of employment;

(6) No modification need be made with regard to Badli workmen;

(7) The award needs no modification with regard to the date of operation of the award; and

(8) The workmen of the D. C. M. and S. B. M. who commenced service and continued to serve till January 1, 1964, and thereafter will be entitled to elect at the time when gratuity becomes due to claim gratuity either on the scheme in force under Employees Benefit Fund Trust of the employers or under this award. We have made some incidental changes to streamline the scheme.

44. On the view we have taken of the schemes, Annexure 'A' relating to the D. C. M. and S. B. M. of the award will be modified in the following respects:

45. In clause 1 (a) instead of "12 days' wages", the expression "20 days' wages" will be substituted.

46. In clause 1 (b) for the expression "15 days' wages", the expression "1 month's wages" will be substituted.

47. In proviso (ii) to clause 1 for the expression "15 months' wages", the expression "20 months' wages" will be substituted.

48. In clause 2 for the expression "15 days' wages", the expression "1 month's wages" will be substituted; and for the expression "15 years' service", "10 years' service" will be substituted.

49. In the proviso to clause 2 for the expression "15 months' wages" the expression "20 months' wages" will be substituted.

50. In clause 3 in the proviso for the expression "15 months' wages", the expression "20 months' wages" will be substituted.

51. Clause 3 will be followed by an Explanation:

"Explanation. — The expression "misconduct" means acts involving violence against the management or other employees or riotous or disorderly behaviour in or near the place of employment.

Where the workman is guilty of conduct which involves the management in financial loss, the loss occasioned may be deducted from the gratuity payable."

52. In clause 4 the words "plus the dearness allowance" will be omitted.

53. The remaining clauses will stand unaffected except that for the words, "within six months from the date of publication of this Award" the words "within six months from the date of this judgment" will be substituted.

54. Annexure 'B' relating to the B. C. M. and A. T. M. will be modified in the following respects.

55. In clause 1 (a) for the expression "one-fourth month's wages", the expression "15 days wages" will be substituted;

56. In clause 1 (b) for the expression "one-third month's wages" the expression "21 days' wages" will be substituted.

57. In the proviso for the expression "12 months' wages", the expression "20 months' wages" will be substituted.

58. In clause 2 for the words "15 years' service", the expression "10 years' service" will be substituted.

59. In clause 3 in the proviso for the expression "12 months' wages", the expression "20 months' wages" will be substituted and it will be followed by the Explanation of "misconduct" as in Annexure 'A'.

AIR 1978 SUPREME COURT 910 (V 57 C 193)

(From: (1) Calcutta (2) Bombay)*

J. C. SHAI, V. RAMASWAMI, C. K. MITTER, K. S. HECDE AND A. N. CROVER, JJ.

(1) In Cr. Appeal No. 27 of 1967: Ramesh Chandra Mehta, Appellant v. The State of West Bengal, Respondent;

(2) In Cr. Appeal No. 45 of 1968: Dattatraya Waman Chitnis, Appellant v. H. R. Siyam, Assistant Collector of Customs, Bombay & another, Respondents; In Cr. Appeal No. 46 of 1968: Dady Adavji Fatakia, Appellant v. K. K. Ganguli, Asstt. Collector of Customs, Bombay and another, Respondents; In Cr. Appeal No. 47 of 1968. Punamchand Ramlalji Appellant v. R. R. Gomes, Assistant Collector of Customs, Bombay and another, Respondents.

Criminal Appeals Nos. 27 of 1967, 45, 46 and 47 of 1968, D/- 18-10-1968.

(A) Sea Customs Act (1878), Sec. 171A — Statement under — Admissibility must be adjudged in the light of taint attaching thereto at the time of statement.

The admissibility of statements recorded by a Customs Officer under Sec. 171A of the Sea Customs Act, 1878, depends upon the determination of the question whether the statements when made were inadmissible under Section 25 of the Evidence Act, and Article 20 (3) of the Constitution. Even after the repeal of the Sea Customs Act, admissibility of the statement made in a complaint made before a Magistrate for contravention of the provision of that Act must be adjudged in the light of the taint, if any, attaching thereto when the statement was made. It will not be correct to say that the statements must be deemed by virtue of Section 160 of the Customs Act 52 of 1962 to be recorded under the provisions of that Act and that their admissibility may be adjudged in the light of that Act alone. (Para 4)

(B) Evidence Act (1872), Section 25 — Police Officer who is — Officer of Customs is not police officer.

A Customs Officer is not a member of the police force. He is not entrusted with the duty to maintain law and order. He is entrusted with power which specifically relates to the collection of customs duties and prevention of smuggling. The test for determining whether an officer of customs is to be deemed a police officer is whether he is invested with all the powers of a police officer qua investigation of an offence, including the power to submit a report under Section 173 of the Code of Criminal Procedure. A Customs Officer exercising power to make an enquiry cannot submit a report under Section 173 of the Code of Criminal Procedure. AIR 1962 SC 276 & AIR 1966 SC 1746 & 1968 SCD 385, Rel. on; AIR 1964 SC 828, Dist. (Paras 5, 10)

*(1) Cr. Revn. No. 231 of 1965, D/- 8-9-1966 (Cal). (2) Cr. Revn. Nos. 682, 417 and 475 of 1967, D/- 14-11-1967, 9-11-1967 and 9-11-1967, respectively — Bombay.)

(C) Constitution of India, Article 20 (3) — “Accused of any offence” — Person against whom enquiry is held under Section 171A Sea Customs Act (1878) is not a person accused of any offence — AIR 1956 Cal 253 and AIR 1958 Cal 682, Overruled.

By Article 20 (3) of the Constitution a person who is accused of any offence may not be compelled to be a witness against himself. The guarantee is, it is true, not restricted to statements made in the witness box. But in order that the guarantee against testimonial compulsion incorporated in Article 20 (3) may be claimed by a person it has to be established that when he made the statement sought to be tendered in evidence against him, he was a person accused of an offence. Normally a person stands in the character of an accused when a First Information Report is lodged against him in respect of an offence before an Officer competent to investigate it, or when a complaint is made relating to the commission of an offence before a Magistrate competent to try or send to another Magistrate for trying the offence. Where a Customs Officer arrests a person and informs that person of the grounds of his arrest, which he is bound to do under Article 22 (1) of the Constitution for the purposes of holding an enquiry into the infringement of the provisions of the Sea Customs Act which he has reason to believe has taken place, there is no formal accusation of an offence. In the case of an offence by infringement of the Sea Customs Act and punishable at the trial before a Magistrate there is an accusation when a complaint is lodged by an officer competent in that behalf before the Magistrate. Hence a person against whom an enquiry is made by the Customs Officer under the Sea Customs Act is not a person accused of an offence and the evidence, if any, collected by examining him under Section 171A of the Sea Customs Act is not inadmissible. Case Law discussed; AIR 1956 Cal 253 & AIR 1958 Cal 682, Overruled; AIR 1967 Mad 263 & AIR 1965 Bom 195, Approved.

(Paras 11, 14)

(D) Evidence Act (1872), S. 25 — Police Officer — Customs Officer acting under Customs Act of 1962 — Not a police officer.

The Customs Officer under Section 104 (3) is, it is true, invested with the powers of an officer-in-charge of a police station for the purpose of releasing any person on bail or otherwise. The expression “or otherwise” however does not confer upon him the power to lodge a report before a Magistrate under Section 173 of the Code of Criminal Procedure. Power to grant bail, power to collect evidence, and power to search premises or conveyances without recourse to a Magistrate do not make him an officer-in-charge of a police station. Powers are conferred upon him primarily for collection of duty and prevention of smuggling. He is for all purposes an officer of the revenue. Thus a Customs Officer is, under the Act of 1962, not a police officer within the meaning of Section 25 of the Evidence Act and the statements made before him by a person who is arrested or against whom an inquiry is made are not covered by Section 25 of the Evidence Act. Cr. A. 27 of 1967, D/- 18-10-1968 (SC) & AIR 1966 SC 1746, Rel. on. (Paras 24, 25)

(E) Constitution of India, Article 20 (3) — “Accused of any offence” — Statement made under Sections 107 and 108 of Customs Act (1962) — Statement not by person accused of any offence.

Section 104 (1) of the Customs Act 1962 only prescribes the conditions in which the power of arrest may be exercised. The Officer must have reason to believe that a person has been guilty of an offence punishable under Section 135; otherwise he cannot arrest such person. But by informing such person of the grounds of his arrest the Customs Officer does not formally accuse him with the commission of an offence. Even under the Act of 1962 a formal accusation can only be deemed to be made when a complaint is made before Magistrate competent to try the person guilty of the infraction under Sections 132, 133, 134 and 135 of the Act. Any statement made under Sections 107 and 108 of the Customs Act by a person against whom an enquiry is made by a Customs Officer is not a statement made by a person accused of an offence.

(Paras 28, 27)

Cases Referred: Chronological Paras

(1967) Criminal App. Nos. 52 and 104 of 1965, D/- 12-12-1967= 1968 SCD 385, P. Shankar Lall v. Asst. Collector of Customs Madras

(1967) AIR 1967 Mad 263 (V 54)= 1967 Cri LJ 1007, Collector of Customs, Madras v. Kotumal Bhirumal Pihlajani

(1966) AIR 1966 SC 1746 (V 53)= 1966-3 SCR 698= 1966 Cri LJ 1353, Badku Joti Sawant v. State of Mysore

(1965) AIR 1965 Bom 195 (V 52)= 67 Bom LR 317= 1965 (2) Cri LJ 616, Laxman Padma Bhagat v. State

(1964) AIR 1964 SC 828 (V 51)= 1964-2 SCR 752= 1964 (1) Cri LJ 705, Raja Ram Jaiswal v. State of Bihar

(1963) Cri As. Nos. 131 and 132 of 1961, D/- 20-9-1963 (SC), Bhagawandas Goenka v. Union of India

(1962) AIR 1962 SC 276 (V 49)= 1962-3 SCR 333= 1962 (1) Cri LJ 212, State of Punjab v. Barkat Ram

(1961) AIR 1961 SC 29 (V 48)= 1961-1 SCR 417, Raja Narayan Lal Bansilal v. Maneck Phiroz Mistry

(1961) AIR 1961 SC 1808 (V 48)= 1962-3 SCR 10= 1961 (2) Cri LJ 856, State of Bombay v. Kathi Kalu Oghad (1958) AIR 1958 Cal 682 (V 45)= 1958 Cri LJ 1469, Collector of Customs v. Calcutta Motor Cycle and Co.

(1956) AIR 1956 Cal 253 (V 43)= 60 Cal WN 67, Calcutta Motor and Cycle Co. v. Collector of Customs

(1954) AIR 1954 SC 300 (V 41)= 1954 SCR 1077= 1954 Cri LJ 865, M. P. Sharma v. Satishchand

(1953) AIR 1953 SC 325 (V 40)= 1953 SCR 730= 1953 Cri LJ 1432, Maqbool Hussain v. State of Bombay

(In Cr. A. No. 27 of 1967)

Mr. B. C. Misra, Sr. Advocate (Mr. P. K. Ghosh, Advocate, for Mr. P. K. Chakravarty, Advocate with him), for Appellant; Mr. C. K. Daphtary, Attorney-General for India, and Mr. B. Sen, Sr. Advocate (Mr. C. S. Chatterjee, Advocate with them), for Respondents.

(In Cr. A. No. 45 of 1968)

Mr. K. Rajendra Chaudhuri, Advocate for Appellant; Mr. B. Sen, Sr. Advocate, (Mr. S. P. Nayar, Advocate, with him), for Respondents.

(In Cr. A. No. 46 of 1968)

Mr. A. K. Sen, Sr. Advocate (M/s. Porus A. Mehta and Janendra Lal Advocates and M/s. J. R. Cagrat and B. R. Agarwala, Advocates of M/s. Cagrat and Co. with him), for Appellant; Mr. B. Sen, Sr. Advocate (M/s. A. P. Candhi, R. N. Sachthey, S. P. Nayar and B. D. Sharma, Advocates, with him), for Respondents.

(In Cr. A. No. 47 of 1968)

Mr. A. S. R. Chari, Sr. Advocate (M/s. B. M. Patel and M. V. Coswami, Advocates, with him), for Appellant; Mr. B. Sen, Sr. Advocate (M/s. A. P. Candhi, R. N. Sachthey and S. P. Nayar Advocates with him), for Respondents.

The following Judgment of the Court was delivered by SHAH, J.:— The Assistant Collector of Customs filed a complaint against Ramesh Chandra Mehta and four others in the Court of the Additional District Magistrate, 24 Parganas, charging them with offences under Section 120B Indian Penal Code read with Section 167 (81) of the Sea Customs Act, 1878, Section 5 of the Import and Export Control Act, 1947, and for specific offences committed in pursuance of the conspiracy. It was the case of the complainant that when Mehta was searched on December 13, 1962, at the Dum Dum Airport, Calcutta, diamonds and jewellery worth Rupees 1,91,000/- were found on his person and currency notes of Rs. 27,000/- were found in a suit-case with him and that pursuant to a statement made by Mehta diamonds, pearls and jewellery of the value of Rs. 2,61,800/- and correspondence, telegrams and cables bearing upon the conspiracy to smuggle gold, precious stones etc., into India from foreign countries were recovered from different places.

2. The complainant tendered in evidence at the trial certain confessional statements which he claimed were made before the Customs Authorities in an enquiry under Section 171-A of the Sea Customs Act, 1878, by Mehta and the other persons accused. Counsel for the accused objected to the admissibility of that evidence but the objection was overruled by the Trial Magistrate. The High Court of Calcutta rejected a petition invoking their revisional jurisdiction against the order of the Trial Magistrate. With special leave, Mehta has appealed to this Court.

3. Counsel for Mehta urged three contentions in support of the appeal:

(1) that the statements tendered in evidence by the Customs Officer must be deemed by virtue of Section 160 of the Customs Act 52 of 1962 to be recorded under the provisions of that Act and their admissibility may be adjudged in the light of that Act alone;

(2) that an Officer of Customs is a "police officer" within the meaning of Section 25 of the Indian Evidence Act, 1872, and a confessional statement made before him is inadmissible in evidence at the trial of the appellant and his co-accused;

(3) that the statements made before the Customs Officer were otherwise inadmissible, because Mehta and others being persons accused of an offence were compelled by the provisions of Section 171-A of the Sea Customs Act, 1878, to be witnesses against themselves within the meaning of Article 20 (3) of the Constitution.

4. By Section 160 (1) of Act 52 of 1962 read with the Schedule to that Act, the Sea Customs Act 8 of 1878 was repealed. By sub-section (3) of Section 160 it is provided:

"Notwithstanding the repeal of any enactment by this section, —

(a) any notification, rule, regulation, order or notice issued or any appointment or declaration made or any licence, permission or exemption granted or any assessment made, confiscation adjudged or any duty levied or any penalty or fine imposed or any forfeiture, cancellation or discharge of any bond ordered or any other thing done or any "other action taken under any repealed enactment shall, so far as it is not inconsistent with the provisions of this Act, be deemed to have been done or taken under the corresponding provision of this Act;

(b) x x x x x."

But the admissibility of statements recorded by a Customs Officer under Section 171-A of the Sea Customs Act 1878, depends upon the determination of the question whether the statements when made were inadmissible under Section 25 of the Evidence Act, and Article 20 (3) of the Constitution. Even after the repeal of the Sea Customs Act, admissibility of the statement made in a complaint made before a Magistrate for contravention of the provision of that Act must be adjudged in the light of the taint, if any, attaching thereto when the statement was made. The first contention must, therefore, fail.

5. Section 25 of the Indian Evidence Act, 1872, enacts that "No confession made to a police officer shall be proved as against a person accused of any offence. The broad ground for declaring confessions made to a police-officer inadmissible is to avoid the danger of admitting false confessional statements obtained by coercion, torture or ill-treatment. But a Customs Officer is not a member of the police force. He is not entrusted with the duty to maintain law and order. He is entrusted with power which specifically relates to the collection of customs duties and prevention of smuggling. There is no warrant for the contention raised by counsel for Mehta that a Customs Officer is invested in the enquiry under the Sea Customs Act with all the powers which a police-officer in-charge of a police station has under the Code of Criminal Procedure. Under the Sea Customs Act, a Customs Officer is authorised to collect Customs duty to prevent smuggling and for that purpose he is invested with the power to search any person on reasonable suspicion (Section 169); to screen or X-ray the body of a person for detecting secreted goods (Section 170A); to arrest a person against whom a reasonable suspicion exists that he has been guilty of an offence under the Act (Section 173); to obtain a search warrant from a Magistrate to search any place within the local limits of the jurisdiction of such Magistrate (Section 172); to collect information by summoning persons to give evidence and produce documents (Section 171-A); and to adjudge confiscation under Section 182. He may exercise these powers for preventing smuggling of goods dutiable or prohibited and for adjudging confiscation of those goods. For collecting evidence the Customs Officer is entitled to serve a summons to produce a document or other thing or to give evidence, and the person so summoned is bound to attend either in person or by an authorized agent, as such officer may direct, and the person so summoned is bound to state the truth upon any subject respecting which he is examined or makes a statement and to produce such documents and other things as may be required. The power to arrest, the power to detain, the power to search or obtain a search warrant and the power to collect evidence are vested in the Customs Officer for enforcing compliance with the provisions of the Sea Customs Act. For purpose of Sections 193 and 228 of the Indian Penal Code the enquiry made by a Customs Officer is a judicial proceeding. An order made by him is appealable to the Chief Customs-authority under Section 188 and against that order revisional jurisdiction may be exercised by the Chief Customs-authority and also by the Central Government at the instance of any person aggrieved by any decision or order passed under the Act. The Customs Officer does not exercise, when enquiring into a suspected infringement of the Sea Customs Act powers of investigation which a police officer may in investigating the commission of an offence. He is invested with the power to enquire into infringements of the Act primarily for the purpose of adjudicating forfeiture and penalty. He has no power to investigate an offence triable by a Magistrate, nor has he the power to submit a report under Section 173 of the Code of Criminal Procedure. He can only make a complaint in writing before a competent Magistrate.

6. In State of Punjab v. Barkat Ram, 1962-3 SCR 338 = (AIR 1962 SC 276) this Court held (Subba Rao, J., dissenting) that a Customs Officer under the Land Customs Act 19 of 1924 or under the Sea Customs Act 8 of 1878 is not a police officer for the purpose of Section 25 of the Indian Evidence Act, 1872, and that conviction of the offender on the basis of his statements to the Customs Officer for offences under Section 167 (8) of the Sea Customs Act, 1878, and Section 23 (1) of the Foreign Exchange Regulation Act, 1947, is not illegal. Raghubar Dayal, J., who delivered the majority judgment of this Court observed:

"..... that the powers which the police officers enjoy are powers for the effective prevention and detention of crime in order to maintain law and order.

The powers of Customs Officers are really not for such purpose. Their powers are for the purpose of checking the smuggling of goods and the due realisation of customs duties and to determine the action to be taken in the interests of the revenues of the country by way of confiscation of goods on which no duty had been paid and by imposing penalties and fines."

7. In Raja Ram Jaiswal v. State of Bihar, 1964-2 SCR 752 = (AIR 1964 SC 828) the decision in Barkat Ram's case, was distinguished and it was observed (Raghubar Dayal, J., dissenting) that the expression "police officer" in Section 25 of the Evidence Act was not to be construed narrowly but in a wide and popular sense. The Court in that case held that an Excise Inspector or Sub-Inspector under the Bihar and Orissa Excise Act 2 of 1915 upon whom all the powers of a police officer were conferred is entitled to investigate any offence under the Excise Act and to submit a charge-sheet and on that account he must be regarded as a police officer within the meaning of Section 25 of the Evidence Act. The Court observed that the object enacting Section 25 of the Evidence Act was to eliminate from consideration confessions made to an officer who by virtue of his position, could extract by force, torture or inducement a confession, and an Excise Officer acting under Section 78 (3) of the Bihar and Orissa Excise Act, 1915, was in the same position as an officer in charge of a police station making an investigation under Chapter XIV of the Code of Criminal Procedure, and had the same opportunities of extracting a confession from a suspect.

8. In Badku Joti Savant v. State of Mysore, 1966-3 SCR 698 = (AIR 1966 SC 1746) this Court held that the officer empowered under the Central Excises and Salt Act 1 of 1944 and when making enquiries for purposes of that Act invested with powers of an officer-in-charge of a police station investigating a cognizable offence, is not a police officer within the meaning of Section 25 of the Indian Evidence Act, and the statement of an accused person recorded by him is not hit by that section. The Court in that case distinguished the decision in Raja Ram Jaiswal's case, 1964-2 SCR 752 = (AIR 1964 SC 828) and observed that a Central Excise Officer was invested with powers of an officer-in-charge of a police station when investigating a cognizable offence, but he had no power to submit a report under Section 173 of the Code of Criminal Procedure, and on that account he was not a police officer within the meaning of Section 25 of the Evidence Act.

9. In P. Shanker Lall v. Assistant Collector of Customs, Madras, Cri. As. Nos. 52 and 104 of 1965, D/- 12-12-1967 =

(reported in 1968 SCD 385), Sikri, J., delivering the judgment of the Court observed that a confession made before the Assistant Collector of Customs was not inadmissible under Section 25 of the Indian Evidence Act.

10. Counsel for Mehta contended that a Customs Officer who has power to detain, to arrest, to produce the person arrested before a Magistrate, and to obtain an order for remand and keep him in his custody with a view to examine the person so arrested and other persons to collect evidence, has opportunities which a police officer has of extracting confessions from a suspect, and if the expression police officer be not narrowly understood, a statement recorded by him of a person who is accused of an offence is inadmissible by virtue of Section 25 of the Indian Evidence Act. But the test for determining whether an officer of Customs is to be deemed a police officer is whether he is invested with all the powers of a police officer qua investigation of an offence, including the power to submit a report under Section 173 of the Code of Criminal Procedure. It is not claimed that a Customs Officer exercising power to make an enquiry may submit a report under Section 173 of the Code of Criminal Procedure.

11. The remaining contention that a person against whom an enquiry is made by the Customs Officer under the Sea Customs Act is a person accused of an offence and on that account he cannot be compelled to be made a witness against himself, and the evidence if any collected by examining him under Section 171-A of the Sea Customs Act is inadmissible has, also no substance. By Article 20 (3) of the Constitution a person who is accused of any offence may not be compelled to be a witness against himself. The guarantee is, it is true, not restricted to statements made in the witness box. This Court in State of Bombay v. Kathi-Kalu Oghad, 1962-3 SCR 10= (AIR 1961 SC 1808) observed at p. 37 (of SCR) = (at p. 1817 of AIR).

"To be a witness" means imparting knowledge in respect of relevant facts by an oral statement or a statement in writing, made or given in Court or otherwise.

"To be a witness" in its ordinary grammatical sense means giving oral testimony in Court. Case law has gone beyond this strict literal interpretation of the expression which may now bear a wider meaning, namely, bearing testimony in Court or out of Court by a person accused of an offence, orally or in writing." But in order that the guarantee against testimonial compulsion incorporated in Article 20 (3) may be claimed by a person it has to be established that when he made the statement sought to be tendered in evidence against him, he was a person accused of an offence. Under Section 171-A of the Sea Customs Act, a Customs Officer has power in an enquiry in connection with the smuggling of goods to summon any person whose attendance he considers necessary, to give evidence or to produce a document or any other thing, and by clause (3) the person so summoned is bound to state the truth upon any subject respecting which he is examined or makes statements and to produce such documents and other things as may be required. The expression "any person" includes a person who is suspected or believed to be concerned in the smuggling of goods. But a person arrested by a Customs Officer because he is found in possession of smuggled goods or on suspicion that he is concerned in smuggling is not, when called upon by the Customs Officer to make a statement or to produce a document or thing, a person accused of an offence within the meaning of Article 20 (3) of the Constitution. The steps taken by the Customs Officer are for the purpose of holding an inquiry under the Sea Customs Act and for adjudging confiscation of goods dutiable or prohibited and imposing penalties. The Customs Officer does not at that stage accuse the person suspected of infringing the provision of the Sea Customs Act with the commission of any offence. His primary duty is to prevent smuggling and to recover duties of Customs: when collecting evidence in respect of smuggling against a person suspected of infringing the provisions of the Sea Customs Act, he is not accusing the person of any offence punishable at a trial before a Magistrate. In Maqbool Hussain v. State of Bombay, 1953 SCR 730= (AIR 1953 SC 325), the Court held that a person against whom an order for confiscation of goods had been made in proceedings taken by Customs Officer under Section 167 of the Sea Customs Act and was subsequently prosecuted before a Magistrate for offences under the Foreign Exchange Regulation Act, 1947, could not plead the protection of Article 20 (2), since he was not "prosecuted" before the Customs authorities, and the order for confiscation was not a "punishment" inflicted by a Court or judicial tribunal within the meaning of Article 20 (2) of the Constitution and the prosecution was not barred.

12. In M. P. Sharma v. Satish Chandra, 1954 SCR 1077= (AIR 1954 SC 300) this Court observed that a compelled production of incriminating documents by a person against whom a First Information Report under the Code of Criminal Procedure has been made is testimonial compulsion within the meaning of Article 20 (3) of the Constitution. But a search and seizure of a document under the provisions of Sections 94 and 96 of the Code of Criminal Procedure do not amount to compelled production thereof within the meaning of Article 20 (3). It was observed by Jagannadhas, J., at p. 1087 (of SCR)= (at p. 304 of AIR):

"Broadly stated the guarantee in Article 20 (3) is against 'testimonial compulsion'. x x the protection afforded to an accused in 'so far as it is related to the phrase 'to be a witness' is not merely in respect of testimonial compulsion in the Court room but may well extend to compelled testimony previously obtained from him. It is available therefore to a person against whom a formal accusation relating to the commission of an offence has been levelled which in the normal course may result in prosecution." The Court further observed that the guarantee under Article 20 (3) is available to the petitioners against whom a First Information Report had been recorded.

13. In Raja Narayanlal Bansilal v. Maneek Phiroz Mistry, 1961-1 SCR 417= (AIR 1961 SC 29) admissibility of a statement made before an Inspector appointed by the Government of India under the Indian Companies Act, 1913, to investigate the affairs of a Company and to report thereon was canvassed. It was observed at p. 436 (of SCR)= (at p. 83 of AIR):

"x x one of the essential conditions for invoking the constitutional guarantee enshrined in Article 20 (3) is that a formal accusation relating to the commission of an offence, which would normally lead to his prosecution, must have been levelled against the party who is being compelled to give evidence against him."

Sinha, C. J., speaking for the majority of the Court in Kathi Kalu Oghad's case, 1962-3 SCR 10= (AIR 1961 SC 1808) stated that:

"To bring the statement in question within the prohibition of Article 20 (3), the person accused must have stood in the character of an accused person at the time he had made the statement. It is not enough that he should become an accused, any time after the statement has been made".

14. In the two earlier cases M. P. Sharma's case, 1954 SCR 1077= (AIR 1954 SC 300) and Raja Narayanlal Bansilal's case, 1961-1 SCR 417= (AIR 1961 SC 29) this Court in describing a person accused used the expression "against whom a formal accusation had been made", and in Kathi Kalu Oghad's case, 1962-3 SCR 10= (AIR 1961 SC 1808) this Court used the expression "the person accused must have stood in the character of an accused person". Counsel for Mehta urged that the earlier authorities were superseded in Kathi Kalu Oghad's case, 1962-3 SCR 10= (AIR 1961 SC 1808) and it was ruled that a statement made by a person standing in the character of a person accused of an offence is inadmissible by virtue of Article 20 (3) of the Constitution. But the Court in Kathi Kalu Oghad's case, 1962-3 SCR 10= (AIR 1961 SC 1808) has not set out a different test for determining the stage when a person may be said to be accused of an offence. In Kathi Kalu Oghad's case, 1962-3 SCR 10= (AIR 1961 SC 1808) the Court merely set out the principles in the light of the effect of a formal accusation on a person, viz., that he stands in the character of an accused person at the time when he makes the statement. Normally a person stands in the character of an accused when a First Information Report is lodged against him in respect of an offence before an Officer competent to investigate it, or when a complaint is made relating to the commission of an offence before a Magistrate competent to try or send to another Magistrate for trial of the offence. Where a Customs Officer arrests a person and informs that person of the grounds of his arrest, (which he is bound to do under Article 22 (1) of the Constitution) for the purposes of holding an enquiry into the infringement of the provisions of the Sea Customs Act which he has reason to believe has taken place, there is no formal accusation of an offence. In the case of an offence by infringement of the Sea Customs Act and punishable at the trial before a Magistrate there is an accusation when a complaint is lodged by an officer competent in that behalf before the Magistrate.

15. The decision of this Court in Bhagwandas Goenka v. Union of India, Cri. As. Nos. 131 and 132 of 1961, D/- 20-9-1963 (SC) lays down no principle inconsistent with the view we have expressed. In Bhagwandas Goenka's case, Cri. As. Nos. 131 and 132 of 1961, D/- 20-9-1963 (SC) the appellant was charged with using a sum of 4000 dollars borrowed by him when he was on a visit to the United States of America and with depositing cheques of the value of 500 dollars with a foreign bank in which he had an account, and thereby infringing Sections 4 (1) & (3) read with Section 23 of the Foreign Exchange Regulation Act 7 of 1947. At the trial before a Magistrate the appellant contended that the information demanded and obtained from him on September 19, 1952 and May 14, 1953 by the Reserve Bank of India under Section 19 of the Foreign Exchange Regulation Act with respect to the two sums was inadmissible. This Court negatived the contention observing that no information was collected from the accused after July 4, 1955, when he was asked to show cause by the Reserve Bank why he should not be prosecuted for contravention of the various provisions of the Act with respect to the two sums. The Court observed:

"The information collected under Section 19 is for the purpose of seeing whether a prosecution should be launched or not. At that stage when information is being collected there is no accusation against the person from whom information is being collected. It may be that after the information has been collected the Central Government or the Reserve Bank may come to the conclusion that there is no case for prosecution and the person concerned may never be accused. It cannot therefore be predicated that the person from whom information is being collected under Section 19 is necessarily in the position of an accused. The question whether he should be made an accused is generally decided after the information is collected and it is when a show cause notice is issued, as was done in this case on July 4, 1955, that it can be said that a formal accusation has been made against the person concerned. We are therefore of the opinion that the appellant is not entitled to the protection of Article 20 (3) with respect to the information that might have been collected from him under Section 19 before July 4, 1955."

Under Section 19 of the Foreign Exchange Regulation Act, 1947, it is open to the Central Government or the Reserve Bank of India, if it considers necessary or expedient, to obtain and examine any information, book or other document in the possession of any person or which in the opinion of the Central Government or the Reserve Bank it is possible for such person to obtain and furnish, by order in writing, to require any such person to furnish, or obtain and furnish, to the Central Government or the Reserve Bank or any person specified in the order with such information, book or other document. The information which was asked for and obtained in Bhagwandas Goenka's case, Cri. As. Nos. 131 and 132 of 1961, D/- 20-9-1963 (SC) under Section 19 of the Foreign Exchange Regulation Act was not held to be information obtained in violation of Article 20 (3) of the Constitution for the accusation in the view of the Court was made against the appellant for the first time on July 4, 1955, when the Reserve Bank of India called for an explanation of the appellant why he should not be prosecuted for contravention of the various provisions of the Foreign Exchange Regulation Act. Under the proviso to Section 23 (3) of that Act it is enacted that

"where any such offence is the contravention of any of the provisions of this Act or any rule, direction or order made thereunder which prohibits the doing of an act without permission no such complaint shall be made unless the person accused of the offence has been given an opportunity of showing that he had such permission."

In the light of the proviso the Court assumed that when an authority which is statutorily authorised and bound to call for an explanation before a complaint is filed, serves a formal notice calling for explanation, a formal accusation may be deemed to be made. But that is not the position in the present case.

16. In our judgment the view expressed by Sinha, J., in Calcutta Motor and Cycle Co. v. Collector of Customs, AIR 1956 Cal 253 that a proceeding under Section 171-A of the Sca Customs Act, 1878, being preliminary to a criminal trial any statement procured would be inadmissible under Article 20 (3) there being a formal accusation relating to the commission of an offence within the normal course may result in prosecution, is not correct. Opinion of the Court recorded in appeal from that judgment in Collector of Customs v. Calcutta Motor and Cycle Co., AIR 1958 Cal 682 in which Chakravarti, C. J., observed that the protection of Article 20 (3) avails even where a person is not formally accused or charged is inconsistent with the judgments of this Court already referred, cannot also be accepted as correct.

17. The views expressed by the Madras High Court in Collector of Customs, Madras v. Kotumal Bhirumal Pihlajani, AIR 1967 Mad 263 (FB) at p. 275 that:

..... the bar under Article 20 (3) of the Constitution will not be available to the statements in the case, since it is not in dispute that they have been recorded only during an investigation undertaken by the Customs Officer under Sections 107 and 108 of the Customs Act of 1952 and at a time when the deponents did not stand in the position of accused in the light of the principles stated in the decisions cited above and by the Bombay High Court in Laxman Padma Bhagat v. State, 67 Bom LR 317= (AIR 1965 Bom 195) that a person examined under Section 171-A of the Sea Customs Act, 1878, does not stand in the character of an accused person inasmuch as there is no formal accusation made against him by any person at that time are, in our judgment, substantially correct.

18. We therefore, agree with the High Court that the statements made by Mehta and the other persons accused before the Additional District Magistrate, 24 Parganas, were not inadmissible in evidence because of the protection granted under Article 20 (3) of Constitution.

Criminal Appeal No. 45 of 1968

19. On 6-3-1963, six parcels containing watches were seized by the Customs authorities at Santa Cruz Airport, Bombay. The Customs authorities recorded statements of the appellant Chitnis and attached certain documents from him. Thereafter the Customs authorities filed a complaint against Chitnis and thirteen others for offences under Section 120B, Indian Penal Code read with Section 167 (81) of the Sea Customs Act, and Section 135 of the Customs Act, 1962 read with Section 109, Indian Penal Code alleging that between August 15, 1952 and January 28, 1963, and between February 5, 1963 and March 6, 1963, the offenders had imported watches and had on that account committed offences under Section 120-B, Indian Penal Code read with Section 167 (81) of Sea Customs Act, and Section 120, Indian Penal Code read with Section 135 of the Customs Act, 1962, read with Section 109, Indian Penal Code respectively. At the trial the prosecutor tendered in evidence certain statements made before the Customs authorities by the accused. The Advocate for the accused objected to the admissibility of those statements. The Trial Magistrate rejected the contention and in a revision application filed before the High Court of Bombay the order passed by the Presidency Magistrate was confirmed.

Criminal Appeal No. 46 of 1968

20. Dady Adarji Fatakia was arrested on December 26, 1964. At that time he was found in possession of 540 watches. He was served with a summons under Section 108 of the Customs Act, 1962, and he made a statement before a Customs Officer. Thereafter a complaint was filed before the Presidency Magistrate, Bombay, against Fatakia for offences under Section 135 (a) & (b) of the Customs Act, 1962. At the trial the Public Prosecutor supplied to the accused copies of the statements made by Fatakia. The accused Fatakia, then applied to the Magistrate that the statements if tendered in evidence would be inadmissible because they were inadmissible under Section 25 of the Evidence Act or Section 162 of the Code of Criminal Procedure or under Article 20 (3) of the Constitution. The contentions were negatived by the Magistrate and in a revision application to the High Court the order of the Presidency Magistrate was confirmed.

Criminal Appeal No. 47 of 1968

21. On May 30, 1965, the Customs Officers seized 11000 tolas of gold from a room in the occupation of the appellant Poonamchand and then recorded his statement after serving him with a summons under Section 108 of the Customs Act, 1962. A complaint was filed against the appellant and two others in the Court of Additional Chief Presidency Magistrate, 8th Court, Bombay, under Section 120-B, I. P. Code and Section 135 of the Customs Act, and Rule 126P (2) (II) and (IV) of the Defence of India Rules and Rule 126P (2) (II) and (IV) of the Defence of India Rules read with Section 109 I. P. Code and Section 135 of the Customs Act, 1962 read with Section 109, I. P. Code. At the trial evidence was given by the Superintendent, Central Excise, Marine and Preventive Division, that the persons accused had made certain oral statements in his presence admitting their complicity in smuggling gold. An application by Poonamchand raising the contention that the statements were inadmissible under Section 25 of the Indian Evidence Act and Article 20 (3) of the Constitution was rejected on the ground that the application was premature. A revision application was then filed in the High Court and it was heard with the other petitions and was rejected.

22. In the three appeals Nos. 45, 46 and 47 of 1968 the statements were made to or recorded before the Customs Officers in an enquiry made under the Customs Act, 1962. It was urged on behalf of the appellants that the statements made before the Customs Officers exercising power under the Customs Act, 1962 are inadmissible at the trial of a person accused of an offence under the Customs Act, 1962, because of Section 25 of the Evidence Act and Article 20 (3) of the Constitution.

23. The scheme of the Customs Act, 1962, relating to searches, seizure and arrest, and confiscation of goods and conveyances and imposition of penalties may be briefly examined. Under Sections 100 and 101 a Customs Officer has power to search any person to whom these sections apply if the officer has reason to believe that such person has secreted about his person, any goods liable to confiscation or any documents relating thereto. Section 104 confers upon the Customs Officer power to arrest if he had reason to believe that any person in India or within the Indian Customs waters has been guilty of an offence punishable under Section 135. Every person so arrested must be informed of the grounds for such arrest. Section 105 authorises any Assistant Collector of Customs to search any premises if he has reason to believe that goods liable to confiscation, or any documents or things which in his opinion will be useful for or relevant to any proceeding under the Act, are secreted in any place, he may authorise any officer of Customs to search or may himself search for such goods, documents or things. Under Section 104 (3) where an officer of Customs has arrested any person under sub-section (1) he shall, for the purpose of releasing such person on bail or otherwise, have the same powers and be subject to the same provisions as the officer-in-charge of a police station has and is subject to under the Code of Criminal Procedure, 1898. By Section 107 any officer of customs empowered in that behalf by general or special order of the Collector of Customs may, during the course of any enquiry in connection with the smuggling of any goods — (a) require any person to produce or deliver any document or thing relevant to the enquiry; and (b) examine any person acquainted with the facts and circumstances of the case. Section 108 confers upon a gazetted officer of customs the powers to summon any person whose attendance he considers necessary to give evidence or to produce a document or any other thing in any enquiry which such officer is making in connection with the smuggling of goods. The person so summoned is bound to attend and to state the truth upon any subject respecting which he is examined or make statements and produce such documents and other things as may be required, and every such inquiry shall be deemed to be a judicial proceeding within the meaning of Sections 193 and 228 of the Indian Penal Code. Section 110 authorises the proper officer to seize such goods as he has reason to believe are liable to confiscation under the Act. Sections 111 to 127 deal with confiscation of goods and conveyances and with imposition of penalties. An appeal lies to the appropriate authority at the instance of a person aggrieved by any decision or order passed under the Act within the time specified under Section 128. Under Section 130 the Central Board of Revenue may exercise revisional powers in respect of orders passed by the Subordinate Customs authorities and Section 131 authorises the Central Government on the application of any person aggrieved by certain orders specified therein to exercise the power to annul or modify such orders. Sections 132 to 139 deal with offences and prosecution. Section 135 provides, insofar as it is material:

“Without prejudice to any action that may be taken under this Act, if any person—

(a) is in relation to any goods in any way knowingly concerned in any fraudulent evasion or attempt at evasion of any duty chargeable thereon or of any prohibition for the time being imposed under this Act or any other law for the time being in force with respect to such goods, or

(b) acquires possession of or is in any way concerned in carrying, removing, depositing, harbouring, keeping, concealing, selling or purchasing or in any other manner dealing with any goods which he knows or has reason to believe are liable to confiscation under Section 111, he shall be punishable, —

- (i) x x x x x x x x
(ii) x x x x x x x x

Section 137, insofar as it is material, provides:

"(1) No court shall take cognizance of any offence under Section 132, Section 133, Section 134 or Section 135, except with the previous sanction of the Collector of Customs.

(2) No court shall take cognizance of any offence under Section 136,—

(a) where the offence is alleged to have been committed by an officer of Customs not lower in rank than Assistant Collector of Customs except with the previous sanction of the Central Government;

(b) x x x x x x x x
The Customs Act 52 of 1962 invests the Customs Officer with the power to search a person and to arrest him, to search premises, to stop and search conveyances, and to examine persons, and also with the power to summon persons, to give evidence and to produce documents and (sic) seizure of goods, documents and things which are liable to confiscation. He is also invested with the power to release a person on bail. He is entitled to order confiscation of smuggled goods and impose penalty on persons proved to be guilty of infringing the provisions of the Act. It is implicit in the provisions of Section 137 that the proceedings before a Magistrate can only be commenced by way of a complaint and not on a report made by a Customs Officer.

24. In certain matters the Customs Act of 1962 differs from the Sea Customs Act of 1878. For instance, under the Sea Customs Act search of any place could not be made by a Customs Officer of his own accord: he had to apply for and obtain a search warrant from a Magistrate. Under Section 105 of the Customs Act, 1962, it is open to the Assistant Collector of Customs himself to issue a search warrant. A proper officer is also entitled under that Act to stop and search conveyances: he is entitled to release a person on bail, and for that purpose has the same powers and is subject to the same provisions as the officer in charge of a police station is. But these additional powers with which the Customs Officer is invested under the Act of 1962 do not, in our judgment, make him a police officer within the meaning of Section 25 of the Evidence Act. He is, it is true, invested with the powers of an officer-in-charge of a police station for the purpose of releasing any person on bail or otherwise. The expression "or otherwise" does not confer upon him the power to lodge a report before a Magistrate under Section 173 of the Code of Criminal Procedure. Power to grant bail, power to collect evidence, and power to search premise or conveyances without recourse to a Magistrate, do not make him an officer-in-charge of a police station. Proceedings taken by him are for the purpose of holding an enquiry into suspected cases of smuggling. His orders are appealable and are subject also to the revisional jurisdiction of the Central Board of Revenue and may be carried to the Central Government. Powers are conferred upon him primarily for collection of duty and prevention of smuggling. He is for all purposes an officer of the revenue.

25. For reasons set out in the judgment in Criminal Appeal No. 27 of 1967 and the judgment of this Court in Badku Joti Savant's case, 1966-3 SCR 698 = (AIR 1966 SC 1746), we are of the view that a Customs Officer is under the Act of 1962 not a police officer within the meaning of Section 25 of the Evidence Act and the statements made before him by a person who is arrested or against whom an inquiry is made are not covered by Section 25 of the Indian Evidence Act.

26. It was strenuously urged that under Section 104 of the Customs Act, 1962, the Customs Officer may arrest a person only if he has reason to believe that any person in India or within the Indian Customs waters has been guilty of an offence punishable under Section 135 and not otherwise and he is bound to inform such person of the grounds of his arrest. Arrest of the person who is guilty of the offence punishable under Section 135 and information to be given to him amount, it was contended, to a formal accusation of an offence and in any case the person who has been arrested and who has been informed of the nature of the infraction committed by him stands in the character of an accused person. We are unable to agree with that contention. Section 104 (1) only prescribes the conditions in which the power of arrest may be exercised. The officer must have reason to believe that a person has been guilty of an offence punishable under Section 135, otherwise he cannot arrest such person. But by informing such person of the grounds of his arrest the Customs Officer does not formally accuse him with the commission of an offence. Arrest and detention are only for the purpose of holding effectively an inquiry under Sections 107 and 108 of the Act with a view to adjudging confiscation of dutiable or prohibited goods and imposing penalties. At that stage there is no question of the offender against the Customs Act being charged before a Magistrate. Ordinarily after adjudging penalty and confiscation of goods or without doing so, if the Customs Officer forms an opinion that the offender should be prosecuted he may prefer a complaint in the manner provided under Section 137 with the sanction of the Collector of Customs and until a complaint is so filed the person against whom an inquiry is commenced under the Customs Act does not stand in the character of a person accused of an offence under Section 135.

27. Section 167 of the Sea Customs Act, 1878, contained a large number of clauses which described different kinds of infractions and different penalties or punishments liable to be imposed in respect of those infractions. Under the Customs Act 1962 the Customs Officer is authorised to confiscate goods improperly imported into India and to impose penalties in cases contemplated by Sections 112 and 113. But on that account the basic scheme of the Sea Customs Act, 1878, is not altered. The Customs Officer even under the Act of 1962 continues to remain a revenue officer primarily concerned with the detection of smuggling and enforcement and levy of proper duties and prevention of entry into India of dutiable goods without payment of duty and of goods of which the entry is prohibited. He does not on that account become either a police officer, nor does the information conveyed by him, when the person guilty of an infraction of the law is arrested, amount to making of an accusation of an offence against the person so guilty of infraction. Even under the Act of 1962 a formal accusation can only be deemed to be made when a complaint is made before a Magistrate competent to try the person guilty of the infraction under Sections 132, 133, 134 and 135 of the Act. Any statement made under Sections 107 and 108 of the Customs Act by a person against whom an enquiry is made by a Customs Officer is not a statement made by a person accused of an offence.

28. Before parting with the case, we must observe that this Court has been invited in this group of appeals to consider the question of admissibility of evidence before the trial was completed. At various stages of argument counsel asked us to make several assumptions on matters of evidence which were not before this Court. In some cases the statements made by the accused before the Customs Officer were tendered in evidence and were objected to; in other cases even before the statements were tendered in evidence, objections were raised. We may also observe that we are not concerned in these appeals to decide whether the statements relied upon were obtained from persons charged with infraction of the provisions of the Customs Act by officers having authority over them, by inducement, threat or promise having reference to the inquiry made against them. These questions, if raised, have to be decided at the trial of the appellants. The appeals fail and are dismissed.

Appeals dismissed.

AIR 1970 SUPREME COURT 951 (V 57 C 194)

(From: Patna)

M. HIDAYATULLAH, C. J., S. M. SIKRI, G. K. MITTER, A. N. RAY AND P. JAGANMOHAN REDDY, JJ.

Ram Kirpal Bhagat and others, Appellants v. The State of Bihar, Respondent.

Criminal Appeal No. 182 of 1966, D/- 13-11-1969.

(A) Imports and Exports (Control) Act (1947), Section 3 (2) — "All the provisions of that Act shall have effect accordingly" — Not merely Section 19 of Sea Customs Act (1878) but all relevant provisions of that Act will apply.

Section 3 (2) of the Imports and Exports (Control) Act (1947) enacts that goods to which any order under sub-section (1) applies shall be deemed to be goods of which the import or export has been prohibited under Section 19 of the Sea Customs Act, 1878 and under second limb of Section 3 (2) all the provisions of the Sea Customs Act (1878) have effect accordingly. To accede to the contention that, under Section 3 (2) only Section 19 of the Sea Customs Act, 1878 will apply and no other provision of the Sea Customs Act, 1878 will be effective or operative will be not only to render the words "and all the provisions of that Act shall have effect only" otiose but also nugatory. (1881) 31 Ch D 607 & AIR 1962 SC 316, Rel. on. (Para 18)

CN/CN/F657/DHZ/A

If Section 19 of the Sea Customs Act, 1878 were repealed then the provisions of Sea Customs Act, 1878 would not be attracted. But Section 19 of the Sea Customs Act, 1878 has not been repealed and is now re-enacted as Section 11 in the Customs Act, 1962 and there has been corresponding change in the Imports and Exports (Control) Act, 1947 by reference to the Customs Act, 1962 and Section 11 thereof. (Para 20)

(B) Government of India Act (1935), Section 92 — Applicability — Section 92 ceased to exist after repeal of the Government of India Act, 1935 by Article 395 of the Constitution. (Para 22)

(C) Constitution of India, Fifth Schedule, Clause 5 (2) (3) — "May make regulations" — Power to make regulations embraces power to apply laws.

The power to make regulations embraces the utmost power to make laws and to apply laws. Applying law to an area is making regulations which are laws. Further the power to apply laws is inherent when there is a power to repeal or amend any Act, or any existing law applicable to certain area. The power to apply laws is really to bring into legal effect sections of an Act as if the same Act had been enacted in its entirety. Application of laws is one of the recognised forms of legislation. Law can be made by referring to a statute or by citing a statute or by incorporating a statute or provisions or parts thereof in a piece of legislation as the law which shall apply. (Para 22)

(D) Constitution of India, Fifth Schedule, Clause 5 (2) — Power to apply laws under — Not synonymous with conditional or delegated legislations.

The Governor had full power to make regulations which are laws and just as Parliament can enact that a piece of legislation will apply to a particular State, similarly, the Governor under Paragraph 5 of the Fifth Schedule can apply specified laws to a Scheduled area. The Bihar Regulation 1 of 1951 is an instance of a valid piece of legislation emanating from the legislative authority in its plenitude of power and it cannot be said that the Regulation is either a piece of delegated legislation or a conditional legislation.

(Para 23)

(E) Constitution of India, Article 372 — Existing Law — Scheduled area — Laws in other parts of India would not be existing Laws.

Laws which were existing law in territories other than excluded or partially excluded areas would not be existing law under Article 372 in relation to excluded or partially excluded areas. The Land Customs Act, 1924 cannot therefore be said to apply to Santhal Parganas as an existing law. (Para 25)

(F) Imports and Exports (Control) Act (1947), Section 3 (2) — Prohibited goods — Cloves are deemed to be prohibited goods.

Cloves are goods the import of which is prohibited by the Imports and Exports (Control) Act, 1947 and they are dutiable goods by reason of the meaning of cloves in column 3, Item No. 9 (3) of the First Schedule to the Tariff Act, 1934 having been attracted by the Imports Control Order, 1955. Cloves being prohibited goods within the Imports and Exports (Control) Act, 1947 are deemed to be prohibited under Section 19 of the Sea Customs Act, 1878. (Para 33)

(G) Sea Customs Act (1878), Section 0 — Officers appointed under Land Customs Act (1924) are treated as Customs Officers.

It will appear from the notifications No. 69 Cus. dated 28-9-1951 and C. B. R. Notification 1 L. Cus. dated 25-1-1958 as amended by No. 8 L. Cus. dated 17-5-1958, that under Section 6 of the Sea Customs Act, 1878 Land Customs Officers are appointed Officers of Customs. The provisions of the Sea Customs Act, 1878 apply in Santhal Parganas. Secondly, under the notification under the Land Customs Act all the Officers mentioned therein including the Inspectors of the Central Excise employed on the Central Excise or Customs Preventive Intelligence work and attached to the Headquarters are Land Customs Officers. The combined effect of both the notifications is that the Land Customs Officers and Inspectors of Central Excise were Officers of Customs as a result of the application of the Sea Customs Act, 1878. (Para 35)

(H) Sea Customs Act (1878), Section 178A — Burden of proof — In the absence of special notification under Section 178A specifying goods to which the section applies, the onus of proof under that section cannot be placed on persons whose goods are seized for violation of other provisions of the Sea Customs Act, 1878. (Para 37)

Cases Referred: Chronological Paras

(1962) AIR 1962 SC 316 (V 49)=

(1962) 3 SCR 786 = 1962 (1) Cri LJ 364, Collector of Customs, Madras v. Nathella Sampathu Chetty 12, 13, 14, 15, 16, 17, 19

(1931) AIR 1931 PC 149 (V 18)=

58 Ind App 259, Secy. of State for India in Council v. Hindustan Co-operative Insurance Society Ltd. 16

(1886) 31 Ch D 607= 55 LJ Ch 488,

In re Woods' Estate 18

(1885) 10 AC 675= 55 LJPC 28,

Riel v. The Queen 21

The Judgment of the Court was delivered by

RAY, J.:— This is an appeal by special leave from the judgment of the High Court at Patna challenging first the authority of the Excise Inspectors as Officers of Customs, namely, public servants and secondly their power to arrest Nazir Mian and seize 2 bags of cloves from his possession under Sections 173 and 178 respectively of the Sea Customs Act, 1878.

2. The facts giving rise to this appeal are as follows. On 13 December, 1961, Inspectors Uma Shankar and Bisuddha Nand Jha and Constable Bishan Singh, all belonging to the Central Excise Department were on checking patrol duty on 330 Down Barauni passenger train proceeding from Barharwa to Pakur which are Railway Stations in Santhal Parganas in Bihar. The appellant Nazir Mian was travelling by Barauni passenger train. When the train stopped at Pakur the excise staff found Nazir Mian in the latrine of one of the compartments of the train with two bags of cloves weighing about 2 manuds 10 seers. The door of the latrine was closed. Inspector Uma Shankar pushed the door when it was opened from inside. Uma Shankar disclosed his identity and asked if duty had been paid for the cloves. Nazir Mian answered in the negative. Inspector Uma Shankar thereupon seized the bags and arrested Nazir Mian. While this was being done, the train started. Shortly after the train had started, it stopped at a level crossing in consequence of one of the persons of the excise staff pulling the alarm chain. The excise staff got down with Nazir Mian. The two bags of cloves were also brought down.

Certain persons collected on the spot. Nazir Mian is alleged to have been rescued by other appellants and the bags of cloves were taken away. In the scuffle that ensued, one of the Inspectors received simple injuries and the other a grievous injury.

3. The three appellants Nazir Mian, Ram Kirpal Bhagat and Ganga Dayal Shah and two other persons Jhaman Mian and Raghunath Prasad Yadav were all charged under Sections 147, 149, 333 and 379 of the Indian Penal Code for forming an unlawful assembly in assaulting Inspectors Uma Shankar and B. N. Jha and in rescuing accused Nazir Mian from their lawful custody and in removing two bags of seized cloves from their possession. The accused persons with the exception of Raghunath Prasad Yadav were further charged under Section 332 of the Indian Penal Code for voluntarily causing hurt to Uma Shankar a public servant in the discharge of his public duties. The accused with the exception of Nazir Mian were charged under Section 225 of the Indian Penal Code for intentionally offering resistance to the lawful apprehension of accused Nazir Mian. Nazir Mian was also charged under Section 7 of the Land Customs Act, 1924 for contravention of Section 5 of the said Act and also under Section 167, Item 81 of the Sea Customs Act, 1878 for contravention of Section 19 of the said Act and also under Section 5 of the Imports and Exports (Control) Act, 1947 for contravention of Section 3 (1) of the Imports Control Order, 1955.

4. At the trial before the Assistant Sessions Judge, Dumka in Santhal Parganas, Raghunath Prasad Yadav was acquitted of all the charges and the appellants Nazir Mian, Ram Kirpal Bhagat and Ganga Dayal Shah along with Jhaman Mian were all convicted under Secs. 147 and 332 of the Indian Penal Code. Jhaman Mian, Ram Kirpal Bhagat and Ganga Dayal Shah were also convicted under Sections 223 and 333 of the Indian Penal Code. Ram Kirpal Bhagat and Nazir Mian were also convicted under Section 379 of the Indian Penal Code. The said four accused including the three appellants were sentenced to several terms of imprisonment and the said sentences were ordered to run concurrently.

5. The Assistant Sessions Judge, Dumka, however, acquitted the appellant Nazir Mian of the charges under the Land Customs Act, the Sea Customs Act, 1878 and the Imports and Exports (Control) Act.

The Assistant Sessions Judge, Dumka held that Section 6 of the Imports and Exports (Control) Act, 1947 raised a bar of taking cognizance by any Court except upon a complaint in writing made by an officer authorised in that behalf by the Central Government by general or special order and in the absence of any complaint in writing by the officer concerned, the Assistant Sessions Judge, Dumka found that he had no jurisdiction to take cognizance of the offence under this Act. The Assistant Sessions Judge, Dumka also held that Section 187A of the Sea Customs Act, 1878 laid down that cognizance as to offence was to be taken upon a complaint in writing made by the Chief Customs Officer or any other officers of Customs not lower in rank than an Assistant Collector of Customs authorised in this behalf by the Chief Customs Officer. The Assistant Sessions Judge, Dumka found that in the present case there was no such complaint, and, therefore, he did not take cognizance for the contravention of Section 19 of the Sea Customs Act, 1878.

6. The appellants and Jhaman Mian thereafter preferred an appeal to the High Court. In the High Court the appellant Nazir Mian contended that Inspector Uma Shankar had no power to arrest him and seize the cloves, and, therefore, the Inspector could not be held to have acted in the discharge of his public duties. In aid of that contention it was submitted first, that the Imports and Exports (Control) Act, 1947, the Land Customs Act, 1924, the Sea Customs Act, 1878 and the Indian Tariff Act, 1934 were not extended to Santhal Parganas and were not, therefore, applicable. The second contention was that cloves were not dutiable articles. The third contention was that Section 173 of the Sea Customs Act, 1878 had no application, because there was no evidence of reasonable suspicion that Nazir Mian was guilty of an offence under the Sea Customs Act, 1878. It was also contended that Inspector Uma Shankar was not an officer of the Customs.

7. The High Court came to the conclusion that the Sea Customs Act, 1878 and the Imports and Exports Control Act, 1947 applied to the Santhal Parganas with the result that the import of cloves was prohibited; duty was payable on cloves; the Inspectors were officers of Customs within their respective jurisdiction, and, therefore, they could exercise power under S. 173 of the Sea Customs Act, 1878 and they could seize the goods under Section 178 of the Sea Customs Act, 1878. The High Court further held that under Sec. 178A of the Sea Customs Act, 1878, the burden was on the appellant Nazir Mian to prove that cloves seized were not smuggled goods and that the appellant Nazir Mian failed to do so.

8. The High Court held that the appellants had been rightly convicted for certain offences but the sentences under Section 332 of the Indian Penal Code against Nazir Mian, Ganga Dayal Shah were set aside to correct an error in the judgment of the Assistant Sessions Judge, Dumka who at one place convicted all the four accused under Section 332 of the Indian Penal Code and at another place found only Jhaman Mian and Ram Kirpal Bhagat guilty of the offences under Section 332 of the Indian Penal Code.

9. Counsel on behalf of the appellants contended first, that the Sea Customs Act, 1878 did not apply to the place of occurrence, and, therefore, the arrest and the seizure were unlawful. The second contention was that the Land Customs Act, 1924 did not apply to the place of occurrence, and, therefore, the Inspectors were not officers of Customs who could invoke the authority of the Land Customs Act, 1924 to arrest and seize the appellant Nazir Mian. The third contention was that the seizure of cloves was not authorised by Section 178 of the Sea Customs Act, 1878 nor was the arrest authorised under Section 173 of the Sea Customs Act, 1878. The arrest and the seizure under the Sea Customs Act, 1878 were impeached as illegal on the ground that the Sea Customs Act, 1878 did not apply to the place of occurrence, namely, Pakur in Santhal Parganas in Bihar. The fourth contention was that Sec. 178A of the Sea Customs Act, 1878 could not apply, because there was no notification to attract the application of the said section.

10. The first question which falls for decision is whether the Sea Customs Act, 1878 applies. In order to appreciate this contention it is necessary to refer to the statutes by virtue of which the Sea Customs Act, 1878 is said to apply to the place of occurrence. The Bihar Regulation 1 of 1951 enacted that the Import and Exports (Control) Act, 1947 was applicable to Santhal Parganas.

11. The relevant sections under the Imports and Exports (Control) Act, 1947 in the present case are the two sub-sections in Section 3 which are as follows:—

“3. Power to prohibit or restrict imports and exports. (1) The Central Government may, by order published in the Official Gazette, make provisions for prohibiting, restricting or otherwise controlling in all cases or in specified classes of cases, and subject to such exceptions, if any, as may be made by or under the order:—

(a) the import, export, carriage coast-wise or shipment as ships stores of goods of any specified description;

(b) the bringing into any port or place in India of goods of any specified description intended to be taken out of India without being removed from the ship or conveyance in which they are being carried.

(2) All goods to which any order under sub-section (1) applies shall be deemed to be goods of which the import or export has been prohibited under Section 19 of the Sea Customs Act, 1878, and all the provisions of that Act shall have effect accordingly”.

12. The first contention on behalf of the appellants is that sub-section (2) of Section 3 of the Imports and Exports (Control) Act, 1947 means that only Section 19 of the Sea Customs Act, 1878 is applicable and the other sections do not apply. The second contention on behalf of the appellants that the Bihar Regulation 1 of 1951 is in excess of the power of the Governor contained in the Fifth Schedule to the Constitution will be dealt with hereinafter. Counsel on behalf of the appellants contended that Section 3 (2) of the Imports and Exports (Control) Act, 1947 meant that goods to which sub-section (1) of Section 3 of the Act of 1947 applied were deemed to be goods of which the import or export had been prohibited under Section 19 of the Sea Customs Act, 1878, and, therefore, only Section 19 of that Act was to have effect for that restricted purpose. In aid of that contention reliance was placed on the decision of this Court in The Collector of Customs, Madras v. Nathella Sampathu Chetty, (1962) 3 SCR 786 = (AIR 1962 SC 316). The question for consideration in the Madras Customs case, (1962) 3 SCR 786 = (AIR 1962 SC 316) was whether Section 178A of the Sea Customs Act, 1878 applied. The Collector of Customs there seized gold because he was, prima facie, of the view that it had been smuggled and notice was issued to the respondent to show cause why the gold should not be confiscated. Import of gold was dealt with by Section 8 of the Foreign Exchange Regulation Act, 1947 which provided that the Central Government might by notification order that no person except with the general or special permission of the Reserve Bank and on payment of prescribed fee bring or send into India any gold or silver. Section 23A of the Foreign Exchange Regulation Act which came into existence in the year 1952 was as follows:—

“23A. Without prejudice to the provisions of Section 23 or to any other provision contained in this Act the restrictions imposed by sub-sections (1) and (2) of Section 8, sub-section (1) of Section 12 and clause (a) of sub-section (1) of Section 13 shall be deemed to have been imposed under Section 19 of the Sea Customs Act, 1878 and all the provisions of that Act shall have effect accordingly, except that Section 183 thereof shall have effect as if for the word “shall” therein the word “may” were substituted”.

Section 178A of the Sea Customs Act, 1878 was introduced into the Act in the year 1955. It was, therefore, contended that when the Foreign Exchange Regulation Act, 1947 was enacted the provisions of the Sea Customs Act, 1878 were not at all attracted, and secondly, when Section 23A was introduced in 1952 as a part of the Foreign Exchange Regulation Act, 1947 it would have the effect of bringing into operation only those sections of the Sea Customs Act, 1878 which were part of the Sea Customs Act, 1878 in 1952.

13. Counsel for the appellants relied on the observations at page 834 of the Report in the Madras Customs case, (1962) 3 SCR 786 = (AIR 1962 SC 316 at p. 335) that toms Act, 1878 would be attracted. The decision of this Court in the Madras Customs case, (1962) 3 SCR 788= (AIR 1962 SC 316) (supra) does not support that contention for the obvious reason that Section 178A of the Sea Customs Act, 1878 was held to be applicable there. If only Section 19 of the Sea Customs Act, 1878 were attracted for the purpose of giving sanction to notifications under the Foreign Exchange Regulation Act, Section 178A of the Sea Customs Act, 1878 could not have been held to be applicable in Madras Customs case, (1962) 3 SCR 788= (AIR 1962 SC 316) (supra).

“the effect of Section 23A is to treat the text of the notification by the Central Government under Section 8 (1) as if it had been issued under Section 19 of the Sea Customs Act with the title and the recital of the source of power appropriate to it by the creation of legal fiction”.

Counsel for the appellants extracted from these observations the proposition that only Section 19 of the Sea Customs Act, 1878 would be attracted in the present case to make effective the notifications under the Imports and Exports Control Act, 1947 and the Imports Control Order, 1955 and no other section of the Sea Customs Act.

14. Further this Court in the Madras Customs case, at page 799 of the Report (SCR)= (AIR 1962 SC 318 at p. 322) held first, that on the law as it stood upto 1952 before Section 23A of the Foreign Exchange Regulation Act was inserted, importation of gold in contravention of the notification of August, 1948 issued under Section 8 (1) of the Foreign Exchange Regulation Act would have been an importation contrary to Section 19 of the Sea Customs Act, with the result that any person concerned in the act of importation would have been liable to the penalties specified in the third column of Section 167 (8) of the Sea Customs Act and imported gold would have been liable to confiscation under the opening words of that column. This conclusion indicates that a restriction on the import of gold by a notification under the Foreign Exchange Regulation Act would be a prohibition or restriction on importation or exportation of gold under Section 19 of the Sea Customs Act, 1878 which occurs in Chapter IV of the Sea Customs Act, 1878.

15. The other conclusion of this Court in the Madras Customs case, (1962) 3 SCR 788= (AIR 1962 SC 316) (supra) was that though Section 178A of the Sea Customs Act, 1878 was introduced in the year 1955, Section 23A of the Foreign Exchange Regulation Act, 1947 which came into existence in 1952 would be operative to introduce the subsequent amendments of the Sea Customs Act, 1878 in dealing with contravention of the Foreign Exchange Regulation Act in relation to importation or exportation of gold.

16. In dealing with the contention in the Madras Customs case, (1962) 3 SCR 788= (AIR 1962 SC 316) (supra) that Section 178A of the Sea Customs Act, 1878 did not apply because it was not a part of the Sea Customs Act, 1878 when

Section 23A of the Foreign Exchange Regulation Act was enacted in 1952, the decision of the Judicial Committee in Secy. of State for India-in-Council v. Hindustan Co-operative Insurance Society Ltd., 58 Ind App 259= (AIR 1931 PC 149), was referred to by this Court for the purpose of showing that in the Hindustan Co-operative Insurance Society case, 58 Ind App 259= (AIR 1931 PC 149) (supra) the Calcutta Improvement Trust Act, 1911 referred to the provisions of the Land Acquisition Act by enacting that "the provisions of the Land Acquisition Act shall apply as if they were herein re-enacted" to mean that the Calcutta Improvement Trust Act, 1911 in adopting the provisions of the Land Acquisition Act did not intend to bind themselves to any future additions which might be made to the Land Acquisition Act. The other consideration which weighed with the Judicial Committee was that the Calcutta Improvement Trust Act did nothing more than incorporate certain provisions from an existing Act, and for convenience of drafting did so by reference to that Act instead of setting out for itself at length the provisions which it was desired to adopt. This Court said that there was no analogy between the manner in which the provisions of the Land Acquisition Act had been incorporated in the Calcutta Improvement Trust Act, 1911 and the operation of the Sea Customs Act, 1878 as a result of Section 23A of the Foreign Exchange Regulation Act. Section 23A of the Foreign Exchange Regulation Act was construed to mean that the restrictions imposed by Section 8 (1) of the Foreign Exchange Regulation Act shall be deemed to have been imposed under Section 19 of the Sea Customs Act and all the provisions of the Sea Customs Act, 1878 shall have effect accordingly. At page 837 of the Report (SCR)= (at p. 838 of AIR) this Court said that a notification issued under Section 8 (1) of the Foreign Exchange Regulation Act was deemed for all purposes to be a notification issued under Section 19 of the Sea Customs Act and the contravention of the notification attracted to it each and every provision of the Sea Customs Act which was in force at the date of the notification.

17. The ratio of the decision in the Madras Customs case, (1962) 3 SCR 788= (AIR 1962 SC 318) (supra) is that the provisions of the Sea Customs Act, 1878 were attracted by relation to the provisions of Section 19 of the Sea Customs Act, 1878 which deal with restrictions or prohibitions on import or export and the notifications under the Foreign Exchange Regulation Act prohibiting import of gold become an integral part of Section 19 of the Sea Customs Act, 1878, and, therefore, the contravention of such a notification would bring into effect each and every provision of the Sea Customs Act, 1878.

18. In the present case, sub-section (2) of Section 3 of the Imports and Exports Control Act, 1947 enacts that goods to which any order under sub-section (1) applies shall be deemed to be goods of which the import or export has been prohibited under Section 19 of the Sea Customs Act, 1878 and the second limb of sub-section (2) of Section 3 is that all the provisions of that Act (meaning thereby the Sea Customs Act, 1878) shall have effect accordingly. To accede to the contention of counsel for the appellants that only Section 19 of the Sea Customs Act 1878 will apply and no other provision of the Sea Customs Act, 1878 will be effective or operative will be not only to render the words "and all the provisions of that Act shall have effect only" otiose but also nugatory. When the statute enacts that all the provisions of that Act shall have effect accordingly, it will be an error to hold in spite of the language of such legislation that the provisions of the Sea Customs Act shall not have effect. The effect of bringing into an Act the provisions of an earlier Act is to introduce the incorporated sections of the earlier Act into the subsequent Act as if those provisions have been enacted in it for the first time. The nature of such a piece of legislation was explained by Lord Esher, M. R. in Re, Wood's Estate, (1886) 31 Ch D 607 that "if some clauses of a former Act were brought into the subsequent Act the legal effect was to write those sections into the new Act just as if they had been written in it with the pen".

19. This Court noticed in the Madras Customs case, (1962) 3 SCR 786= (AIR 1962 SC 316) (supra) the distinction between a mere reference to or a citation of one statute in another on the one hand and an incorporation on the other, for the purpose of showing as to what would be the effect of the repeal of the former statute on the latter statute. It is in that context that this Court observed that if Section 19 of the Sea Customs Act, 1878 would be repealed then there would no longer be any legal foundation for invoking the penal provisions of the Sea Customs Act, 1878 to a contravention of a notification under Section 8 (1) of the Foreign Exchange Regulation Act. The ratio is that if the contravention of the notification under the Foreign Exchange Regulation Act is equated with a contravention of the notification under Section 19 of the Sea Customs Act, 1878, the effacement of Section 19 of the Sea Customs Act, 1878 from the statute book would naturally remove the substratum of the Sea Customs Act, 1878.

20. In the present case, the provisions of the Sea Customs Act, 1878 are attracted by reason of the provisions contained in Section 3 of the Imports and Exports Control Act, 1947 and on the authority of the decision of this Court in the Madras Customs case, (1962) 3 SCR 786= (AIR 1962 SC 316) all that can be said is that if Section 19 of the Sea Customs Act, 1878 were repealed then the Sea Customs Act, 1878 would not be attracted. Section 19 of the Sea Customs Act, 1878 has not been repealed and was extant and is now re-enacted as Section 11 in the Customs Act, 1962 and there has been corresponding change in the Imports and Exports Control Act, 1947 by reference to the Customs Act, 1962 and Section 11 thereof.

21. The second question which falls for consideration is whether the Bihar Regulation 1 of 1951 is in excess of the Governor's powers. The contentions were: first, that the Regulation 1 of 1951 could not at all have been made; secondly, that Regulation deals with the subject matter and did not mean power to apply law and thirdly, the power to extend a law passed by another legislature was said to be not a legislative function, but was a conditional legislation. The legislation, in the present case, is in relation to what is described as Scheduled Areas. The Scheduled Areas are dealt with by Article 244 of the Constitution and the Fifth Schedule to the Constitution. Prior to the Constitution, the excluded Areas were dealt with by Sections 91 and 92 of the Government of India Act, 1935. The excluded and the partially excluded areas were areas so declared by order in Council under Section 91 and under Section 92 no Act of the Federal Legislature or of the Provincial Legislature was to apply to an excluded or a partially excluded area unless the Governor by public notification so directed. Sub-section (2) of Section 92 of the Government of India Act, 1935 conferred power on the Governor to make regulations for the peace and good government of any area in a Province which was an excluded or a partially excluded area and any regulations so made might repeal or amend any Act of the Federal Legislature or the Provincial Legislature or any existing Indian law which was for the time being applicable to the area in question. The extent of the legislative power of the Governor under Section 92 of the Government of India Act, 1935 in making regulations for the peace and good government of any area conferred on the Governor in the words of Lord Halsbury "an utmost discretion of enactment for the attainment of the objects pointed to". See Riel v. The Queen, (1885) 10 AC 675 at p. 678. In that case the words which fell for consideration by the Judicial Committee were "the power of the Parliament of Canada to make provisions for the administration, peace, order and good government of any territory not for the time being included in any province". It was contended that if any legislation differed from the provisions which in England had been made for the administration, peace, order and good government then the same could not be sustained as valid. That contention was not accepted. These words were held to embrace the widest power to legislate for the peace and good government for the area in question.

22. The Fifth Schedule to the Constitution consists of 7 paragraphs and consists of Parts, A, B, C and D. Paragraph 6 in Part C deals with Scheduled Areas as the President may by order declare and there is no dispute in the present case that the Santhal Parganas fall within the Scheduled Areas. Paragraph 5 in the Fifth Schedule deals with laws applicable to Scheduled Areas. Sub-paragraph (2) of paragraph 5 enacts that the Governor may make regulations for the peace and good government of any area in a State which is for the time being a Scheduled Area. Under sub-paragraph (3) of paragraph 5 the Governor may repeal or amend any Act of Parliament or of the Legislature of the State or any existing law which is for the time being applicable to the area in question. It may be stated that a contention was advanced by counsel for the appellants that Section 92 of the Government of India Act, 1935 was still in operation and the Governor could only act under that section. This contention is utterly devoid of any substance because Section 92 of the Government of India Act, 1935 ceased to exist after repeal of the Government of India Act, 1935 by Article 395 of the Constitution. It was contended that the power to make regulations did not confer power on the Governor to apply any law. It was said that under Section 92 of the Government of India Act, 1935 the Governor could do so but under the Fifth Schedule of the Constitution the Governor is not competent to apply laws. This argument is without any merit for the simple reason that the power to make regulations embraces the utmost power to make laws and to apply laws. Applying law to an area is making regulations which are laws. Further the power to apply laws is inherent when there is a power to repeal or amend any Act, or any existing law applicable to the area in question. The power to apply laws is really to bring into legal effect sections of an Act as if the same Act had been enacted in its entirety. Application of laws is one of the recognised forms of legislation. Law can be made by referring to a statute or by citing a statute or by incorporating a statute or provisions or parts thereof in a piece of legislation as the law which shall apply.

23. It was said by counsel for the appellants that the power to apply laws under the Fifth Schedule was synonymous with conditional legislation. In the present case, it cannot be said that the Bihar Regulation I of 1951 is either a piece of delegated legislation or a conditional legislation. The Governor had full power to make regulations which are laws and just as Parliament can enact that a piece of legislation will apply to a particular State, similarly, the Governor under Paragraph 5 of the Fifth Schedule can apply specified laws to a Scheduled area. The Bihar Regulation I of 1951 is an instance of a valid piece of legislation emanating from the legislative authority in the plenitude of power and there is no aspect of delegated or conditional legislation.

24. The question which next arises for consideration is whether the Land Customs Act, 1924 applied on the relevant date of occurrence namely 13 December, 1931 to the Santhal Parganas. The Land Customs Act was enacted in the year 1924 and it was not declared to apply to the Santhal Parganas. Prior to the Constitution the Central Acts or Federal Acts or Acts of the Dominion Legislature did not apply to an excluded or a partially excluded area unless they were declared by the Governor to apply to those areas. After the enactment of the Constitution, Article 244 and the Fifth Schedule deal with excluded or partially excluded areas.

25. It was contended on behalf of the State that after the enactment of the Constitution the Land Customs Act, 1924 became applicable to excluded or partially excluded areas because first it was an existing law and secondly the restriction under Section 92 of the Government of India Act, 1935 which required a specific declaration of the Governor to apply any legislation to the areas in question was no longer operative. Article 372 (1) of the Constitution enacts that the law in force in the territory of India immediately before the commencement of the Constitution is to continue in force until altered or repealed or amended by a competent legislature or other competent authority. Explanation I to Article 372 is that law in force in the Article shall include a law passed or made by the legislature or other competent authority in the territory of India before the commencement of the Constitution notwithstanding that it or parts of it may not be then in operation either at all or in particular area or areas. The contention on behalf of the respondent that the Land Customs Act, 1924 would apply to the Santhal Parganas on the ground that it is an existing law is not acceptable. Article 372 in clause (1) thereof enacts that subject to the other provisions of this Constitution all the laws in force in the territory of India shall continue in force. The Fifth Schedule to the Constitution relates to excluded or partially excluded areas. The existing law in relation to the excluded areas is saved by Article 372 and Explanation I thereto in spite of operation of such laws in particular areas. Similarly, other laws which were applicable to territories other than the excluded or partially excluded areas are saved by Article 372, Explanation I. Therefore, laws which were existing law in territories other than excluded or partially excluded areas would not be existing law under Article 372 in relation to excluded or partially excluded areas. Nor would existing law for the rest of India be existing law to area in question within the meaning of paragraph 5 in the Fifth Schedule to the Constitution. The Land Customs Act, 1924 cannot therefore be said to apply to Santhal Parganas as an existing law.

26. The present day sources of law making in the Santhal Parganas which are included in the Scheduled Areas are Article 244 and the provisions in the Fifth Schedule to the Constitution. Clause 5 of the Fifth Schedule has two sub-clauses. Under sub-clause (1) the Governor is empowered notwithstanding anything in the Constitution to direct that any particular Act of Parliament or of the Legislature of the State shall not apply to a Scheduled Area or shall apply to a Scheduled Area subject to such exceptions and modifications as the Governor may specify in the notification. Sub-clause (1) of Clause 5 of the Fifth Schedule to the Constitution speaks of Acts of Parliament or of the Legislature of the State and therefore Central Acts or Provincial Acts prior to the Constitution are not contemplated within sub-clause (1) of Clause 5. Sub-clause (2) of Clause 5 of the Fifth Schedule confers power on the Governor to make regulations for the peace and good Government of any area in a State which is a Scheduled Area. Under sub-clause (2) the Governor has power to make laws which will include the power to apply to Scheduled Areas Central laws or Provincial laws enacted prior to the Constitution.

27. Prior to the Constitution Section 92 of the Government of India Act, 1935 conferred power on the Governor to make regulations for excluded and partially excluded areas which included the Santhal Parganas. In making such regulation the Governor could repeal or amend any Central law or any Provincial Acts and the Regulations were to be submitted to the Governor-General for assent. The Central or the Provincial Acts under subsection (1) of Section 92 of the Government of India Act, 1935 however were not applied to excluded and partially excluded areas unless the Governor so directed.

28. Prior to the Government of India Act, 1935 the Governor-General-in-Council in 1872 promulgated the regulation known as "Santhal Parganas Settlement Regulation" and Section 3 of the said Regulation provided the enactments specified in the Schedule thereto which would be in force in the Santhal Parganas. Section 3 (2) of the Santhal Parganas Settlement Regulation of 1872 in so far as it seeks to affect future legislation would not have any force after 26 January, 1950.

29. In this background it appears that the Sea Customs Act, 1878 and the Land

Customs Act, 1924 were not made applicable to Santhal Parganas either under the Santhal Parganas Settlement Regulation of 1872 or under any notification issued under Section 92 of the Government of India Act, 1935. Neither the Sea Customs Act, 1878 nor the Land Customs Act, 1924 has been specifically made applicable to the Santhal Parganas by any notification under sub-clause (2) of Clause 5 of the Fifth Schedule. The Bihar Scheduled Laws Regulation being Regulation I of 1951 which was promulgated under sub-clause (2) of Clause 5 of the Fifth Schedule for the purpose of applying certain laws to Santhal Parganas however made the Imports and Exports (Control) Act, 1917 and the Imports and Exports (Amendment) Act, 1919 applicable to Santhal Parganas.

30. We have already stated as to how the Sea Customs Act is made applicable to Santhal Parganas by reason of the provisions contained in the Imports and Exports (Control) Act, 1917. Though the Land Customs Act, 1924 does not apply to Santhal Parganas we have indicated hereinafter as to how because of the application of Section 9 of the Sea Customs Act, Officers of Land Customs appointed under the Land Customs Act are treated as Customs Officers having jurisdiction in Santhal Parganas.

31. The Central Excises and Salt Act, 1914 was however made applicable to the Santhal Parganas by a notification dated 14 September, 1941 but the application of that Act is not in issue in the present appeal. One of the questions in the present appeal was whether the Indian Tariff Act, 1934 applied to the Santhal Parganas. The articles which were seized in the present appeal, viz., cloves, were dutiable articles being item 9 (3) in column 3 in the First Schedule to the Indian Tariff Act, 1934. We have already indicated as to how by reason of operation of Section 3 of the Imports and Exports (Control) Act, 1917 cloves became an article the import or export of which was prohibited under Section 19 of the Sea Customs Act. No notification of application of the Indian Tariff Act, 1934 to the Santhal Parganas was shown to the High Court. It will appear in volume 7 page 5792 of the Bihar Local Acts (1703 to 1963) published by Bharat Law House, Allahabad in the year 1968 that the Indian Tariff Act, 1934 is found to be one of the Acts mentioned in the Schedule to the Santhal Parganas Settlement Regulation, 1872 and the Indian Tariff Act, 1894 which was repealed by the Indian Tariff Act, 1934 was similarly declared to be in force in the Santhal Parganas.

32. The Inspectors, Uma Shankar and B. N. Jha were Customs Officers engaged in public duty. They arrested the appellant Nazir Mian under Section 173 of the Sea Customs Act on a reasonable suspicion. The Inspectors further arrested the appellant Nazir Mian under Section 178 of the Sea Customs Act, 1878. Section 178 of the Sea Customs Act, 1878 empowered the Customs Officer to seize smuggled goods under the Act. The questions which have to be decided in the present case are; first, whether the Inspectors Uma Shankar and B. N. Jha were acting in the discharge of public duties, secondly, whether they could arrest the appellants, and thirdly, whether they could seize the cloves. The oral evidence of Inspector Uma Shankar is that he was an Inspector of Central Excise and Customs and he worked in the Preventive and Intelligence Section. He said that he was posted at Barharwa since the month of January, 1901 and his jurisdiction was Pakur, Dumka and Sahibganj. He also said that his duty was the prevention of smuggling of contraband commodities. Inspector B. N. Jha in his oral evidence said that he was an Inspector of Central Excise and Customs and he worked in the Preventive and Intelligence section and Pakur, Dumka and Sahibganj were within his jurisdiction of work.

33. The Imports and Exports (Control) Act, 1917 in sub-section (2) of Section 3 enacted that goods to which sub-section (1) applied would be deemed to be goods the import or export of which would be a restriction under Section 19 of the Sea Customs Act, 1878 and all the provisions of that Act shall have effect accordingly. The Imports and Exports (Control) Act, 1917 conferred power on the Central Government to make provisions prohibiting, restricting and controlling import and export. The Imports Control Order, 1935 was made by virtue of power conferred by Section 3 of the Imports and Exports (Control) Act, 1917. Schedule I Part IV Item 23 of the Imports Control Order, 1935 mentions cloves within the class of goods the import of which is prohibited. Therefore, cloves come under the prohibition of Section 3 of the Imports and Exports (Control) Act, 1917 read with clause 3 of the Imports Control Order, 1955 and are goods which are prohibited from being imported. The Imports Control Order, 1955 mentions that each entry in column 2 of Schedule I to the said Order has the same meaning as specified against the said item in column 3 of the First Schedule to the Indian Tariff Act. Schedule I to the Imports Control Order, 1955 gives in a tabular form the names of articles as also the corresponding items to the Indian Tariff Act. Cloves which are mentioned as Item No. 23 of Schedule I of Part IV of the Imports Control Order, 1955 have the same meaning corresponding to Item No. 9 (3) in Column 3 in the First Schedule to the Indian Tariff Act, 1934. It, therefore, follows that cloves are goods the import of which is prohibited by the Imports and Exports Control Act, 1947 and they are dutiable goods by reason of the meaning of cloves in column 3 item No. 9 (3) of the First Schedule to the Indian Tariff Act, 1934 having been attracted by the Imports Control Order, 1955. Cloves are prohibited goods within the Imports and Exports Control Act, 1947 and are, therefore, deemed to be prohibited under Section 19 of the Sea Customs Act, 1878.

34. The Inspectors who arrested the appellant Nazir Mian and the other accused and seized the articles were Officers of Central Excise and Customs. In the present case, there are two notifications. The first is a notification No. 69 Cus. dated 28 September, 1951 under Section 6 of the Sea Customs Act, 1878 which is set out as follows:—

"In exercise of the powers conferred by Section 6 of the Sea Customs Act, 1878 (VIII of 1878) and in supersession of the Government of India in the Ministry of Finance (Revenue Division) Notification No. 71, dated the 12th August, 1950, the Central Government hereby appoints all the Land Customs Officers who have been appointed or may be appointed from time to time to be such under sub-section (1) of Section 3 of the Land Customs Act, 1924 (XIX of 1924) to be Officers of Customs for their respective jurisdiction and to exercise the powers conferred and to perform the duties imposed on such officers by the first named Act".

The second is a notification No. C. B. R. Notification 1 L. Cus. dated 25th January, 1958 as amended by No. 8-L. Cus. dated 17th May, 1958 under the Land Customs Act which is set out as follows:—

"In exercise of the powers conferred by sub-section (1) of Section 3 of the Land Customs Act, 1924 (19 of 1924) read with the notification of the Government of India in the late Finance Department (Central Revenue) No. 5944 dated the 13th December, 1924 and in supersession of its notification No. 56-Customs, dated the 24th July, 1951 as subsequently amended, the Central Board of Revenue hereby appoints all Deputy Collectors, Assistant Collectors, Head-quarters Assistant Collectors, Superintendents, Deputy Superintendents, Inspectors, Nakedars, Supervisors, Range Officers, Assistant Range Officers, Women Searchers, Jemadars, Petty Officers, Amaldars, Sepoys and Peons, including all the officers of Central Excise employed for the time being on the Central Excise or Customs Preventive Intelligence work and attached to the Headquarters and the Circle and Divisional Officers of the Collectorate of Central Excise, Delhi, Allahabad, Patna, Shillong, Madras, Bombay and Baroda, to be Land Customs Officers within the jurisdiction of the respective Collectors of Land Customs under whom they are working".

35. It will appear from the aforementioned notifications first that under Section 6 of the Sea Customs Act, 1878 Land Customs Officers are appointed Officers of Customs. It is manifest the provisions of the Sea Customs Act, 1878 apply, and, therefore, the Land Customs Officers are appointed Officers of Customs under the Sea Customs Act, 1878. Secondly, the notification under the Land Customs Act is that all the Officers mentioned therein including the Inspectors of the Central Excise employed on the Central Excise or Customs Preventive Intelligence work and attached to the Headquarters are Land Customs Officers. The combined effect of both the notifications is that the Land Customs Officers and Inspectors of Central Excise in the present case were Officers of Customs as a result of the application of the Sea Customs Act, 1878.

36. Counsel on behalf of the appellants contended that there was no evidence to warrant the Customs Officers to arrest the appellants under Section 173 of the Sea Customs Act, 1878 because such an arrest could be made only if there was a reasonable suspicion in existence. The evidence in the present case established the following facts. First, the appellant Nazir Mian had in possession two bags of cloves and no duty was paid on those cloves. Secondly, the appellant

Nazir Mian kept the cloves in two bags and concealed the same in the latrine of the railway compartment. Thirdly, the cloves were dutiable goods and there was prohibition on the import of those goods. Fourthly, Pakur was at a distance of only 11 and 12 miles from the East Pakistan border. Fifthly, cloves are not grown in India. These circumstances indicated a reasonable suspicion and, therefore, the Officers were justified in arresting the appellant Nazir Mian under Section 173 of the Sea Customs Act, 1878.

37. It was contended on behalf of the appellants that though under Section 178 of the Sea Customs Act, 1878, the Customs Officers could seize the goods there was no notification under Section 178A of the Sea Customs Act, 1878 imposing restrictions on import of cloves, and, therefore, the onus of proof could not be shifted to the appellants under Section 178A of the Sea Customs Act, 1878. The correct legal position is that in the absence of special notification under Section 178A specifying goods to which the section applies, the onus of proof under that section cannot be placed on persons whose goods are seized for violation of other provisions of the Sea Customs Act, 1878. In view of the fact that in the present case the seized articles were removed by the accused it is unnecessary to deal any further with this aspect of the case because if any order were passed for return of the bags the order could not be enforced.

38. For these reasons, the appeal fails and is dismissed. The appellants will surrender to the District Magistrate, Santhal Parganas to serve the sentences.

Appeal dismissed.

AIR 1970 SUPREME COURT 962

(V 57 C 195)

(From Bombay: 69 Bom LR 421)

J. C. SHAH, V. RAMASWAMI, C. K. MITTER, K. S. HEGDE AND A. N. GROVER, JJ.

The Assistant Collector of Customs, Bombay and another, Appellants v. L. R. Melwani and another, Respondents; and

Vice Versa

Behramji Mervanji Damania, (In Cr. A. No. 15 of 1967), Intervener.

Criminal Appeals Nos. 15 and 35 of 1967, D/- 16-10-1968.

CN/CN/F478/68/DVT/D

(A) Constitution of India, Article 20 (2) — Criminal P. C. (1898), Section 403 — Rule of autre fois acquit and issue estoppel rule — When can be invoked — Criminal prosecution of accused for smuggling — Not barred by earlier proceedings against him under Sea Customs Act — Sea Customs Act (1878), S. 167 (8).

In order to get the benefit of Sec. 403 Criminal P. C. or Article 20 (2), it is necessary for an accused person to establish that he had been tried by a Court of competent jurisdiction for an offence and he is convicted or acquitted of that offence and the said conviction or acquittal is in force. If that much is established then only the accused is not liable to be tried again for the same offence nor on the same facts for any other offence for which a different charge from the one made against him might have been made under Section 236, Criminal P. C. or for which he might have been convicted under Section 273, Criminal P. C.

(Para 7)

Criminal prosecution of the accused for alleged smuggling is not barred merely because proceedings were earlier instituted against him before the Collector of Customs. Adjudication before a Collector of Customs is not a prosecution nor the Collector of Customs a 'Court'. Therefore, the rule of autre fois acquit cannot be invoked. Neither the issue estoppel rule is attracted. The issue estoppel rule is but a facet of the doctrine of autre fois acquit. Even though the accused was given benefit of doubt in earlier proceedings the decision of the Collector of Customs does not amount to a verdict of acquittal in favour of accused so as to attract the rule of issue estoppel. AIR 1953 SC 325 & AIR 1959 SC 375 & (1950) AC 458 & AIR 1956 SC 415 & AIR 1960 SC 239, Foll.

(Paras 7, 8)

(B) Constitution of India, Article 226 — Criminal prosecution — Delay in filing complaint — No ground by itself in dismissing complaint — Delay can be considered in arriving at final verdict — Criminal P. C. (1898), Section 190.

(Para 9)

(C) Criminal P. C. (1898), Sections 190 (1), 173, 94, 251A, 162 — Case instituted on private complaint — Documents referred in Section 173 (4) cannot be available to accused — 69 Bom LR 421, Reversed.

Where the criminal prosecution is instituted on private complaint the documents mentioned in sub-clause (4) of Section 173 cannot be made available to the accused. Section 173 is attracted only in a case investigated by a police officer under Chapter XIV of the Criminal P. C., followed up by a final report under Section 173, Cr. P. C. Act 26 of 1955 made substantial changes in the procedure to be adopted in the matter of enquiry in cases instituted on police reports. That procedure is set out in Section 251A Criminal P. C. but in a case instituted on private complaint and governed by Sections 252 to 259, the right given to accused under Section 162 is sufficient to safeguard his interests. The copies of the documents cannot be made available to the accused by taking aid of Sec. 94 also. This section does not empower a Magistrate to direct the prosecution to give copies of any documents to an accused person. 69 Bom LR 421, Reversed.

(Paras 11, 12)

(D) Criminal P. C. (1898), Sections 439, 94 — Revision — Summoning of documents — Matter is within discretion of trial Court — Interference in revision — Propriety — 69 Bom LR 421, Reversed.

Whether a particular document should be summoned or not is essentially within the discretion of the trial Court. Except for very good reasons, the High Court should not interfere with the discretion conferred on the trial Courts in the matter of summoning documents.

(Para 13)

Where the High Court has not come to the conclusion that the documents in question, if not produced in Court are likely to be destroyed or tampered with or the same are not likely to be made available when required, the order of the Trial Court refusing the request of the accused to compel the prosecution to produce certain documents could not be interfered with in revision. 69 Bom LR 421, Reversed.

(Para 13)

Cases Referred: Chronological Paras

(1960) AIR 1960 SC 239 (V 47)=

(1960) 2 SCR 58= 1960 Cri LJ 289, N. R. Ghose v. State of West Bengal 8

(1959) AIR 1959 SC 375 (V 46)= 1959 Supp 1 SCR 274= 1959 Cri LJ 392, Thomas Dana v. State of Punjab 7

(1956) AIR 1956 SC 415 (V 43)= 1956 Cri LJ 805, Pritam Singh v. State of Punjab 8

(1953) AIR 1953 SC 325 (V 40)= 1953 SCR 730= 1953 Cri LJ 1432, Maqbool Hussain v. State of Bombay 7

(1950) 1950 AC 458= 66 TLR

(Pt. 2) 254, Sambasivan v. Public Prosecutor, Federation of Malaya 8
Mr. N. A. Bindra, Senior Advocate, (M/s. R. M. Parikh and S. P. Nayar, Advocates, with him), for Appellants (In Cr. A. No. 15 of 1967 and Respondent in Cr. A. No. 35 of 1967; Mr. N. N. Keswani, Advocate, for Appellants (In Cr. A. No. 35 of 1967 and Respondents in Cr. A. No. 15 of 1967); Mr. K. R. Chaudhuri, Advocate, for Intervener, (In Cr. A. No. 15 of 1967).

The Judgment of the Court was delivered by

HEGDE, J.:— These appeals by certificate arise from the decision of the High Court of Bombay in Criminal Revision Application No. 238 of 1966 wherein the following questions of law arise for decision:

(i) Whether the prosecution from which these Criminal Revision Petitions arose is barred under Article 20 (2) of the Constitution as against accused Nos. 1 and 2 in that case by reason of the decision of the Collector of Customs in the proceedings under the Sea Customs Act?

(ii) Whether under any circumstance the finding of the Collector of Customs that the 1st and 2nd accused are not proved to be guilty operated as an issue estoppel in the Criminal case against those accused?

(iii) Whether the present prosecution amounts to an abuse of the process of the Court in view of inordinate delay in launching the same and consequently whether it is liable to be quashed?

(iv) Whether Section 173 (4), Criminal Procedure Code is applicable to the facts of this case and

(v) Whether the documents mentioned in the petition filed by the 1st accused on August 3, 1965 are required to be summoned under Section 94, Criminal Procedure Code?

2. The aforementioned questions were raised before the trial Magistrate by the 1st accused by means of an application but the learned Magistrate found no substance in the pleas advanced in that application and accordingly he dismissed the same as per his order dated 25-1-1966. In revision, a Division Bench of the Bombay High Court agreeing with the trial Magistrate negatived all but one of the contentions advanced on behalf of accused Nos. 1 and 2. It did not agree with the learned Magistrate that there was no need, at that stage to summon the statements of witnesses recorded by the Customs authorities in the enquiry under the Customs Act. It directed the learned Magistrate to summon those statements and curiously enough, it went further and directed him to see that the prosecution made available the copies of those statements to the accused before the commencement of the enquiry in the case. In so far as the other documents called for are concerned, the High Court after indicating, what according to it, is the law on the subject left the matter to the discretion of the learned Magistrate.

3 Criminal Appeal No. 15 of 1967 is filed by the Assistant Collector of Customs, Bombay and the State of Maharashtra and Criminal Appeal No. 35 of 1967 is the appeal filed by accused Nos. 1 and 2 in the case (Case No. 98 of 1965 in the Court of the Chief Presidency Magistrate, Bombay). The appellants in Criminal Appeal No. 15 of 1967 challenge the correctness of the decision of the Bombay High Court in so far as it went against them and the appellants in Criminal Appeal No. 35 of 1967 challenge that decision in other respects.

4. The prosecution case is that the accused persons and some other unknown persons had entered into a conspiracy at Bombay and other places in the beginning of October 1959 or thereabout for the purpose of smuggling goods into India and in pursuance of that conspiracy they had smuggled several items of foreign goods in the years 1959 and 1960.

5. In that connection an enquiry was held by the Customs authorities. In the course of the enquiry some of the goods said to have been smuggled were seized. After the close of the enquiry those goods were ordered to be confiscated. In addition penalty was imposed on some of the accused. Thereafter on February 19, 1965, the Assistant Collector of Customs, Bombay after obtaining the required sanction of the Government filed a complaint against five persons including the appellants in Criminal Appeal No. 35 of 1967 (accused Nos. 1 and 2 in the case) under Section 120-B, Indian Penal Code read with clauses (37), (75), (76) and (81) of Section 167 of the Sea Customs Act, 1878 (Act VIII of 1878) as well as under Section 5 of the Imports and Exports (Control) Act, 1947. Before the commencement of the enquiry in that complaint the 1st accused filed on August 3, 1965, the application mentioned above.

6. Now we shall proceed to examine the contentions set out earlier.

6A. Reliance on Article 20 (2) is placed under the following circumstances. In the enquiry held by the Collector of Customs, he gave the benefit of doubt to accused Nos. 1 and 2. This is what he stated therein:

"As regards M/s. Larmel Enterprises (of which accused No. 1 is the proprietor and accused No. 2 is the Manager) although it is apparent that they have directly assisted the importers in their illegal activities and are morally guilty, since there is no conclusive evidence against them to hold them as persons concerned in the act of unauthorised importation, they escape on a benefit of doubt."

7. Despite this finding the Assistant Collector in his complaint referred to earlier seeks to prosecute these accused persons. Hence the question is whether that prosecution is barred under Article 20 (2) of the Constitution which says that no person shall be prosecuted and punished for the same offence more than once. This Article has no direct bearing on the question at issue. Evidently those accused persons want to spell out from this Article the rule of autre fois acquit embodied in S. 403, Criminal Procedure Code. Assuming we can do that, still it is not possible to hold that a proceeding before the Collector of Customs is a prosecution for an offence. In order to get the benefit of Section 403, Criminal Procedure Code or Article 20 (2), it is necessary for an accused person to establish that he had been tried by a "Court of competent jurisdiction" for an offence and he is convicted or acquitted of that offence and the said conviction or acquittal is in force. If that much is established, it can be contended that he is not liable to be tried again for the same offence nor on the same facts for any other offence for which a different charge from the one made against him might have been made under Section 230 or for which he might have been convicted under Section 273. It has been repeatedly held by this Court that adjudication before a Collector of Customs is not a "prosecution" nor the Collector of Customs a "Court". In Maqbool Hussain v. State of Bombay, 1953 SCR 730 = (AIR 1953 SC 325), this Court held that the wording of Article 20 of the Constitution and the words used therein show that the proceedings therein contemplated are proceedings of the nature of criminal proceedings before a Court of law or a judicial tribunal and "prosecution" in this context would mean an initiation or starting of proceedings of a criminal nature before a Court of law or a judicial tribunal in accordance with the procedure prescribed in the statute which creates the offence and regulates the procedure. This Court further held that where a person against whom proceedings had been taken by the Sea Customs authorities under Section 167 of the Sea Customs Act and an order for confiscation of goods had been passed, was subsequently prosecuted before a Criminal Court for an offence under Section 23 of the Foreign Exchange Regulation Act in respect of the same act, the proceeding before the Sea Customs authorities was not a "prosecution" and the order for confiscation was not a "punishment" inflicted by a Court or judicial tribunal within the meaning of Article 20 (2) of the Constitution and hence his subsequent prosecution was not barred. The said rule was reiterated in Thomas Dana v. State of Punjab, 1959 Supp 1 SCR 274= (AIR 1959 SC 375) and in several other cases.

8. We shall now take up the contention that the finding of the Collector of Customs referred to earlier operated as an issue estoppel in the present prosecution. The issue estoppel rule is but a facet of the doctrine of autre fois acquit. In Sambasivan v. Public Prosecutor, Federation of Malaya, 1950 AC 458 at p. 479, Lord MacDermott enunciated the said rule thus:

"The effect of a verdict of acquittal pronounced by a competent Court on a lawful charge and after a lawful trial is not completely stated by saying that the person acquitted cannot be tried again for the same offence. To that it must be added that the verdict is binding and conclusive in all subsequent proceedings between the parties to the adjudication. The maxim "Res judicata pro veritate accipitur" is no less applicable to criminal than to civil proceedings. Here, the appellant having been acquitted at the first trial on the charge of having ammunition in his possession, the prosecution was bound to accept the correctness of that verdict and was precluded from taking any step to challenge it at the second trial. And the appellant was no less entitled to rely on his acquittal in so far as it might be relevant in his defence. That it was not conclusive of his innocence on the firearm charge is plain, but it undoubtedly reduced in some degree the weight of the case against him, for at the first trial the facts proved in support of one charge were clearly relevant to the other having regard to the circumstances in which the ammunition and revolver were found and the fact that they fitted each other."

The rule laid down in that decision was adopted by this Court in Pritam Singh v. State of Punjab, AIR 1956 SC 415 and again in N. R. Ghose v. State of West Bengal, (1960) 2 SCR 58= (AIR 1960 SC 239). But before an accused can call into aid the above rule, he must establish that in a previous lawful trial before a competent court, he has secured a verdict of acquittal which verdict is binding on his prosecutor. In the instant case for the reasons already mentioned, we are unable to hold that the proceeding before the Collector of Customs is a criminal trial. From this it follows that the decision of the Collector does not amount to a verdict of acquittal in favour of accused Nos. 1 and 2.

9. This takes us to the contention whether the prosecution must be quashed because of the delay in instituting the same. It is urged on behalf of the accused that because of the delay in launching the same, the present prosecution amounts to an abuse of the process of the Court. The High Court has repelled that contention. It has come to the conclusion that the delay in filing the complaint is satisfactorily explained. That apart, it is not the case of the accused that any period of limitation is prescribed for filing the complaint. Hence the Court before which the complaint was filed could not have thrown out the same on the sole ground that there has been delay in filing it. The question of delay in filing a complaint may be a circumstance to be taken into consideration in arriving at the final verdict. But by itself it affords no ground for dismissing the complaint. Hence we see no substance in the contention that the prosecution should be quashed on the ground that there was delay in instituting the complaint.

10. We also see no merit in the contention that the accused in this case are entitled to the benefit of Section 173 (4), Criminal Procedure Code which provides that before the commencement of the enquiry or trial the officer-in-charge of the police station who forwards a report under Section 173, Criminal Procedure Code, should furnish or cause to be furnished to the accused, free of cost, a copy of the report forwarded under Section 173 (1), Criminal Procedure Code of the first information report recorded under Section 154, Criminal Procedure Code and all other documents or relevant extracts thereof on which the prosecution proposes to rely, including the statements and confessions, if any, recorded under Section 164, Criminal Procedure Code and the statements recorded under Sec. 161, Criminal Procedure Code of all the persons whom the prosecution proposes to examine as its witnesses.

11. On a plain reading of Section 173, Criminal Procedure Code, it is clear that the same is wholly inapplicable to the facts of the present case. In the instant case no report had been sent under Section 173, Criminal Procedure Code. Therefore that provision is not attracted. That provision is attracted only in a case investigated by a police officer under Chapter XIV of the Criminal Procedure Code, followed up by a final report under Section 173, Criminal Procedure Code. It may be remembered that sub-section (4) of Section 173, was incorporated into the Criminal Procedure Code for the first time by Central Act 26 of 1955, presumably because of the changes effected in the mode of trials in cases instituted on police reports. Before the Criminal Procedure Code was amended by Act 26 of 1955, there was no difference in the procedure to be adopted in the cases instituted on police reports and in other cases. Till then in all cases irrespective of the fact whether they were instituted on police reports or on private complaints, the procedure regarding enquiries or trials was identical. In both type of cases, there were two distinct stages i.e., 'the enquiry stage' and 'the trial stage'. When the prosecution witnesses were examined in a case before a charge is framed, it was open to the accused to cross-examine them. Hence there was no need for making available to the accused the documents mentioned in sub-section (4) of Section 173, Criminal Procedure Code. The right given to him under Section 162, Criminal Procedure Code was thought to be sufficient to safeguard his interest. But Act 26 of 1955 as mentioned earlier made substantial changes in the procedure to be adopted in the matter of enquiry in cases instituted on police reports. That procedure is now set out in Section 251 (A), Criminal Procedure Code. This new procedure truncated the enquiry stage. Section 251 (A), Criminal Procedure Code says that the Magistrate if upon consideration of all the documents referred to in Section 173 and making such examination if any, of the accused as he thinks necessary and after giving the prosecution and the accused an opportunity of being heard considers the charge against the accused to be groundless, he shall discharge him but if he is of opinion that there is ground for presuming that the accused has committed an offence triable as a warrant case which he is competent to try and which in his opinion could be adequately punished by him, he shall frame in writing a charge against him. Under the procedure prescribed in Section 251 (A), Criminal Procedure Code but for the facility provided to him under Section 173 (4) of that Code an accused person would have been greatly handicapped in his defence. But in a case instituted on a complaint, like the one before us and governed by Sections 252 and 259 of the Criminal Procedure Code, no such difficulty arises. Therein the position is as it was before the amendment of the Criminal Procedure Code in 1955.

12. We are unable to agree with the learned Judges of the High Court that the legislature did not make available the benefit of Section 173 (4), Criminal Procedure Code in cases instituted otherwise than on police reports by oversight. The observation of the learned Judges in the course of their judgment that "Even the great Homer occasionally nods. There is nothing to show that the legislature has applied its mind to the question of the amendment of the procedure so far as the investigation of an offence under the Sea Customs Act is concerned at the time when it was considering amendments to the Criminal Procedure Code" is without any basis. In the first place, it is not proper to assume except on very good grounds that there is any lacuna in any statute or that the legislature has not done its duty properly. Secondly from the history of the legislation to which reference has been made earlier, the reason for introducing Section 173 (4) is clear. The learned Judges of the High Court were constrained to hold that Section 173 (4), Criminal Procedure Code in terms does not apply to the present case. But strangely enough that even after coming to the conclusion that provision is inapplicable to the facts of the present case, they have directed the learned Magistrate to require the prosecution to make available to the accused, the copies of the statements recorded from the prosecution witnesses during the enquiry under the Customs Act. They have purported to make that order under Section 94 (1), Criminal Procedure Code which to the extent material for our present purpose reads:

"Whenever any Court considers that production of any document or other thing is necessary or desirable for the purposes of any enquiry, trial or other proceeding under this Code by or before such Court such Court may issue a summons to the person in whose possession and power such document or thing is believed to be, requiring him to attend and produce it, or to produce it, at the time and place stated in the summons or order."

This section does not empower a Magistrate to direct the prosecution to give copies of any documents to an accused person. That much appears to be plain from the language of that section. It was impermissible for the High Court to read into Section 94, Criminal Procedure Code the requirements of Section 173 (4), Criminal Procedure Code. The High Court was not justified, in indirectly applying to cases instituted on private complaints the requirements of Section 173 (4), Criminal Procedure Code.

13. That apart we do not think that the High Court was justified in interfering with the discretion of the learned Magistrate. Whether a particular document should be summoned or not is essentially in the discretion of the trial Court. In the instant case the Special Public Prosecutor had assured the learned Trial Magistrate that he would keep in readiness the statements of witnesses recorded by the Customs authorities and shall make available to the defence Counsel the statement of the concerned witness as and when he is examined. In view of that assurance, the learned Magistrate observed in his order:

"The recording of the prosecution evidence is yet to commence in this case and at present there are no materials before me to decide whether or not the production of any of the statements and documents named by the accused in his application is desirable or necessary for the purpose of the enquiry or trial. As stated at the outset, the learned Special Prosecutor has given an undertaking that he would produce all the relevant statements and documents at the proper time in the course of the hearing of the case. The request made for the issue of the summons under Section 94, Criminal Procedure Code is also omnibus."

The reasons given by the learned Magistrate in support of his order are good reasons. The High Court has not come to the conclusion that the documents in question, if not produced in Court are likely to be destroyed or tampered with or the same are not likely to be made available when required. It has proceeded on the erroneous basis that the accused will not have a fair trial unless they are supplied with the copies of those statements even before the enquiry commences. Except for very good reasons, the High Court should not interfere with the discretion conferred on the Trial Courts in the matter of summoning documents. Such interferences would unnecessarily impede the progress of cases and result in waste of public money and time as has happened in this case.

14. For the reasons mentioned above, we allow Criminal Appeal No. 15 of 1967 and dismiss Criminal Appeal No. 35 of 1967. In other words, we restore the order of the learned Magistrate.

Order accordingly.

AIR 1970 SUPREME COURT 967 (V 57 C 196)

J. C. SHAH AND K. S. HEGDE, JJ.

Dewan Singh, Appellant v. Champat Singh and others, Respondents.

Civil Appeal No. 1369 of 1965, D/- 17-10-1969.

(A) Limitation Act (1908), Article 158 — Setting aside of award — No proof that notice of filing of award into Court was given to defendant — Objection by defendant to the award cannot be rejected on ground of limitation. (Para 6)

(B) Arbitration Act (1940), Section 30 — Misconduct of arbitrators — Arbitrators deciding dispute on their personal knowledge — Agreement between parties not empowering them to do so — Award vitiated.

It is normally an implied term of an arbitration agreement that the arbitrators must decide the dispute in accordance with the ordinary law. That rule can be departed from only if specifically provided for in the submission.

The recital in the agreement between the parties that the arbitrators may decide the disputes referred to them in "whatever manner" they think does not mean that the arbitrators can decide those disputes on the basis of their personal knowledge. The proceedings before the arbitrators are quasi-judicial proceedings. They must be conducted in accordance with the principles of natural justice. The parties to the submission may be in the dark as regards the personal knowledge of the arbitrators. There may be misconceptions or wrong assumptions in the mind of the arbitrators. If the parties are not given opportunity to correct those misconceptions or wrong assumptions, grave injustice may result. (1951) 1 KB 240, Rel. on. (Para 9)

CN/DN/F227/69/DHZ/A

Cases Referred: Chronological Pars
(1951) 1951-1 KB 240 = 1950-2 All
ER 618, Chandris v. Ishrandtsen
Moller Co. 9

The following Judgment of the Court was delivered by

HEGDE, J.:— This appeal by special leave arises from an arbitration proceeding. The appellant, the 1st respondent and one Sukh Lal who died during the pendency of these proceedings referred their disputes to five arbitrators as per the written agreement executed by them on September 9, 1955. Arbitrators made their award on October 11, 1955. They duly served on the parties to the arbitration agreement, notice of making and signing the award. The award was thereafter registered. On November 1, 1955 the appellant filed a suit in the Court of Munsiff Hawali Meerut praying that the award in question be made a rule of the Court and decree passed in accordance with the same. It is said that the notices taken in that suit could not be personally served on the defendants as they refused to accept the same. That fact was reported to the Court by the process server as per his report dated 19-11-1955. Thereafter the defendants filed their written statement on February 3, 1956 wherein they challenged the validity of the award on various grounds. They contended that the award was vitiated because of misconduct on the part of the arbitrators inasmuch as the arbitrators decided the disputes referred to them primarily on the basis of their personal knowledge. They also contended that the arbitration agreement was obtained from them by exercise of undue influence. Their further contention was that the subject-matter of the dispute could not under law be referred to arbitration in view of the provisions of U. P. Act 1 of 1951. It was also contended by them that the suit was barred by time.

2. The trial Court accepted the contention of the defendants that the arbitrators were guilty of misconduct. Dealing with the issue of undue influence, it came to the conclusion that the arbitration agreement was not executed by the defendants according to their free will. But it held that the plea of undue influence was not made out. It upheld the contention of the defendants that the subject-matter of the dispute could not have been referred to arbitration in view of the provisions of U. P. Act 1 of 1951.

3. In appeal the learned Civil Judge reversed the decree of the Trial Court. While agreeing with the Trial Court that the arbitrators had used their personal knowledge in deciding the disputes referred to them, that Court held that under the terms of the agreement, it was open to the arbitrators to decide the disputes in question on the basis of their personal knowledge. Dealing with the question of the arbitrators' competence to decide the dispute, that Court held that the question whether the dispute came within the scope of U. P. Act 1 of 1951 or not is a question of law and the same could have been referred to arbitration. It went further and held that as the defendants had not taken their objection to the award within the time prescribed, the same could not have been entertained by the trial Court.

4. The High Court in revision differed from the Appellate Court on all the points mentioned above. It came to the conclusion that the arbitration agreement did not specifically empower the arbitrators to decide the disputes referred to them on the basis of their personal knowledge; they having utilized their personal knowledge in deciding the disputes, they were guilty of legal misconduct and consequently the award made by them is vitiated. It also came to the conclusion that the disputes in question could not have been referred to arbitration in view of the provisions of U. P. Act 1 of 1951. It overruled the decision of the Appellate Court that the defendants had not taken their objections to the award within the prescribed time.

5. We may at this stage mention that the contention that the suit was barred by time was not pressed before the Trial Court or in any other Court.

6. There is no basis for the finding of the appellate Court that the objection taken by the defendants to the award was barred by time. As seen earlier, the suit to make the award a rule of the Court was brought by one of the parties to the arbitration agreement and not by any arbitrator. The plaint filed does not disclose that the award given had been produced along with it. There was some controversy as to whether that award was produced along with the plaint. There is no need to go into that question as we shall presently see. It is not said that along with the plaint copy, a copy of the award had been sent to the defendants. Nor is it said that notice of the suit sent to the defendants mentioned the fact that the award had been filed into Court along with the plaint. Article 158 of the Limitation Act, 1908 gives to party 30 days time for applying to set aside an award or get an award remitted for reconsideration from the date of the service of the notice of filing of the award. There is absolutely no proof in this case that a notice of the filing of the award into Court had ever been given to the defendants. Hence the objections taken by the defendants to the award could not have been rejected on the ground of limitation.

7. Now coming to the question of misconduct on the part of the arbitrators, that allegation is founded on the fact that the arbitrators decided the disputes referred to them on the basis of their personal knowledge. That allegation has been accepted as true both by the Trial Court as well the Appellate Court. In fact the award says:

"We gave our consideration to the entire dispute which is in full knowledge of us, the panchas".

Therefore there is hardly any room to contest the allegation that the arbitrators had decided the disputes referred to them primarily on the basis of their personal knowledge. Under these circumstances all that we have to see is whether the appellate Court was right in concluding that under the arbitration agreement, the arbitrators had been empowered to decide the disputes referred to them on the basis of their personal knowledge.

8. The material portion of the arbitration agreement which is in Hindi translated into English reads thus:

"All the panchas and Sarpanchas are residents of village Keli Pargana Sarawa.

The power is given to them that the said Panchas and Sarpanchas whatever decision in whatever manner will give in relation to our land described below, whatever land may be given to any party or whatever party may be decided to be the tenant of the entire land, whatever compensation they may decide to be given to any party, whatever decision they will give that will be final and acceptable and they will have the right to inform us of their decision, unanimous or of majority and get the same registered and we will fully comply with their decision."

9. This agreement does not empower the arbitrators either specifically or by necessary implication to decide the disputes referred to them on the basis of their personal knowledge. The recital in that agreement that the arbitrators may decide the disputes referred to them in "whatever manner" they think does not mean that they can decide those disputes on the basis of their personal knowledge. The proceedings before the arbitrators are quasi-judicial proceedings. They must be conducted in accordance with the principles of natural justice. The parties to the submission may be in the dark as regards the personal knowledge of the arbitrators. There may be misconceptions or wrong assumptions in the mind of the arbitrators. If the parties are not given opportunity to correct those misconceptions or wrong assumptions, grave injustice may result. It is nobody's case that the parties to the submission were informed about the nature of the personal knowledge, the arbitrators had and that they were given opportunity to correct any misconception or wrong assumption. Further in the present case there were as many as five arbitrators. It is not known whether the award was made on the basis of the personal knowledge of all of them or only some of them. Arbitration is a reference of a dispute for hearing in a judicial manner. It is true that parties to an agreement of reference may include in it such clauses as they think fit unless prohibited by law. It is normally an implied term of an arbitration agreement that the arbitrators must decide the dispute in accordance with the ordinary law: see Chandris v. Isbrandtsen Moller Co., 1951-1 KB 240 that rule can be departed from only if specifically provided for in the submission.

10. The Appellate Court, in our opinion, has misread the arbitration agreement and hence it erroneously came to the conclusion that the arbitrators had been empowered to decide the dispute on the basis of their personal knowledge.

11. It was contended on behalf of the appellant that in exercise of its powers under Section 115 of the Code of Civil Procedure, the High Court could not have corrected the erroneous interpretation placed by the Appellate Court as to the scope of the arbitration agreement. We have not thought it necessary to go into that question as, in our opinion, the decision reached by the High Court is an eminently just one. Hence we do not feel called upon in exercise of our discretionary power under Article 136 of the Constitution to interfere with the decision of the High Court. In view of our above conclusion, there is no need to go into the question whether the subject-matter of the disputes could have been referred to arbitration.

12. In the result this appeal fails and the same is dismissed with costs.

Appeal dismissed.

AIR 1970 SUPREME COURT 970

(V 37 C 197)

(From: Allahabad)

J. C. SHAH AND K. S. HEGDE, JJ.

Ram Gopal and another, Appellants v. Alladia and others, Respondents.

Civil Appeal No. 1642 of 1966, D/- 27-11-1969.

Constitution of India, Article 136 — Registered agreement between landlord and defendant entered in the year 1911 before amendment of Section 107, T. P. Act in 1929 and signed by defendant only — Landlord thereby permitting defendant to construct house on suit property — Recital not to evict defendant or his descendants so long as they pay rent regularly — Defendant constructing house on suit property accordingly and paying rent regularly — Suit for eviction by landlord — Breach of any terms of agreement not established — High Court holding that defendant being licensee could not be evicted — Appeal against — Interference under Article 136 being discretionary Supreme Court refused to interfere — Easements Act (1882), Section 60. (Paras 4, 5)

The Judgment of this Court was delivered by

HEGDE, J.:— This is an appeal by special leave. The plaintiff is the appellant. He sued for the possession of the suit properties after issuing a notice purporting to terminate the tenancy of the defendants (respondents in this appeal). The case of the plaintiff is that the defendants are monthly tenants. The trial Court as well as the 1st appellate Court upheld the contention of the appellant and decreed the suit for possession. In Second Appeal, the High Court reversed the decree and judgment of the Courts below and dismissed the suit on two grounds. It firstly held that as the defendants have become Bhumidars under the provisions of the U. P. Urban Areas Zamindari Abolition and Land Reforms Act (U. P. Act 9 of 1957), they cannot be evicted. Secondly it came to the conclusion that the defendants are licensees and not lessees and as such they could not be evicted.

2. One Mst. Isa Bela and her children were the owners of the suit properties. They entered into a registered agreement with Masita, the father of the defendants under which they permitted Masita to construct a house on the suit properties. The agreement in question was entered into in the year 1911. It is marked as Exh. Ka-6 in the case. That document was signed only by Masita. Admittedly Isa Bela and her children agreed to the terms embodied in the document. Under that document Masita was to pay rent to Isa Bela and her children at the rate of Rs. 4/- per annum. The document further says:

"Firstly that I shall continue to pay the rent annually in the office of the proprietors, aforesaid, at mauza Mussorie or to their karinda. I shall take a receipt for the same from the Manager, duly signed by him. Without that receipt any objection regarding the payment of rent shall be invalid. If the rent, aforesaid, remains unpaid, I shall immediately be liable to be ejected. Secondly that I shall take away the entire material existing in the house, within one month after I vacate the same. I shall, thereafter, vacate the land. If during this period, I, the executant or my representative and successors do not remove the materials or do not vacate the land, the proprietors, aforesaid shall have the right to take the materials in their proprietary possession and occupation. I, the executant, my representatives or successors or the owner of the materials shall have no claim to any cost or material against the proprietors, aforesaid. Thirdly, that I shall not sublet the house aforesaid to any other person on rent on my own behalf and on my own authority nor I shall allow any one to settle therein. If I do so, the proprietors aforesaid shall at all times, have the right to get their house vacated under these circumstances and eject us therefrom. I shall have no objection."

3. In pursuance of the afore-mentioned agreement the suit property was put in the possession of Masita. The house put up by Masita was reconstructed by the defendants. The defendants have been regularly paying Rs. 4/- per annum to the owners of the suit property. It is not said that they had contravened any of the terms in the agreement. The original owner sold the suit property to one Babu Ram who in turn sold the same to the plaintiffs. The plaintiffs have brought this suit on the basis of the agreement entered into in 1911.

4. The principal question debated before the High Court and the Courts below is whether Exh. Ka-6 evidences a lease or a license? It may be noted that the agreement was entered into in the year 1911 long before the third paragraph of Section 107 of the Transfer of Property Act was incorporated into that section. But for our present purpose, it is not necessary for us to go into the question whether under the law as it stood in 1911 Exh. Ka-6 can be considered as a valid lease as only Masita had signed that document. On that question some of the High Courts have differed. But what is clear is that right from 1911, the defendants are enjoying the suit property on the strength of the agreement entered into between them and the original owner. From that agreement it is clear that the original owner had agreed not to evict Masita and his descendants from the suit property so long as they conform to the terms of the agreement.

5. Under these circumstances we think that the claim made by the plaintiffs is a highly unjust one. Hence we do not think that we will be justified in exercising our discretionary power under Article 136 of the Constitution in interfering with the judgment of the High Court. In this view of the matter there is no need to go into the correctness of the decision of the High Court that the defendants have acquired Bhumidari rights in the suit property. That question is left open to be decided in future, if necessary.

6. In the result this appeal fails and the same is dismissed with costs.

Appeal dismissed.

AIR 1970 SUPREME COURT 971
(V 57 C 198)

(From: Allahabad)*

S. M. SIKRI, R. S. BACHAWAT
AND K. S. HEGDE, JJ.

Bhagwan Das, Appellant v. Paras Nath,
Respondent.

Civil Appeal No. 1617 of 1968, D/- 27-9-1968.

(A) Houses and Rents — U. P. (Temporary) Control of Rent and Eviction Act (3 of 1947), Sections 3 and 7-F — Restrictions on evictions — Permission to sue — Power to revoke, of Commissioner and State Government — Power of State Government is exhausted once suit for eviction is instituted.

When the Commissioner sets aside under Section 3 (3) the order passed by the District Magistrate granting permission to file a suit for ejecting a tenant, the order of the Commissioner prevails. If he cancels the permission granted by the District Magistrate there is no effective permission left and the suit instituted by the plaintiff without awaiting his decision must be treated as one filed without any valid permission by the District Magistrate. Decision of Upadhyaya, J., in 1958 All LJ 584, Approved. (Para 7)

From this it follows that the Full Bench decision in Bashi Ram's case, AIR 1965 All 498 to the extent it held that a suit filed by the landlord after obtaining the permission of the District Magistrate cannot become infructuous even if the Commissioner revokes the permission, is incorrect. But the Full Bench was right in holding that a suit validly instituted after obtaining a permission as required by Section 3 (1) does not cease to be maintainable even if the State Government revokes after the institution of the suit, the permission granted. If the State Government revokes the permission granted before the institution of the suit then there would be no valid permission to sue. In other words, the State Government's power to revoke the permission granted under Section 3 (1) gets exhausted once the suit is validly instituted.

(Para 7)

*(Second Appeal No. 2296 of 1961, D/- 19-3-1968 — All.)

CN/DN/E889/68/VBB/A

In this view, a decree for eviction obtained in a suit instituted after obtaining the permission of the Commissioner under sub-section (3) of Section 3 does not become unenforceable if the State Government acting under Section 7-F of that Act revokes the permission granted by the Commissioner after the decree is passed.

(Paras 1, 7)

(Desirability of amendment of the Act to remove ambiguities in drafting, pointed out.)

(Para 7)

(B) Civil P. C. (1908), Pre. — Interpretation of Statutes — Rent Control legislation — Defective drafting — Intention of legislature — Rule of construction — Grammatical construction to be preferred to all other rules of construction, to find out intention of legislature. (Para 7)

Cases Referred: Chronological Paras

(1965) AIR 1965 SC 1767 (V 52) =

(1965) 3 SCR 218, Shri Bhagwan v. Ram Chand 6

(1965) AIR 1965 All 493 (V 52) =

ILR (1965) 1 All 545 (FB), Bashi Ram v. Mantri Lal 2, 4, 5, 7

(1964) AIR 1964 All 210 (V 51) =

1963 All LJ 620, Basant Lal Sah v. Bhagwati Prasad Sah 4

(1958) 1958 All LJ 584 = 1958 All

All WR 685, Munshi Lal v. Shambhu Nath Ram Kisban 7

(1958) 1958 All LJ 724 = 1958 All

WR (HC) 769, Dr. S. L. Khopari v. State Govt. of U. P. 4

M/s. J. P. Goyal and A. C. Ratnaparkhi, Advocates, for Appellant; Mr. C. B. Agarwala, Senior Advocate, (Mr. R. Mahalingier, Advocate, with him), for Respondent.

The Judgment of the Court was delivered by HECDE, J.: The question of law that arises for decision in this appeal by special leave is not free from difficulty. That question is, whether a decree for eviction obtained in a suit instituted after obtaining the permission of the Commissioner under sub-section (3) of Section 3 of the U. P. (Temporary) Control of Rent and Eviction Act, 1947 (to be hereinafter referred to as the Act) becomes unenforceable if the State Government acting under Section 7-F of that Act revokes the permission granted by the Commissioner after the decree is passed?

2. The appellant was a tenant of the respondent in respect of a shop in Baluganj in Agra. On January 2, 1959, the respondent applied to the District Magistrate under Section 3 (1) of the Act for permission to institute a suit against the appellant for evicting him from the shop in question. That application was rejected by the District Magistrate as per his order of July 9, 1959. The respondent took up the matter in revision to the Commissioner under sub-section (2) of Section 3. The Commissioner reversed the order of the District Magistrate and granted the permission asked for on October 18, 1959. As against that order the appellant moved the State Government under Section 7-F on November 17, 1959. On January 1, 1960, the respondent served on the appellant a notice under Section 106 of the Transfer of Property Act. The appellant replied to that notice on January 6, 1960. In that reply he informed the respondent that he had already moved the State Government to revoke the permission granted by the Commissioner. On February 13, 1960 the respondent instituted suit No. 115 of 1960 in the Court of Munsiff, Agra seeking for the eviction of the appellant from the suit premises. The appellant filed his written statement in that case on May 7, 1960. Therein again he took the plea that the permission granted by the Commissioner is not final as he had moved the Government to revoke the same. The suit was decreed by the learned Munsiff on November 2, 1960. The appellants went up in appeal as against that order to the Civil Judge, Agra. On January 27, 1961, the State Government revoked the permission granted by the Commissioner during the pendency of the appeal. Relying on this order the Civil Judge of Agra allowed the appeal of the appellant on February 9, 1961. As against that decision the respondent went up in second appeal to the High Court. The High Court allowed the second appeal on 19th March, 1968 following the Full Bench decision of that Court in Bashi Ram v. Mantri Lal, ILR (1965) 1 All 545 = (AIR 1965 All 498) (FB). This appeal is directed against that decision.

3. The Act was intended as a temporary measure as could be gathered from its title as well as the preamble. It is deemed to have come into force on the 1st day of October 1946 though it was passed in 1947. Under the Act as originally stood, the decision of the District Magistrate under Section 3 was neither appealable nor revisable. As per the amendments effected in 1952 a limited power of revision was conferred on the Commissioner. By the Amending Act 17 of 1954, the power conferred on the Commissioner was enlarged and Section 7-F was incorporated in the Act which says that:

"the State Government may call for the records of any case granting or refusing to grant permission for the filing of a suit for eviction referred to in Section 3and make such order as appears to it necessary for the ends of justice."

The only sections in the Act material for the purpose of this appeal are Sections 3 and 7-F. Section 3 reads thus:

"Restrictions on evictions.—Subject to any order passed under sub-section (3), no suit shall, without the permission of the District Magistrate, be filed in any civil court against a tenant for his eviction from any accommodation, except on one or more of the following grounds:

(a) that the tenant is in arrears of rent for more than three months and has failed to pay the same to the landlord within one month of the service upon him of a notice of demand;

(b) that the tenant has wilfully caused or permitted to be caused substantial damage to the accommodation;

(c) that the tenant has, without the permission in writing of the landlord made or permitted to be made any such construction as, in the opinion of the court, has materially altered the accommodation or is likely substantially to diminish its value;

(d) that the tenant has created a nuisance or has done any act which is inconsistent with the purpose for which he was admitted to the tenancy of the accommodation, or which is likely to affect adversely and substantially the landlord's interest therein;

(e) that the tenant has on or after the 1st day of October, 1946, sub-let the whole or any portion of the accommodation without the permission of the landlord;

(f) that the tenant has renounced his character as such or denied the title of the landlord and the latter has not waived his right or condoned the conduct of the tenant;

(g) that the tenant was allowed to occupy the accommodation as a part of his contract of employment under the landlord and his employment has been determined.

Explanation. — For the purposes of sub-section (e) lodging a person in a hotel or a lodging-house shall not be deemed to be sub-letting.

(2) where any application has been made to the District Magistrate for permission to sue a tenant for eviction from any accommodation and the District Magistrate grants or refuses the permission, the party aggrieved by his order may, within 30 days from the date on which the order is communicated to him, apply to the Commissioner to revise the order.

(3) The Commissioner shall hear the application made under sub-section (2), as far as may be, within six weeks from the date of making it, and he may, if he is not satisfied as to the correctness, legality or propriety of the order passed by the District Magistrate or as to the regularity of proceedings held before him, alter or revise his order, or make such other order as may be just and proper.

(4) The order of the Commissioner under sub-section (3) shall, subject to any order passed by the State Government under Section 7 (F) be final.

We have earlier quoted the relevant portion of Section 7 (F).

4. Conflicting opinions were expressed by different Benches of the Allahabad High Court as to the scope of Section 3 till the decision of the Full Bench in Bashi Ram's Case, ILR (1965) 1 All 545 = (AIR 1965 All 498) (FB). The Full Bench held that a decree obtained in a suit for eviction instituted after obtaining the requisite permission will not become unenforceable even if the State Government revoked, after the decree is passed, the permission granted, in exercise of its powers under Section 7-F. Majority of the Judges in that case further held that once a suit is instituted after obtaining the permission of the District Magistrate, any further order made either by the Commissioner or the State Government cannot affect the course of that suit or the decree passed therein. Dwivedi, J., the other Judge, did not express any opinion on that question but even according to him in the appeal filed against the decree, the appellate court cannot receive in evidence the order made by the State Government which means that the decree cannot be reversed on the ground that the State Government had revoked the permission granted. The correctness of the Full Bench decision is challenged by the appellant in this appeal. In support of his interpretation of Ss. 3 and 7-F he placed reliance on the decision of a Division Bench of the High Court of Allahabad in Dr. S. L. Khoparji v. State Govt. of U. P., 1958 All LJ 724. He also sought support from the decision of a Single Judge of that Court in Basant Lal Sah v. Bhagwati Prasad Sah, AIR 1964 All 210. It is not necessary to refer to the various decisions of the Allahabad High Court on this question. Suffice it to say that in that court there was serious cleavage of opinion on the question that we are considering in this appeal till the decision of the Full Bench in Bashi Ram's case, ILR (1965) 1 All 545 = (AIR 1965 All 498) (FB) (supra). We were given to understand that Dhavan, J., had doubted the correctness of the decision of the Full Bench and had requested the Chief Justice to constitute a larger Bench to consider the correctness of the decision in Bashi Ram's case, ILR (1965) 1 All 545 = (AIR 1965 All 498) (FB) but in view of the pendency of this appeal, the constitution of a larger bench was not considered necessary.

5. The contention of Mr. Goyal, the learned Counsel for the appellant was that the Act generally speaking, has restricted the right of the landlord to evict his tenant, to one or other of the grounds mentioned in Clauses (a) to (g) of Section 3 (1); but in order to meet any exceptional case, it is provided in Sec. 3 (1) that a suit for eviction may be instituted on any ground other than those mentioned in Clauses (a) to (g) if the permission of the District Magistrate is obtained; the order made by the District Magistrate is revisable both by the Commissioner as well as the State Government; the only order that is final is that made by the State Government. If a landlord chooses to institute a suit on the basis of the permission granted by the District Magistrate or the Commissioner without waiting for the decision of the State Government he takes the risk; if the State Government revokes the permission granted by the District Magistrate or the Commissioner then the suit must be deemed to have been instituted without permission and consequently not maintainable. Mr. Goyal urged that if the decision in Bashi Ram's case, ILR (1965) 1 All 545 = (AIR 1965 All 498) (FB) is accepted as correct then so far as the tenant is concerned, generally speaking, he cannot invoke the powers of the State Government under Section 7-F because immediately after the decision of the Commissioner, if the same is in his favour, the landlord is likely to institute a suit for eviction and thus nullify the power of the State Government under S. 7-F.

He urged that as Section 7-F empowers the State Government to revise the order made by the subordinate authorities whether the same is in favour of the landlord or the tenant we should not place an interpretation on Section 3 which would affect the power of the State Government to do justice to the tenants for whose benefit the Act has been enacted.

6. On the other hand it was urged by Mr. C. B. Aggarwal, learned Counsel for the respondent that the landlord has a right to sue for the eviction of his tenant under the provisions of the Transfer of Property Act subject to the restrictions stipulated therein. That is a statutory right. The provisions contained in the Act to the extent they encroach upon the rights of the landlord either specifically or by necessary implication control the rights of the landlord. In other respects the landlord's rights under the Transfer of Property Act remain unaffected. According to him the only restriction placed on the landlord in the matter of instituting a suit for eviction on grounds other than those mentioned in Clauses (a) to (g) in Section 3 (1) is to obtain the prior permission of the District Magistrate subject to the order made under sub-section (3) of Section 3 by the Commissioner; once a suit is validly instituted in accordance with those provisions, no order of the State Government can either interfere with the course of that suit or invalidate the decree obtained therein. He urged that if the position is as contended by the learned Counsel for the appellant, curious results are likely to follow. Section 7-F does not fix any period within which the State Government must act. It can exercise its power under that provision at any time it pleases—may be after 10 years or 20 years; the power conferred on the State Government is extremely wide as observed by this Court in Shri Bbagwan v. Ram Chand, (1965) 3 SCR 218 = (AIR 1965 SC 1767). Therefore it can revoke the permission granted after the decree for eviction is confirmed by the High Court or even, the Supreme Court and thus make a mockery of the judicial process; this could not have been the intention of the legislature. According to Mr. Aggarwal from the very scheme of the Act and from the very nature of the power conferred on the State Government, it cannot be exercised after a suit is instituted after complying with the requirements of sub-section (1) of Section 3. His further contention was that on a proper construction of sub-section (1) of Section 3, it would be seen that the suit instituted after obtaining the required permission being a validly instituted suit, its progress cannot be interrupted; the permission required under Section 3 (1) is the permission of the District Magistrate subject to any order under Sec. 3 (3) by the Commissioner; in other words the permission given by the District Magistrate is not final till affirmed by the Commissioner; till then it remains tentative; once the Commissioner affirms the same or grants the permission asked for it becomes final and thus amounts to a valid permission to sue; hence a suit filed on the basis of that permission is a validly instituted suit unless the permission granted was revoked by the State Government before the institution of the suit. Proceeding further he stated that it is true that the order of the Commissioner though final yet it is subject to any order that may be passed by the State Government; but Section 3 (1), the provision dealing with the permission to file a suit for eviction, does not refer to the order under Section 7-F; it only speaks of the permission granted by the District Magistrate subject to the order of the Commissioner and not further subject to any orders made by the State Government. In this connection he invited our attention to the fact that as against the order passed by the District Magistrate under sub-section (1) of Section 3, a revision petition can be filed before the Commissioner within 30 days of that order and not thereafter. The Commissioner has not even the power to condone the delay in filing the revision petition. Further under sub-section (3) of Section 3, the Commissioner is required to hear the application made under sub-section (2) of Section 3, as far as may be, within six weeks from the date of making it. All these provisions indicate that the legislature was of the opinion that the proceedings under Section 3 should be carried on expeditiously and the decision of the Commissioner should be considered as final. According to Mr. Aggarwal, the question of granting or refusing to grant the permission under Section 3 are primarily to be dealt with only by the District Magistrate and the Commissioner. They are the only tribunals in the hierarchy of the tribunals constituted for that purpose. The power given to the Government under Section 7-F is merely a supervisory power. That is why no limitation is imposed on the exercise of that power either in the matter of time within which it should be exercised or the circumstances under which it can be exercised. Such a power according to him is a reserve power and therefore has to be exercised before the Court's jurisdiction is invoked. He particularly laid emphasis on the fact that sub-section (1) of Section 3, the compliance of which is necessary before validly instituting the suit, does not at all refer to an order under Section 7-F.

7. After examining the provisions of this Act, we are constrained to observe that the drafting of this Act leaves considerable room for improvement despite the fact that it was amended twice over. Though it was intended to be a temporary measure when it was originally enacted, it has now remained in the statute book for over 20 years and there is no knowing how long the same will continue to be in force. Therefore it is but appropriate that the provisions of this Act should be clear and unambiguous. From sub-section (1) of Section 3 it is not possible to find out the contents of the powers of the District Magistrate. No guidelines are laid down therein to regulate the exercise of the powers of the District Magistrate. It is not possible to find out from that provision under what circumstances the District Magistrate can grant the permission asked for and under what circumstances he can refuse the same. It is likely that different District Magistrates are exercising that power in different ways. One consideration may appeal to one District Magistrate and a totally different consideration may influence another District Magistrate. It would have been appropriate if the legislature had defined the scope of the powers of the District Magistrate or at least laid down certain guide-lines for regulating his discretion. Sub-s. (3) of S. 3 says that if the Commissioner is not satisfied as to the correctness, legality or propriety of the order passed by the District Magistrate, he may alter or reverse the order of the District Magistrate or make such other order as may be just and proper. It is not possible to find out on what basis the Commissioner can determine the correctness, legality or propriety of the order made by the District Magistrate. As seen earlier no restrictions are placed on the powers of the District Magistrate in granting or refusing to grant the permission asked for under Section 3 (1). Therefore the only thing the Commissioner can do is to exercise his discretion in preference to the discretion exercised by the District Magistrate. Now coming to the power conferred on the State Government under Section 7-F, it would be seen that it is a power of wide amplitude. It can be exercised by it in any way it pleases. No restriction either as to the time within which it can be exercised or as to the circumstances under which it can be exercised is placed on the State Government. Under these circumstances the anomalies pointed out by Mr. Goyal as well as by Mr. Aggarwal are inevitable. Therefore in construing this Act, no useful purpose will be served by taking into consideration the hardship to the parties. In whatever way we may construe Sections 3 and 7(F) hardship to one party or the other is inevitable. Neither Counsel suggested to us any interpretation which could steer clear of the anomalies pointed out at the bar. Therefore we have to fall back on the grammatical construction of sub-section (1) of Section 3 and leave out of consideration all other rules of construction for finding out the intention of the legislature. Section 3 (1) does not restrict the landlord's right to evict his tenant on any of the grounds mentioned in Cls. (a) to (g) of that sub-section. But if he wants to sue his tenant for eviction on any ground other than those mentioned in those clauses then he has to obtain the permission of the District Magistrate whose discretion is subject to any order passed under sub-section (3) of Section 3 by the Commissioner. These are the only restrictions placed on the power of a landlord to institute a suit for eviction of his tenant. If a landlord files a suit for the eviction of his tenant without obtaining the permission of the District Magistrate that suit is not maintainable but if he files a suit after obtaining the permission of the District Magistrate and if the Commissioner revokes the permission granted by the District Magistrate in a properly instituted application under Section 3 (2) then the suit instituted by him will be considered as having been filed without the permission of the District Magistrate because Section 3 (1) in specific terms says that the permission given by the District Magistrate is subject to any order passed under sub-section (3). In other words the permission given by the District Magistrate does not acquire any finality until either the period fixed for filing an application under sub-section (2) of Section 3 expires and no application under that section was filed within that time or if an application had been filed within that time, the same had been disposed of by the Commissioner. The permission to file a suit for eviction assumes finality under Section 3 (1) once the Commissioner decides the revision petition pending before him. In fact sub-section (4) of Section 3 says that the order of the Commissioner is final. It is true that that order despite the fact that it is final is subject to any order passed by the State Government under Section 7-F. There is no provision in the Act providing that a suit validly instituted after getting the required permission under Section 3 (1) ceases to be maintainable because of any order made by the State Government under S. 7-F. Similarly there is no provision in the Act invalidating a decree passed after the Act came into force in a validly instituted suit. Section 14 provides:—

"no decree for the eviction of a tenant from any accommodation passed before the date of commencement of this Act shall, in so far as it relates to the eviction of such tenant, be executed against him as long as this Act remains in force except on any of the grounds mentioned in Section 3;

Provided that the tenant agrees to pay to the landlord "reasonable annual rent" or the rent payable by him before the passing of the decree whichever is higher."

This provision applies only to decrees passed before the date of the commencement of the Act. A decree of a Court in a suit validly instituted is binding on the parties to the same. It is true that the finality or the force of a decree can be taken away by a statute, but the Court will not readily infer that a decree passed by a competent Court has become unenforceable unless it is shown that a provision of law has specifically or by necessary implication made that decree unenforceable. No such provision was brought to our notice. On an examination of the relevant provisions of the Act our conclusion is that when the Commissioner sets aside the order passed by the District Magistrate granting permission to file a suit for ejecting a tenant, the order of the Commissioner prevails. If he cancels the permission granted by the District Magistrate there is no effective permission left and the suit instituted by the plaintiff without awaiting his decision must be treated as one filed without any valid permission by the District Magistrate. To this extent we are in agreement with the decision of Upadhaya, J., in Munshi Lal v. Shambhu Nath Ram Kishan, 1958 All LJ 584. From this it follows that the Full Bench decision in Bashi Ram's case, ILR (1965) 1 All 545 = (AIR 1965 All 498) (FB) to the extent it held that a suit filed by the landlord after obtaining the permission of the District Magistrate cannot become infructuous even if the Commissioner revokes the permission, is incorrect. But we agree with the Full Bench that a suit validly instituted after obtaining a permission as required by Section 3 (1) does not cease to be maintainable even if the State Government revokes after the institution of the suit, the permission granted. If the State Government revokes the permission granted before the institution of the suit then there would be no valid permission to sue. In other words the State Government's power to revoke the permission granted under Section 3 (1) gets exhausted once the suit is validly instituted.

8. For the reasons mentioned above, this appeal fails and the same is dismissed. But in the circumstances of the case, we make no order as to costs.

Appeal dismissed.

AIR 1970 SUPREME COURT 977 (V 57 C 199)

(From: Bombay)*

A. N. RAY AND I. D. DUA, JJ.

Siddanna Apparao Patil, Appellant v. State of Maharashtra, Respondent.

Criminal Appeal No. 180 of 1967, D/- 6-3-1970.

(A) Criminal P. C. (1898), Section 421 — Summary dismissal of appeal — Appeal under Section 410 from sentence of Court of session — Discretion of High Court — Principles — Substantial and arguable points — Illustrations.

Under S. 421, Cr. P. C. the Appellate Court undoubtedly has power of summary dismissal; but if the appeal raises arguable and substantial points the High Court should give reasons for rejection of appeal. The rejection of an appeal by using only one word of dismissal causes difficulties and embarrassment in finding out the reasons which weighed with the High Court in dismissal of the appeal in limine. The High Court should not summarily reject criminal appeals if they raise arguable and substantial points. AIR 1953 SC 282 and Criminal Appeal No. 188 of 1969, D/- 9-2-1970 (SC) and AIR 1963 SC 1696, Rel. on. (Para 6)

*(Criminal Appeal No. 1444 of 1966, D/- 5-12-1966 — Bom.)

Where two accused are charged under Section 302/34 and one of them is acquitted, the question whether the conviction of the other under Section 302/34 is possible, is an arguable and substantial matter of law. (Para 12)

So also, the contention that it would be an error to hold that there was intimacy between the appellant and the wife of another person on the evidence of third parties when neither of them gave evidence would be an arguable and substantial point. Case law referred. (Para 12)

(B) Constitution of India, Article 136 — Appeal by special leave — Powers of Supreme Court — Dismissal of appeal under Section 410 in limine by High Court by using single word even though it raised substantial and arguable points — Dismissal is improper — Order set aside and appeal remanded for rehearing according to law. (Paras 13, 14)

Cases Referred: Chronological Paras

- | | |
|--|----|
| (1970) Criminal Appeal No. 188 of 1969, D/- 9-2-1970 = (1970) 1 SCWR 320, Govinda Kadtuji Kadam v. State of Maharashtra | 5 |
| (1969) Criminal Appeal No. 38 of 1969, D/- 17-9-1969 (SC), Bhanwar Singh v. State of Rajasthan | 9 |
| (1969) Criminal Appeal No. 95 of 1969, D/- 18-9-1969 (SC), Vishwanath Shankar Beldar v. State of Maharashtra | 10 |
| (1968) AIR 1968 SC 609 (V 55) = (1968) 2 SCR 88, Narayan Swami v. State of Maharashtra | 8 |
| (1968) Criminal Appeal No. 262 of 1968, D/- 20-12-1968 = (1969) 1 SCWR 374, Bashir Husain Peshmani v. State of Maharashtra | 11 |
| (1963) AIR 1963 SC 1413 (V 50) = 1963 (2) Cri LJ 351, Krishna Govinda Patil v. State of Maharashtra | 12 |
| (1963) AIR 1963 SC 1696 (V 50) = (1964) 3 SCR 237 = 1963 (2) Cri LJ 534, Chittaranjan Das v. State of West Bengal | 6 |

- (1956) AIR 1956 SC 51 (V 43)=
 1956 Cri LJ 147, Prabhu Navle
 v. State of Bombay 12
 (1953) AIR 1953 SC 282 (V 40)=
 1953 SCR 809= 1953 Cri LJ 1127,
 Mushtak Hussain v. State of Bombay 5

M. S. K. Sastri and S. P. Nayar, Advocacates, for Respondent.

The following Judgment of the Court
 was delivered by

RAY, J.:— This is an appeal by special leave against the judgment of the High Court of Bombay dated 5th December, 1966 dismissing in limine the appeal proferred against the judgment and order dated 16th August, 1966 passed by the Session Judge, Sholapur. The High Court by an order dated 3rd April, 1967 also refused leave to appeal to this Court.

2. The appellant was accused No. 1.
 He was convicted under Section 302 read with Section 34 of the Indian Penal Code and sentenced to imprisonment for life.

3. Broadly stated, the charge against the appellant was that he in conspiracy with his brother, accused No. 2, committed murder of Ravansidhappa Shivappa Patil and Mahadeo Sidran Patil. The defence of both the appellant and his brother was one of total denial.

4. The right to prefer an appeal from sentence of Court of Sessions is conferred by Section 410 of the Criminal Procedure Code. The right to appeal is one both on a matter of fact and a matter of law. It is only in cases where there is a trial by jury that the right to appeal is under Section 416 confined only to a matter of law.

5. This Court in several decisions dealt with Section 410 of the Criminal Procedure Code and the rights of the appellant thereunder. References may be made to one of the earlier decisions of this Court in Mushtak Hussain v. State of Bombay, 1953 SCR 809= (AIR 1953 SC 282) and the recent unreported decision in Govinda Kadtuji Kadam v. State of Maharashtra, Criminal Appeal No. 188 of 1969, D/- 9-2-1970 (SC) where several previous decisions of this Court have been noticed.

6. The following principles emerge from the decisions; first, the Appellate Court undoubtedly has power of summary dismissal; secondly, if the appeal raises arguable and substantial points the High Court should give reasons for rejection of appeal; thirdly, rejection of an appeal by using only one word of dismissal causes difficulties and embarrassment in finding out the reasons which weighed with the High Court in dismissal of the appeal in limine; fourthly this Court in Chittaranjan Das v. State of West Bengal, (1964) 3 SCR 237= (AIR 1963 SC 1696) held that the High Court should not summarily reject criminal appeals if they raise arguable and substantial points.

7. As to what is an arguable and a substantial point may be illustrated with reference to a few decisions.

8. In Narayan Swami v. State of Maharashtra, (1968) 2 SCR 88 = (AIR 1968 SC 609) this Court stated that a ground in preferring an appeal from the judgment of the Sessions Court that a gross illegality was committed in relying upon the evidence given by a co-accused in a dacoity case and using the answers given by him as a co-accused against the accused appellant would be a substantial question. Again it was noticed that denial of an opportunity to an appellant in a dacoity case of being heard as required under Section 479A of the Criminal Procedure Code would be an arguable point.

9. In an unreported decision of this Court in Bhanwar Singh v. State of Rajasthan, Criminal Appeal No. 88 of 1969,
 D/- 17-9-1969 (SC), it was held that failure to consider the position in which the appellant was placed when his immediate superior admittedly ordered him to bring out the currency notes which were required not for the purpose of investigation of any case but only for the purpose of being shown to a person whom the sub-inspector wanted to help in laying down a new trap would be a substantial ground in a conviction under Prevention of Corruption Act and Section 409 of the Indian Penal Code.

10. In another unreported decision of this Court in Viswanath Shankar Beldar
 v. State of Maharashtra, Criminal Appeal
 No. 95 of 1969, D/- 18-9-1969 (SC) it was said that if the trial Judge did not accept the witness as a wholly truthful witness in the light of reports sent by police officers and his statement under Section 162 of the Criminal Procedure Code and remarked that a portion of the evidence was clearly an improvement it was necessary for the High Court to consider the evidence afresh.

11. In another unreported earlier decision of this Court in Bashir Hussain Peshmani v. State of Maharashtra, Criminal Appeal No. 262 of 1968, D/- 20-12-

1968 (SC) the offences alleged were under the Indian Penal Code, the Sea Customs Act, 1878 and the Foreign Exchange Regulation Act, 1947 in respect of gold alleged to have been brought into India in pursuance of a conspiracy. There was oral testimony of accomplices. That evidence was held by the trial Court to have been corroborated by the actual finding of gold from the place of one of the accused. Another piece of evidence was the recovery of duplicate set of keys at the residence of accused No. 2. Reliance was placed by the trial Court on the confession of the appellant which had been retracted as corroborative evidence of the accomplice witnesses. In preferring appeal to the High Court the grounds urged were that there were serious infirmities in the evidence and the manner in which the keys were recovered was open to objection. The High Court dismissed the appeal in limine. This Court remitted the matter back to the High Court for disposal of the appeal in accordance with law by expressing the view that these were arguable points. In the same case it was said that it would be open to the appellant to canvass before the High Court in appeal every point even on a question of fact in his favour to demolish by reference to other material the evidence that had been used against him.

12. In the present case, one of the contentions of the appellant in the appeal preferred was that the appellant was charged under Section 302 read with Section 34 of the Indian Penal Code for committing murder of both the Patils in furtherance of the common intention of the appellant and accused No. 2 and on accused No. 2 being acquitted the appellant could not be convicted with the aid of Section 34. In aid of that contention reliance was placed on the decisions of this Court in Prabhu Navle v. State of Bombay, AIR 1956 SC 51 and Krishna G. Patil v. State of Maharashtra, AIR 1963 SC 1413. Another contention raised in the appeal was that it would be an error to hold that there was intimacy between the appellant and Nilava wife of Babanna on the evidence of third parties when neither Babanna nor Nilava gave evidence. We have only referred to two contentions amongst several others to illustrate both arguable and substantial matters of law and of fact.

13. In the present case the High Court dismissed the appeal by a single word and it is not possible to know the reasons which persuaded the High Court to dismiss the appeal.

14. In the result the appeal is allowed. The order of dismissal of the appeal is set aside. The matter is sent back to the High Court for fresh consideration on hearing the parties.

Appeal allowed and Case Remanded.

AIR 1970 SUPREME COURT 979
(V 57 C 200)

(From: Bombay)

A. N. RAY AND I. D. DUA, JJ.

Dnyanu Hariba Mali and others, Appellants v. The State of Maharashtra, Respondent.

Criminal Appeal No. 222 of 1967, D/- 10-3-1970.

(A) Criminal P. C. (1898), Section 410 — Appeals under, from sentence of Sessions Court — Substantial and arguable points raised — High Court should not dismiss appeal in limine — Right of self-defence is arguable and substantial point — (Penal Code (1860), Section 97) — Judgment of Bombay High Court, D/- 26-6-1967, Reversed.

In dealing with appeals under section 410 from sentences of Court of Sessions the High Court should give reasons for rejection of an appeal and if arguable and substantial points are raised, the High Court should not summarily reject the appeal. The point of the right of self-defence is a substantial and arguable point of law. It is desirable that the High Court should deal with it if raised by the appellants in the light of the principles laid down by the Supreme Court and not dismiss the appeal in limine. AIR 1970 SC 977, Ref.; Judgment of Bombay High Court, D/- 26-6-1967, Reversed. (Para 9)

(B) Penal Code (1860), Section 97 — Right of self-defence — Nature of.

The right of self-defence is an important one. The onus is on the accused. This right can be availed of by the accused only when circumstances fully justify the exercise of such a right. There is a right of appeal on fact as well as on law. (Para 9)

Cases Referred: Chronological Paras
(1970) AIR 1970 SC 977 (V 57) =
Criminal Appeal No. 180 of 1967
D/- 6-3-1970 Siddanna Apparao
Patil v. State of Maharashtra 9

The following judgment of the Court was delivered by

RAY, J.:— This is an appeal by special leave against the judgment of the High Court at Bombay dated 28th June, 1967 dismissing in limine the appeal filed by the appellants against the judgment of the Additional Sessions Judge, Sholapur dated 6th February, 1967.

2. The appellants Dnyanu, Tukaram and Hariba were convicted under Section 302 read with Section 34 of the Indian Penal Code and each of them was sentenced to undergo imprisonment for life. The appellants were also convicted under Section 320 read with Sec. 34 of the Indian Penal Code and each of them was sentenced to undergo rigorous imprisonment for a period of one year. The appellants were also convicted under Section 323 read with Section 34 of the Indian Penal Code and each of them was sentenced to undergo rigorous imprisonment for a period of one month only. All the sentences were to run concurrently.

3. The prosecution case in short is as follows. There were criminal prosecutions between the appellants and some members of the party of Dnyanuba Gadade. Dnyanuba and prosecution witness Panda Shingade appeared in those cases as witnesses against the appellants. On 3rd July, 1966 Dnyanuba went to the shop of one Gulab Kalawat at Taluka Sangda in Sholapur District for getting some grocery on credit. The shop-keeper declined to give him grocery and a quarrel ensued between the two. The prosecution case is that the complainant Narayan Baku, Panda Shingade, Yeshwant Patil, Gana Patil and Nana Gadade happened to be there casually and on the complainant's intervention the dispute was settled. Thereafter Hariba who is an old man of 75 arrived at the shop of Gulab and without any rhyme or reason started abusing Panda Shingade. Thereupon, Panda beat appellant Hariba with a chapal and Dnyanuba beat him with fists. Again the complainant intervened and pacified the parties whereupon appellant Hariba left the place and went towards his flour-mill.

4. Shortly thereafter appellants Tukaram and Hariba came to the shop of Gulab. Tukaram was armed with an iron pipe. Apprehending that the appellants might beat Dnyanuba and Panda, the complainant went ahead and entreated the appellants not to rake up the quarrel which was already settled. The appellants then went to their farm-house. Dnyanuba and his companions continued to sit at the shop of Gulab for more than an hour. Then the party of Dnyanuba thought that it would not be safe to allow Dnyanuba to go alone, they all started going towards the house by a foot track which passed through the land of one Narayan Mali. The appellants who were in their farm-house saw the party going along the foot track and they left the farm-house and went towards the approaching party. Appellant No. 1 carried two spears in his hand, one of which he handed over to appellant No. 2 on the way. Then the appellants and the party of the deceased came across each other on the foot track in Narayan's fields. Then Dnyanuba requested the appellants not to beat them since the quarrel was settled. Disregarding this request, at the instigation of appellant No. 3, appellant No. 2 stabbed Dnyanuba with a spear on his chest. Dnyanuba then collapsed. Thereupon Yeshwant Patil fell on his person to save him and appellant No. 1 stabbed Yeshwant Patil on his back. The complainant tried to snatch the spear from the hands of appellant No. 1. Injury was caused to the index-finger of the complainant's right hand. At the same time appellant No. 2 hit Nana Gadade with the handle of the spear. Then 5 members of the party of the deceased began to pelt stones at the appellants. The appellants sustained injuries.

5. The appellants denied the charge and pleaded a right of self-defence. This defence was that the party of the deceased Dnyanuba which consisted of about 15 to 20 persons were the aggressors and were beating the appellants Nos. 2 and 3 with sticks and stones. Appellant No. 1 and his wife were coming to the place of the incident. When they approached, the opposite party pelted stones at them and both of them sustained injuries. In the melee appellant No. 1 took out a knife and in self-defence started using it against the aggressors as a result of which some members from the opposite party might have received injuries.

6. It will appear from the judgment of the Sessions Court that two of the main points which fell for determination were; first, whether the accused in general, and accused No. 2, in particular, caused the injuries to Dnyanuba Gadade and three others in self-defence, and, secondly, whether the accused in furtherance of common intention murdered Dnyanuba Gadade.

7. In the memorandum of appeal filed by the appellants before the High Court at Bombay, the principal questions raised by the appellants were these. First, that the trial Judge failed to appreciate that considering the situation of the shop of Gulab Kalawat from where the deceased and his companions proceeded to go to their houses towards the north they could not possibly have thought of going through Narayan's field when very close to Gulab's shop was a cart track which took them straight to their houses. Secondly, that the trial Judge should have proceeded to consider and appreciate the respective versions of the prosecution and the defence as against the background of this position and the expected natural course of conduct on the part of the other party in proceeding towards their house by the shorter and the more convenient way of cart-track. Thirdly, that the defence version that the party of the deceased actually chased appellants Nos. 2 and 3 through the field of Narayan and assaulted them with sticks and stones in the field appears to be more natural and more probable and therefore more acceptable and that the alleged foot track appears to have been invented by the prosecution to explain their meeting the appellants in the field of Narayan. Fourthly, that the deceased and his party were in an aggressive mood and that in view of the previous litigation they wanted to settle accounts with the appellants and with that view they chased appellants Nos. 2 and 3 and overtook them in the field of Narayan and assaulted them with sticks and stones and that the prosecution story put forward that stones were hurled at the appellants in self-defence by the party of the deceased was invented in self-defence by the prosecution. Fifthly, that if the only object of the opposite party was to scare away the appellants and prevent them from making a further assault, the appellants as soon as the opposite party started pelting stones at them would have run away and would not have sustained so many injuries as a result of stone throwing by the other party and that therefore in all probability the appellants sustained their injuries under the circumstances and in the manner alleged by them and not as alleged by the prosecution. Sixthly, that the trial Judge committed a serious error in referring to what the defence witness did not state before the police thereby allowing the statement of a defence witness under Section 162 of the Criminal Procedure Code to be used at the trial. Finally, the conflict between the complainant's first information report and his evidence at the trial was not appreciated.

8. Some of the important points raised by the appellants have been referred to above only to illustrate the arguable and substantial points raised by the appellants both as to fact and law.

9. The High Court dismissed the appeal with a one word order of dismissal. It is, therefore, not possible to know the reasons which persuaded the High Court to do so. This Court has, from time to time, stated that in dealing with appeals under Section 410 of the Criminal Procedure Code from sentences of Court of Sessions the High Court should give reasons for rejection of an appeal and if arguable and substantial points are raised the High Court should not summarily reject the appeal. In Siddanna Apparao Patil v. State of Maharashtra, Criminal Appeal No. 180 of 1967, D/- 6-3-1970 = (reported in AIR 1970 SC 977) reference has been made to a few decisions of this Court which illustrate as to what substantial and arguable points of law are. The right of self-defence is an important one. The onus is on the accused. This right can be availed of by the accused only when circumstances fully justify the exercise of such a right. There is a right of appeal on fact as well as on law. It is desirable that if the appellants raise arguable and substantial points, the High Court should deal with it in the light of principles laid down by this Court.

10. The appeal is allowed. The matter is remitted to the High Court for fresh consideration on hearing the parties.

Appeal allowed.

AIR 1970 SUPREME COURT 981
(V 57 C 201)

(From: Madhya Pradesh)

J. C. SHAH, K. S. HEGDE AND
A. N. GROVER, JJ.

B. C. Kame, Appellant v Nemi Chand Jain, Respondent.

Civil Appeals Nos. 124 of 1967 and 433 and 434 of 1970, D/- 5-3-1970.

DN/DN/B183/70/CWM/A

Houses and Rents — M. P. Accommodation Control Act (41 of 1961), S. 13 (1), (5) and (6) — When tenant can get benefit of protection against eviction — Default in payment of rent — Suit for ejectment — Failure to deposit arrears of rent within one month from service of writ of summons — Subsequent payment can be of any avail only if on application made by tenant Court extends time.

It is clear from reading of S. 12 (1) (a) and (3) and Section 13 (1) and (5) and (6) that for non-payment of rent, the tenancy shall not be terminated and the Court shall not pass a decree in ejectment if within two months of the date on which a notice of demand for rent has been served on the tenant he makes payment of the amount or tenders the amount of rent due by him to the landlord. If he does so, no suit will lie against him on the ground of default in the payment of rent. Even if no such payment is made within two months as provided by Section 12 (1) the tenant may within one month from the service of the writ of summons deposit the amount in Court or pay to the landlord the amount due by him till then and continue to pay or deposit "month by month" the rent accruing due. Even if he does not pay the amount within one month he may on an application made by him ask for extension of time, and if the Court grants the extension the amount may be paid by him within such extended time. In such a case, by virtue of sub-s. (5) of S. 13 on the ground of default in the payment of rent, the Court will not proceed to pass a decree in ejectment. But it is clear that under sub-section (1) of Section 13 the normal period during which the amount has to be paid to the landlord or deposited in Court is one month from the service of the writ of summons. If the tenant pays the amount of rent in arrears within one month he is immune from liability to be evicted for default in that behalf. If, however, he does not pay the amount or deposit it in Court, any subsequent payment made by him will come to his aid only if on an application made by him the Court extends the time. (Para 5)

The following Judgment of the Court was delivered by

SHAH, J.: Nemi Chand Jain—hereinafter called 'the plaintiff'—is the owner of five tenements in the town of Jabalpur and B. C. Kame—hereinafter called 'the defendant' is the tenant of those tenements under distinct tenancy agreements. After determining the tenancies by a notice, the plaintiff instituted five suits in the Court of the Civil Judge, Second Class, Jabalpur, for orders in ejectment against the defendant in respect of the five tenancies, on the plea that the defendant had failed and neglected to pay the rent for a period exceeding three years. The summonses in the suits were served upon the defendant on May 6, 1963. The Court re-opened after the summer recess on June 10, 1963, and the defendant deposited in Court on June 11, 1963 Rs. 1,841 being the amount of rent and other dues for 38 months. The deposit was not supported by an application by the defendant for extension of time or for condonation of delay in making the deposit. The defendant also did not continue thereafter to pay regularly the rent due by him every month according to law. Between the months of June, 1963 and May, 1965 except on two occasions, he did not pay within the prescribed time the rent accrued due.

2. By order of the Civil Judge the suits were consolidated for trial. After the evidence was recorded and during the course of the argument the defendant applied on July 26, 1965 for extension of time in making payment of rent due. This application was rejected and the Civil Court passed a decree against the defendant in respect of the five tenements. Against the orders passed by the Civil Judge, five appeals were preferred to the District Court at Jabalpur. The defendant contended that in respect of the two tenements Nos. 374 and 382 rent due was sent by money order, and the Trial Court had wrongly rejected his application for producing evidence to support the case that he was not in default in respect of those tenements, and be applied for permission to lead additional evidence. The learned District Judge was of the view that the Trial Court had "rather acted harshly in refusing to give an opportunity to the defendant for adducing evidence with regard to money-order coupons which he had sought to produce". In the view of the Court the "circumstances alleged and not denied by the plaintiff did point out that the fault in not getting the evidence regarding those coupons produced was not entirely due to the negligence of the defendant, and therefore the defendant should not have been solely blamed for that", and that the defendant should have been given the opportunity to lead that evidence. The learned Judge further held that in respect of the three other premises there was default and no case was made out for extension of time. But on the assumption that by virtue of the order of consolidation there was only one trial and one judgment arising out of the suits pending before him and since the order of the Trial Court in respect of the suits arising out of the claim to premises Nos. 374 and 382 was set aside, the District Judge directed that the orders be set aside in all the five suits and the suits be remanded for trial according to law.

3. Against the order made by the District Court five revision applications were preferred to the High Court of Madhya Pradesh. Two revision applications, insofar as they related to the claim for possession in respect of tenements Nos. 374 and 382 were summarily rejected by the High Court. But in the other three revision applications Nos. 409, 410 and 412 of 1965 rule was issued to the defendant to show cause why the orders made by the District Court should not be set aside. The High Court confirmed the view of the District Court that no case was made out for extension of time for payment of the amount under Section 13 (1) of the Madhya Pradesh Accommodation Control Act, 1961. The High Court further held that the District Court was in error in setting aside the decree passed by the Trial Court which was the subject-matter of the three revision applications. The High Court accordingly reversed the order passed by the District Court and restored the decree passed by the Trial Court in respect of those three tenements. With special leave, the defendant has appealed to this Court.

4. The order passed by the District Court setting aside the judgment passed by the Court of First Instance in respect of those premises in respect of which there was default in payment of rent was plainly erroneous and the High Court was right in setting aside the order. But Mr. Patel appearing on behalf of the defendant contends that the Trial Court and the District Court had committed an error in holding that they had no jurisdiction to extend the time for payment of rent after the suit was instituted. Section 12 of the Madhya Pradesh Accommodation Control Act, 1961, provides by the first sub-section, insofar as it is material:

"Notwithstanding anything to the contrary contained in any other law or contract, no suit shall be filed in any Civil

Court against a tenant for his eviction from any accommodation except on one or more of the following grounds only, namely:—

(a) that the tenant has neither paid nor tendered the whole of the arrears of the rent legally recoverable from him within two months of the date on which a notice of demand for the arrears of rent has been served on him by the landlord in the prescribed manner;

X X X X X X "

By sub-section (3), insofar as it is material, it is provided:

"No order for the eviction of a tenant shall be made on the ground specified in clause (a) of sub-section (1), if the tenant makes payment or deposit as required by Section 13.

X X X X "

By Section 13 (1) it is provided:

"On a suit or proceeding being instituted by the landlord on any of the grounds referred to in Section 12, the tenant shall, within one month of the service of the writ of summons on him or within such further time as the Court may, on an application made to it, allow in this behalf, deposit in the Court or pay to the landlord an amount calculated at the rate of rent at which it was paid, for the period for which the tenant may have made default including the period subsequent thereto upto the end of the month previous to that in which the deposit or payment is made and shall thereafter continue to deposit or pay, month by month, by the 15th of each succeeding month a sum equivalent to the rent at that rate."

By sub-sections (5) and (6) it is provided:

"(5) If a tenant makes deposit or payment as required by sub-section (1) or sub-section (2), no decree or order shall be made by the Court for the recovery of possession of the accommodation on the ground of default in the payment of rent by the tenant, but the Court may allow such cost as it may deem fit to the landlord.

(6) If a tenant fails to deposit or pay any amount as required by this section, the Court may order the defence against eviction to be struck out and shall proceed with the hearing of the suit."

5. It is clearly intended thereby that for non-payment of rent, the tenancy shall not be terminated and the Court shall not pass a decree in ejectment if within two months of the date on which a notice of demand for rent has been served on the tenant he makes payment of the amount or tenders the amount of rent due by him to the landlord. If he does so, no suit will lie against him on the ground of default in the payment of rent. Even if no such payment is made within two months as provided by Section 12 (1) (a) the tenant may within one month from the service of the writ of summons deposit the amount in Court or pay to the landlord the amount due by him till then and continue to pay or deposit "month by month" the rent accruing due. Even if he does not pay the amount within one month he may on an application made by him ask for extension of time, and if the Court grants the extension the amount may be paid by him within such extended time. In such a case by virtue of sub-section (5) of Section 13, on the ground of default in payment of rent, the Court will not proceed to pass a decree in ejectment. But it is clear that under sub-section (1) of Section 13 the normal period during which the amount has to be paid to the landlord or deposited in Court is one month from the service of the writ of summons. If the tenant pays the amount of rent in arrears within one month he is immune from liability to be evicted for default in that behalf. If, however, he does not pay the amount or deposit it in Court, any subsequent payment made by him will come to his aid only if on an application made by him the Court extends the time.

6. In the present case the defendant did not pay the rent due by him within one month from the date on which the amount of rent was payable by him. We need not consider the question, whether if the amount if paid on June 10, 1963, rent would have been deemed to be properly paid. The amount was deposited in Court on June 11, 1963. The deposit was clearly beyond time. The defendant made no application for extension of time and no order was made by the Court extending the time. Even after the first payment the defendant did not continue to pay regularly the amount of rent falling due by him during the pendency of the suit. It was only on July 23, 1965, that he applied for extension of time and the Court rejected the defendant's prayer for extension.

7. It is true that the learned District Judge in the course of his judgment mixed up the discussion on two different contentions, one with regard to striking out the defence of the defendant for non-payment of rent, and the other relating to extension of time for payment of rent.

But on a fair reading of the judgment it appears that he was of the view that on the facts before him no case was made out by the defendant for extension of time in exercise of the jurisdiction of the Court. The High Court declined to enter upon an enquiry whether the District Judge was right in so holding, because in the view of the High Court, in a revision application under Section 115 of the Code of Civil Procedure the decision of the District Court was binding.

8. We are unable to agree with Mr. Patel that the District Court held that it had no jurisdiction to extend the time. The Court held that it had jurisdiction to extend the time but on merits no case was made out for an order extending the time.

9. The appeals fail and are dismissed with costs. There will be one hearing fee.

Appeals dismissed.

AIR 1970 SUPREME COURT 984

(V 57 C 202)

(From: Gujarat)

J. C. SHAH, K. S. HEGDE AND
A. N. GROVER, JJ.

Ratilal Shankarabhai and others, Appellants v. State of Gujarat and others, Respondents.

Civil Appeal No. 212 of 1967, D/- 11-3-1970.

(A) Land Acquisition Act (1894) Section 49 — Acquisition for housing scheme prepared by registered co-operative body — Acquisition is for "public purpose" — Substantial sum paid by State towards compensation. — There is sufficient compliance with Sections 40 to 42. AIR 1961 SC 343, Rel. on. (Para 5)

(B) Land Acquisition Act (1894), S. 6(3) — Declaration under S. 6 — Conclusive evidence that land in question is needed for a public purpose.

Where there is a declaration under S. 6 that the land proposed to be acquired is needed for a public purpose, the court cannot go into the question whether the need was genuine or not unless it is satisfied that the action taken by the Government was a fraudulent one. The conclusiveness in S. 6 (3) must necessarily attach not merely to a need but also to the question whether the purpose was a public purpose. AIR 1963 SC 151, Foll. (Para 7)

DN/DN/B207/70/VBB/A

(C) Land Acquisition Act (1894), S. 3 (f) (Guj) — Housing scheme for section of public may also be for public purpose.

It cannot be contended that a housing scheme for a limited number of persons cannot be considered as a public purpose. The need of a section of the public may be a public purpose. Ordinarily the Government is the best authority to determine whether the purpose in question is a public purpose or not. (Para 7)

(D) Land Acquisition Act (1894), S. 6 — Notification under — Contention that Government acted blindly.

Before issuing the notification under S. 6, there was an enquiry under S. 5 (a). The Government had issued that notification after examining the report submitted by the concerned Officer.

Held that in the absence of any material on record, the Government could not be said to have acted blindly in issuing that notification. (Para 9)

Cases Referred: Chronological Paras
(1963) AIR 1963 SC 151 (V 50) =
(1963) 2 SCR 774, Smt. Somawanti v. State of Punjab 7
(1961) AIR 1961 SC 343 (V 48) =
(1961) 2 SCR 459, Jhandulal v. State of Punjab 6

The following Judgment of the Court was delivered by

HEGDE, J.: The only reason why this appeal had to be heard by this Court is that the appellants were entitled in law for a certificate under Article 133 (1) (b) of the Constitution as against the order of the High Court summarily dismissing their writ petition on the strength of which they had a right of appeal to this Court.

2. The appellants are the owners of certain lands in village Wadaj in Ahmedabad. Some areas out of those lands were notified for acquisition under Section 4 of the Land Acquisition Act, 1894 on March 19, 1964 for a housing scheme prepared by the 3rd respondent, a Co-operative Society registered under the Co-operative Societies Act. The notification under Section 4 was followed up by an enquiry under Section 5 (a). Thereafter a notification under Section 6 of that Act was issued on October 1, 1964. This was followed up by other proceedings under the Land Acquisition Act. During the pendency of those proceedings, the appellants moved the High Court of Gujarat under Article 226 of the Constitution challenging the validity of the acquisition proceedings. That petition was summarily dismissed by the High Court.

3. The acquisition proceedings were challenged before us on various grounds. We shall now proceed to deal with the grounds urged before us. It was urged by the learned Counsel for the appellant that the proposed acquisition was for a company and as no steps were taken under Ss. 40 to 42 of the Land Acquisition Act, the proceedings are vitiated. It is conceded on behalf of the State that the agreements contemplated by Ss. 40 to 42 were not entered into. But it was urged on behalf of the respondents that the acquisition in question was not for the purpose of a company but it was for a public purpose. Both the notifications under Ss. 4 and 6 say that the proposed acquisition was for a public purpose namely for a housing scheme undertaken by Shri Alapa Housing Co-operative Society Ltd., Ahmedabad with the sanction of the Government. Therefore, if the proposed acquisition is not for a company but for a public purpose then there was no need to comply with Ss. 40 to 42.

4. Gujarat legislature by Gujarat Unification and Amendment Act 30 of 1965 amended cl. (f) of S. 3 of the Land Acquisition Act, 1894 which defined the expression "public purpose". As per that amendment after sub-cl. (2) the following clause was added:

"and (3) a housing scheme which the State Government may from time to time undertake for the purpose of increasing accommodation for housing persons and shall include any such scheme undertaken from time to time with the previous sanction of the State Government by a local authority or company."

5. The expression "company" as defined in the Land Acquisition Act includes a co-operative society within the meaning of Co-operative Societies Act, 1912. The third respondent is one such Society. Therefore, it is clear that the proposed acquisition is one for "public purpose". It may also be noted that the State Government contributed a substantial sum towards the compensation payable for the acquisition in question. Therefore the contention of the appellant that the proposed acquisition is invalid inasmuch as there was no compliance with Ss. 40 to 42 must fail.

6. Our conclusion in this regard is supported by the decision of this Court in Pt. Jhandulal v. State of Punjab, (1961) 2 SCR 459 = (AIR 1961 SC 343).

7. We are unable to accede to the contention of the appellant that a housing scheme for a limited number of persons cannot be considered as a public purpose. It was said that there were hardly about 20 members in the co-operative society in question and therefore the housing scheme for their benefit cannot be considered as a public purpose. It was also urged that there was no need for acquiring any land for the scheme in question. Section 6 (3) of the Land Acquisition Act provides that a declaration under S. 6 shall be conclusive evidence that the land proposed to be acquired is needed for a public purpose. Therefore this Court cannot go into the question whether the deed was genuine or not unless we are satisfied that the action taken by the Government was a fraudulent one. We are also unable to concede to the proposition that the need of a section of the public cannot be considered as a public purpose. Ordinarily, the Government is the best authority to determine whether the purpose in question is a public purpose or not and further the declaration made by it under S. 6 is a conclusive evidence of the fact that the land in question is needed for a public purpose — see Smt. Somavanti v. State of Punjab, (1963) 2 SCR 774 = (AIR 1963 SC 151). That decision lays down that conclusiveness in S. 6 (3) must necessarily attach not merely to a 'need' but also to the question whether the purpose was a public purpose.

8. There is no substance in the contention that the notifications under Sections 4 and 6 were vague. They are similar to notifications usually issued under Ss. 4 and 6. Therein it is clearly mentioned that the proposed acquisition was for a public purpose. The public purpose in question was also stated therein.

9. We are also unable to accept the contention of the learned Counsel for the appellant that the Government did not apply its mind before issuing the notification under Section 6. Before issuing that notification, there was an enquiry under Section 5 (A). The Government had issued that notification after examining the report submitted by the concerned officer. There is no material on record from which we can reasonably come to the conclusion that the Government had acted blindly in issuing that notification.

10. For the reasons mentioned above this appeal fails and the same is dismissed with costs.

Appeal dismissed.

AIR 1970 SUPREME COURT 986 (V 57 C 263)

J. C. SHAH AND K. S. HEGDE, JJ.

Bhagwan Dass and another, Appellants v. S. Rajdev Singh and another, Respondents.

Civil Appeal No. 2320 of 1969, D/- 2-4-1970.

Houses and Rents — Delhi Rent Control Act (59 of 1958), S. 39 (2) — Second appeal — Substantial question of law — Rent Controller and Rent Control Tribunal holding, on consideration of relevant terms of agreement between the tenant and third party and on oral evidence that there was sub-letting by the tenant in favour of the third party — On that finding no question of law much less a substantial question of law, arose.

(Para. 7)

The following judgment of the Court was delivered by

SHAH, J.: The respondent applied to the Rent Controller, Delhi, for an order evicting the appellant and Usha Sales (P) Ltd., from certain premises described as 55-G, Connaught Circus, New Delhi (let to the appellant) on the ground, amongst others, that the appellant had sublet the premises to Usha Sales (P) Ltd. The Rent Controller held sub-letting by the appellant of the premises proved and made an order evicting the appellant from the premises. The order was confirmed in appeal by the Rent Control Tribunal.

2. In the view of the Rent Controller and the Rent Control Tribunal the premises were occupied by Usha Sales exclusively under an authority conferred by the appellant and that the appellant was receiving Rs. 2,000/- per month as rent, and had no control over the premises.

3. The order of the Rent Control Tribunal was confirmed in second appeal by the High Court. With special leave, the appellant appeals to this Court.

4. Mr. A. K. Sen contends that under the terms of the agreement between the appellant and Usha Sales the former was appointed an agent for displaying and selling the products of Usha Sales, and the appellant was in occupation of the premises on his own behalf for the purpose of his business as an agent.

5. We have carefully read the terms of the agreement between Usha Sales and the appellant. The agreement is a curious mixture of inconsistencies. It is plainly a clumsy attempt to camouflage the sub-tenancy which was intended to be created thereby. The principal provisions of the agreement are—

(1) that the premises were to be used for carrying on the business of Usha Sales;

(2) that the goods to be sold in the premises were to belong to Usha Sales and the appellant was to have no interest therein. Neon signs and sign-boards displayed were to be of Usha Sales;

(3) that control over the sale of goods and premises was to be of Usha Sales and the staff employed was also of Usha Sales;

(4) that price of the goods sold was to be recovered by Usha Sales and it was expressly agreed that it was not to be collected by the appellant. Sales were to be made by the employees of Usha Sales appointed by them;

(5) that a portion of the premises set apart for conducting a sewing school was to be in the control of Usha Sales: profits made therein were to enure to Usha Sales: all reports and accounts were to be submitted to the Usha Sales in respect of the sewing school;

(6) that Usha Sales were to maintain the accounts of the business; and

(7) that no remuneration was fixed for payment to the appellant: it was to depend upon the "discretion" of Usha Sales. These covenants prima facie show that Usha Sales carried on the business of selling sewing machines and accessories, and the sewing school conducted in the premises and that the appellant did not carry on business or conduct the sewing school as agent of Usha Sales. The High Court has found that on the evidence it was clear that the keys of the padlock applied to the premises remained with Usha Sales and their employees used to open the premises every morning and to lock up every evening. It is true that there are covenants in the agreement which provide that Usha Sales had to hand over the machines for sale to the appellant; that the appellant was to have supervision over the staff of Usha Sales; that the appellant was to "remain in complete control and supervision of the premises"; and that the appellant was not to sublet, assign or part with possession of the premises. But on a consideration of all the terms, the oral evidence, and the circumstances, the Rent Courts and the High Court have come to the conclusion that an attempt was made to camouflage the real agreement between the parties to give it the form of an agreement of agency, whereas in truth it was intended to be an agreement of sub-letting.

6. Reliance was placed upon a somewhat obscure statement made by the High Court that the relationship between the appellant and Usha Sales was "more analogous to a partnership than to an agency; and that the appellant was in the nature of a sleeping partner, who provided the premises to the partnership, while Usha Sales was the active partner who carried on the business in the premises".

But the High Court has clearly found that by the agreement the Usha Sales had the right of exclusive use of the premises for its own business.

7. A second appeal lies to the High Court against the decision of the Rent Control Tribunal under Section 39 (2) of the Delhi Rent Control Act, 1958, only if the appeal involves some substantial question of law. The Rent Controller and the Rent Control Tribunal, on a consideration of the relevant terms of the agreement and oral evidence and the circumstances found that a clear case of sub-letting was established. On that finding no question of law, much less a substantial question of law, arose.

8. The appeal fails and is dismissed with costs.

Appeal dismissed.

AIR 1970 SUPREME COURT 987

(V 57 C 204)

(From: Bombay)*

J. C. SHAH AND K. S. HEGDE, JJ.

Vallabh Das, Appellant v. Dr. Madanlal and others, Respondents.

Civil Appeal No. 615 of 1966, D/- 2-4-1970.

(A) Constitution of India, Article 136 — Practice — Finding of fact — Supreme Court ordinarily does not interfere with concurrent findings of fact arrived at by

* (Appeal No. 191 of 1956, D/- 25-6-1962 — Bom at Nag.)

DN/EN/B664/70/VBB/A

Trial Court and High Court — (Civil P. C. (1908), Section 112). (Paras 2, 3)

(B) Civil P. C. (1908), Order 23, R. 1 — "Same subject matter" — Meaning — Cause of action and relief claimed in the two suits must be same.

"Subject-matter" in Order 23, Rule 1 means the bundle of facts which have to be proved in order to entitle the plaintiff to the relief claimed by him. Where the cause of action and the relief claimed in the second suit are not the same as the cause of action and the relief claimed in the first suit, the second suit cannot be considered to have been brought in respect of the same subject-matter as the first suit. AIR 1917 Bom 10 (1) & AIR 1917 Mad 512 (2) (FB), Rel. on.

(Para 5)
Mere identity of some of the issues in the two suits do not bring about an identity of the subject-matter in the two suits.

(Para 5)
Where in the first suit the plaintiff sought to enforce his right to partition and separate possession and in the second suit, he sought to get possession of the suit properties from a trespasser on the basis of his title;

Held that the subject-matter in the two suits was not the same although the factum and validity of adoption of the plaintiff in both the suits came up for decision.

(Para 5)
Cases Referred: Chronological Paras
(1917) AIR 1917 Bom 10 (1) (V 4) =
ILR 42 Bom 155, Rukhmabai v. Mahadeo 5

(1917) AIR 1917 Mad 512 (2) (V 4) =
ILR 39 Mad 887 (FB), Singha Reddy v. Subba Reddy 5

Mr. B. R. L. Iyengar, Sr. Advocate (Mr. S. K. Mehta, Advocate of M/s. K. L. Mehta and Co. with him), for Appellant; M/s. S. N. Kherdekar, G. L. Sanghi and A. G. Ratnaparkhi, Advocates, for Respondent No. 1.

The Judgment of the Court was delivered by

HEGDE, J.— One Prem Sukh was the owner of the suit properties. Parvatibai was his wife. They had no children. Prem Sukh gifted some of his properties to his wife on June 14, 1943. Dr. Madan Lal's (1st respondent in this appeal) case is that Prem Sukh adopted him on July 12, 1943. Thereafter it is said that Prem Sukh adopted on April 10, 1946, the appellant Vallabh Das. On April 29, 1946, Dr. Madan Lal instituted a suit for a declaration that he is the adopted son of Prem Sukh and for partition and possession of his share in the family properties. Prem Sukh denied the adoption pleaded by Dr. Madan Lal. On the other hand he alleged that Vallabh Das was his adopted son. In view of that allegation, Vallabh Das was added as a supplemental defendant in that suit. No relief was claimed against him. During the pendency of that suit Prem Sukh died. Thereafter Dr. Madan Lal moved the Court to withdraw the suit. He was permitted to withdraw the same with liberty to file a fresh suit on the same cause of action on condition that he pays the defendants' costs of that suit before instituting a fresh suit. Thereafter Parvatibai bequeathed her properties to Dr. Madan Lal and died soon after. The suit from which this appeal arises was brought on November 29, 1951 even before the costs of Vallabh Das (the appellant herein) in the previous suit had been paid. Vallabh Das resisted the suit on various grounds. He contended that Dr. Madan Lal was not adopted by Prem Sukh; even if he had been adopted, that adoption was not valid under the Benaras School of Hindu law by which the parties were governed as Madan Lal was a married man on July 12, 1943 and lastly the suit as brought is not maintainable as Dr. Madan Lal had not paid the costs due to him under the order in the previous suit before instituting the present suit. Both the trial Court as well as the High Court in appeal rejected every one of the contentions taken by Vallabh Das and decreed the suit as prayed for. Thereafter this appeal was brought after obtaining special leave from this Court.

2. The factum of the adoption has been upheld both by the Trial Court as well as by the High Court. There is evidence to support that finding. No convincing circumstances was brought to our notice requiring us to review the evidence over again. This Court ordinarily does not interfere with concurrent findings of fact. We see no justification to disturb the concurrent finding of fact arrived at by the Trial Court and the High Court.

3. As regards the validity of the adoption, the contention of Vallabh Das that the adoption was invalid rests on the plea that on July 12, 1943, Dr. Madan Lal was a married man. This plea has been negatived by the Trial Court as well as by the High Court. They have come to the conclusion that Dr. Madan Lal was not a married man on that date and that he was married subsequently. Here again there is no good ground for us to inter-here with the finding of fact reached by those Courts.

4. The only contention that was seriously pressed before us on behalf of the appellant was that the suit under appeal is not maintainable as the condition precedent imposed by the Court in the earlier suit, namely the payment of defendants' costs by the plaintiff before bringing a fresh suit on the same cause of action has not been complied with. We do not think that this contention is well founded.

5. Rule 1, Order 23, Code of Civil Procedure entitles Courts to permit a plaintiff to withdraw from the suit brought by him with liberty to institute a fresh suit in respect of the subject-matter of that suit on such terms as it thinks fit. The term imposed on the plaintiff in the previous suit was that before bringing a fresh suit on the same cause of action, he must pay the costs of the defendants. Therefore we have to see whether that condition governs the institution of the present suit. For deciding that question we have to see whether the suit from which this appeal arises is in respect of the same subject-matter that was in litigation in the previous suit. The expression "subject-matter" is not defined in the Civil Procedure Code. It does not mean property. That expression has a reference to a right in the property which the plaintiff seeks to enforce. That expression includes the cause of action and the relief claimed. Unless the cause of action and the relief claimed in the second suit are the same as in the first suit, it cannot be said that the subject-matter of the second suit is the same as that in the previous suit. Now coming to the case before us in the first suit Dr. Madan Lal was seeking to enforce his right to partition and separate possession. In the present suit he seeks to get possession of the suit properties from a trespasser on the basis of his title. In the first suit the cause of action was the division of status between Dr. Madan Lal and his adoptive father and the relief claimed was the conversion of joint possession into separate possession. In the present suit the plaintiff is seeking possession of the suit properties from a trespasser. In the first case his cause of action arose on the day he got separated from his family. In the present suit the cause of action, namely, the series of transactions which formed the basis of his title to the suit properties, arose on the death of his adoptive father and mother. It is true that both in the previous suit as well as in the present suit the factum and validity of adoption of Dr. Madan Lal came up for decision. But that adoption was not the cause of action in the first nor is it the cause of action in the present suit. It was merely an antecedent event which conferred certain rights on him. Mere identity of some of the issues in the two suits do not bring about an identity of the subject-matter in the two suits. As observed in Rukma Bai v. Mahadeo Narayan, ILR 42 Bom 155= (AIR 1917 Bom 10 (1)) the expression "subject-matter" in Order 23, Rule 1, Code of Civil Procedure means the series of acts or transactions alleged to exist giving rise to the relief claimed. In other words "subject-matter" means the bundle of facts which have to be proved in order to entitle the plaintiff to the relief claimed by him. We accept as correct the observations of Wallis, C. J., in Singa Reddi v. Subba Reddi, ILR 39 Mad 987= (AIR 1917 Mad 512 (2)) (FB) that where the cause of action and the relief claimed in the second suit are not the same as the cause of action and the relief claimed in the first suit, the second suit cannot be considered to have been brought in respect of the same subject-matter as the first suit.

6. For the reasons mentioned above this appeal fails and the same is dismissed with costs.

Appeal dismissed.

AIR 1970 SUPREME COURT 989

(V 57 C 205)

(From: Patna)

M. HIDAYATULLAH, C. J., G. K. MITTER AND A. N. GROVER, JJ.

Ganga Prasad and others, Appellants v. The State of Bihar, Respondents.

Criminal Appeal No. 90 of 1967, D/-2-4-1970.

Essential Commodities Act (1955), Section 7 — Conviction under — Propriety — Dealer charged for storing foodgrains without entering in stock register — Seizure of stock-book and other registers — Delay in filing complaint — Conviction of accused mainly on ground of tampering with record while in possession of Supply Officer — Failure to prove that tampering was in interest of dealer or made at his instance — Other records not proving prosecution case — Held, conviction was improper — Decision of Patna High Court, Reversed. (Paras 4, 6)

DN/EN/B670/70/DVT/B

The following Judgment of the Court was delivered by

MITTER, J.—This is an appeal by special leave from an order of the High Court of Patna dismissing in limine the appellants' application for revision challenging their conviction under Section 7 of the Essential Commodities Act and sentence of a fine of Rs. 500/- on each or in default simple imprisonment of six months.

2. The facts are as follows. On 9th August 1965, the District Supply Officer of Arrah noticed a cart loaded with six bags of rice being taken out of a godown belonging to the firm of Ganga Prasad Sitaram whereof the appellants were partners. Not satisfied with the explanation given by the cartman in answer to his query as to the destination of the rice he entered the godown and checked the stock register and other relevant papers. He obtained a statement in writing Ex. 1 from the appellant Ganga Prasad of the food-grains received by him on August 9, 1965. He had the transactions verified by his supply inspector. At his direction Ganga Prasad also made out another list giving full details of all the food grains of different kinds held in stock on that day. This was marked as Ex. 1/1 in the proceedings before the Magistrate. He had the entire stock weighed and verified. He took away the books of account of the appellants including the stock register, Cariwani Bahi (register of carts bringing food grains), cash and credit memo books. The stock of food grains in the godown was seized on August 12, 1965. More than a month thereafter a complaint was lodged by the District Supply Officer in the Court of the Sub-Divisional Officer Arrah, Sadar, charging the appellants and three other persons with contravention of Clause 7 of the Bihar Food Grains Licensing Order 1963 promulgated under Section 3 of the Essential Commodities Act, 1955 and triable summarily under Section 12-A of the Essential Commodities Act. Leaving out of account certain minor irregularities alleged to have been committed by them the gravamen of the charge was that the appellants had on the date of inspection of the godown by the said officer stored 72 bags of rice not entered in their stock register.

3. Even before the lodging of the complaint and subsequent thereto the appellants filed in the Court of the Sub-Divisional Magistrate a number of petitions for release of the food grains seized. The order sheet shows that the Magistrate directed the District Supply Officer to submit his report dealing with each paragraph of the petition presented on the 1st September 1965. Little heed appears to have been paid to this requisition. The complaint filed on September 16, 1965 shows that nine items of food grains had been seized by the District Supply Officer including 1021 bags of rice. The District Supply Officer however did not file a copy of the seizure list nor the books of account seized nor the original statement in writing of Ganga Prasad dated the 9th August showing the arrival of food grains at the godown on that day. As the complaint was limited to the item of 72 bags of rice alleged to have been found in the stock in excess of the quantity shown on the register, the appellants filed a petition before the Magistrate for release of all the other food grains. The order sheet under date October 13 records that the District Supply Officer did not want to reply to the query made by the Court. The Magistrate passed an order of release of all the food grains including 949 bags of rice but excluding the above mentioned 72 bags.

4. Several witnesses were examined before the Magistrate hearing the case in 1966. The defence did not call any evidence but relied on their books of account to show that the complaint was not justified. The Magistrate found against the appellants mainly on the case made by the prosecution that there had been tampering with Ex. 1 while in the custody of the Supply Department. According to the prosecution Ex. 1 before it was tampered with had sixteen figures under the column "rice" of which the first was 10 and the fourth 81 and the total of the figures in the column in the handwriting of Ganga Prasad was 1137. The document as it stands now shows the first item as the figure 100 and the fourth 81. If these were the figures originally entered by the appellant, the total should not have been 1137 as recorded by Ganga Prasad but 1207. The case of the appellants was that the figure under the column for rice had been wrongly totalled as 1137 and should have been recorded as 1207 and that the figure in the first column was 100 and the fourth 81 as originally entered but that someone had done some over-writing not only on these but on several other figures as well. It was their further case that two bags of rice had been wrongly recorded under the column for "peas" and that the correct figure with regard to the arrival of bags of rice in the godown on 9th August was 1209. The learned Magistrate accepted the prosecution case which was based on the copies of Exs. 1 and 1/1 attested by a Magistrate and marked as Exs. 15/3 and 15/2. The Magistrate does not appear to have looked at the other documents including the stock book and the cart register to see whether there were any discrepancies between the figures as recorded therein and those made out by the appellant in Exs. 1 and 1/1 under the instructions of the District Supply Officer. He held that the prosecution had proved its case with regard to the 72 bags and convicted the appellants as stated above.

5. As the High Court dismissed the revision petition summarily we have not had the benefit of its judgment or the reasons which impelled the High Court to turn down the contention of the appellants. Before us counsel for the appellants contended that although Ex. 1 and the attested copy thereof Ex. 15/2 appear to contain manipulations these could not have been done by the appellants or for their benefit. Ex. 1/1 which shows the total stock of food grains in the godown contains various figures in three columns under the head "rice". The figures in these three columns add up to 1330. There is no suggestion of any interpolation, so far as these figures are concerned. Ex. 10 the cart register which records the different quantities of food grains received at the godown by truck or cart on 9-8-1965 contains 16 items, the total whereof comes to 1207. There is no dispute that on 8th August there were in stock 121 bags of rice. If the appellants' case with regard to two bags of rice wrongly recorded as peas be accepted, the total number of bags of rice in the godown on 9th August when the inspection was made by the Supply Officer comes to 1330. This fits in with the appellants' case as made in the petition presented to the Sub-Divisional Officer, Sadar, Arrah on 21st September 1965 showing that there were 1330 bags of rice in the godown on 9th August and that 309 bags of rice had been sold in between 9th August and 12th August when a stock of 1021 bags was seized. The appellants prayed for release of the entire stock of food grains with the exception of 72 bags of rice i.e., the subject-matter of the complaint. They expressly stated that 949 bags (1021-72) of rice should be released. Before us there was no challenge with regard to these figures and counsel for the respondent was unable to point out any flaw in the argument advanced on behalf of the appellants that the books of account of the appellants disclosed that all the bags of rice stored in the godown had been duly accounted for and that the total of 1137 bags as recorded in Ex. 1 was only due to an error in adding up the different figures. The figures culled from the stock register, the cart register and the evidence adduced in the case leave no room for doubt that the appellants' version was the correct one and that they had not failed to account for the presence of any bags of rice in their godown on 9th August. It did however appear to us by a look at the original of Ex. 1 as compared with the attested copy Ex. 15/2 that there was some over-writing on the first four figures in the column headed "rice". The appellants could not explain how the figure 1137 was arrived at and counsel suggested that it had crept in through an error. The first four figures under the column "rice" in Ex. 1 excite suspicion and afford room for the contention that there was some interpolation or overwriting. But assuming that the document has been tampered with, it is not possible to hold the appellants responsible for it. The stock register and the cart register taken possession of by the District Supply Officer on August 9, about the genuineness of which no question was raised falsifies the document Ex. 1 if the first and the fourth figures be taken as 10 and 81. The appellants did not stand to benefit by over-writing or interpolation in Ex. 1 unless they could also make similar interpolations or over-writing in the stock register and the cart register.

6. We accept the case of the appellants that the stock of rice in the godown on August 8 was 121 bags and that 1209 bags were received by trucks or carts on 9th August including two bags of rice which were wrongly recorded as peas. We also accept the appellants' case that there were 1330 bags of rice in stock on 9th August and that 1021 bags constituted all the stock of rice in the godown when the seizure of the food grains took place on 12th August. These being the correct figures there was no need for the appellants to make any interpolations in Ex. 1. In our opinion, the evidence points to the manipulations having been made while the document was in the custody of the Supply Officer or his department and the filing of a copy of Ex. 1 as interpolated before attestation by a Magistrate was with a sinister motive. We cannot also fail to record that the withholding of the books of account of the appellants for a space of more than two months was not justified on the facts of the case. It appears to us that a false case was deliberately launched against the appellants and that the manipulation in Ex. 1 accounts for the delay in the filing of the complaint after the seizure of the stock. The appeal is allowed. The fine, if paid, will be refunded. We hope that the authorities concerned will take note of our comments on the working of the Supply Department.

Appeal allowed.

AIR 1970 SUPREME COURT 992

(V 57 C 206)

(From: Madras)

J. C. SHAH, K. S. HEGDE AND
A. N. GROVER, JJ.

Joint Registrar of Co-operative Societies, Madras and others. Appellants v. P. S. Rajagopal Naidu, Govindarajulu and others, Respondents.

Civil Appeals Nos. 2525 and 2526 of 1969, D/- 6-4-1970.

(A) Co-operative Societies — Madras Co-operative Societies Act (53 of 1961), Section 72 (1) — Supersession of society under Section 71 — Recourse to Sections 64 to 67 need not be taken — Madras High Court decision Reversed.

The Registrar before taking action under section 72 need not have an audit made u/s. 64 and inquiry held u/s. 65 and an inspection made u/s 68 of the Act and need not be given an opportunity for rectification of the defects which may come to light as a result of such audit, inquiry or inspection.

(Para 8)

All that is required by Section 72 (1) (a) is that the Registrar should form an opinion that the Committee of any Registered Society is not functioning properly or has wilfully disobeyed or failed to comply with any lawful order or direction issued by him. The requisite opinion has to be formed honestly and after applying his mind by the Registrar to the relevant materials before him. The only condition precedent for taking action under Section 72 (1) is that the Registrar must consult the financing bank to which the Society is indebted. So far as the question of the Society not functioning properly is concerned, that may depend on what the Registrar discovers after a proper audit, enquiry and inspection. But he can form that opinion even on material aliunde and the language of the section does not warrant by necessary implication the taking of the view that he is bound to form that opinion after following the entire procedure prescribed by the Sections 64 to 69. It may be that when the Registrar acts under the second limb of Section 72 (1) (a) and proposes to supersede the committee for wilful disobedience or wilful failure to comply with any lawful order or direction issued by the Registrar under the Act or the rule that the provisions contained in Sections 64, 65 and 68 may become relevant. But that does not and cannot mean that the Registrar must as a condition precedent give a direction under those sections for the defects or the irregularities to be remedied and should take action only under the second limb when there is a wilful disobedience or wilful failure to comply with those orders or directions. An action taken under section 72 without giving an opportunity to the member, officer or the society to rectify the defects found after an audit, inquiry or inspection held under Ss. 64, 65 and 68 would not constitute an exercise of power without jurisdiction. Madras High Court decision Reversed.

(Para 8)

(B) Constitution of India, Article 226 — Writ jurisdiction — High Court will not act as Court of appeal.

The High Court cannot act as an Appellate Court and re-appraise and re-examine the relevant facts and circumstances which led to the making of the order of supersession under Section 72, Madras Co-operative Societies Act as if the matter before it had been brought by way of appeal.

(Para 10)

(C) Co-operative Societies — Madras Co-operative Societies Act (53 of 1961), Section 72 — Supersession of society — Writ against — High Court will not act as court of appeal and re-appraise facts.

(Para 10)

Mr. S. Govind Swaminathan, Advocate-General for the State of Tamil Nadu (M/s. S. Mohan and A. V. Rangam, Advocates with him), for Appellants (In both the Appeals); Mr. D. Munikanaiah Sr. Advocate (Mr. G. S. Rama Rao, Advocate with him), for Respondents (In Civil Appeal No. 2525 of 1969); Mr. D. Munikanaiah Sr. Advocate (Mr. G. Narasimulu, Advocate with him), for Respondents (In Civil Appeal No. 2526 of 1969).

The following Judgment of the Court was delivered by

GROVER, J.: These appeals from a judgment of the Madras High Court involve the true ambit, scope and content of Section 72 of the Madras Co-operative Societies Act, 1961 (hereinafter called the Act).

2. The facts may be briefly stated. On 4th January, 1969 the Joint Registrar of Co-operative Societies issued a Notice u/s 72 of the Act to the Committee of the North Arcot District Co-operative Supply and Marketing Society Ltd. It was stated in the notice that the Committee had not been functioning properly for some time past. Charges were mentioned in detail and the Committee was called upon to make a representation against the proposal to dissolve it in view of the defects and irregularities mentioned in the notice. After examining the representation which was quite lengthy and detailed, the joint Registrar recorded an Order on 11th April, 1969 dealing with each charge and holding that the Committee had not been functioning properly and had failed to perform its duties and discharge its responsibilities as required under the Act. The Committee was ordered to be suspended for a period of one year from 12th April, 1969 to 11th April, 1970. The Deputy Registrar of Co-operative Societies was appointed to work as a Special Officer and to manage its affairs for that period. The matter was taken in appeal to the Registrar by the Committee. The Registrar affirmed the Order of the Joint Registrar. Thereafter the President and the Director of the Co-operative Society moved the High Court under Article 226 of the Constitution. A number of points were taken in the writ petition but the main emphasis was laid on the proper procedure not having been followed under sections 64, 65 and 66 of the Act before taking action u/s 72.

3. The learned single Judge of the High Court allowed the writ petition which had been filed by the President and the Director of the Co-operative Society. The Learned Judge was not satisfied that there was any justification for the action taken by the Joint Registrar in the matter of supersession of the Committee. On appeals having been taken before a Division Bench under Clause 15 of the Letters Patent the case was referred to a Full Bench. The Full Bench based its decision largely on the view that the procedure laid down in Sections 64, 65 and 66 must be followed before any order could be made by the Joint Registrar or the Registrar u/s. 72. We may refer to the following portion of the judgment;

"Sections 64, 65 and 66, which are the statutory procedural stems which interdict the apparently arbitrary course of action which a Registrar could undertake to interfere with the affairs of a society, its members or officers, provide a sufficient help to tighten up such indiscriminate and unguided exercise of the powers by the Registrar, when it becomes necessary. In each of those sections it is incumbent on the Registrar to give an opportunity to the member concerned, officer concerned or the Society to rectify the defects".....

"In our view and under the scheme of the Act, the condition precedent to the exercise of jurisdiction by the Registrar under one or the other of the sections considered above and in particular Section 72 is to secure an audit memorandum or a report of inspection or inquiry, so that he may be provided with the necessary material to act thereon. Unless such a fact finding authority has provided the Registrar with the hypothesis to act and ultimately supersede an elected body, the impugned order of supersession will undoubtedly be tainted with the absence of a jurisdictional basis. Whether such a basis exists, is subject to review by this Court in exercise of its jurisdiction under Article 226 of the Constitution of India."

4. The Full Bench affirmed the decision of the Learned single Judge.

5. The points which have been argued before us and which have to be determined are:—

(i) Whether the Registrar before taking action u/s 72 must have an audit made u/s. 64 and inquiry held u/s 65 and an inspection made u/s 66 of the Act and must also give an opportunity for rectification of the defects which may come to light as a result of such audit, inquiry or inspection?

(ii) What is the scope of interference by the High Court with the Order of a Registrar made u/s 72 of the Act?

6. The Act was enacted to amend and consolidate the law relating to and to make better provision for the organisation of Co-operative Societies in the State of Madras. Section 2 (2) defines the expression "Committee" to mean the governing body of a registered society to whom the management of its affairs is entrusted. By Section 2 (1) the "Registrar" is defined to mean a person appointed to perform the duties of a Registrar of Co-operative Societies under the Act, and includes a person on whom all or any of the powers of a Registrar under the Act have been conferred under Section 3. Section 4 provides for the societies which may be registered. Chapter III gives the sections relating to the qualifications of the members and their rights and liabilities. Chapter IV contains provisions in respect of management of registered societies. Under S. 26 (1) the ultimate authority of a registered society vests in the general body of its members. Under Section 27 the general body of a registered society has to constitute a Committee in accordance with the by-laws and entrust the management of the affairs of the registered society to such Committee. The term of office of an elected member of any Committee is 3 years but one-third of the members elected to the Committee at the first election have to retire at the end of the first year after such election and the other one-third of the members elected have to retire at the end of the second year after such election and so on. The members so to retire at the end of the first and second years have to be determined by lot by the Committee. According to Section 28 (4) no member of a Committee against whom an order under sub-section (1) of Section 71 has been passed, shall be eligible for election or appointment as a member of the Committee for a period of three years. Sub-section (5) of Section 28 provides that no member of a Committee which has been superseded shall be eligible for election or appointment to the Committee for a period of three years from the date of expiry of the period of supersession. Section 28 (A) is in the following terms:

"(1) Where in the course of an audit under Section 64 or an inquiry under Section 65 or an inspection under Section 66 or Section 67, it appears that a person who is, or was, a member of a Committee has misappropriated or fraudulently retained any money or other property or been guilty of breach of trust in relation to the society or of gross or persistent negligence in connection with the conduct and management of, or of gross mismanagement of the affairs of the society or of misfeasance or default in carrying out his obligations and functions under the Law, the Registrar may, without prejudice to any other action that may be taken against such member, by order in writing, remove such person from the office of member of committee if he holds such office, or disqualify him from holding in future the office of a member of the committee, if he has ceased to hold such office.

(2) No person shall be removed or disqualified under sub-section (1) without being given an opportunity of making his representations. A copy of the order removing or disqualifying him shall be communicated to him."

7. Chapter V relates to the duties and privileges of registered societies. Chapter VI relates to State aid to registered societies and Chapter VII relates to their property and funds. We are concerned primarily with the provisions of Chapter VIII which begins with Section 64. Sub-section (1) thereof makes it obligatory on the Registrar to audit or cause to be audited by some person authorised by him in writing the accounts of every registered society once at least in every year. Under sub-section (4) every person who is or has been an officer or employee of the society and every member and past member has to furnish such information in regard to the transactions and working of the society as the Registrar or the person authorised by him may require. Sub-section (5) says that the Registrar may, by order in writing, direct any officer of the society to take such action as may be specified in the order to remedy, within such time as may be specified, the defects if any, disclosed as a result of the audit. Section 65 authorises the Registrar on his own motion or on the application of a majority of the Committee or on the request of the Collector, to hold an inquiry, or direct some person authorised by him in writing to hold an inquiry into the constitution, working and financial condition of a registered society. Under sub-section (2) powers have been conferred inter alia to have free access to the books of accounts etc., summoning and examination of persons on oath having knowledge of the affairs of the society. When an inquiry is held u/s 65 the Registrar must communicate its result in the manner and to the persons and institutions set out in sub-section (3). Sub-section (4) lays down that Registrar may, by order in writing, direct any officer of the society or its financing bank to take such action as may be specified in the order to remedy the defects, disclosed as a result of the enquiry. Section 66 empowers the Registrar on his own motion or on the application of a creditor of a registered society to inspect or direct any person to inspect the books of the society. After the inspection has been made the Registrar has to communicate the results of the inspection in the manner set out in sub-section (2). Sub-section (3) enables the Registrar to direct any officer of the society to take such action as may be specified in the order to remedy the defects, if any, disclosed as a result of the inspection. Section 67 gives the right to a financing bank to inspect the books of any registered society which is indebted to it. Section 70 (1) is reproduced below:

"70(1) Where in the course of an audit under section 64 or an inquiry under Section 65 or an inspection under Section 66 or Section 67, it is brought to the notice of the Registrar that a paid officer or servant of a registered society has committed or has been otherwise responsible for misappropriation, breach of trust or other offence, in relation to the society, the Registrar, may, if in his opinion, there is prima facie evidence against such paid officer or servant and the suspension of such paid officer or servant is necessary in the interests of the society, direct the committee of the society pending the investigation and disposal of the matter, to place or cause to be placed such paid officer or servant under suspension from such date and for such period as may be specified by him."

Section 71 contains provisions relating to surcharge and says that where in the course of an audit u/s 64 or an inquiry u/s 65 or an inspection u/s 66 or Section 67 or the winding up of a society, it appears that any person who is or was entrusted with the organization or management of the society or any past or present officer or servant of the society has misappropriated or fraudulently retained any money or other property or has been guilty of breach of trust in relation to the society or has caused any deficiency in the assets of the society by breach of trust or wilful negligence the Registrar may enquire into the conduct of such person, officer or servant and make an order requiring him to repay or restore the money or property or to contribute such sum to the assets of the society by way of compensation. Under the proviso, such an inquiry must be held within 6 years from the date of any act or omission and an opportunity must be afforded to the person against whom the order is sought to be made. Section 72 (1) (a) which is material for our purposes reads:

"72 (1) (a) If, in the opinion of the Registrar, the committee of any registered society, is not functioning properly or wilfully disobeys or wilfully fails to comply with any lawful order or direction issued by the Registrar under this Act or the rules, he may, after giving the committee an opportunity of making its representations, by order in writing dissolve the committee and appoint either a person (hereinafter referred to as the special officer) or a committee of two or more persons (hereinafter referred to as the managing committee) to manage the affairs of the society for a specified period not exceeding two years."

Sub-section (6) makes it obligatory on the Registrar to consult the financing bank to which the society is indebted before taking any action under sub-section (1). It will be useful at this stage to reproduce Section 85 (1) which relates to winding up of registered societies:

"85 (1) If the Registrar, after an inquiry has been held under section 65 or an inspection has been made under Section 66 or section 67, or on receipt of an application made by not less than three-fourths of the members of a registered society, is of opinion that the society ought to be wound up, he may, after giving the society an opportunity of making its representations, by order in writing direct it to be wound up. A copy of the order shall forthwith be communicated to the society by registered post".

8. It is significant that Section 72 (1) does not contain any mention of Sections 64 to 67 which appear in Sec. 70 (1) and of Sections 65, 66 and 67 which are expressly mentioned in Section 85 (1). If the intention of the Legislature was that the supersession of the Committee under Section 72 can be ordered by the Registrar only after recourse to Sections 64, 65, 66 and 67, there is no reason why language analogous to Section 70 (1) or Sections 85 (1) containing an express mention of the aforesaid sections, should not have been employed. An audit under Section 64 has to be done every year in view of the mandatory form of the language of that Section 64. But as regards Sections 65 and 66 the Registrar has been given the discretionary powers to make an inquiry or an inspection in accordance with those sections, there is no duty or obligation cast on him for doing so before he proceeds to take action u/s 72. All that is required by Section 72 (1) (a) is that the Registrar should form an opinion that the Committee of any Registered society is not functioning properly or has wilfully disobeyed or failed to comply with any lawful order or direction issued by him. So far as the question of the society not functioning properly is concerned, that may depend on what the Registrar discovers after a proper audit, enquiry and inspection. But he can form that opinion even on material aliunde and the language of the section does not warrant by necessary implication the taking of the view that he is bound to form that opinion after following the entire procedure prescribed by the other sections under discussion. At any rate it is not possible to read a requirement whilst taking action u/s 72 of satisfying the provisions in the aforesaid sections by making a direction in the first instance to remedy the defects disclosed as a result of the audit, inquiry or inspection. The functioning of the society may be so irregular and the defects disclosed so blatant and prejudicial to the society that no question can arise of any direction being made in the first instance for their being remedied by the persons or officers concerned. It may be that when the Registrar acts under the second limb of Section 72 (1) (a) and proposes to supersede the committee for wilful disobedience or wilful failure to comply with any lawful order or direction issued by the Registrar under the Act or the rule that the provisions contained in Sections 64, 65 and 66 may become relevant. But that does not and cannot mean that the Registrar must as a condition precedent give a direction under those sections for the defects or the irregularities to be remedied and should take action only under the second limb i.e. when there is a wilful disobedience or wilful failure to comply with those orders or directions. It may be that the opinion which the Registrar has to form must be based on some objective facts but those objective facts in the absence of any clear indication u/s 72 cannot be confined to what may be disclosed after the Registrar has exercised powers in the matter of audit, inquiry and inspection under the provisions of Sections 64, 65 and 66. Thus even though the opinion may be a purely subjective process, there must be cogent material on which the Registrar has to form his opinion that the society is not functioning properly in order to sustain the issuance of a notice u/s 72 (1) (a) and subsequent supersession of the Committee after considering its representation on that ground. The requisite opinion has indisputably to be formed honestly and after applying his mind by the Registrar to the relevant materials before him the only condition precedent for taking action u/s 72 (1) is that the Registrar must consult the financing bank to which the society is indebted (vide sub-section (6)). There is no other requirement or condition precedent laid down by the Legislature which the Registrar must fulfil before he acts in the matter of supersession of the Committee. We are unable to concur in the view of the High Court that an action taken u/s 72 without giving an opportunity to the member, officer or the society to rectify the defects found after an audit, inquiry or inspection held under Sections 64, 65 and 66 would constitute an exercise of power without jurisdiction.

9. The single Judge laid a great deal of emphasis on the Committee being an elected body and the prejudice that would be caused to its members if they are visited with the consequences of supersession on account of irregularities and improper functioning of the previous members of the Committee. What was argued before the High Court was that one-third members of the Committee have to retire every year and fresh members have to be elected. If certain grave irregularities are committed, say in the years 1964, 1965, it would be unfair to the new members who have been elected to supersede the Committee in 1968. We do not consider that that would be the correct approach in construing Section 72 which is meant for superseding the Committee as a whole when its working discloses such irregularities or improprieties as would justify its supersession. Normally it would be expected that only that Committee would be superseded whose functioning has been found to be highly defective. The object of supersession apparently is to appoint a Special Officer or a managing committee in order to set the working of the society right. It is not difficult to envisage a situation where mal-administration by a committee has so adversely affected the functioning of the society that it is essential in the interests of the society itself to give temporarily the control of its affairs to a new tral authority. At any rate if the operation of Section 72 in certain circumstances is likely to operate harshly so far as certain members of the committee are concerned, it is not possible to read into it other provisions of the Act which are not incorporated in the section expressly or by necessary implication.

10. We have been taken through the material parts of the orders of the Registrar and the Joint Registrar and we do not find any such infirmities in them which would justify interference by the High Court under Article 226 of the Constitution. The High Court could not act as an appellate Court and reappraise and re-examine the relevant facts and circumstances which led to the making of the orders of supersession as if the matter before it had been brought by way of appeal. The limits of the jurisdiction of the High Court under Art. 226 when a writ in the nature of certiorari is to be issued are well known and well settled by now and it is pointless to restate the grounds on which any such writ or direction can be issued. We are satisfied that there was no justification whatsoever for quashing the orders of the Joint Registrar and that of the Registrar in appeal. The appeals are consequently allowed with costs and the judgment of the High Court is set aside. The writ petitions are ordered to be dismissed. One hearing fee.

Appeals allowed.

AIR 1970 SUPREME COURT 997
(V 57 C 207)

(From: Madhya Pradesh)

J. C. SHAH AND K. S. HEGDE, JJ.

Nainsingh, Appellant v. Koonwarjee and others, Respondents.

Civil Appeal No. 1460 of 1966, D/- 2-4-1970.

(A) Civil P. C. (1908), Order 41, R. 23 — Remand of case by Appellate Court — Order of remand is appealable under Order 43 — Order not appealed against — Its correctness is no more open to examination in view of Section 105 (2) — Review of remand order in exercise of inherent power is erroneous. Decision of Madhya Pradesh High Court Reversed. (Para 4)

(B) Civil P. C. (1908), Section 151 — Inherent powers — Court cannot make use of Section where a party had his remedy provided elsewhere in the Code and he neglected to avail himself of the same — Power cannot be exercised as an appellate power — Review of remand order, falling under Section 105 (2), in exercise of inherent power is erroneous. Decision of Madhya Pradesh High Court, Reversed. (Para 4)
DN/DN/B665/70/CWM/D.

(C) Tenancy Laws — M. B. Abolition of Jagirs Act (28 of 1951), Section 8 — Suit for declaration of title and for possession by Jagirdar — Commencement of Act during pendency of suit — Plaintiff does not lose his rights in suit properties — Although suit properties vest in State the plaintiff is entitled to compensation if he is proved to have been owner of suit properties on the day of commencement of the Act — (Case remanded to High Court with direction that State be impleaded and rights of all parties be decided in accordance with law.) Decision of Madhya Pradesh High Court, Reversed. AIR 1966 SC 1974, Applied. (Para 5)

(D) Civil P. C. (1908), Section 105 (2) — Review of remand order falling under Section 105 (2) in exercise of inherent power is erroneous. Decision of Madhya Pradesh High Court, Reversed. (Para 4)
Cases Referred: Chronological Paras
(1966) AIR 1966 SC 1974 (V 53)=
1966-3 SCR 815, Himatrao v. Jai-kishandas 5

The following Judgment of the Court was delivered by

HEGDE, J.:— The only question that falls for decision in this appeal by special leave is as to the application of Section 151, Civil Procedure Code to a remand order falling within Section 105 (2) of that Code.

2. The facts leading upto the point under consideration may now be stated. The appellant was the Jagirdar of the suit properties. One Bhagirath was his tenant. The said Bhagirath died in the year 1947 leaving behind no male issues. His wife had predeceased him. He had two daughters who were living at the time of his death. After his death, defendants Nos. 1 to 5 who are his distant relations took possession of the suit properties and got the revenue records changed in their names. Thereafter the appellant brought the suit under appeal seeking the following reliefs:—

(1) to declare that he is the owner of the suit properties; (2) to quash the order of the Tehsildar dated November 8, 1949 transferring the khata relating to the suit properties to the names of Defendants 1 to 5; (3) to grant possession of those properties to him and (4) other usual incidental reliefs.

3. The defendants resisted the plaintiff's claim. They contended inter alia that (1) the Civil Court had no jurisdiction to entertain the suit; (2) the plaintiff had lost right over the suit properties in view of the Jagirs Abolition Act, 1951 which came into force on December 4, 1952 during the pendency of the suit and (3) the 1st defendant being the adopted son of Bhagrath is entitled to the possession of the suit properties. In the suit several issues were raised. It is not necessary to refer to them in view of the limited scope of this appeal. The trial Court dismissed the suit upholding the contention of the defendants on two issues viz., (1) that the Civil Court had no jurisdiction to entertain the suit and (2) that in view of the abolition of jagirs and the vesting of the suit properties in the State, the plaintiff can claim no relief. The first appellate Court reversed the findings of the trial Court on those issues. It came to the conclusion that the Civil Court had jurisdiction to entertain the suit. It further held that though in view of the abolition of the jagirs, the suit properties had vested in the State, it was for the State to get itself impleaded if it is interested in this litigation and as the State had not chosen to get itself impleaded, it was open to the plaintiff to press the suit. In view of those conclusions, the Appellate Court set aside the decree of the Trial Court and remanded the suit to the trial Court for deciding the other issues left undecided. After the remand, the trial Court negatived every one of the contentions taken by the defendants and decreed the suit as prayed for. In appeal that decree was confirmed. In second appeal the High Court of Madhya Pradesh agreed with the Trial Court and the Appellate Court on the findings given on all issues excepting the issue relating to the effect of abolition of the jagirs on the suit. On that issue, it came to the conclusion that in view of the abolition of jagirs under the Jagirs Abolition Act, the plaintiff had lost his title to the suit properties and therefore he could not get a decree for possession of the suit properties. It rejected the contention of the plaintiff that that issue is concluded by the decision of the Appellate Court made before remand as the same had not been appealed against. It opined that the Court had inherent power to consider the correctness of that order. It accordingly allowed the appeal and dismissed the suit.

4. The High Court, in our opinion, erred in holding that the correctness of the remand order was open to review by it. The order in question was made under Rule 23, Order 41, Civil Procedure Code. That order was appealable under Order 43 of that Code. As the same was not appealed against, its correctness was no more open to examination in view of Section 105 (2) of the Code which lays down that where any party aggrieved by an order of remand from which an appeal lies does not appeal therefrom he shall thereafter be precluded from disputing its correctness. The High Court has misconceived the scope of its inherent powers. Under the inherent power of Courts recognised by S. 151, C. P. C., a Court has no power to do that which is prohibited by the Code. Inherent jurisdiction of the Court must be exercised subject to the rule that if the Code does contain specific provisions which would meet the necessities of the case, such provisions should be followed and inherent jurisdiction should not be invoked. In other words the Court cannot make use of the special provisions of Section 151 of the Code where a party had his remedy provided elsewhere in the Code and he neglected to avail himself of the same. Further the power under Section 151 of the Code cannot be exercised as an appellate power.

5. We are also of the opinion that the High Court is not right in holding that in view of the abolition of the jagirs, the plaintiff had lost all rights in the suit properties. It is true that in view of the provisions of the Jagirs Abolition Act, the suit properties vested in the State. But it was conceded at the bar that if the plaintiff is proved to have been the owner of the suit properties on the day the Jagirs Abolition Act came into force, he is entitled to the compensation provided in that Act. Therefore the plaintiff is interested in establishing that on the date Jagirs Abolition Act came into force, he was the full owner of the suit properties. The facts of this case fall within the rule laid down by this Court in Himatrao v. Jaikishandas, 1966-3 SCR 815 = (AIR 1966 SC 1974). On the facts of this case the interests of justice would have been better served if the High Court had ordered the impleading of the State of Madhya Pradesh in the appeal before it and determined the rights of all the parties finally. Hence we set aside the decree of the High Court and remand the case to that Court with a direction that the State of Madhya Pradesh should be impleaded and the rights of all the parties decided in accordance with law. In the circumstances of the case we make no order as to costs of this appeal.

Order accordingly.

AIR 1970 SUPREME COURT 999 (V 57 C 208)

(From Mysore: AIR 1962 Mys 269)

M. HIDAYATULLAH, C. J., J. C. SHAH,
A. N. GROVER, A. N. RAY AND
I. D. DUA, JJ.

The Second Gift Tax Officer, Mangalore, etc., Appellants v. D. H. Hazareth etc., Respondents.

Civil Appeals Nos. 664 to 669 of 1967,
D/- 2-4-1970.

(A) Constitution of India, Article 245 — Overlapping entries — Pith and substance rule to be applied.

The sovereignty of Parliament and the Legislatures is a sovereignty of enumerated entries, but within the ambit of an entry, the exercise of power is as plenary as any legislature can possess, subject, of course, to the limitations arising from the Fundamental Rights. Since the entries are likely to overlap occasionally, it is usual to examine the pith and substance of legislation with a view to determining to which entry they can be substantially related, a slight connection with another entry in another list notwithstanding. If, however, no entry in any of the three lists covers it, then it must be regarded as a matter not enumerated in any of the three lists. Then it belongs exclusively to Parliament under Entry 97 of the Union List as a topic of legislation, and Article 248. AIR 1959 SC 544, Relied on. (Para 5)

(B) Constitution of India, Article 248 and Sch. VII, List I, Entry 97 — Subject-matter not covered by any of the entries in any of the Lists — It belongs exclusively to Parliament. (Para 5)

(C) Gift Tax Act (1958), Preamble — Act is validly made by Parliament. AIR 1962 Mys 269, Reversed.

The Gift Tax Act was enacted by Parliament and no entry in the Union List or the Concurrent List mentions such a tax. Therefore, Parliament purported to use its powers derived from Entry 97 of the Union List read with Article 248 of the Constitution. The pith and substance of Gift Tax Act is to place the tax on the gift of property which may include land and buildings. It is not a tax imposed directly upon lands and buildings but is a tax upon the value of the total gifts made in any year which is above the exempted limit. Since Entry 49 of the State List contemplates a tax directly levied by reason of the general ownership of lands and buildings, it cannot include the gift tax as levied by Parliament. There being no other entry which covers a gift tax, the residuary powers of Parliament could be exercised to enact a law. AIR 1962 Mys 269, held impliedly Overruled by AIR 1969 SC 59; AIR 1962 Mys 269, Reversed; AIR 1969 SC 59, Applied. (Paras 6, 11)

(D) Constitution of India, Article 248, Sch. VII, List I, Entry 97 — Gift Tax Act (1958), is validly made by Parliament. AIR 1962 Mys 269, Reversed. (Paras 6, 11)

(E) Constitution of India, Sch. VII, List 2, Entry 49 — Gift Tax Act (1958) does not fall under Entry 49. AIR 1962 Mys 269, Reversed. (Paras 6, 11)

Cases Referred: Chronological Paras (1969) AIR 1969 SC 59 (V 56) =

1968-69 ITR 897, Sudhir Chandra Nawn v. Wealth Tax Officer Calcutta 9

(1967) AIR 1967 All 19 (V 54) = 1966 All LJ 622, Shyam Sunder v. Gift Tax Officer 8

(1963) AIR 1963 Mad 419 (V 50) = 1963-49 ITR 712, S. Dhandapani v. Addl. Gift Tax Officer, Cuddalore 8

(1962) AIR 1962 Ker 97 (V 49) = 1964-45 ITR 66, Joseph v. Gift Tax Officer 8

(1960) AIR 1960 Andh Pra 115 (V 47) = 1960-38 ITR 93, Jupadi Sesharatnam v. Gift Tax Officer Palacole 8

(1959) AIR 1959 SC 544 (V 46) = (1959) Supp 1 SCR 904, State of Rajasthan v. S. Chawla 5

Mr. Jagadish Swarup Solicitor-General of India (M/s. S. K. Aiyar and R. N. Sachthey, Advocates with him), for Appellants (In all the Appeals); Mr. S. V. Gupte Senior Advocate (Mrs. A. K. Varma, Advocate, and M/s. J. B. Dadachanji, O. C. Mathur and Ravinder Narain, Advocates of M/s. J. B. Dadachanji & Co., with him), for Respondents (In Civil Appeals Nos. 664, and 668 of 1967); Mr. O. P. Rana, Advocate for the Advocate-General for the State of U. P.; Mr. M. R. K. Pillai, Advocate, for the Advocate-General for State of Kerala; Mr. B. Sen Senior Advocate (Mr. Santosh Chatterjee, Advocate, and Mr. G. S. Chatterjee, Advocate, for Mr. Sukumar Basu, Advocates with him), for the Advocate-General of West Bengal; S. Govind Swaminathan, Advocate-General Tamil Nadu (M/s. A. V. Rangam and M. Subramanian Advocates with him), for Advocate-General, Tamil Nadu; Mr. Lal Narayan Sinha, Advocate-General for State of Bihar (M/s. D. P. Singh and V. J. Francis, Advocates with him), for Advocate-General, Bihar; Mr. K. A. Chitale, Advocate-General for State of Madhya Pradesh (Mr. M. N. Shroff, Advocate for Mr. I. N. Shroff, Advocate with him), for Advocate-General Madhya Pradesh; Mr. E. S. Venkataramiah, Advocate-General for State of Mysore (Mr. S. P. Nayar, Advocate, with him), for Advocate-General of State of Mysore; Dr. J. G. Medhi, Advocate-General for State of Assam (Mr. Naimit Lal, Advocate, with him), for Advocate-General, State of Assam.

The following Judgment of the Court was delivered by

HIDAYATULLAH, C. J.—These six appeals by certificate under Article 132 (1) of the Constitution are filed against the decision of the High Court of Mysore, declaring that Parliament had no power to legislate with respect to taxes on gift of lands and buildings. The High Court passed a detailed judgment on two of the petitions by which the competence of Parliament was challenged and followed its own decisions in the other four cases. It is not necessary to give the facts of the six petitions in the High Court. As illustrative of the facts involved we may mention W. P. No. 1077 of 1959. In that case a certain D. H. Hazarethi, owner of a coffee plantation, made a gift by registered deed, January 22, 1958, of a coffee plantation and other properties in favour of his four sons. The market value of the property was Rs. 3,74,080 and the coffee plantation accounted for Rupees 3,24,700. Gift tax of Rs. 85,012/- was demanded. If the coffee plantation was left out of consideration the tax was liable to be reduced by Rs. 34,036. The authority to charge gift tax on the gift of the coffee plantation was challenged and the right of Parliament to impose a gift tax on lands and buildings questioned. In some of the other cases agricultural or paddy lands or buildings were the subjects of gifts and they were similarly taxed and the tax questioned.

2. The High Court held that Entry 49 of the State List read with Entry 18 of the same list reserved the power to tax lands and buildings to the Legislature of the States and Parliament could not, therefore, use the residuary power conferred by Entry 97 of the Union List. This decision is challenged before us.

3. The Gift Tax Act was passed in 1958 and subjected gifts made in the year ending March 31, 1958 to tax. The Act contained the usual exempted limits and other exemptions. We need not concern ourselves with them here. We are only concerned with the validity of parliamentary legislation imposing gift tax at all.

4. To consider the objection to the Gift Tax Act which was sustained by the High Court a few general principles may be borne in mind. Under Article 245 Parliament makes laws for the whole or any part of the territory of India and the Legislatures of the States for the whole or part of their respective States. The subject-matters of laws are set out in three lists in the Seventh Schedule. List I (usually referred to as the Union List) enumerates topics of legislation in respect to which Parliament has exclusive power to make laws and List II (usually referred to as the State List) enumerates topics of legislation in respect to which the State Legislatures have exclusive power to make laws. List III (usually referred to as the Concurrent List) contains topics in respect to which both Parliament and Legislature of a State have power to make laws. Inconsistency between laws made by Parliament and those made by the Legislatures of the States, both acting under the Concurrent List, is resolved by making Parliamentary law to prevail over the law made by the State Legislature. So long as the Parliamentary law continues, the State law remains inoperative but becomes operative once the Parliamentary law, throwing it into shadow, is removed. Then there is the declaration in Article 248 of the residuary powers of legislation. Parliament has exclusive power to make any law in respect to any matter not enumerated in the Concurrent List or State List and this power includes the power of making any law imposing a tax not mentioned in either of those lists. For this purpose, and to avoid any doubts, an entry has also been included in the Union List to the following effect:

"97. Any other matter not enumerated in List II or List III including any tax not mentioned in either of those lists."

5. It will, therefore, be seen that the sovereignty of Parliament and the Legislatures is a sovereignty of enumerated entries, but within the ambit of an entry, the exercise of power is as plenary as any legislature can possess, subject, of course, to the limitations arising from the Fundamental Rights. The entries themselves do not follow any logical classification or dichotomy. As was said in State of Rajasthan v. S. Chawla, (1959) Supp 1 SCR 904 = (AIR 1959 SC 544) the entries in the lists must be regarded as enumeration simplex of broad categories. Since they are likely to overlap occasionally, it is usual to examine the pith and substance of legislation with a view to determining to which entry they can be substantially related, a slight connection with another entry in another list notwithstanding. Therefore, to find out whether a piece of legislation falls within any entry, its true nature and character must be in respect to that particular entry. The entries must of course receive a large and liberal interpretation because the few words of the entry are intended to confer vast and plenary powers. If, however, no entry in any of the three lists covers it, then it must be regarded as a matter not enumerated in any of the three lists. Then it belongs exclusively to Parliament under Entry 97 of the Union List as a topic of legislation.

6. The Gift Tax Act was enacted by Parliament and it is admitted that no entry in the Union List or the Concurrent List mentions such a tax. Therefore, Parliament purported to use its powers derived from Entry 97 of the Union List read with Article 248 of the Constitution. This power admittedly could not be invoked if the subject of taxes on gifts could be said to be comprehended in any entry in the State List. The High Court has accepted the contention of the tax-payers that it is so comprehended in entries 18 and 49 of the State List. Those entries read:

"18. Land, that is to say, rights in or over land, land tenures including the relation of landlord and tenant, and the collection of rents; transfer and alienation of agricultural land; land improvement and agricultural loans; colonization."

"49. Taxes on lands and buildings."

7. The argument is that by Entry 18, 'land' of all description is made subject to legislation in the States and by Entry 49 taxes of whatever description on lands in that large sense and buildings generally fall also in the jurisdiction of the State. Reference is made to Entries 45, 46, 47 and 48 of the State List in which certain taxes are to be imposed on land and agricultural land or income from agricultural land exclusively by the State in contrast with Entries 82, 86, 87 and 88 where the taxes are imposed on properties other than agricultural land or income from agriculture. It is submitted, therefore, that the general scheme of division of taxing and other entries by which land, particularly agricultural land, and income therefrom is reserved for the States shows that taxes on lands and buildings read liberally must also cover taxes in respect of gifts of land particularly agricultural land and buildings. If the entry so read can be reasonably said to include the tax, then there can be no question of recourse to the residuary powers of Parliament.

8. The matter is not res integra and however attractive the argument, it cannot be accepted. Many High Courts in India have considered this matter before the Supreme Court decided it. The Mysore view was not followed in S. Dhandapani v. Addl. Gift Tax Officer, Cuddalore, 1963-49 ITR 712 = (AIR 1963 Mad 419) (Madras High Court); Shyam Sunder v. Gift Tax Officer, AIR 1967 All 19 (disapproved on another point in the Supreme Court). A contrary view was earlier also expressed in Jupadi Sesharatnam v. Gift Officer, Palacole, 1960-38 ITR 93 = (AIR 1960 Andh Pra 115) (Andhra Pradesh High Court) and Joseph v. Gift Tax Officer, 1964-45 ITR 66 = (AIR 1962 Ker 97) (Kerala High Court). In fact the judgment under appeal stands alone.

9. The subject of Entry 49 of the State List in relation to imposition of Wealth Tax came up for consideration in Sudhir Chandra Nawn v. Wealth Tax Officer, Calcutta, 1968-69 ITR 897 = (AIR 1969 SC 59) and the view of the High Court on the construction of this entry was affirmed. Although the judgment under appeal was not referred to expressly the result is that it must be taken to be impliedly overruled. In view of the decision of this Court it is not necessary to deal with the matter except briefly.

10. The Constitution divides the topics of legislation into three broad categories: (a) entries enabling laws to be made, (b) entries enabling taxes to be imposed, and

Cases Referred: Chronological Paras

(1967) AIR 1967 SC 1201 (V 54)=
1967-2 SCR 100, Municipal Committee, Akot v. Manilal Manekji
Pvt. Ltd.(1966) AIR 1966 SC 249 (V 53)=
1965-3 SCR 499, Bharat Kala
Bhandar v. Municipal Committee of Dhamangaon(1963) AIR 1963 SC 1547 (V 50)=
1964-2 SCR 273, Firm Seth
Radha Kishan v. Administrator,
Municipal Committee, LudhianaThe following Judgment of the Court was delivered by

SHAH, J.—The Municipality of Malkapur recovered from the appellants
Rs. 6,980/2/- as "Bale and Boja tax" for three years 1950-51, 1951-52 and 1952-53 in respect of cotton ginned in their factory. The appellants filed a suit in the Court of Civil Judge, Class I, Khamgaon, for an order permanently restraining the Municipality from recovering the "Bale and Boja" tax for the season 1953-54 and for subsequent seasons and for a decree refunding the amount paid and interest thereon.

2. The appellants contended that the levy of the "Bale and Boja" tax was ultra vires the Municipality. The Trial Court decreed the claim for injunction and also awarded the amount claimed less Rupees 750/-. In appeal, the District Court held that the levy of tax at the rate prevailing on March 31, 1939, was saved by the provisions of Section 142-A (2) of the Government of India Act, 1935, and the Municipality was competent to levy tax at that rate. The District Court on that view modified the decree and held that the Municipality was entitled to retain Rupees
1,867/4/-. In second appeal to the High Court of Bombay at Nagpur, the following question was referred to a Full Bench:

"Whether in respect of the recoveries, which are in contravention of the prohibitions contained in sub-section (2) of Section 142-A of the Government of India Act, 1935, and clause (2) of Article 276 of the Constitution, the provisions of Section 48 (2) of the C. P. and Berar
Municipalities Act, 1922 apply?"
The High Court, following the judgment of this Court in Bharat Kala Bhandar v.
Municipal Committee of Dhamangaon,
1965-3 SCR 499 = (AIR 1966 SC 249) answered the question in the negative. The appeal was thereafter placed for hearing on questions not decided by the Full Bench. The Court at that stage entertained and upheld an objection that the suit against the Municipality for refund of tax paid by the appellants was not maintainable. The High Court observed:

"We are bound to follow the decision in Bharat Kala Bhandar v. Dhamangaon
Municipality, 1965-3 SCR 499 =
(AIR 1966 SC 249) but in view of the fact that the relevant provisions were not brought to the notice of the Court and in view of the fact that the decision in Firm Radha Kishan's case, (AIR 1963 SC 1547) holds that the remedy provided by similar provisions is adequate and a suit does not lie, we are constrained to hold that under the Act the suit is incompetent."

The High Court accordingly set aside the decree in favour of the appellants for refund of tax and confirmed the injunction restraining the Municipality from recovering the tax. With certificate granted by the High Court under Article 133 (1)
(c) of the Constitution this appeal has been preferred.

3. Two questions fall to be determined in this appeal — (1) whether a suit for refund of tax paid to the Municipality is maintainable; and (2) if the suit is maintainable, whether the levy of tax by the Municipality was valid in law.

4. The first question is concluded by the judgment of this Court in Bharat Kala
Bhandar's case, 1965-3 SCR 499 =
(AIR 1966 SC 249). That case arose under the C. P. & Berar Municipalities Act, 1922. The right of a Municipality governed by that Act to levy under Section 66 (1) (b) a tax on bales of cotton ginned at the prescribed rate was challenged by a taxpayer. This Court held that levy of tax on cotton ginned by the taxpayer in excess of the amount prescribed by Article 276 of the Constitution was invalid, and since the Municipality had no authority to levy the tax in excess of the rate permitted by the Constitution, the assessment proceedings levying tax in excess of the permissible limit were invalid, and a suit for refund of tax in excess of the amount permitted by Article 276 was maintainable. The decision was binding on the High Court and the High Court could not ignore it because they thought that "relevant provisions were not brought to the notice of the Court".

5. We may also observe that the judgment in Firm Seth Radha Kishan v. Administrator Municipal Committee, Ludhi-ana, 1964-2 SCR 273 = (AIR 1963 SC 1547) on which reliance was placed by the High Court has no relevance. In that case under the Rules of the Municipality of Ludhiana tax on common salt imported within the Municipal limits could be levied at a certain rate, and on all other kinds of salts at a higher rate. On the Sambhar salt imported by the appellants duty was levied at the higher rate. The appellants then filed a suit for decree for refund of excess tax levied, contending that Sambhar salt was common salt. This Court held that the Civil Court had no jurisdiction to entertain the suit, for the liability to pay terminal tax was created by the Act and a remedy was also provided against improper enforcement of the Act. In a case where the Municipality has undoubted power to levy a tax under a provision of the Act, in respect of any article, and it levies tax under another provision of the Act not applicable to it, the Municipality merely commits an error in collecting the tax at the rate collected, and no question of jurisdiction arises, the party aggrieved must seek remedy in the manner prescribed by the Act. In the present case, however, there is a bar against levy in excess of the amount specified in the Constitution, and not a mere question of levy of tax under an inapplicable entry.

6. Again it was implicit in the judgment of the Full Bench that the suit was maintainable. If the suit was not maintainable the question whether to the claim made under Section 48 of the Act had application could not arise. Section 48 lays down the conditions subject to which the suit may be filed. Whether Section 48 of the C. P. & Berar Municipalities Act is not applicable, because the tax contravened Section 142-A of the Government of India Act, 1935, or Article 276 of the Constitution, could only fall to be determined if a suit for refund lay. The High Court was, in our judgment, in error in setting aside the decree passed by the District Court on the ground that a suit for refund of tax was not maintainable.

7. On the second question the argument of the Municipality has also not much substance. The Municipality was constituted in 1905 under Section 41 (1) (a) (b) of the Berar Municipal Act, 1886, a tax called "the Bale and Boja tax" was levied by the Municipality with effect from October 1, 1912, on cotton ginned and pressed in Ginning and Pressing Factories at the rate of 8 pies per bale of 10 maunds, and 10 pies per bale of 14 maunds. On October 2, 1939, the Municipality resolved to revise the rates and by notification dated January 2, 1940, under Section 67 (5) of the C. P. & Berar Municipalities Act, 1922, tax was permitted to be levied at the rate of four annas per bale with effect from October 1, 1939.

8. The Berar Municipal Act was promulgated by the Viceroy & Governor-General, Berar being then not a part of British India. By a notification of the Governor-General dated June 22, 1924, under the Indian (Foreign Jurisdiction) Order in Council the Berar Municipal Act was repealed, and the Central Provinces Municipalities Act 2 of 1922 was applied to the Berar Area. After the Government of India Act, 1935, the Berar Laws (Provincial) Act, 1941 was enacted, and Berar was under Section 47 of the Government of India Act to be administered together with the Central Provinces as one of the Provinces under that Act. Various Acts including the Central Provinces Municipalities Act 2 of 1922 were extended to the Berar with certain modifications under the Central Provinces and Berar Act 15 of 1941. By that Act the title of Act 2 of 1922 was altered: it read "Central Provinces and Berar Municipalities Act". By Section 8 of the Act it was provided that the Central Provinces Municipalities Act, 1922, which had been applied to Berar by order under the Indian (Foreign Jurisdiction) Order in Council, 1902, shall cease to have effect "provided that all appointments, delegations, notifications, orders, byelaws, rules and regulations which have been made or issued, or deemed to have been made or issued and all other things done or deemed to have been done under, or in pursuance of, any provision of any of the said Order in Council, and which are in force at the commencement of this Act, shall be deemed to have been made or issued or done under or in pursuance of the corresponding provision of that Act as now extended to, and in force in, Berar."

Notifications issued under the Berar Municipal Act and the Central Provinces Municipalities Act in force at the commencement of Act 15 of 1941 applied to the Municipalities in the former Berar area. In the meanwhile S. 142-A was incorporated in the Government of India Act, 1935, by India & Burma (Miscellaneous Amendment) Act, 1940, 3 & 4, Geo. 6,

Ch. 5, as from April 1, 1939, imposing limit upon taxes, professions, trades and callings. But by the proviso to sub-section (2) of Section 142-A levy by the Provinces or Municipal bodies of tax on profession, trade, calling or employment, at rates exceeding the rates prescribed by the Government of India Act were to remain in operation until provision to the contrary was made by the Parliament. To give effect to the limitation imposed by Section 142-A the Parliament enacted the Professions Tax Limitation Act XX of 1941. The relevant provisions of Act 20 of 1941 are as follows:

Section 2 — "Notwithstanding the provisions of any law for the time being in force, any taxes payable in respect of any one person to a Province, or to any one municipality, district board, local board, or other local authority in any Province, by way of tax on professions, trades, callings or employments, shall from and after the commencement of this Act cease to be levied to the extent in which such taxes exceed fifty rupees per annum."

Section 3 — "The provisions of Section 2 shall not apply to any tax specified in the Schedule."

The Schedule is as follows:

"THE SCHEDULE"

Taxes to which Section 2 does not apply.

1. The tax on professions, trades and callings, imposed through fees for annual licences, under Chapter XII of the Calcutta Municipal Act, 1923.

2. The tax on trades, professions and callings, imposed under clause (f) of sub-section (1) of Section 123 of the Bengal Municipal Act, 1932.

3. The tax on trades and callings carried on within the municipal limits and deriving special advantages from, or imposing special burdens on, municipal services, imposed under clause (ii) of sub-section (1) of Section 128 of the United Provinces Municipalities Act, 1916.

4. The tax on persons exercising any profession or art, or carrying on any trade or calling, within the limits of the Municipality, imposed under clause (b) of Section (1) of Section 66 of the Central Provinces Municipalities Act, 1922.

5. The tax on companies, imposed under Section 110 of the Madras City Municipal Act, 1919."

9. The Professions Tax Limitation Act, 1941, was repealed by the Adaptation of Laws Order, 1950, and limitations on the tax on professions, trades, callings and employment were continued by Article 276 of the Constitution after the repeal of the Government of India Act.

10. It may be recalled that the notification enhancing the rate of "Bale and Boja tax" was issued after Section 142-A of the Government of India Act, 1935, was incorporated. The only notification in force was the notification issued in 1912. The notification of 1940 was not saved by the proviso to Section 142-A of the Government of India Act, 1935. But the Municipality collected tax at rates set out in the notification of 1940. It is clear, however, that if the notification of 1940 was ineffective under the Government of India Act, it could not be revived under the Constitution Article 276 (2) proviso. The notification relied upon by the Municipality was brought into operation after the constitutional prohibition under Section 142-A of the Government of India Act became effective on April 1, 1939. The modification of rates was plainly ineffective, for the rates prescribed thereby were not in operation in the financial year ending March 31, 1939.

11. No claim to recover the tax could therefore, be founded on that notification. But it was urged that the earlier notification of 1912 was in any case effective in the financial year ending March 31, 1939, and tax could be levied under that notification which was indisputably in operation in the financial year. This Court has however held in Municipal Committee, Akot v. Manilal Manekji Pvt. Ltd., 1967-2 SCR 100 = (AIR 1967 SC 1201) on interpretation of Sections 2 and 3 and Item 4 of the Schedule to the Professions Tax Limitation Act 20 of 1941 that the rate fixed by the earlier notification was also not saved from the operation of Section 2. This Court was of the view that by virtue of Item 4 of the Schedule only the tax on persons, exercising professions imposed under clause (b) of sub-section (1) of Section 66 of the Central Provinces Municipalities Act, 1922, was saved from the operation of Section 2 of Act 20 of 1941 and not the tax under Section 66 of the Central Provinces & Berar Municipalities Act, 1922, and the tax levied by the respondent Municipality was levied under the latter Act. That decision is binding upon us. It must therefore be held that the rate of tax prescribed by the notification of 1912 alone could be enforced, subject to the limit prescribed by Article 276 (2) of the Constitution. The Municipality was therefore incompetent to levy a tax at a rate exceeding Rs. 250/- for the whole year.

12. The appeal is allowed and the decree passed by the Trial Court is restored. The Municipality will pay the costs in this Court and in the High Court.

Appeal allowed.

AIR 1970 SUPREME COURT 1006
(V 57 C 210)

(From: Punjab)

J. M. SHELAT AND G. K. MITTER, JJ.
Madan Mohan Lal, Appellant v. State of Punjab, Respondent.

Criminal Appeal No. 205 of 1969, D/- 1-4-1970.

Evidence Act (1872), Section 133 — Approver's testimony and its corroboration — Earlier statement of approver to police — Omission in such statement does not necessarily render his evidence unreliable.

When the accomplice gives his police statement he does not know that he would be granted pardon and possibly for that reason does not come out with all the facts known to him and he does so while he making his statement before the Magistrate as he knows by then that he would be tendered pardon on condition that he would disclose all the facts known to him. The omission in the police statement, therefore, by itself would not necessarily render his evidence unreliable. In considering whether the approver's evidence passed the test of reliability, the Court would have to consider whether taken as a whole and in the light of the facts and circumstances of the case it was a credible version or not: (Para 8)

Held on facts and circumstances that, even assuming that the Trial Court was in error in not permitting the omission in the statement made by the approver before the police to be brought on record, there was enough circumstantial evidence to corroborate the approver's version relating to the accused-appellant.

(Para 23)

Cases Referred: Chronological Paras
(1959) AIR 1959 SC 1012 (V 40) =
(1959) Supp 2 SCR 875 = 1959
Cri LJ 1231, Tehsildar Singh v.
State of U. P.

7

The following Judgment of the Court was delivered by

SHELAT, J.— In July-August 1963, the appellant, one Kamal Dev and Dancesh

Kumar, the two other original accused before the Additional Sessions Judge, Ferozepur, were working in different capacities in the Treasury in Ferozepur Cantonment. The appellant was the dealing clerk and amongst his other duties he had to scrutinise and pass contingent pay bills of the Central Jail at Ferozepur presented at the Treasury.

2. On July 18, 1963, Roshanlal (P. W. 19), the accountant in the said jail, prepared a contingent bill, (Ex. PB), for Rupees 8273.19 P. The drawing authority being the Superintendent of the Jail, the bill was placed before the Superintendent, Teja Singh (P. W. 18), for his signatures. The bill required an endorsement in the nature of a certificate by him, but as similar bills had in the past been objected to by the Treasury on the ground that the certificates therein were not properly worded, Teja Singh left the column blank and signed the bill leaving it to the appropriate clerk in the Treasury, who happened to be the appellant, to fill it in. He also left blank the space where the person carrying the bill, first to the Treasury and then to the State Bank, would sign as the person to whom payment was to be made. On July 19, 1963, Naunit Rai (P. W. 11), the accounts clerk in the jail, took the bill to the Treasury and approached the appellant so that the appellant may fill in the certificate on the bill over the signature of Teja Singh in suitable language. The appellant directed him to go first to Darbara Singh (P. W. 15), who was the token clerk, saying that the bill would come to him in routine and he would then fill in the certificate. Naunit Rai, therefore, handed over the bill to Darbara Singh and obtained a token in acknowledgment of his having handed over the bill in the Treasury. Naunit Rai then returned to the Jail with the token.

3. It was not in dispute that at the time the two blanks where the certificate and the endorsement, Exts. PB/1 & PB/3, would be filled in, were blank. Nor was it in dispute that the signatures purporting to be of one Ram Nath and the words "received payment" were not yet written on that bill. According to the procedure followed in the jail, it would be the person receiving the money under the bill who would pass such receipt in the bill and affix his signatures thereto.

4. On July 20, 1963, Makhu Ram (P. W. 13), the selection warder, went to the Treasury to collect the bill in exchange for the token and cash it in the bank. He was told that the bill could not be traced and that efforts were being made to find it. The Jail authorities sent Makhu Ram on several successive days but on each day he was told in the Treasury that the bill had not yet been found. On August 6, 1963, the Deputy Superintendent of the Jail, B. D. Soni, personally went there when he learnt that the bill had been presented to the bank on July 20, 1963 and encashed.

5. On the matter being handed over to and investigated by the police, the appellant, the said Kamal Dev, Danesh Kumar and one Ram Lubhaya, an agent in the Life Insurance Corporation, were arrested on charges under Sections 409, 467, 471 and 411 of the Penal Code. The said Ram Lubhaya, on agreeing to make a full and true disclosure, was given a conditional pardon and made an approver. During the course of the investigation, the bill Ex. PB, which in due course would be returned by the bank to the Treasury after payment and would therefore be in the Treasury, was seized from the possession of accused Kamal Dev together with government currency notes of Rs. 2500/-. Similarly, government currency notes of Rs. 2000/- were produced by the appellant from among waste papers lying in the store room of which he was in charge. The appellant and the two clerks were charged as aforesaid on the basis of this evidence and brought to trial in the Court of the Additional Sessions Judge.

6. The evidence on which the prosecution relied on in the Trial Court comprised of the evidence of the approver who narrated how the appellant wrote out the certificate and the endorsement in the bill over the signature of Teja Singh, how the signature of the Treasury Officer was obtained thereon, how the signatures purporting to be those of Ram Nath and the receipt for payment were written out by the approver and how finally the bill was taken by them to the bank and payment received. The evidence of the approver thus clearly showed that all the four of them were involved in the fabrication of the bill, in receiving the money thereunder by using that document as genuine knowing it to be forged, the receipt of the money by them and its division between them. That evidence was sought to be corroborated by the evidence of the handwriting expert and the recoveries or seizures made by the police at the instance of one or the other of the accused. The Trial Court considered the approver's evidence as reliable and finding also that it was sufficiently corroborated by other satisfactory evidence convicted and sentenced the three of them. On appeals filed by all the three, the High Court found the conviction and sentence justified by the evidence on record and accordingly dismissed their appeals. The appellant thereupon obtained special leave from this Court and that is how this appeal has come up before us for disposal.

7. The contention urged before us was that on May 14, 1965 when the approver was being cross-examined by the appellant's counsel in the Trial Court, a question was put to him to the effect that he had not mentioned in his statement before the police dated August 10, 1963 the names of the appellant and Danesh Kumar. The question was put with the object of bringing that omission on record and to show that the approver had made an improvement in his version with a view to falsely involve the appellant and Danesh Kumar and thus render his evidence uncreditworthy. But the Trial Judge disallowed that question presumably relying on the decision in Tahsildar Singh v. State of Uttar Pradesh, (1959) Supp 2 SCR 875 at p. 903 = (AIR 1959 SC 1012 at p. 1026) that a mere omission in the police statement would not constitute a contradiction, and therefore, observed that "a contradiction means two contra dictions" and "a contradiction crops up when there is conflict in two statements". The argument was that the Trial Judge was in error in disallowing the omission to be brought on record, which if allowed, would have rendered the approver's evidence unreliable. Assuming that the Trial Judge was in error and the omission had been brought out, considering the facts and circumstances proved in this case the result, in our opinion, would not be that which is contended for.

8. We may mention that the alleged error on the part of the Trial Judge was not relied on before the High Court. There was also nothing to show that the approver in his statement before the Magistrate, who passed the order granting him pardon, had not mentioned the names of the appellant and the said Danesh Kumar and had not referred to the roles played by them as deposed to by him in the Trial Court. It was possibly because no such omission was found in his statement before the Magistrate that the refusal by the Trial Judge to bring on record the omission in the police statement was not relied on in the High Court. It may be that when the approver gave his police statement he did not know that he would be granted pardon and possibly for that reason had not come out with all the facts known to him and he did so while he was making his statement before the Magistrate as he knew by then that he would be tendered pardon on condition that he would disclose all the facts known to him. The omission in the police statement, therefore, by itself would not necessarily have rendered his evidence unreliable. In considering whether the approver's evidence passed the test of reliability, the Court would have to consider whether taken as a whole and in the light of the facts and circumstances of the case it was a credible version or not. Taking all the facts and circumstances of the case proved before the Trial Court, we think that despite the said omission, the approver's version was credible.

9. But, quite apart from that consideration, there is, in our judgment, over and above the evidence of the approver, sufficient material on record, by way of circumstantial evidence, to justify the conviction of the appellant.

10. There is no dispute that (a) the bill, Ex. PB, was prepared in the jail on July 19, 1963 and sent to the Treasury for its being passed before it could be presented for encashment in the bank; (b) the bill was encashed by some one on July 20, 1963 in the bank and Rupees 8273.80 P. were paid to a person calling himself Ram Nath; (c) Ram Nath was a fictitious person and no such person was in the employ either of the jail or the Treasury; (d) the bill had come to the appellant after it had been handed over to the token clerk who had issued the token to Naunit Rai; and (e) the appellant had admittedly written on it the certificate, Ex. PB/1. All these things took place in accordance with the practice followed in the Treasury. The question then would be; how did the Bill fall into the hands of the person calling himself Ram Nath and who encashed it in the bank? As a necessary corollary, the next question would be; how did the bill, after it had been returned by the bank to the Treasury on July 22, 1963, come into the possession of Danesh Kumar who produced it from his possession before the police?

11. These questions can be answered from the evidence as to the practice followed in the Treasury in relation to such bills, the evidence of the employees there who had dealt with the bill at one stage or the other and the conduct of the appellant as disclosed in the evidence.

12. According to Avtar Singh (P. W. 21), the Treasury Officer, the practice followed in the Treasury was as follows: (a) such a bill would be first presented to the token clerk, i.e., wit. Darbara Singh, who would accept it and issue a token to the person presenting it, in this case wit. Naunit Rai; (b) the token clerk would then pass the bill on to the dealing clerk, i.e., the appellant; (c) the appellant, after scrutinising the bill, would pass it on to the Assistant Superintendent, wit., Ramjidas; (d) the Assistant Superintendent then would pass it on to the Treasury Officer, Avtar Singh; (e) the Treasury Officer then would affix his signature and then pass it on back to the Assistant Superintendent who in his turn would pass it on to the appellant and from the appellant it would go to the token clerk, who would hand over the bill, after it had been passed as aforesaid, to the person who produces the token given earlier.

13. The fact that Darbara Singh has given the token in acknowledgment of its having been tendered to him coupled with the fact of the certificate, Ex. PB/1, having been endorsed on it and the passing of the bill by Ramjidas and by Avtar Singh clearly show that the bill had gone through all the onward stages described by Avtar Singh. From the practice, as deposed to by the Treasury Officer and the Assistant Superintendent, it is clear that the bill would come back to the dealing clerk, the appellant, for him to pass it on to the token clerk, Darbara Singh. But Darbara Singh's evidence was that he did not receive the bill from the appellant for the purpose of handing it over to the person who would come from the jail with the token. According to him, about 2 or 3 days later when a person from the jail came to him and inquired about the bill, he told him that he had not received it from the appellant after it had been passed and therefore directed him to the appellant. In this respect, he was corroborated by Makhu Ram (P. W. 13) who had been sent by the jail authorities to collect the bill from the Treasury. According to Makhu Ram, he went to Darbara Singh on July 20, 1963 when Dar-bara Singh directed him to the appellant saying that the bill was still with the appellant. Thereupon he went to the appellant who told him that he was busy with pending bills, that the bill had not yet reached him and that as soon as it came to him he would do the needful. Makhu Ram again went to the appellant on July 22, 1963 when the appellant gave him the same answer assuring him that he would do the needful as soon as the bill came to him. The witness again went to the appellant on July 23 and 24 and as he got the same reply on those days also he complained to the Deputy Superintendent of the Jail that the appellant was delaying the bill and not giving it to him.

14. According to Jagannath (P. W. 16) the incorporation clerk in the Treasury, the bill had come back to him on July 22, 1963 from the bank as the practice was that the bank would return such bills to the Treasury after they had been encashed and paid by the bank. Evidently no one in the Treasury thought that the bill had been handed over to any one so that it could be encashed by such a person. Therefore, no one appears to have inquired from Jagannath whether it had come back to him from the bank. Every one concerned believed that the bill was still lying with the appellant after it had come back to him from Avatar Singh. That is clear from the evidence of Ramjidas, the Assistant Superintendent who stated that about a day or two after July 20, 1963 when an employee from the Jail, presumably Makhu Ram, came to him inquiring about the bill, he called the appellant and the appellant informed him that there was rush of work with him, and therefore, he had not been able to pass the bill. There can, therefore, be no doubt that the appellant was telling every one concerned that the bill was lying with him and that as he was busy with the old bills he had not yet dealt with and pass the bill.

15. When, despite Makhu Ram's repeated visits to the Treasury for the bill, it was not given to him, Teja Singh personally inquired about it on July 25, 1963. On July 27, 1963 he sent the Assistant Superintendent of the Jail to the Treasury to inquire about the bill. The evidence of Avatar Singh, the Treasury Officer, shows that thereupon he called Ramjidas, the Assistant Superintendent, and told him that he should see that the bill was passed by the appellant. This part of the evidence again shows that every one in the Treasury was till July 27, 1963 under the impression that the bill was still lying with the appellant and he had been delaying it and had not yet passed it.

16. When it ultimately became known that the bill had been presented to the bank and encashed by some one but the Jail authorities had not received the money under it, enquiries were set up in the Treasury. On August 7, 1963, Avatar Singh by his order Ex. PY called upon the appellant, with whom the said bill was believed to be lying, to explain to whom he had handed over the bill. The reply of the appellant, Ex. PY/1, dated August 9, 1963, was significant, for, he then stated that the bill "was never checked and passed for payment by me" and that the officers in the Treasury, contrary to the practice, were "in (the) habit of passing the bills direct without getting the same checked and signed by me——". He added: "under the circumstances—— the bill was never passed by me nor handed over to any other person." According to this explanation, therefore, Darbara Singh had not handed over the bill to the appellant nor had the appellant dealt with it or passed it on to the Assistant Superintendent and then to the Treasury Officer. This explanation was obviously false because the bill itself shown the appellant's endorsement and certificate on it which means that he had passed it before it went to Avatar Singh who on the faith of the appellant's certificate passed it for payment. There is no reason to disbelieve Avatar Singh that after he had signed the bill it went, according to the practice, to the appellant through the Assistant Superintendent, Ramjidas.

17. An enquiry similar to the one made from the appellant was also made from Darbara Singh, who reported on August 9, 1963, that he had passed on the bill to the appellant and that thereafter it had not come back to him as it should on its return journey. These facts clearly show that after Avatar Singh had signed the bill, the bill went back to the appellant on its return journey to be passed on to Darbara Singh but that the appellant did not pass it on pretending all the time that it was lying pending with him.

18. When, however, he realised that it had become known that the bill had been encashed, he changed his front, thinking that the bill would not be found out and therefore his endorsement on it showing that he had dealt with it would not be discovered. In that belief he came out with the false allegation that the bill had been directly passed without its having been sent to him for checking or for his certificate.

19. But having realised that the bill, Ex. PB, had been recovered by the police and produced in the Court, he took up a third stand in his statement under Section 342 of the Criminal Procedure Code inconsistent with the stands so far taken up by him. He now admitted that the bill had been sent to him by Darbara Singh and that he had written thereon the payment order but he denied the next step in the prosecution case that it had again come back to him after it had been passed by the Assistant Superintendent and signed by the Treasury Officer. That denial was not accepted by the Trial Court and the High Court and in our view rightly as the evidence of both these Officers clearly was that after they had passed the bill it would go back to the appellant in the normal course for him to return to Darbara Singh who would hand it over to the person who surrendered the token earlier given to him.

20. The three contradictory stands taken by the appellant at three different stages indicate that it was he who had been responsible for the bill having gone to the approver on its coming to him after it had been passed by Avatar Singh instead of its being passed on to Darbara Singh. The bill could not have got into the hands of the approver and the other accused except through and with the active assistance of the appellant. It cannot, therefore, be gainsaid that the appellant was actively involved with the approver and the other accused in the bill going into their hands, their having dishonestly encashed it at the bank and its proceeds misappropriated.

21. As earlier stated, the Bill had been returned by the bank to the Treasury after it had been encashed. It had, in accordance with the practice followed at the Treasury and the bank, gone to the clerk Jagannath, from whom, if an inquiry had been at once made, could have been traced. Such an enquiry was evidently not made because, on account of the false statements made by the appellant to every one concerned, all believed that it was still lying pending with the appellant and had not gone out of the Treasury and encashed. But for those false statements which hoodwinked every one, the first enquiry would have been made with the bank and the bank would have disclosed that the bill had been encashed by some one calling himself Ram Nath and returned as usual to the Treasury, and thereupon Jagannath, would have been the person from whom the bill could have been recovered. That, as we have said, was not done because the appellant by his false statements to Makhu Ram and others that the bill was still pending with him and had not yet been passed by him had kept every one under an apprehension that the bill was still in the Treasury and had not yet gone out of it for being encashed.

22. Besides the evidence of the approver, there was thus the evidence as to the conduct of the appellant which directly connected him with the conspiracy for fabrication of the bill and its dishonest encashment. That link was further strengthened by the evidence that in July-August 1963 he was in charge of the store room from which he had produced before the police government currency notes of Rs. 2000, presumably his share out of the booty, hidden amongst the waste papers lying in that store room. The pivotal position occupied by him as the dealing clerk, his subsequent conduct in knowingly making false and contradictory statements and thereby creating a false belief that the bill was still with him, his attempts to throw the blame on his other colleagues, and lastly, production by him of the notes of Rs. 2000, all cumulatively condemn him not only as one of the conspirators but also as an indispensable participator in the successful misappropriation of the moneys.

23. Therefore, even if we were to accept the contention that the Trial Court was in error in not permitting the omission in the statement made by the approver before the police to be brought on record, such an omission at best could have been used for challenging the veracity of the approver's evidence. But there was enough evidence to corroborate the approver's version relating to the appellant. The Trial Court and the High Court, therefore, could not be said to have committed any error in relying on the approver's evidence for convicting the appellant.

24. In our view, the appellant was rightly convicted and we find no reason, therefore, to interfere with the order of conviction and sentence passed against him. The appeal, therefore, must be dismissed and we accordingly order it to be so dismissed.

Appeal dismissed.

AIR 1970 SUPREME COURT 1011

(V 57 C 211)

(From: Bombay)

J. C. SHAH, K. S. HEGDE AND A. N. GROVER, JJ.

Madhya Pradesh Industries Ltd., Appellant v. The Income-tax Officer, Nagpur, Respondent.

Civil Appeals Nos. 2419-2421 and 2423-2425 of 1966, D/- 16-4-1970.

(A) Constitution of India, Article 226 — Writ petition challenging jurisdiction of Income-tax Officer to issue notice under Section 34 (1) (a) Income-tax Act on ground that officer had no reason to believe — Assertion not controverted by filing affidavit or production of relevant material by Income-tax Officer — Proceedings quashed as being without jurisdiction — Order of Bombay High Court (Nag. Bench), Reversed.

Where the petitioner Company against whom proceedings under Section 34 (1) (a) Income-tax Act had been initiated, had repudiated in its writ petition the assertion of the Income-tax Officer that he had reason to believe that due to the omission or failure on the part of the Company to give material facts, some income had escaped assessment, one would have expected the Officer who issued the notice under Section 34 (1) (a) to file an affidavit setting out the circumstances under which he formed the necessary belief. But if the Income-tax Officer had not filed any such affidavit nor produced in the writ proceedings either the proceedings recorded by him before issuing the notice or his report to the Commissioner or even the Commissioner's sanction, it cannot be said that the Income-tax Officer had any reason to form the belief in question or the reasons before him were relevant for the purpose. Therefore, it must be held that the Income-tax Officer had no jurisdiction to issue the notice and the proceedings taken by him have to be quashed. AIR 1961 SC 372 & AIR 1967 SC 523 & AIR 1967 SC 587, Followed & Applied. Order of Bombay High Court (Nag. Bench), Reversed. (Para 15)

(B) Income-tax Act (1922), Section 34 (1) (a) — No proceeding by Income-tax Officer before issuing notice under, to enable him to form the necessary belief — No jurisdiction to proceed under Section 34 (1) (a). (Para 15)

Cases Referred: Chronological Paras (1967) AIR 1967 SC 523 (V 54)=

(1967) 63 ITR 219, S. Narayanappa v. Commr. of Income-tax, Bangalore

13

(1967) AIR 1967 SC 587 (V 54)=

(1967) 63 ITR 638, Kantamani Venkata Narayana and Sons v. First Additional Income-tax Officer, Rajahmundry

14

(1961) AIR 1961 SC 372 (V 48)=

(1961) 2 SCR 241, Calcutta Discount Co. Ltd. v. Income-tax Officer

11

The following Judgment of the Court was delivered by

HEGDE, J.:— In these appeals by special leave, the only question of law that arises for decision is whether the respondent was competent to initiate proceedings under Section 34 of the Indian Income-tax Act, 1922 (which will hereinafter be referred to as the Act).

2. The respondent initiated proceedings under Section 34 of the Act against the appellant by issuing notices under that section on December 26, 1960 in respect of the assessment years 1953-54, 1954-55 and 1955-56. The appellant challenged the validity of those proceedings by means of writ petitions under Articles 226 and 227 of the Constitution in the High Court of Judicature at Bombay (Nagpur Bench). Those petitions were summarily dismissed. The appellant thereafter appealed to this Court after obtaining special leave from this Court. This Court allowed those appeals on April 8, 1965 holding that the High Court was not justified in summarily dismissing the writ petitions as the allegations made therein merited examination. Thereafter the High Court issued rule nisi in those petitions. The respondent opposed those petitions. After hearing the parties, the High Court again dismissed those writ petitions. Hence these appeals.

3. The facts of the case material for deciding these appeals have been set out in detail in this Court's order dated April 8, 1965. We shall briefly refer to them.

4. The above appeals relate to proceedings under Section 34 of the Act in respect of three assessment periods. It would be sufficient if we set out the facts relating to the assessment year 1953-54. There is no dispute that if the proceedings relating to that year are held to be invalid, similar would be the position regarding the proceedings relating to the other two assessment periods. On the other hand, if they are held to be valid, the same would be true in respect of the other assessment periods.

5. The appellant, Madhya Pradesh Industries Ltd. (hereinafter referred to as the company), is engaged in the business of mining manganese ore. On March 18, 1952, the company appointed M/s. J. K. Alloys Ltd., (hereinafter called 'Alloys') as its selling agents. In the account year relating to the assessment year 1953-54, the company paid as commission, Rupees 1,13,052/8/9 to the selling agents and claimed that amount as a revenue outgoing in the computation of its profits for that year. The Income-tax Officer made the order of assessment without expressly referring to the said deduction but proceeding on the basis that it is a permissible deduction. On December 26, 1960, the Income-tax Officer issued a notice to the company in exercise of his powers under Section 34 of the Act reciting therein that he having "reason to believe that" the income of the company assessable to income-tax for the assessment year 1953-54 had (a) escaped assessment and (b) under-assessed, he proposes to reassess the income that had escaped assessment or had been under-assessed. He called upon the company to deliver a return of the total income of the company assessable for the said assessment year 1953-54. In response to a letter sent by the company, the Income-tax Officer informed the company that the notice issued by him was under Section 34 (1) (a). Thereafter there was some correspondence between the Income-tax Officer and the company. The Income-tax Officer required the company to give him the information called for in the questionnaire issued by him. The company did not send any reply to the said questionnaire. On December 21, 1961, the Income-tax Officer informed the company that since the questions asked were not replied to, he presumed that no correspondence with Alloys existed and the payment of commission had been made without any justification, Alloys having rendered no service as selling agents.

6. On April 2, 1962, the company moved the High Court of Judicature of Bombay (Nagpur Bench) praying for the issue of a writ of certiorari under Article 226 of the Constitution or an appropriate direction or order under Article 227 of the Constitution calling for the record of the case and for the issue of writs in the nature of Prohibition or Mandamus restraining the Income-tax Officer from taking any action or proceeding in enforcement or implementation of the notice dated December 26, 1960. This petition, as mentioned earlier, was rejected in limine.

7. In the writ petition, the plea taken by the company was that in issuing the notice under Section 34 (1) (a) of the Act, the Income-tax Officer acted without jurisdiction and for a colourable purpose. Its case as set out in the writ petition is as follows:

8. In its return the company disclosed for the year ending March 31, 1953 Rs. 15,70,587/- as its total profits according to its books of account. In the statement under Section 38 (3) of the Act filed with the return, the company disclosed that it had paid Rs. 1,13,052/8/9 as "commission sales" "on different dates" by cheques to Alloys and Rs. 6,091/4/- to J. S. Williams on October 4, 1952 by cheque as commission on sales. In the profit and loss account of the company filed with the return, the amount of Rs. 29,76,067/19/8 was disclosed as received by "sales less commission". On December 7, 1953, R. K. Gupta, a Director of the company made a statement before the Income-tax Officer stating that the commission was paid to Williams on the sales accounted for during the year ended March 31, 1953 and that the same should be allowed as deduction and that "similar was the case with the commission payable to J. K. Alloys Ltd., which had already been paid subsequently." On February 21, 1954, the Income-tax Officer called upon the company to produce amongst other documents, certificates showing whether any receipt included in the income, profits or gains had been credited or transferred to any assets, capital account, or any other liability account, a similar certificate regarding any credit for important expenses claimed under the head "Profit & Loss A/c", a list of buyers with full addresses along with quantity, number and net proceeds of export business as well as Indian sales, a statement setting out full details of various items of indirect expenses debited to profit and loss account and a statement of expenses grouped and sorted out under the heads, wages, salary and other emoluments. On June 21, 1954, the company filed the certificates and the statements demanded together with the statement showing that out of the sale proceeds, commission paid to Alloys and J. S. Williams was deducted. In the course of the assessment proceedings, R. S. Agarwal, a representative of the company appeared before the Income-tax Officer and agreed that the commission "debited as paid to Williams may be added back" and about Alloys he said that the commission "had already been paid". Thereafter on February 14, 1955, the assessment of the company was completed by the Income-tax Officer. The Income-tax Officer rejected the commission said to have been paid to Williams and added back that amount to the gross profits of the company. He took no objection to the commission paid to the Alloys.

9. The case pleaded by the company in the writ petition is that it had placed before the Income-tax Officer all the material facts; the Income-tax Officer before making the assessment had examined those facts and was satisfied with the explanation given by the company. The company denied that the Income-tax Officer had any reason to believe that by reason of the omission or failure on the part of the company to disclose fully and truly all material facts necessary for his assessment for the year in question income, profits or gains chargeable to income-tax have escaped assessment for that year or have been under-assessed. The company disputed that the Income-tax Officer had any reason before him to have the required belief. It also denied the fact that it had omitted or failed to disclose fully and truly all material facts necessary for the assessment in question or that any income, profits or gains chargeable to income-tax have escaped assessment in that year.

10. Section 34 (1) of the Act as at the relevant time read:

"If—

(a) the Income-tax Officer has reason to believe that by reason of the omission or failure on the part of an assessee to make a return of his income under Section 22 for any year or to disclose fully and truly all material facts necessary for his assessment for that year, income, profits or gains chargeable to income-tax have escaped assessment for that year, or have been under-assessed, or assessed at too low a rate, or have been made the subject of excessive relief under the Act or excessive loss or depreciation allowance has been computed, or

(b) notwithstanding that there has been no omission or failure as mentioned in clause (a) on the part of the assessee, the Income-tax Officer has in consequence of information in his possession reason to believe that income, profits or gains chargeable to income-tax have been under-assessed or assessed at too low a rate, or have been made the subject of excessive relief under this Act, or that excessive loss or depreciation allowance has been computed, he may in cases falling under clause (a) at any time within eight years and in cases falling under clause (b) at any time within four years of the end of that year, serve on the assessee or if the assessee is a company, on the principal officer, thereof, a notice containing all or any of the requirements which may be included in a notice under sub-section (2) of Section 22 and may proceed to assess or re-assess such income, profits or gains or recompute the loss or depreciation allowance; and the provisions of this Act shall, so far as may be, apply accordingly as if the notice were a notice issued under that sub-section:

Provided that—

(i) the Income-tax Officer shall not issue a notice under this sub-section, unless he has recorded his reasons for doing so and the Commissioner is satisfied on such reasons recorded that it is a fit case for the issue of such notice;

(ii) the tax shall be chargeable at the rate at which it would have been charged had the income, profits or gains not escaped assessment or full assessment, as the case may be; and

(iii) where the assessment made or to be made is an assessment made or to be made on a person deemed to be the agent of a non-resident person under Section 43, this sub-section shall have effect as if for the periods of eight years and four years a period of one year was substituted.

Explanation.— Production before the Income-tax Officer of account-books or other evidence from which material facts could with due diligence have been discovered by the Income-tax Officer will not necessarily amount to disclosure within the meaning of this section."

11. In Calcutta Discount Co. Ltd. v. Income-tax Officer, (1961) 2 SCR 241= (AIR 1961 SC 372); this Court ruled that before an Income-tax Officer could issue a notice under Section 34 (1) (a) of the Act, two conditions must co-exist, namely, that he must have reason to believe

(1) that income, profits or gains had been under-assessed and (2) that such under-assessment was due to non-disclosure of material facts by the assessee. It was observed therein that where, however, the Income-tax Officer has prima facie reasonable grounds for believing that there has been a non-disclosure of a primary material fact, that by itself gives him the jurisdiction to issue a notice under Section 34 of the Act and the adequacy or otherwise of the grounds of such belief is not open to investigation by the Court. It is for the assessee who wants to challenge such jurisdiction to establish that the Income-tax Officer had no material for such belief. Speaking for the majority Das Gupta, J., observed therein:

"To confer jurisdiction under this section to issue notice in respect of assessments beyond the period of four years, but within a period of eight years, from the end of the relevant year two conditions have therefore to be satisfied. The first is that the Income-tax Officer must have reason to believe that income, profits or gains chargeable to income-tax have been under-assessed. The second is that he must have also reason to believe that such "under-assessment" has occurred by reason of either (i) omission or failure on the part of an assessee to make a return of his income under Section 22, or (ii) omission or failure on the part of an assessee to disclose fully and truly all material facts necessary for his assessment for that year. Both these conditions are conditions precedent to be satisfied before the Income-tax Officer could have jurisdiction to issue a notice for the assessment or re-assessment beyond the period of four years but within the period of eight years, from the end of the year in question."

Proceeding further the learned Judge observed:

"The position therefore is that if there were in fact some reasonable grounds for thinking that there had been any non-disclosure as regards any primary fact, which could have a material bearing on the question of "under-assessment" that would be sufficient to give jurisdiction to the Income-tax Officer to issue the notices under Section 34. Whether these grounds were adequate or not for arriving at the conclusion that there was a non-disclosure of material facts would not be open for the Court's investigation. In other words, all that is necessary to give this special jurisdiction is that the Income-tax Officer had when he assumed jurisdiction some prima facie grounds for thinking that there had been some non-disclosure of material facts".

12. Shah, J., (one of us) in his dissenting judgment has observed that the expression "has reason to believe" in Section 34 (1) (a) of the Indian Income-tax Act does not mean a purely subjective satisfaction of the Income-tax Officer but predicates the existence of reasons on which such belief has to be founded. That belief, therefore, cannot be founded on mere suspicion and must be based on evidence and any question as to the adequacy of such evidence is wholly immaterial at that stage. He further observed that where the existence of reasonable belief that there had been under-assessment due to non-disclosure by the assessee, which is a condition precedent to exercise of the power under Sec. 34 (1) (a) is asserted by the assessing authority and the record prima facie supports its existence, any enquiry as to whether the authority could reasonably hold the belief that the under-assessment was due to non-disclosure by the assessee of material facts necessary for the assessment must, be barred.

13. In S. Narayanappa v. Commr. of Income-tax, Bangalore, (1967) 63 ITR 219= (AIR 1967 SC 523) this Court held that the two conditions must be satisfied in order to confer jurisdiction on the Officer to issue the notice under Section 34 of the Income-tax Act in respect of assessments beyond the period of four years, but within a period of eight years, from the end of the relevant year, viz., (i) the Income-tax Officer must have reason to believe that income, profits or gains chargeable to income-tax had been under-assessed and (ii) he must have reason to believe that such "under-assessment" had occurred by reason of either (a) omission or failure on the part of the assessee to make a return of his income under Section 22 or (b) omission or failure on the part of the assessee to disclose fully and truly all the material facts necessary for his assessment for that year. Both these conditions are conditions precedent to be satisfied before the Income-tax Officer acquires jurisdiction to issue a notice under the section. If there are in fact some reasonable grounds for the Income-tax Officer to believe that there had been any non-disclosure as regards any fact, which could have a material bearing on the question of under-assessment, that would be sufficient to give jurisdiction to the Income-tax Officer to issue the notice under Section 34. Whether these grounds are adequate or not is not a matter for the Court to investigate. In other words, the sufficiency of the grounds which induced the Income-tax Officer to act is not a justiciable issue. It is of course open for the assessee to contend that the Income-tax Officer did not hold the belief that there had been such non-disclosure. In other words, the existence of the belief can be challenged by the assessee but not the sufficiency of the reasons for the belief. Therein it was observed that the expression "reason to believe" in Section 34 does not mean purely subjective satisfaction on the part of the Income-tax Officer. The belief must be held in good faith: it cannot be merely a pretence. It is open to the Court to examine whether the reasons for the belief have a rational connection or a relevant bearing to the formation of the belief and are not extraneous or irrelevant to the purpose of the section. To this limited extent, the action of the Income-tax Officer in starting proceedings under Section 34 of the Act is open to challenge in a Court of law.

14. The same view was again expressed by this Court in Kantamani Venkata Narayana and Sons v. First Additional Income-tax Officer, Rajahmundry, (1967) 63 ITR 638 = (AIR 1967 SC 587).

15. In these cases, the company in its writ petitions had repudiated the assertion of the Income-tax Officer that he had reason to believe that due to the omission or failure on the part of the company to give material facts, some income had escaped assessment. Under those circumstances one would have expected the officer who issued the notices under Section 34 (1) (a) to file an affidavit setting out the circumstances under which he formed the necessary belief. We were told that one Mr. Pandey had issued the notices in question. That officer had not filed any affidavit in these proceedings. The proceedings recorded by him before issuing the notices have not been produced nor his report to the Commissioner or even the Commissioner's sanction has not been produced. Hence it is not possible to hold that the Income-tax Officer had any reason to form the belief in question or the reasons before him were relevant for the purpose. We have no basis before us to hold that the Income-tax Officer had jurisdiction to issue the impugned notices. Hence the proceedings taken by him have to be quashed.

16. For the reasons mentioned above, we allow these appeals, set aside the order of the High Court and quash the proceedings taken under Section 34 (1) (a) of the Act. The respondent shall pay the costs of these appeals — hearing fee one set.

Appeals allowed.

AIR 1970 SUPREME COURT 1015
(V 57 C 212)

(From: Allahabad)

J. M. SHELAT AND I. D. DUA, JJ.

Rajpal Singh and others, Appellants v. Jai Singh and another, Respondents.

Criminal Appeal No. 224 of 1966, D/- 16-4-1970.

Criminal P. C. (1898), Section 209 — Duty of Magistrate in committal proceeding — He should sift the evidence only to see if prima facie case is made out — He should not himself assume jurisdiction of Sessions Court.

In a case under Section 209 the Magistrate holding the preliminary enquiry has to be satisfied that a prima facie case is made out against the accused by the evidence of witnesses entitled to a reasonable degree of credit and if he is not so satisfied, he is not to commit. Where, however, much can be said on both the sides, it would be for the Sessions Court and not for the Magistrate to decide which of the two conflicting versions will find acceptance at its hands. If there is some evidence on which a conviction may reasonably be based he must commit the case. But the Magistrate at that stage has no power to evaluate the evidence for satisfying himself of the guilt of the accused. The question before him at that stage would be whether there is some credible evidence which would sustain a conviction. Though, the language of Section 209 differs from that in Section 207A, under neither of them has the Magistrate the jurisdiction to assess and evaluate the evidence before him for the purpose of seeing whether there is sufficient evidence for conviction, for if he were to do that he would be trying the case himself instead of levying it to be done by the Sessions Court, which alone has under the Code the jurisdiction to try it. Where the Magistrate had examined witnesses and held an on-the-spot inspection and did not stop to find out if there was evidence which, if believed, would establish at least a prima facie case, but went on further to disbelieve that evidence by an elaborate and painstaking process of examination, in aid of which he brought to bear his own appraisal of inconsistencies, improbabilities etc., and thus in fact tried the whole case thereby forestalling the decision of the Court of Session which alone had the jurisdiction to try such a case, his order of discharge must be set aside as being one in excess of jurisdiction. AIR 1958 SC 97 & AIR 1970 SC 863, Ref.; AIR 1962 SC 1195, Rel. on. (Paras 7, 8)

EN/EN/B859/70/RGD/M

Cases Referred: Chronological Paras

(1970) AIR 1970 SC 863 (V 57)=
1969-2 SCR 520, Alamohan Das
v. State of West Bengal 7

(1962) AIR 1962 SC 1195 (V 49)=
1962 Supp (2) SCR 948, Bipat
Gope v. State of Bihar 6, 7, 8

(1958) AIR 1958 SC 97 (V 45)=
1956 SCR 618, Ramgopal Ganpat-rai Ruia v. State of Bombay 7

The following judgment of the Court was delivered by

SHELAT, J.—This appeal, by certificate granted by the High Court of Allahabad, is against its order dismissing the criminal revision filed by the appellants and refusing to interfere with the order passed by the Sessions Judge setting aside the order of discharge passed by the committing Magistrate.

2. The facts leading to the appeal may briefly be stated. One Naubat Singh of village Nagla Shekhoo, who owned certain lands, died in August 1963. Some three years prior thereto he had sold part of his land to complainant Jai Singh who was married to Raj Kali, who, according to the prosecution, was the only heir and legal representative of the said Naubat Singh. On the death of Naubat Singh, Raj Kali entered into possession of the rest of the land as his sole heir. The appellants (the original accused), however, put up a claim that Kasturi, the wife of the appellant Sardar Singh, was also the daughter of Naubat Singh, and therefore, entitled to a half share in the property left by Naubat Singh. Legal proceedings ensued as a result of these rival claims and February 13, 1964 was the date of the bearing.

3. According to the complainant Jai Singh, at about 11.30 P.M. on that date he heard some sound in consequence of which he woke up and saw with the aid of his torch the four appellants setting fire to the thatch of his Bangli. On his raising an alarm, his wife, his brother, Atar Singh, and several neighbours came to the scene of the offence and the appellants on seeing them ran away. This was the gist of his case as incorporated in his complaint. The appellants' defence was twofold; that the place which was said to have been burnt down was a cattle-shed and not a residential house, and that they had been falsely implicated on account of the previous hostility between them and the complainant and the members of his party.

4. During the committal proceedings both the sides examined a number of witnesses. At the instance of the appellants the Magistrate also made a local inspection and placed his report thereof on record. The complaint against the appellant being under Section 436 of the Penal Code, the case was triable by the Sessions Court, if the Magistrate were to commit the case on being satisfied that there were sufficient grounds to do so.

5. The Magistrate considered the evidence led before him in great details and in an elaborate judgment observed: (1) that of the six witnesses examined by the complainant, three, namely, the complainant, his wife and his brother, belonged to the same family, (2) that the remaining three eye-witnesses were chance witnesses, (3) that the complainant had failed to examine any witness from his immediate neighbourhood, (4) that his inspection revealed that the Cher, which was set fire to, was a cattle-shed and that the complainant actually resided in a house at a distance of about 50 paces from that place, (5) that the houses of two of the prosecution witnesses, Badri Prasad and Gokul Singh, were at a distance of 304 and 179 paces away, while that of the third witness, Mantri, was situated at a distance of one and a half furlong from the scene of the offence, (6) that Badri Prasad and Gokul had given evidence against the appellants in an earlier litigation and were, therefore, interested witnesses, (7) that the name of Mantri did not figure either in the F. I. R. or in the complaint filed by the complainant, nor in the list of witnesses filed in the inquiry under Section 202 of the Code of Criminal Procedure, and that therefore, he was made a witness as an after-thought, (8) that the defence witnesses, on the other hand, had their houses near the place of the alleged offence, (9) that the defence witnesses were independent witnesses, (10) that though the complainant's Cher had admittedly caught fire, none of his witnesses claimed that he saw the appellants actually setting fire to it, that their version that they saw them near the place or running away therefrom was unnatural, particularly the version of Badri Prasad that he saw the appellants not only near the place but actually talking to the complainant, (11) that the version of Badri Prasad was not only unnatural but his denial that he had previously figured as a witness on the side of the complainant was false, (12) that the evidence of Mantri that he saw the appellants jumping over a wall was improbable as the wall was about 5 to 5½ feet in height, and lastly, that the version of the prosecution witnesses that they had flashed their torches in the light of which they saw the appellants running away was also unnatural. On this analysis of the evidence, the Magistrate came to the conclusion that none of the prosecution witnesses had seen the appellants or any of them either setting fire to the Cher or being near it, that the statements of the defence witnesses, who were the near neighbours and therefore could have arrived at the scene of the offence earlier than the others, that none of the prosecution witnesses was present when they came there, were true, that the case was first investigated by the police and was found to be false and it was then only that a complaint had been filed, and lastly, that looking to all the facts and circumstances of the case, the complaint was baseless, and therefore, no order of commitment could be made.

6. Aggrieved by the said order of discharge, the complainant filed a criminal revision before the Sessions Court. The Sessions Judge observed that the Magistrate had assessed the evidence led by the parties, made an on the spot inspection of the scene of the offence, disbelieved the prosecution witnesses and had thus virtually tried the case instead of leaving it to be tried by the Sessions Court. Relying on Bipat Gope v. State of Bihar, 1962 Supp (2) SCR 948 = (AIR 1962 SC 1195) he held that the Magistrate had gone beyond his jurisdiction, that there was evidence which established a prima facie case, and therefore, remitted the case to the Magistrate directing him to commit the appellants for trial to the Sessions Court. In a further revision by the appellants to the High Court, the High Court noted that though there may not be eye-witnesses, there may in some cases be circumstantial evidence cogent enough to establish the case against an accused person, that though the prosecution witnesses did not claim that they had seen the appellants setting fire to the house, they had claimed to have seen the appellants near about when they came there in response to the complainant's alarm and had also seen them running away. The High Court observed that this evidence constituted circumstantial evidence to make out a prima facie case. It also observed that the reasoning of the Magistrate that the appellants could not have jumped over a 5 feet wall was misconceived and, relying on the observations in Bipat Gope's case, 1962 Supp (2) SCR 948 = (AIR 1962 SC 1195) dismissed the revision holding that on the evidence recorded by the Magistrate it was his duty to commit the appellants to the Sessions Court and the Magistrate could not himself decide the case as he in fact had done.

7. The scope of the inquiry under Chapter XVIII of the Code, as also the powers of the committing Magistrate under Section 209 therein have by now been well settled. As a result of the amendment of the original Section 207 and substitution of that section by the new Sections 207 and 207A by the Code of Criminal Procedure (Amendment) Act, XXVI of 1955, a distinction has now been made between proceedings instituted on a police report and those otherwise than on a police report. In the case of the former, the provisions of the new Section 207A apply, while the latter are governed by the provisions of Sections 208 and onwards. It is fairly clear that the procedure which applies to the proceedings instituted otherwise than on a police report is more elaborate than that under Section 207A. Further, whereas Section 207A (6) lays down that, the committing Magistrate shall discharge an accused person if he is of opinion that the evidence and documents before him disclose "no grounds for committing him for trial". Section 209 uses the words "not sufficient grounds for committing an accused person for trial". The difference in the language in these two sections has already been the subject matter of consideration by this Court, and therefore, we do not consider it necessary once again to go into any detailed examination of them. In Ramgopal Ganpatrai Ruja v. The State of Bombay, 1958 SCR 618 = (AIR 1958 SC 97) this Court examined in detail the previous case law and held that the law in India, as incorporated in Section 209, is the same as in England, and cited with approval the statement in that connection in "Halsbury's Laws of England", (3rd Ed.), Vol. 10, p. 365, namely;

"When all the evidence has been heard, the examining justices then present who have heard all the evidence must decide whether the accused is or is not to be committed for trial. Before determining this matter they must take into consideration the evidence and any statement of the accused. If the justices are of opinion that there is sufficient evidence to put the accused upon trial by jury for any indictable offence they must commit him for trial in custody or on bail."

This Court added that in each case the Magistrate holding the preliminary enquiry has to be satisfied that a prima facie case is made out against the accused by the evidence of witnesses entitled to a reasonable degree of credit and if he is not so satisfied, he is not to commit. Where, however, much can be said on both the sides, it would be for the Sessions Court and not for the Magistrate to decide which of the two conflicting versions will find acceptance at its hands. In Alamoban Das v. State of West Bengal, (1969) 2 SCR 520 at p. 525 = (AIR 1970 SC 863 at p. 866) commenting on S. 209 of the Code this Court observed that though a Magistrate holding an inquiry under Chapter XVIII is not intended to act merely as a recording machine and is entitled to sift and weigh the materials on record, he is to do so only for the purpose of seeing whether there is sufficient evidence for commitment and not whether there is sufficient evidence for conviction. If there is no prima facie evidence or the evidence is totally unworthy of credit it is his duty to discharge the accused. But, if there is some evidence on which a conviction may reasonably be based he must commit the case. But the Magistrate at that stage has no power to evaluate the evidence for satisfying himself of the guilt of the accused. The question before him at that stage would be whether there is some credible evidence which would sustain a conviction. In Bipat Gope's case, 1962 Supp (2) SCR 948 = (AIR 1962 SC 1195) the Magistrate had examined witnesses, and as in the present case, held an on the spot inspection. It was found that the Magistrate did not stop to find out if there was evidence which, if believed, would establish at least a prima facie case, but had gone on further to disbelieve that evidence by an elaborate and painstaking process of examination, in aid of which he brought to bear his own appraisal of inconsistencies, improbabilities etc. The Court held that in doing so the Magistrate in fact tried the whole case thereby forestalling the decision of the Court of Session which alone had the jurisdiction to try such a case. The Court, therefore, set aside the Magistrate's order of discharge as being one in excess of jurisdiction. Though the proceedings there were under Section 207A, the Court took into consideration the language used both in that section and S. 209 and stated that though the words used in the two sections differed in a certain extent, under neither of them can the Magistrate decide the case as if the trial was before him.

8. In the present case, the Magistrate has done precisely what was held in Bipat Gope's case, 1962 Supp (2) SCR 948 = (AIR 1962 SC 1195) to be contrary to the principle governing Sec. 209. The Sessions Judge, in our view, therefore, was right in setting aside the order of discharge passed by the Magistrate and the High Court also rightly refused in the revision before it to interfere with that order. Though, as pointed out earlier, the language of Section 209 differs from that in Section 207A, it is well settled that under neither of them has the Magistrate the jurisdiction to assess and evaluate the evidence before him for the purpose of seeing whether there is sufficient evidence for conviction. The reason obviously is that if he were to do that he would be trying the case himself instead of leaving it to be done by the Sessions Court, which alone has under the Code the jurisdiction to try it. As stated earlier, both the parties led evidence. Instead of finding out whether there was sufficient evidence to make out a prima facie case, what the Magistrate did was to evaluate the evidence by an elaborate assessment of it and held, as if he was trying the case, that between the two versions the evidence of witnesses examined by the appellants was preferable to that led by the complainant, that the defence evidence was more probable and that there were inconsistencies and improbabilities in the prosecution evidence, and finally that that evidence was interested and liable, therefore, to be discarded. There may perhaps be some force in what the Magistrate has said about the evidence, but it is clear that there was something which could be said on both the sides. The Magistrate, therefore, ought to have left the case for the Sessions Court to decide and come to its conclusion which of the two rival versions was acceptable on the facts and circumstances of the case. In our view the Magistrate transgressed the bounds permissible to him under Section 209, and therefore, his order of discharge was liable to be set aside by the Sessions Court and the High Court, therefore, rightly refused to interfere with it.

9. The appeal fails and is dismissed.
Appeal dismissed.

AIR 1970 SUPREME COURT 1019
(V 57 C 213)

(From: Madhya Pradesh)*

J. C. SHAH, K. S. HEGDE AND
A. N. GROVER, JJ.

Dindayal and another, Appellants v.
Rajaram, Respondent.

Civil Appeal No. 404 of 1967, D/- 17-4-1970.

(A) Hindu Succession Act (1956), Section 14 (1) — Widow in possession as trespasser — She cannot be said to be “possessed of” property.

When a widow succeeds to property of her deceased husband after his death and thereafter validly gifts away the property to her daughter and after the daughter's death, takes possession of the property, her possession is that of a trespasser and continues to be so when later on the Hindu Succession Act comes into force and even thereafter till her death. She cannot be held to have acquired any right under the Hindu Succession Act because before, any property can be said to be “possessed” by a Hindu woman, as provided in Section 14 (1) of the Act, two things are necessary, (a) she must have had a right to the possession of that property and (b) she must have been in possession of that property either actually or constructively. AIR 1962 SC 1493 and 1968 SCD 881, Ref. (Para 7)

(B) Limitation Act (1908), Section 28 — Applies also to suits to which limitation is provided in other Acts.

*(Second Appeal No. 938 of 1965—Madh Pra.)

EN/EN/B873/70/RGD/M

The principle underlying Section 28 of the Limitation Act, 1908 (same as Section 27 of the Limitation Act, 1963) is of general application. It is not confined to suits and applications for which a period of limitation is prescribed under the Limitation Act. (Para 10)

(C) Tenancy Laws — C. P. Tenancy Act (1 of 1920 since repealed) Sch. 2, Art. 1 — Suit not as tenant but as reversioner — Article 1 does not apply.

Where the plaintiffs who also were at one time the tenants of the suit holding have not brought the suit for possession of the holding as tenants of that holding, but brought it on the strength of their title as the nearest reversioners to the late holder nor was their dispossession a part of the cause of action for the suit, the suit for possession is not one on the ground that the plaintiffs had been earlier dispossessed. This is a suit for possession on the strength of the new title acquired by the plaintiffs after the death of the widow of the late holder.

Therefore Article 1 of the Second Schedule to the C. P. Tenancy Act 1920 does not apply to the suit. The limitation for the suit is governed by the provisions of the Limitation Act, 1908. (Para 12)

(D) Limitation Act (1908), Article 142 — C. P. Tenancy Act (1 of 1920 since repealed), Section 104, Sch. II, Art. 1 — Widow in possession of property of deceased protected tenant as trespasser — Claim by plaintiffs after her death as reversioners is not barred though their claim as dispossessed tenants is barred under Tenancy Act. (Paras 13, 14)

Cases Referred: Chronological Paras
(1967) Civil Appeal 138 of 1964,

D/- 1-5-1967 = 1968 SCD 881,

Kuldip Singh v. Suraj Singh 7

(1962) AIR 1962 SC 1493 (V 49) =

1962 Supp (2) SCR 418, S. S.

Munnalal v. S. S. Rajkumar 7

The following Judgment of the Court was delivered by

HEGDE, J.: This appeal by special leave arises from the decision of Madhya Pradesh High Court in second appeal No. 938 of 1965 on its file.

2. The facts found which are no more in dispute, and relevant for the purpose of deciding the questions of law arising for decision in this appeal may now be briefly stated. One Gulli Gotamia had two sons by name Girdharilal and Nandoo. From the material on record, it is not possible to find out the date of death of Gulli Gotamia but admittedly he died leaving behind him his aforementioned two sons, Girdharilal and Nandoo were divided. Girdharilal died on May 17, 1920. His first wife had predeceased him. But at the time of his death, his second wife Ladli Bahu was alive. On his death his widow took possession of his properties. Girdharilal's brother Nandoo had two children, Gajadhar and Lachhi. Lachhi died issueless. Gajadhar also is dead. He has two children Dindayal (1st defendant) and Prameshwar Dayal (second defendant). Girdharilal had a daughter from his predeceased wife by name Kousa Bai. She died in 1943. Ladli Bahu had a daughter by name Nanni Bai who died in 1941. The children of Nanni Bai, Narbada Bai, Raja Ram, Ram Narain and Gaya Prasad are the plaintiffs in the suit.

3. Ever since the death of Girdharilal, Ladli Bahu was in possession of the suit properties. She gifted those properties to her daughter Nanni Bai on July 30, 1936 and put the donee in possession of the same. Thereupon Kousa Bai filed a suit in 1937 seeking a declaration that the gift deed in question is not binding on her and that it cannot come in her way in inheriting the suit properties on the death of Ladli Bahu. That suit was decreed on May 3, 1937. As mentioned earlier, Nanni Bai died in 1941. On her death, the plaintiffs came into possession of the suit properties. Ladli Bahu took wrongful possession of the suit properties from the plaintiffs on June 1, 1951 under the guise of enforcing the decree in the suit filed by Kousa Bai. Thereafter she continued to be in exclusive possession of the suit properties. On May 27, 1952, she gifted some of those properties to one Rameshwar Prasad and the remaining properties she gifted to the appellants on March 21, 1957. She died on April 9, 1960. The Hindu Succession Act came into force on June 17, 1956.

4. Two questions namely (1) what is the effect of the possession taken by Ladli Bahu on June 1, 1951, and (2) Did Ladli Bahu become the full owner of those properties in view of Section 14(2) of the Hindu Succession Act, 1956, were presented to the High Court as well as to the Courts below for decision.

5. The High Court came to the conclusion that Ladli Bahu's possession of the suit properties after June 1, 1951, was that of a trespasser and as such she did not become an absolute owner of those properties on the coming into force of the Hindu Succession Act. It also held that the plaintiffs became entitled to the suit properties on the death of Ladli Bahu as the nearest reversioners of Girdharilal.

6. It was urged on behalf of the appellants that as soon as Ladli Bahu took possession of the suit properties from the plaintiffs, her previous possession as the widow of Girdharilal sprang up again and thereafter she was holding the properties in her capacity as the widow of Girdharilal and hence she became the absolute owner of those properties when the Hindu Succession Act came into force. On the other hand, it was urged on behalf of the respondents, that as soon as Ladli Bahu parted with the possession of the suit properties, in favour of her daughter under a gift deed, she lost all rights in those properties. Therefore when she acquired possession in 1951, she did so as a trespasser. As she had no right to possess those properties when the Hindu Succession Act came into force, she acquired no rights under Section 14(2) of the Hindu Succession Act.

7. The High Court and the courts below have come to the conclusion that the gift made by Ladli Bahu in favour of Nanni Bai is a valid gift and that Nanni Bai came into possession of the suit properties on the strength of that gift. Hence she must be held to have had no interest in those properties thereafter. Therefore when Ladli Bahu took possession of those properties in 1951, she did so as a trespasser. This conclusion, in our opinion, is unassailable. If we come to the conclusion that she continued as a trespasser on the date the Hindu Succession Act came into force, and even thereafter till her death then she cannot be held to have acquired any right under the Hindu Succession Act because before, any property can be said to be "possessed" by a Hindu woman, as provided in Section 14(1) of the Hindu Succession Act, two things are necessary (a) she must have had a right to the possession of that property and (b) she must have been in possession of that property either actually or constructively — See S. S. Munna Lal v. S. S. Rajkumar, 1962 Supp (2) SCR 418 = (AIR 1962 SC 1493); Kuldip Singh v. Surain Singh, Civil Appeal No. 133 of 1964 D/- 1-5-1967 (SC).

8. The next question is whether in view of Section 104 (1) read with Art. I of the second Sch. of the C. P. Tenancy Act, 1920 (to be hereinafter referred to as the Act) it can be held that Ladli Bahu had acquired a title to possess the suit properties.

9. Section 104 (1) of the Act provides that the suits and applications specified in the Second Schedule therein shall be instituted or made within the time prescribed in that Schedule for them respectively; and every such suit instituted and application made after the period of limitation so prescribed shall be dismissed. Article 1 of the Second Schedule is as follows:

Description of suit or application.	Period of limitation.	Time from which period begins to run.
For possession of a holding by a person claiming to be a tenant from which he has been dispossessed or excluded from possession by any person.	Three years.	The date of dispossession or exclusion.

10. Admittedly the suit properties were held on tenancy right. Girdharilal was the protected tenant of those properties. Under the gift mentioned earlier, the plaintiffs became the tenants of those properties. In view of Article 1 of the Second Schedule read with Section 104(1) of the Act, the plaintiffs as tenants could not have sued for possession of the suit properties after June 1, 1954. It was urged on behalf of the appellants that in view of the principle underlying Section 28 of the Indian Limitation Act, 1908, which principle is not confined to suits and applications for which limitation is prescribed under that Act but is of general application, the plaintiffs' right to the suit properties must be held to have been extinguished. In other words, the contention was that in view of the aforementioned provisions, the plaintiffs had not merely lost their right to sue for possession of the suit properties, their right in the properties itself had been extinguished. It is well settled that the principle underlying Section 28 of the Indian Limitation Act, 1908 (same as Section 27 of the Indian Limitation Act, 1963) is of general application. It is not confined to suits and applications for which a period of limitation is prescribed under the Limitation Act.

11. Article 1 of the second schedule to the Act applies only to suits brought by a person claiming to be a tenant for possession of a holding from which he has been dispossessed or excluded from possession by any person. In other words before this Article can apply, the following conditions must be fulfilled.

(1) The plaintiff must claim to be the tenant of the holding which is the subject matter of the suit;

(2) The suit must be one for possession and

(3) The suit must be on the ground that he had been dispossessed or excluded from possession by any person.

12. Though the plaintiffs in this suit were at one time the tenants in the suit holding in view of the gift in favour of their mother, they have not brought the present suit as tenants of that holding. They have brought it on the strength of their title as the nearest reversioners to Girdharilal. Nor is their dispossession in 1951 a part of the cause of action for the present suit. This is not a suit for possession on the ground that the plaintiffs had been earlier dispossessed. This is a suit for possession on the strength of the new title acquired by the plaintiffs after the death of Ladli Bahu. Therefore Article 1 of the second schedule does not apply to the present suit. The limitation for this suit is governed by the provisions of the Limitation Act, 1908.

13. Further it is one thing to say that a tenant who was in possession of the tenancy holding at the time of dispossession had lost his rights in the holding but it is another thing to say that a trespasser had become the tenant of that holding at the end of the prescribed period. It must be remembered that C. P. Tenancy Act is a special Act. It only governs those matters for which provision is made therein. In other respects the general law continues to apply. The Act does say that a tenant's right in respect of any property can be acquired by adverse possession. We do not think that the provisions of the Act enabled (The Act has been repealed) a trespasser to impose himself as a tenant on the landlord by means of adverse possession of the holding as against the tenant for a period of three years. Similarly, it is not possible to hold that a tenancy right could have been acquired in a holding so as to affect the rights of third parties by being in wrongful possession of that holding for a period of three years. If it is otherwise, valuable rights of third parties could have been jeopardised for no fault of theirs. Take the case of a widow, who was in possession of a tenancy holding. The prospective reversioners to her husband's estate would have had no right in that holding during her life time. Is it reasonable to hold that the reversioner would have lost his rights in the holding even before he acquired them because some one was in possession of that holding adversely to the widow for a period of three years? That would not have been the position even under Article 144 of the Limitation Act, 1908. It could not be different under the Act. A right cannot be barred even before it accrues. The fact that the tenant dispossessed happened to become the reversioner on the death of the widow cannot make any difference in law.

14. In 1951, the plaintiffs had two different rights over the suit properties—one under the gift referred to earlier and the other as reversioner. One was an existing right, the other was a prospective one. Their right under the gift must be held to have been extinguished under Article 1, Sch. II read with Section 104 of the Act. But their right to those properties, as reversioners arose only after the death of Ladli Bahu. That right could not have been barred even before it accrued. As against the prospective reversioners Ladli Bahu was holding the suit properties as a trespasser. She had acquired no rights in those properties as against them. Till her death, it was not possible under law to predicate who would have been her husband's nearest reversioner on the date of her death.

15. In the result this appeal fails and it is dismissed with costs.

Appeal dismissed.

AIR 1970 SUPREME COURT 1022
(V 57 C 214)

(From: Himachal Pradesh)

J. M. SHELAT AND G. K. MITTER, JJ.
Mohan Lal, Appellant v. Mohum Ram,
Respondent.

Civil Appeal No. 2212 of 1968, D/- 7-4-1970.

EN/EN/B675/70/CWM/D

(A) Tenancy Laws — Himachal Pradesh Abolition of Big Landed Estates and Land Reforms Act (15 of 1954), Section 11 (2) — Right of tenant of acquisition of proprietary rights in the Land — Protection to minor landlord under Section 11 (2) — Held on facts, as not available.

The tenant applied under Section 11 (1) for the proprietary rights of landholders. The minor landlord resisted the application on the ground that he had no other means of livelihood except the land in question within Section 11 (2). It was established that the father of the minor held considerable ancestral property in which the minor had interest as coparcener.

Held that the land in question was not the only means of the minor's livelihood and even when he was deprived of the proprietary rights therein there would be other properties, in which he had an interest. The protection under Section 11 (2) could not be availed of by the landlord without any regard being had to minor's right of maintenance under the Hindu Adoptions and Maintenance Act.

(Para 8)

(B) Tenancy Laws — Himachal Pradesh Abolition of Big Landed Estates and Land Reforms Act (15 of 1954), Section 11 (2) — Protection to minor landlord having no other means of livelihood against right of tenant of acquisition of proprietary rights in the land — Whether the statutory right of maintenance of a minor under Hindu Adoptions and Maintenance Act (1956) can or cannot be treated as a means of livelihood — (Quaere).

(Para 8)

The following Judgment of the Court was delivered by

SHELAT, J.:— This appeal, by special leave, concerns a piece of land, measuring 27 highas and 17 hiswas, situate in village Chethla, District Mahasu in Himachal Pradesh. The land stood in the names of one Kubja and Subda, the minor daughters of Smt. Radhu, as the owners thereof. It can no longer be disputed that Radhu, as the guardian of her minor daughters, had leased the land to the respondent for a term of five years. The period of the lease expired in Rabi 1960. The said Subda died; in the result Kubja became the sole owner of the said land. On December 6, 1960, Radhu, as the guardian of the minor Kubja, sold the said land to the appellant for Rs. 4000. In March 1961, the respondent, claiming to be still the tenant, applied for the proprietary rights of the landholders in the said land under Section 11 (1) of the Himachal Pradesh Abolition of Big Landed Estates and Land Reforms Act, XV of 1954 (hereinafter referred to as the Act).

2. The application of the respondent was resisted by both Kubja and the appellant on the grounds that the respondent was never the tenant of the said land but had taken forcible possession thereof, that he had thereafter relinquished its possession in a Panchayat and further that as the appellant was a minor, having no other means of livelihood except the said land, he was entitled to the protection of sub-section (2) of Section 11.

3. The compensation officer under the Act dismissed the respondent's application holding that Radhu, as the guardian of her minor daughters, had leased the said land to the respondent for a period of five years, but that the lease expired in 1960 and thereupon the respondent had relinquished possession. Consequently, he was in March 1961 no longer a tenant who could apply under Section 11 (1). He also held that the appellant was a minor without any other means of livelihood except the land in question, and therefore, was in any event entitled to the protection provided under Section 11 (2). The District Judge, in the appeal filed by the respondent, held that the respondent had not relinquished possession nor had he ceased to be the tenant of the land in spite of the expiry of the lease period. He also held that the trees and the buildings standing on the said land would not be covered under the proceedings under Section 11 (1), the first because they did not constitute land under the Act, and the second because the tenant did not wish to include the buildings in his said application. The District Judge, however, omitted to decide the question as to whether the respondent was a minor without any other means of livelihood, and therefore, entitled to the protection under Section 11 (2). He, nevertheless, set aside the order of the compensation officer and allowed the appeal awarding proprietary rights in the land to the respondent save in respect of the trees and the buildings. The appellant filed a second appeal before the learned Judicial Commissioner who remanded the case to the District Judge directing him to give his finding on the question left undecided by him, namely, the question as to the applicability of Section 11 (2). On such remand the District Judge gave his finding to the effect that except for the land in question the appellant-minor had no other means of livelihood, and therefore, during his minority the respondent-tenant was not entitled to acquire the proprietary rights in the said land. He also got a plan prepared of the buildings and the lands appertaining thereto which would be excluded from the purview of the application.

4. On the matter again coming up before the Judicial Commissioner, the Judicial Commissioner found that (1) the respondent was inducted on the land as a tenant by Radhu, (2) that the respondent had not relinquished possession on expiry of the period of five years under the said lease, and (3) that he did not cease to be the tenant even on expiry of the said period by reason of Sections 48 to 55 and 62 of the Act. Observing that the real point of controversy before him, therefore, was as regards the applicability of Section 11 (2), he held that though the statutory right of a minor son to be maintained by his father under Section 20 of the Hindu Adoptions and Maintenance Act, 78 of 1956 cannot invariably and in all cases be regarded as a means of livelihood of a minor, it could be taken into account on the facts and circumstances of the present case. These facts, according to him were: (1) the fact that the appellant was residing with and was being maintained by his father, (2) the admission made by the father that he had acquired other lands by purchasing them and had thus augmented the ancestral property held by him, (3) the price of Rs. 4000 for the land in question was in fact paid by him, and (4) it comprised of Rs. 2000 advanced earlier and the balance of Rs. 2000 paid by him at the time of the execution of the sale. Basing his conclusion on these facts, the Judicial Commissioner held that the appellant could not be said to be a minor, who had no means of livelihood except the land in question, that therefore, Section 11 (2) did not apply and the respondent-tenant was entitled under Section 11 (1) to acquire the proprietary rights in the land excluding the buildings and the trees standing thereon.

5. Section 11 reads as follows:

"(1) Notwithstanding any law, custom or contract to the contrary a tenant other than a sub-tenant shall, on application made to the compensation officer at any time after the commencement of this Act, be entitled to acquire, on payment of compensation, the right, title and interest of the landowner in the land of the tenancy held by him under the landowner—

(2) Nothing contained in sub-section (1) shall apply to a landlord, if he has no other means of livelihood, and is a minor — In the case of a minor, sub-section (1) shall not apply during his minority —

6. Counsel for the appellant did not contest the finding of the Judicial Commissioner that the respondent was inducted on the land as a tenant, and that though the lease period expired in 1960 he was still a tenant until he was evicted by a decree of a Court or had abandoned or otherwise relinquished the tenancy. That being so, there can be no doubt that the respondent was entitled to maintain the application under Section 11 (1). The only question, therefore, which he pressed before us was that the Judicial Commissioner was in error in holding that the obligation of a father to maintain his minor son under the Hindu Adoptions and Maintenance Act can be regarded as a means of livelihood of such a son other than the land in question as contemplated by Section 11 (2).

7. Reading the judgment of the Judicial Commissioner as a whole, it is clear that that was not what the Judicial Commissioner held. What he held was that the expression "means of livelihood" in Section 11 (2) had not been used in any artificial sense but in its ordinary meaning, that the said expression would mean resources of livelihood, that in ascertaining such resources each case would depend on its own facts and circumstances, that the statutory right of a minor to be maintained by his father cannot invariably and always be regarded as a means of livelihood of the minor, but that there may be facts on which such a right may be taken into consideration while deciding the question whether protection under sub-section (2) can be invoked. The Judicial Commissioner then considered the aforesaid four facts and came to the conclusion that this was not a case where the appellant-minor could be said to be without any means of livelihood other than the land in question.

8. It is not necessary on the facts of the present case to decide whether the statutory right of maintenance of a minor can or cannot be treated as a means of livelihood. There are facts in this case which clearly show that even after the proprietary rights of the minor in the land in question are acquired by the tenant there would be other means of livelihood left with the appellant. The first and the most obvious one is that there are standing on the land two houses. the proprietary rights in which are not sought to be acquired by the respondent. The plan got prepared by the District Judge shows the two houses together with the portions of land appertaining thereto which would still remain with the appellant. The evidence of the appellant's father was that the whole of the land together with the trees and the two houses standing thereon was acquired by him for the appellant for Rs. 4000 only. By 1964 when he gave his evidence, the value of the two houses alone was between Rupees 7000 to Rs. 8000. The father's evidence further shows that he got land measuring 25 to 30 bighas on the death of his father, that he had since then purchased several other pieces of land, thus increasing the extent of the ancestral property held by him. Over and above these lands, he had planted a number of apple and other fruit bearing trees. The property held by him thus was, on his own admission, ancestral property in which the appellant has an interest as a coparcener in a Hindu joint family. It is thus manifest that the land in question is not the only means of the appellant's livelihood and even when he is deprived of the proprietary rights therein there would be other properties, even besides the said two houses and the trees, in which he has an interest. Therefore, the conclusion reached by the Judicial Commissioner that the protection under Section 11 (2) could not be availed of by the appellant is correct without any regard being had to his right of maintenance under the Hindu Adoptions and Maintenance Act.

9. The appeal, therefore, fails and is dismissed with costs.

Appeal dismissed.

AIR 1970 SUPREME COURT 1024

(V 57 C 215)

(From: Mysore)

J. C. SHAH AND K. S. HEGDE, JJ.

The State of Mysore, Appellant v. Alexander Misquith etc., Respondents.

Civil Appeals Nos. 1724-1726 of 1966, D/- 8-4-1970.

Constitution of India, Article 136 — Appeal by special leave — Exercise of special and discretionary jurisdiction — Question involving validity of statute no longer in operation — Claim not substantial — Appeal dismissed without considering merits. (Para 3)

EN/EN/B677/70/DVT/B

procedural protections afforded a defendant in a criminal prosecution, or whether something less was sufficient, were to be initially answered by the District Court on remand, the plaintiff being entitled to relief if he proved at trial that the Commission was designed to and did act in the manner alleged by him and that its procedures failed to meet the requirements of due process.

(Paras 35, 36)

Cases Rferred: Chronological Paras

(1968) 286 F Supp 537, Jenkins v. Mc. Keithen	1, 12, 36
(1968) 392 US 83 = 20 L Ed 2d 947 = 88 S Ct 1942, Flast v. Cohen	16, 20, 43
(1968) 393 US 12 = 21 L Ed 2d 12 = 89 S Ct 46	43
(1967) 388 US 14 = 18 L Ed 2d 1019 = 87 S Ct 1920, Cf. Washington v. Texas	32
(1965) 382 US 172 = 15 L Ed 2d 247 = 86 S Ct 347, Walkar Process Equipment Inc. v. Food Machinery & Chemical Corporation	47
(1963) 373 US 96 = 10 L Ed 2d 224 = 83 S Ct 1175, Willner v. Committee	31
(1962) 369 US 186 = 7 L Ed 2d 663 = 82 S Ct 691, Baker v. Carr.	20
(1960) 363 US 420 = 4 L Ed 2d 1307 = 80 S Ct 1502, Hannah v. Larche	13, 22, 26, 27, 30, 33, 34, 39, 40, 62, 63, 68
(1960) 361 US 212 = 4 L Ed 2d 252 = 80 S Ct 270, Stirone v. United States	34
(1959) 360 US 474 = 3 L Ed 2d 1377 = 79 S Ct 1400, Green v. Mc. Elroy	22, 27, 31
(1958) 357 US 449 = 2 L Ed 2d 1488 = 78 S Ct 1163, Cf. Naacp v. Alabama	22
(1957) 355 US 41 = 2 L Ed 2d 80 = 78 S Ct 99, Conley v. Gibson	47
(1951) 341 US 123 = 95 L Ed 817 = 71 S Ct 624, Joint-Fascist Refugee Committee v. Mc. Grath	20, 22, 27, 28
(1948) 333 US 257 = 92 L Ed 682 = 68 S Ct 499, In re, Oliver	32
(1943) 318 US 44 = 87 L Ed 603 = 63 S Ct 493, Tileston v. Ula-man	15
(1942) 316 US 407 = 86 L Ed 1563 = 62 S Ct 1194, Columbia Broadcasting System Inc. v. United States	22
(1938) 304 US 1 = 82 L Ed 1129 = 58 S Ct 773, Morgan v. United States	27, 32
(1936) 298 US 349 = 80 L Ed 1209 = 56 S Ct 797, Baltimore & Ohio R. R. v. United States	32

(1929) 279 US 263 = 73 L Ed 692 = 49 S Ct 268, Sinclair v. United States	22
(1927) 273 US 299 = 71 L Ed 651 = 47 S Ct 413, Cf. United States v. Los Angeles & S. L. R. R.	22
(1927) 273 US 135 = 71 L Ed 580 = 47 S Ct 319, Mc. Grain v. Daugherty	22
(1887) 121 US 1 = 30 L Ed 849 = 7 S Ct 781, Ex Parte Brain	34
251 La 993 = 207 So 2d 770, Mor-tone v. Morgan	13, 28
J. Minos Simon, for Appellant; Ashton L. Stewart, for Appellees (Respondents).

SUMMARY

A member of a labor union instituted an action for declaratory and injunctive relief in the United States District Court for the Eastern District of Louisiana, challenging the constitutionality under the due process clause of a Louisiana statute, and the actions thereunder of the defendants, state officials. The challenged statute created a Labor-Management Commission of Inquiry to investigate criminal violations in the field of labor-management relations upon referral by the governor, to hold public hearings for determining whether there was probable cause to believe that violations of the criminal laws had occurred, and to make public findings and recommendations to appropriate authorities with regard to the institution of criminal prosecutions, including conclusions as to specific individuals, the statute also limiting the right of a witness, who could be compelled to attend, or his counsel, to examine other witnesses and to call witnesses. The complaint contained allegations that the commission was an executive trial agency performing an accusatory function designed to publicly find the plaintiff and others guilty of violations of criminal laws without trial or procedural safeguards, allegedly for the purpose of injuring the plaintiff and destroying the Labor union of which he was a member, and that the defendants, acting in concert with others and in connection with the administration of the statute, had engaged in a course of conduct designed publicly to brand the plaintiff and others as criminals, including the filing of allegedly baseless criminal charges against the plaintiff. The three-judge District Court granted the defendants' motion to dismiss the complaint for failure to state a cause of action, holding that the Act was constitutional, and that the other matters alleged were merely potential defenses to the pending criminal charges against the plaintiff (286 F Supp 537).

On appeal, the United States Supreme Court reversed and remanded. Five members of the court agreed that the District Court's judgment should be reversed, but did not agree upon an opinion.

MARSHALL, J., announced the judgment of the court, and in an opinion joined by WARREN, CH. J., and BRENNAN, J., expressed the view that (1) under the allegations in the complaint, the plaintiff had standing to attack the constitutionality of the statute and the acts taken by the defendants thereunder, notwithstanding that the plaintiff had not alleged that he had been or would be called before the commission, since the allegations showed that he had sufficient adversary interest with regard to his reputation and economic well-being to insure proper presentation of issues, and also showed a substantial, legally redressable injury to the plaintiff as a direct, rather than a collateral, consequence of the statute's administration, and since the plaintiff's opportunity to defend any criminal prosecutions against him was not sufficient to deprive him of standing to challenge the statute, (2) if the state commission in fact exercised an accusatory function akin to an official adjudication of criminal culpability in branding individuals as criminals in public, its procedures did not meet minimal due process requirements as to the right of an investigated person to confront and cross-examine witnesses against him and to present evidence on his own behalf, and (3) the allegations of the complaint were sufficient to state a cause of action, and the questions whether due process required that the commission provide all the procedural protections afforded a defendant in a criminal prosecution, or whether something less was sufficient, were to be initially answered by the District Court on remand, the plaintiff being entitled to relief if he proved at trial that the commission was designed to and did act in the manner alleged in his complaint, and that its procedures failed to meet the requirements of due process.

DOUGLAS, J., concurred in the result on the basis of his opinion, expressed in an earlier decision of another case, that an accusatory, investigative commission must comply with due process.

BLACK, J., concurred in the Court's judgment, expressing the view that the Louisiana statute denied due process of law, since it was nothing more nor less than a scheme for a non-judicial tribunal to charge, try, convict, and punish people without Courts, juries, lawyers, or witnesses.

HARLAN, J., joined by STEWART and WHITE, JJ., dissented on the grounds that (1) the complaint failed to show that the plaintiff had standing to challenge the commission's procedures, since it was not alleged that the plaintiff had been affected by the asserted unconstitutional procedures or had been or would be investigated or called by the commission or identified in its findings, (2) the commission did not determine guilt or innocence, but performed only investigative functions designed to discover violations which might result in the initiation of criminal proceedings, and thus should not be required to follow strict adjudicatory procedures, (3) the statutory safeguards afforded persons under investigation by the commission were at least equal to those provided by most federal investigative agencies, and (4) the complaint could not be reasonably construed as alleging that in fact the commission acted primarily as an agency of exposure, rather than serving the ends required by the State statute.

SEPARATE OPINIONS

Mr. Justice MARSHALL announced the judgment of the Court and delivered an opinion in which Mr. Chief Justice WARREN and Mr. Justice BRENNAN join.

This case involves the constitutionality of a 1967 Louisiana statute, known as Act No. 2, which creates a body called the Labor-Management Commission of Inquiry. La Rev Stat Ann Ss. 23:880.1-23:880.18 (Supp 1969). The stated purpose of this Commission is "the investigation and findings of facts relating to violations or possible violations of criminal laws of the state of Louisiana or of the United States arising out of or in connection with matters in the field of labor-management relations. . . ." Act No. 2, Preamble, [1967 Extra Sess] La Acts 3. Appellant, a member of a labor union, filed this suit in the District Court for the Eastern District of Louisiana challenging the constitutionality of Act No. 2 and of certain actions taken by state officials in the administration of the Act and otherwise. He sought both declaratory and injunctive relief. A three-judge court was convened and that court ultimately granted appellees' motion to dismiss the complaint. Jenkins v. McKelthen, 286 F Supp 537 (DC ED La 1968). We noted probable jurisdiction of an appeal brought under 28 USC S. 1253.(1) We reverse.

2. Since the case was decided on a motion to dismiss, a rather detailed examination of the structure of the Act and of the allegations of the complaint is necessary.

I.

3. The impetus for the formation of the Commission was stated in the pre-

1. The constitutionality of the Act was upheld in Martone v. Morgan, 251 La 993, 207 So 2d 770, appeal dismissed, 393 US 12, 21 L Ed 12 d 12, 89 S Ct 46 (1968) (petition for rehearing pending).

amble of the Act. [1967 Extra Sess] La Act 2. It cited "unprecedented conditions" in the labor relations of the construction industry, and it particularly noted certain "allegations and accusations of violations of the state and federal criminal laws which should be thoroughly investigated in the public interest. . .

.. " Id., at 3 The additional investigative facilities of the Commission were thought necessary to "supplement and assist the efforts and activities of the several district attorneys, grand juries, and other law enforcement officials and agencies. . ." Id., at 3.

4. The Commission is composed of nine members appointed by the Governor. La Rev Stat Ann S. 23:880.1 (Supp 1969). It is empowered to act only upon referral by the Governor when, in his opinion, there is substantial indication that there are or may be "widespread or continuing violations of existing criminal laws" affecting labor-management relations. La Rev Stat Ann S. 23:880.5 (Supp 1969). Upon referral by the Governor, the Commission is to proceed by public hearing to ascertain the facts pertaining to the alleged violations. La Rev Stat Ann S. 23:880.6 (Supp 1969). In order to carry out this function, the Commission has the power to make appropriate rules and regulations, to employ attorneys, investigators, and other staff, to compel the attendance of witnesses, to examine them under oath, and to require the production of books, records, and other evidence. La Rev Stat Ann S. 23:880.8 (Supp 1969). It can enforce its orders by petition to the state Courts for contempt proceedings. La Rev Stat Ann S. 23:880.9 (Supp 1969).

5. The scope of the Commission's investigative authority is explicitly limited by the Act to violations of criminal laws. "The commission shall have no power, authority or jurisdiction to investigate, hold hearings or seek to ascertain the facts or make any reports or recommendations on any of the strictly civil aspects of any labor problem. . ." La Rev Stat Ann S. 23:880.6 (B) (Supp 1969).(2)

2. "[I]ts power, authority or jurisdiction shall in no case extend to (1) any matter which is solely an 'unfair labor practice' or an 'unfair employment practice' or a legitimate labor dispute under the provisions of any federal or state law; or (2) any matter which relates to legitimate economic issues arising between labor and management or the manner in which such labor practices or economic issues are to be settled between the parties, whether by negotiation, arbitration, lock-out or strike; or (3) any matter which relates solely to the internal affairs of labor organizations, including but not necessarily restricted to membership

Further, the Commission has no power to participate in any manner in any civil proceeding, except, of course, contempt proceedings. Ibid. The limitation of the Commission to criminal matters is further reinforced by the provision of the Act allowing the Commission, at the request of the Governor, to assign its investigatory forces to the state police to assist the latter in their investigatory activities. La Rev Stat Ann S. 23:880.6 (C) (Supp 1969).

6. The Commission is required to determine, in public findings, whether there is probable cause to believe violations of the criminal laws have occurred. La Rev Stat Ann S. 23:880.7 (A) (Supp 1969). Its power is limited to making these findings and recommendations:

"The commission shall have no authority to and it shall make no binding adjudication with respect to such violation or violations; however, it may, in its discretion, include in its findings the conclusions of the commission as to specific individuals . . . and it may make such recommendations for action to the governor as it deems appropriate". Ibid.

7. The findings are to be a matter of public record, La Rev Stat Ann S. 23:880.15 (B) (Supp 1969), although they may not be used as prima facie or presumptive evidence of guilt or innocence in any Court of law, La Rev Stat Ann S. 23:880.7 (A) (Supp 1969). The Commission is required to report its findings to the proper state or federal authorities if it finds there is probable cause to believe that violations of the criminal laws have occurred, and it may file appropriate charges. La Rev Stat Ann S. 23:880.7 (B) (Supp 1969). Finally, the Commission may request the Governor to policies, election procedures, membership rights and like matters; or (4) any alleged acts of violence or threats of violence or so-called 'mass picketing,' or like conduct by either an employer or a union, which is not related to bribery or extortion, as defined by law, but which is related only to an organizational objective of a labor union or which is related only to furthering the interests of one side or the other in a 'labor dispute,' as that term is defined by federal or state law, such conduct being already regulated by and subject to the police power of the state, exercised through such agencies as the Division of State Police; or (5) any matter which relates solely to the internal affairs of any business organization, including but not necessarily restricted to its labor and business policy and general operations, or (6) any matters which constitute a combination of any two or more of these." La Rev Stat Ann S. 23:880.6 (B) (Supp 1969).

refer matters to the State Attorney General asking the latter to exercise his authority to cause criminal prosecutions to be instituted. La Rev Stat Ann S. 23:880.7 (D) (1967). Nothing in the Act makes any provision for preparation of findings or reports for submission to the Governor or the legislature for the explicit purpose of legislative action. Indeed, the preamble of the Act and the Act itself make it clear that the purpose of the Commission is to supplement the activities of the State's law enforcement agencies in one narrowly defined area.

8. As indicated above, the Commission has the power to compel the attendance of witnesses. A witness is given notice of the general subject matter of the investigation before being asked to appear and testify. La Rev Stat Ann S. 23:880.10 (A) (Supp 1969). A witness has the right to the presence and advice of counsel, "subject to such reasonable limitations as the commission may impose in order to prevent obstruction of or interference with the orderly conduct of the hearing". La Rev Stat Ann S. 23:880.10 (B) (Supp 1969). Counsel may question his client as to any relevant matters, ibid., but the right of a witness or his counsel to examine other witnesses is limited:

"In no event shall counsel for any witness have any right to examine or cross-examine any other witness but he may submit to the commission proposed questions to be asked of any other witness appearing before the commission, and the commission shall ask the witness such of the questions as it deems to be appropriate to its inquiry". Ibid.

With one limited exception to be discussed below, neither a witness nor any other private party has the right to call anyone to testify before the Commission.

9. Although the Commission must base its findings and reports only on evidence and testimony given at public hearings, the Act does provide for executive session when it appears that the testimony to be given "may tend to degrade, defame or incriminate any person". La Rev Stat Ann S. 23:880.12 (A) (Supp 1969). In executive session the Commission must allow the person who might be degraded, defamed, or incriminated an opportunity to appear and be heard, and to call a reasonable number of witnesses on his behalf. Ibid. However, the Commission may decide that the evidence or testimony shall be heard in a public hearing, regardless of its effect on any particular person. Ibid. In that case, the person affected has the right to appear as a "voluntary witness" and may submit "pertinent" statements of others ibid. He may submit a list of additional witnesses, but subpoenas will be issued only in the discretion of the Commission. Ibid.: See also La Rev Stat Ann S. 23:880.12 (C) (Supp 1969).

II.

10. Appellant's complaint named as defendants the Governor of Louisiana and six members of the Commission. The complaint presented, inter alia, the question of whether the provisions of Act No. 2 violated the Due Process and Equal Protection Clauses of the Fourteenth Amendment. Appellant alleged that the Commission was an executive trial agency "aimed at conducting public trials concerning criminal law violations", and that its function was publicly to condemn. Appellant asserted that the defendants "in connection with the administration of the provisions of said Act, have singled out the complainant and members of Teamsters Local No. 5 as a special class of persons for repressive and willfully punitive action . . . in furtherance of which a deliberate effort has been made and continues to be made by such officials . . . to destroy the power structure of the labor union aforesaid"

More specifically, the complaint alleged that defendants and their agents, acting under color of law and in conspiracy, procured false statements of criminal activities and used such statements to initiate baseless criminal proceedings against appellant, that they intimidated and coerced public officials into filing and prosecuting false criminal charges against appellant, and that they knowingly, willfully, and purposefully intimidated state Court judges having under consideration legal controversies involving appellant. These acts of defendants allegedly denied plaintiff and all others similarly situated of "rights, privileges and immunities secured to them by the Constitution and laws of the United States". Finally, appellant alleged that the defendants intended to continue to deprive him and others of their rights and that there was no "plain, adequate or efficient remedy at law".

11. Appellant prayed that a three-judge district Court be convened, that a temporary restraining order issue, that Act No. 2 be declared unconstitutional, that all civil and criminal actions against appellant be permanently restrained, and that other unspecified relief be granted.

12. Temporary relief was denied by the District Court and a three-judge Court was empanelled to hear the case. Defendants answered and moved to dismiss. They alleged that appellant lacked standing to question the constitutionality of Act No. 2 and that the complaint failed to state a cause of action. Thereafter, appellant filed a "Supplemental and Amending Petition" in which he alleged, in some detail, that defendants had continued the course of action described in the original complaint. After a hearing, the Court dismissed the complaint. Jenkins v. McKeithen, (1968) F Supp 537, supra.

13. The Court, relying largely on the opinion of the Louisiana Supreme Court in Martone v. Morgan, 251 La 993, 207 So 2d 770, appeal dismissed, (1968) 393 US 12, 21 L Ed 2d 12, 89 S Ct 46 (petition for rehearing pending), held that this Court's decision in Hannah v. Larche, (1960) 363 US 420 = 4 L Ed 2d 1307 = 80 S Ct 1502 was dispositive of the issue of the constitutionality of the Act. The Court further ruled that appellant had not stated any other claim for relief under Ss. 1981, 1983 and 1988 of Title 42, United States Code. Rather, the Court held that the other matters sought to be raised in the complaint were merely potential defenses to the pending criminal charges and that appellant had not alleged any basis for restraining prosecution of those charges. Finally, the Court ruled that appellant's suit was not a proper class action under Rule 23 of the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure.(3) The Court did not explicitly rule on the issue of whether appellant lacked standing to challenge the Act.

14. Appellant presents two questions for review in this Court: Whether Act No. 2 is constitutional and whether the complaint otherwise states a cause of action under 42 USC Ss. 1981, 1983 and 1988.

III.

15. We are met at the outset with the State's assertion that appellant lacks standing to attack the constitutionality of Act No. 2. This argument is based in part upon certain allegations in the complaint that Act No. 2 is unconstitutional because it denies to "a person compelled to appear before . . . [the] Commission" the right to effective assistance of counsel, the right of confrontation, and the right to compulsory process for the attendance of witnesses. Since appellant did not allege in his complaint that he was called to appear before the Commission or that he expected to be called, the State asserts that he lacks standing to assert the denial of rights to those who do appear. See, e.g., Tileston v. Ullman, (1943) 318 US 44, 87 L Ed 603, 63 S Ct 493. Further, the State argues that appellant lacks standing because he cannot demonstrate that he has been, or will be, "injured" by the operation of the challenged statute. We cannot agree.

3. Appellant does not assign this ruling as error on this appeal.

16. The present case was decided on the State's motion to dismiss, in which the State challenged appellant's standing to challenge the constitutionality of the Act. As noted above, the Court below made no explicit reference to the issue of standing. But since the question of standing goes to this Court's jurisdiction, see Flast v. Cohen, (1968) 392 US 83, 94-101, 20 L Ed 2d (1968) 947, 958-962, 88 S Ct 1942 we must decide the issue even though the Court below passed over it without comment. Cf. Tileston v. Ullman, supra.

17. For the purposes of a motion to dismiss, the material allegations of the complaint are taken as admitted. See, e.g., Walker Process Equipment, Inc. v. Food Machinery and Chemical Corp., (1965) 382 US 172, 174-175, 15 L Ed 2d 247, 249, 250, 86 S Ct 347. And, the complaint is to be liberally construed in favor of plaintiff. See Fed Rule Civ Proc 8 (f); Conley v. Gibson, (1957) 355 US 41, 2 L Ed 2d 80, 78 S Ct 99. The complaint should not be dismissed unless it appears that appellant could "prove no set of facts in support of his claim which would entitle him to relief". Conley v. Gibson, supra, at 45-46, 2 L Ed 2d at 84. With these rules in mind, we turn to an examination of the allegations of appellant's complaint.

18. It is true, as the State asserts, that appellant alleges deprivations of rights of those who are or will be called to testify before the Commission and that he fails to allege that he was or will be called to testify. If this were the extent of appellant's allegations, we would agree that appellant lacks standing to challenge the Act. However, appellant's allegations are not limited to those mentioned by the State. Appellant alleged that the Commission was an "executive trial agency" whose function was to conduct public trials designed to find appellant and others guilty of violations of criminal laws, allegedly for the purpose of injuring him and destroying the labor union of which he was a member. More specifically, appellant alleged that "said Commission of Inquiry exercises (a) an accusatory function, (b) its duty to find that named individuals are responsible for criminal law violations, (c) it must advertise such findings, and (d) its findings serve as part of the process of criminal prosecution"

Finally, the complaint alleged that the defendants, acting in concert with others and in connection with the administration of the Act, have actually engaged in a course of conduct designed publicly to brand appellant and others as criminals, including, as noted above, the filing of allegedly baseless criminal charges against appellant.

19. Thus, although the complaint is inartfully drawn, it does allege that the Commission and those acting in concert with it have taken and will take in the future certain actions with respect to appellant. The issue is thus whether those allegations are sufficient to give appellant standing to challenge the constitutionality of the Act creating the Commission and the acts taken by the Commission under authority of that Act. We think that they are.

20. The concept of standing to sue, as we noted in Flast v. Cohen, supra, "is surrounded by the same complexities and vagaries that inhere in [the concept of] justiciability" in general. 392 US, at 98, 20 L Ed 2d at 960. Nevertheless, the outlines of the concept can be stated with some certainty. The indispensable requirement is, of course, that the party seeking relief allege "such a personal stake in the outcome of the controversy as to assure that concrete adverseness which sharpens the presentation of issues upon which the Court so largely depends for illumination of difficult constitutional questions" Baker v. Carr, (1962) 369 US 186, 204, 7 L Ed 2d 863, 677, 82 S Ct 691; see Flast v. Cohen, supra; Joint Anti-Fascist Refugee Committee v. McGrath, (1951) 341 US 123, 151, 95 L Ed 817, 842, 71 S Ct 624 (concurring opinion). In this sense, the concept of standing focuses on the party seeking relief, rather than on the precise nature of the relief sought. See, supra, (1968) 392 US 83 at 101-106, 20 L Ed 2d 947 at 961. The decisions of this Court have also made it clear that something more than an "adversary interest" is necessary to confer standing. There must in addition be some connection between the official action challenged and some legally protected interest of the party challenging that action. See supra, (1968) 392 US 83 at 101-106, 20 L Ed 2d 947 at 962-965.

21. In the present case, it is clear that appellant possesses sufficient adversary interest to insure proper presentation of issues facing the Court. His allegations if taken as true, indicate that the Commission and those acting in concert with it have carried out a series of public acts designed to injure him in various ways. Appellant's interest in his own reputation and in his economic well-being guarantee that the present proceeding will be an adversary one.

22. We also think that appellant has alleged that the Act's administration was the direct cause of sufficient injury to his own legally protected interests to accord him standing to challenge the validity of the Act. We are not presented with a case in which any injury to appellant is merely a collateral consequence of the actions of an investigative body. See, supra, (1960) 363 US 420 at 443, 4 L Ed 2d 1307 at 1322; cf. Sinclair v. United States, (1929) 279 US 263, 295, 73 L Ed 692, 698, 49 S Ct 268; McGrain v. Daugherty, (1927) 273 US 135, 170-180, 71 L Ed 580, 595, 47 S Ct 319. Rather, it is alleged that the very purpose of the Commission is to find persons guilty of violating criminal laws without trial or procedural safeguards, and to publicize those findings. Moreover, we think that the personal and economic consequences alleged to flow from such actions are sufficient to meet the requirement that appellant prove a legally redressable injury. Those consequences would certainly be actionable if caused by a private party and thus should be sufficient to accord appellant standing. See Green v. McElroy, (1959) 360 US 474, 493, n 22, 3 L Ed 2d 1377, 1389, 79 S Ct 1400; supra, (1951) 341 US 123 at 140-141, 95 L Ed 817 at 837, (opinion of Burton, J.); id., at 151-160, 95 L Ed at 842-847 (Frankfurter, J., concurring). It is no answer that the Commission has not itself tried to impose any direct sanctions on appellant; it is enough that the Commission's alleged actions will have a substantial impact on him. See, e.g., Columbia Broadcasting System, Inc. v. United States, (1942) 316 US 407, 86 L Ed 1563, 62 S Ct 1104; cf. NAACP v. Alabama, (1958) 357 US 449, 460-483, 2 L Ed 2d 1488, 1498-1500, 78 S Ct 1163. Finally, in the circumstances of the present case, we do not regard appellant's opportunity to defend any criminal prosecutions as sufficient to deprive him of standing to challenge the act. Cf. United States v. Los Angeles and S. L. R. R. (1927) 273 US 299, 71 L Ed 651, 47 S Ct 413. Appellant's allegations go beyond the normal publicity attending criminal prosecution; he alleges a concerted attempt publicly to brand him a criminal without a trial. Further, he alleges that he has been unsuccessful in his attempts to secure prosecution of the charges against him.

23. We hold that appellant's complaint contains sufficient allegations of direct and substantial injury to his own legally protected interests to accord him standing to challenge the constitutionality of Act No. 2.

IV.

24. We thus reach the merits of appellant's contention that Act No. 2 is unconstitutional. Appellant's complaint is long and inartfully drawn; it contains many allegations of wrongdoing on the part of the Commission and other State officials. But the only issue presented by this aspect of the case is whether the Act creating the Commission is constitutional, either on its face or as applied.

Many of appellant's allegations are relevant to this latter contention, but many involve issues that the Court below ruled were properly matters to be raised in defense of any criminal prosecutions which might take place. We will deal with those allegations in the final section of this opinion.

25. The State, like the Court below, relies heavily on this Court's decision in Hannah v. Larche, supra. In Hannah, this Court upheld the Civil Rights Commission against challenges similar to those involved in the present case. Indeed, Act No. 2 was drafted with Hannah in mind and the structure and powers of the Commission are similar to those of the Civil Rights Commission. See Jenkins v. McKeithen, supra, 286 F Supp. at 540; Martone v. Morgan, supra. We cannot agree, however, that Hannah controls the present case, for we think that there are crucial differences between the issues presented by this complaint and the issues in Hannah.

26. The appellants in Hannah were persons subpoenaed to appear before the Civil Rights Commission in connection with complaints about deprivations of voting rights. They objected to the Civil Rights Commission's rules about non-disclosure of the complainants and about limitations on the right to confront and cross-examine witnesses. This Court ruled that the Commission's rules were consistent with the Due Process Clause of the Fifth Amendment. The Court noted that "[d]ue process" is an elusive concept. Its exact boundaries are undefinable, and its content varies according to specific factual contexts. . . . Whether the Constitution requires that a particular right obtain in a specific proceeding depends upon a complexity of factors. The nature of the alleged right involved, the nature of the proceeding, and the possible burden on that proceeding, are all considerations which must be taken into account". (1960) 363 US 420 at 442, 4 L Ed 2d 1307 at 1321.

27. In rejecting appellants' challenge to the Civil Rights Commission's procedures, the Court placed great emphasis on the investigatory function of the Commission:

"[I]ts function is purely investigative and fact-finding. It does not adjudicate. It does not hold trials or determine anyone's civil or criminal liability. It does not issue orders. Nor does it indict, punish, or impose any legal sanctions. It does not make determinations depriving any one of his life, liberty, or property. In short, the Commission does not and cannot take any affirmative action which will affect an individual's legal rights. The only purpose of its existence is to find facts which may subsequently be used as the basis for legislative and executive action". (1960) 363 US 420 at 441, 4 L Ed 2d 1307 at 1320.

The Court noted that any adverse consequences to those being investigated, such as subjecting them to public opprobrium, were purely conjectural, and, in any case, were merely collateral and "not . . . the result of any affirmative determinations made by the Commission . . ." (1960) 363 US 420 at 443, 4 L Ed 2d 1307 at 1322. Morgan v. United States (1938) 304 US 1, 82 L Ed 1129, 58 S Ct 773, (1951) 341 US 123 = 95 L Ed 817, supra, and (1959) 360 US 474 = 3 L Ed 2d 1377, supra, were distinguished on the ground that "those cases . . . involved . . . determinations in the nature of adjudications affecting legal rights". (1960) 363 US 420 at 451, 4 L Ed 2d 1307 at 1326.

28. We reaffirm the decision in Hannah. In our view, however, the Commission in the present case differs in a substantial respect from the Civil Rights Commission and the other examples cited by the Court in Hannah. It is true, as the Supreme Court of Louisiana has held, 251 La 993 = 207 So 2d 770, supra, that the Commission does not adjudicate in the sense that a Court does, nor does the Commission conduct, strictly speaking, a criminal proceeding. Nevertheless, the Act, when analyzed in light of the allegations of the complaint, makes it clear that the Commission exercises a function very much akin to an official adjudication of criminal culpability. See (1951) 341 US 123 = 95 L Ed 817, supra.

29. The Commission is limited to criminal law violations; the Act explicitly provides that the Commission shall have no jurisdiction over civil matters in the labor-management relations field. Indeed the Commission is even limited to certain types of criminal activities. (4) As noted above, nothing in the Act indicates that the Commission's findings are to be used for legislative purposes. Rather, everything in the Act points to the fact that it is concerned only with exposing violations of Criminal laws by specific individuals. In short, the Commission very clearly exercises an accusatory function; it is empowered to be used and allegedly is used to find named individuals guilty of violating the criminal laws of Louisiana and the United States and to brand them as criminals in public.

30. Given this view of the purpose of the Labor-Management Commission of Inquiry, we agree with Justice Frankfurter, concurring in Hannah v. Larche:

"Were the [Civil Rights] Commission exercising an accusatory function, were its duty to find that named individuals were responsible for wrongful deprivation of voting rights and to advertise such finding or to serve as part of the process of Criminal Prosecution, the rigorous protections relevant to criminal prosecutions might well be the controlling starting point for assessing the protection which the Commission's procedure provides". (1960) 363 US 420 at 488, 4 L Ed 2d 1307 at 1353.

31. When viewed from this perspective, it is clear the procedures of the Commission do not meet the minimal requirements made obligatory on the States by the Due Process Clause of the Fourteenth Amendment. Specifically, the Act severely limits the right of a person being investigated to confront and cross-examine the witnesses against him. Only a person appearing as a witness may cross-examine other witnesses. Cross-examination is further limited to those questions which the Commission deems appropriate to its inquiry, and those questions must be submitted, presumably beforehand, in writing to the Commission. We have frequently emphasized that the right to confront and cross-examine witnesses is a fundamental aspect of procedural due process. See, e.g., Willner v. Committee on Character and Fitness, (1963) 373 US 98, 103-104, 10 L Ed 2d 224, 229, 83 S Ct 1175, supra, (1959) 360 U. S. 474 at 495-499, 3 L Ed 2d 1377 at 1390-1392, and cases cited. In the present context, where the Commission allegedly makes an actual finding that a specific individual is guilty of a crime, we think that due process requires the Commission to afford a person being investigated the right to confront and cross-examine the witnesses against him, subject only to traditional limitations on those rights. Cf. Pointer v. Texas, (1965) 380 US 400, 13 L Ed 2d 923, 85 S Ct 1065.

32. The Commission's procedures also drastically limit the right of a person investigated to present evidence on his own behalf. It is true that he may appear and call a "reasonable number of witnesses" in executive session, but should the Commission decide to hold a public hearing, he is limited to presentation of his own testimony and the "pertinent" written statements of others. The right to present oral testimony from other witnesses and the power to compel attendance of those witnesses may be denied in the discretion of the Commission. The right to present evidence is, of course, essential to the fair bearing required by the Due Process Clause. See, e.g., supra, (1938) 304 U. S. 1 at 18, 82 L Ed 1129 at 1132; Baltimore & Ohio R. v. United States, (1936) 298 US 349, 368-369, 80 L Ed 1209, 1223, 1224, 56 S Ct 797. And, as we have noted above this right becomes particularly fundamental when the proceeding allegedly results in a finding that a particular individual was guilty of a crime. Cf. Washington v. Texas, (1967) 388 US 14, 18 L Ed 2d 1019, 87 S Ct 1920. In re Oliver, (1948) 333 US 257, 273, 92 L Ed 682, 694, 68 S Ct 499. We do not mean to say that the Commission may not impose reasonable restrictions on the number of witnesses and on the substance of their testimony; we only hold that a person's right to present his case should not be conferred to the unfettered discretion of the Commission.

33. Appellant argues that the procedures contemplated by the Act are deficient in other respects. In particular, he alleges that the Act provides no meaningful rules of evidence and fails to provide standards of guilt or innocence. He also alleges that the Act deprives him of effective assistance of counsel. We have, however, said enough to demonstrate that appellant has alleged a cause of action for declaratory and injunctive relief. Whether the Due Process Clause requires that the Commission provide all the procedural protections afforded a defendant in a criminal prosecution, or whether something less is sufficient, are questions that we think should be initially answered by the District Court on remand. As we have noted, "[w]hether the Constitution requires that a particular right obtain in a specific proceeding depends upon a complexity of factors," supra, (1960) 363 U. S. 420 at 442, 4 L Ed 2d 1307 at 1321. We think it inappropriate to rule on the extent to which the Commission's procedures may run afoul of the Due Process Clause on the basis of the record before us, barren as it is of any established facts. That issue is best decided in the first instance by the District Court in light of the evidence adduced at trial.

34. We do not mean to say that this same analysis applies to every body which has an accusatory function. The grand jury, for example, need not provide all the procedural guarantees alleged by appellant to be applicable to the Commission. As this Court noted in Hannah, "the grand jury merely investigates and reports. It does not try." (1960) 363 US 420 at 449, 4 L Ed 2d 1307 at 1325. Moreover, "[t]he functions of that institution and its constitutional prerogatives are rooted in long centuries of Anglo-American history." Id., at 489-490, 4 L Ed 2d at 1354 (concurring opinion). Finally the grand jury is designed to interpose an independent body of citizens between the accused and the prosecuting attorney and the court. See Stirone v. United States, (1960) 361 US 212, 218, 4 L Ed 2d 252, 257, 80 S Ct 270; Ex parte Bain, (1887) 121 US 1, 11, 30 L Ed 849, 852, 7 S Ct

781; supra, (1960) 363 US, 420 at 497-499, 4 L Ed 2d 1307 at 1358, 1359 (dissenting opinion). Investigative bodies such as the Commission have no claim to specific constitutional sanction. In addition, the alleged function of the Commission is to make specific findings of guilt, not merely to investigate and recommend. Finally, it is clear from the Act and from the allegations of the complaint that the Commission is in no sense an "independent" body of citizens. Rather, its members serve at the pleasure of the Governor, La Rev Stat Ann S. 23:880.1 (Supp 1969), and it cannot act in the absence of a "referral" from the Governor, La Rev Stat Ann Ss. 23:880.5, 23:880.6 (A) (Supp. 1969).

35. We also wish to emphasize that we do not hold that appellant is now entitled to declaratory or injunctive relief. We only hold that he has alleged a cause of action which may make such relief appropriate. It still remains for him to prove at trial that the Commission is designed to and does indeed act in the manner alleged in his complaint, and that its procedures fail to meet the requirements of due process.

V.

36. As noted above, appellant also alleged in his complaint that defendants, and those acting in concert with them, have engaged in a course of conduct, both pursuant to the Act and otherwise, that has resulted in the filing of false criminal charges against appellant. He alleges numerous other related actions allegedly depriving him of his rights secured by the Constitution. The complaint seeks declaratory and injunctive relief with regard to these acts; in particular, appellant prayed that the District Court enjoin all civil and criminal actions pending or to be instituted against him. To the extent that these allegations involve actions taken under the direct authority of Act No. 2, we think that they may properly be considered by the District Court in determining the constitutionality of the Act. However, the District Court characterized many of appellant's allegations as involving merely potential defenses to the criminal charges assertedly pending. In the exercise of its discretion and because the issues were "intertwined" with the issue of the constitutionality of the Act, the court passed upon the question of whether appellant had alleged a cause of action for declaratory and injunctive relief. Relying in part on its determination that the Act was constitutional, the court held that appellant had not stated a claim for declaratory or injunctive relief and that appellant's remedy was to defend any criminal prosecutions then pending or that might be brought, supra (1968) 286 F Supp, 537 at 542-543.

Whether the court will take the same view of the propriety of passing on the question or of the merits in light of our holding and the evidence adduced at trial cannot be determined at this time. Accordingly, we think that issue should be left open for reconsideration on remand.

37. The judgment of the court below is reversed and the cause is remanded for further proceedings.

38. It is so ordered.

39. Mr. Justice DOUGLAS concurs in the result for the reasons stated in his dissenting opinion in (1960) 363 US 420, 493-508, 4 L Ed 2d 1307, 1356-1364, 80 S Ct 1502.

Mr. Justice BLACK, concurring.

40. I concur in the Court's judgment and in much of what is said in the prevailing opinion. I cannot agree, however, to reaffirming (1960) 363 US 420, 4 L Ed 2d 1307, 80 S Ct 1502. I joined the dissent of Mr. Justice Douglas in the Hannah case and still adhere to that dissent. The Louisiana law here, like the federal law considered in the Hannah case, is, in my judgment, nothing more nor less than a scheme for a nonjudicial tribunal to charge, try, convict, and punish people without Courts, without juries, without lawyers, without witnesses—in short, without any of the procedural protections that the Bill of Rights provides. The Louisiana law is reminiscent of the old Parliamentary and Ecclesiastical Commission trials which took away the liberty of John Lilburn and his contemporaries without due process of law—that is, without giving them the benefit of a trial in accordance with the law of the land. For these reasons I believe that the Louisiana law denies due process of law.

Mr. Justice HARLAN, whom Mr. Justice STEWART and Mr. Justice WHITE join, dissenting.

41. Swept up in a constitutional revolution of its own making, the Court has a tendency to lose sight of the principles that have traditionally defined and limited its role in our political system. Constitutional adjudication is a responsibility we cannot shirk. But it is a grave and extraordinary process, one of last resort. And when it cannot legitimately be avoided, it is a function that must be performed with the utmost circumspection and precision, lest the Court's opinions emanate radiations which unintentionally, and spuriously, indicate views on matters we have not fully considered.

42. Over the years, the Court has evolved a number of principles designed to assure that we act within our proper confines. Perhaps the most fundamental of these is that we adjudicate only when, and to the extent that, we are presented with an actual and concrete controversy. Today, in its haste to make new constitutional doctrine, the Court turns this principle on its head, as it attempts to create a controversy out of a complaint which alleges none. With respect, I must dissent.

I

43. Only last Term, in (1968) 392 US 83, 20 L Ed 2d 947, 88 S Ct 1942 the Court reaffirmed the proposition that "when standing [to sue] is placed in issue in a case, the question is whether the person whose standing is challenged is a proper party to request an adjudication of a particular issue. . . ." Id., at 99-100, 20 L Ed 2d at 961, that is, "whether there is a logical nexus between the status asserted and the claim sought to be adjudicated." Id., at 102, 20 L Ed 2d at 963. In the present context, this means, simply, that for a plaintiff to challenge a particular course of conduct pursued or threatened to be pursued by a defendant, it is not enough for the plaintiff to allege that he has or will be injured by the defendant; the plaintiff must further claim that the injury to him (or to those whom he has status to represent) (1) results from the particular course of conduct he challenges.

44. Appellant in the case at bar attacks the constitutional validity of certain specific statutory procedures of the Louisiana Labor-Management Commission of Inquiry. Applying the principle stated above, it is not sufficient that he may be injured by the Commission or its members in some way. The injury must be alleged to arise out of, or relate to, the application of the procedures in question. The most generous reading of appellant's complaint cannot mask the simple truth that it falls short of this minimal requirement.

45. At the risk of wearying the reader I must deal with appellant's pleadings in some detail. The relevant portion of the complaint, and that relied upon by the Court, is part IV ("Facts"), which contains 17 operative paragraphs.

46. Paragraphs 1-3 identify the plaintiff and defendants.

47. Paragraphs 4-6 characterize the appellee Commission as an "executive trial agency," and outline its investigative functions. Paragraph 7 avers that the Commission's procedures for performing these functions are constitutionally defective with respect to matters of counsel, confrontation, compulsory process, rules of evidence, standards of guilt, right of appeal, and self-incrimination. Nowhere,

1. As the prevailing opinion notes, ante, at —, 23 L Ed 2d at 415, 416 and n 3, appellant does not assign as error the District Court's holding that this was not a proper class action.

either directly or indirectly, do these paragraphs intimate that appellant (or for that matter, anyone else) has been affected by the procedures themselves and their asserted effects.

48. Paragraph 8 should be quoted in full:

"Furthermore complainant alleges that said defendants, their agents, representatives and employees, and those acting in concert with them, in connection with the administration of the provisions of said Act, have singled out complainant and members of Teamsters Local No. 5 as a special class of persons for repressive and willfully punitive action, solely because they are members of said Teamsters Local No. 5, in furtherance of which a deliberate effort has been made and continues to be made by said officials, spearheaded by defendant McKelthen, while acting under color of state law, to destroy the current power structure of the labor union aforesaid and said union to which complainant belongs as a member and through which he experiences economic survival, and to install a new power structure oriented and sub-servient to the James R. Hoffa group or clique of the International Brotherhood of Teamsters, Chauffeurs, Warehousemen and Helpers of America; this effort has included and continues to include (a) the deliberate circulation for public consumption of willful falsehoods about members of said labor union, such as characterizing said members as 'hoodlums' and 'gangsters,' comparable in depravity to the sinister Mafia gangsters of underworld criminals, while masking such lawless conduct behind a verbal facade of law and order, (b) the indiscriminate filing of criminal charges against members of said labor union, where there exists no justifiable basis therefor and the concomitant exaction of excessive bail bonds, (c) the intimidating of public officials into carrying out the tyrannical aims of such indiscriminate criminal prosecution, and (d) the dictatorial use of the powers of the office of Governor of Louisiana in furtherance thereof."

49. In paragraph 9, appellant avers, "as more specifically applies to him," that appellees conspired to file false criminal charges against him. Paragraphs 10-14 describe in detail the chronology and conduct of the resulting criminal proceedings.

50. Paragraph 15 alleges that appellees intimidated certain persons (not including appellant) in order to elicit false statements to bring about the prosecution of other persons (not including appellant).

51. Finally, paragraph 16 contains the usual averments requisite to equitable and declaratory relief, and paragraph 17 requests a temporary restraining order.

52. Reading and re-reading these many paragraphs of legal and factual averments one cannot help but be struck by the conspicuous absence of any claim that appellant has been or will be investigated by the Commission, or called as a witness before it, or identified in its findings, or, indeed, subjected to any of its processes(2). Can this lacuna be filled by implication? I believe not.

53. Only paragraphs 9-14 relate specifically to appellant, and they contain no hint that the filing of the criminal informations against him was the result of the Commission's use of any of the procedures which the Court today indicates are constitutionally suspect. And assuming, contrary to fact, see n. 1, supra, that appellant represents others besides himself in this action, the only other arguably germane paragraph is Para 8 (a), which alleges the "deliberate circulation for public consumption of willful falsehoods about members of said labor union." This paragraph conspicuously omits any suggestion that such "falsehoods" were the result of testimony before the Commission or that they were contained in the Commission's "findings" — a term that is repeatedly emphasized in the earlier description of the Commission's functions.

54. The complaint's utter failure to allege any connection between the injuries asserted to have been suffered by appellant and the procedures complained of is not, on any objective reading of the complaint, an accidental omission or the result of counsel's "inartfulness" — as my Brother Marshall would put it. In my view, the only plausible inference — especially when it is remembered that appellant was represented by counsel throughout this litigation — is that such allegations were omitted because appellant had no facts to support them.(3)

55. The prevailing opinion's strained construction of the complaint goes well beyond the principle, with which I have no quarrel, that federal pleadings should be most liberally construed. It entirely undermines an important function of the federal system of procedure — that of disposing of unmeritorious and unjustifiable claims at the outset, before the parties and courts must undergo the expense and time consumed by evidentiary hearings.

56. Accordingly, I would sustain the dismissal of the complaint on the ground that appellant has not shown himself to have standing to challenge the Commission's procedures.

II.

57. Because the complaint is barren of any indication of the manner in which appellant is affected by the Commission's formal procedures, the prevailing opinion is required to make its own assumptions. It places appellant in the vague position of "a person being investigated" by the Commission, ante, at —, 23 L Ed 2d at 420, 421 = (ante, AIR 1970 USSC 44) and thence proceeds to discuss the rights of such a person to confront witnesses and to offer evidence in his own behalf. The prevailing opinion appears understandably reluctant to commit itself to very much. As I read the opinion, it does not state that any of the Commission's procedures are actually unconstitutional, but holds only that there is enough latent in the complaint that the case should proceed to trial.

58. Of necessity, however, my Brother Marshall has to examine some of the constitutional issues sought to be raised by appellant in order to justify a remand, and his discussion leaves radiations which are, at least, unclear. Reluctant as I am, under the circumstances of this case, to discuss the merits, I therefore feel compelled to outline my own views. I am not certain to what extent they comport with those of the majority.

59. The prevailing opinion fails to articulate what I deem to be a constitutionally significant distinction between two kinds of governmental bodies. The first is an agency whose sole or predominant function, without serving any other public interest, is to expose and publicize the names of persons it finds guilty of wrongdoing. To the extent that such a determination — whether called a "finding" or an "adjudication" — finally and directly affects the substantial personal interests, I do not doubt that the Due Process Clause may require that it be accompanied by many of the traditional adjudicatory procedural safeguards. (1951) 341 US 123, 95 L Ed 817, 71 S Ct 624.

60. By the terms of the Louisiana legislation, the appellee Commission is not of this sort. Its authority is "investigatory and fact finding only." La Rev Stat Ann S. 23:880.6 (A). Its stated purpose is "to supplement and assist the efforts and activities of the several district attorneys, grand juries and other law enforcement officials and agencies of the State of Louisiana." Preamble to Act No. 2. Its duty, when it finds probable cause to believe that the criminal laws

2. And, of course, there is no suggestion that appellant ever requested that the Commission accord him any of the rights of whose absence he complains.

3. This inference is supported by the Report of the Labor-Management Commission of Inquiry, filed in this Court, which, other than mentioning the litigation challenging the Commission, nowhere refers to this appellant.

have been violated, is to "report its findings and recommendations to the proper federal and state authorities. . . charged with the responsibility for prosecuting criminal offences," or to file charges itself. La Rev Stat Ann S. 23:880.7 (B). The Commission has no authority to adjudicate a person's guilt or innocence, and its recommendations and findings have no legal consequences whatsoever. Id., S. 23:880.7 (A).

61. The Commission thus bears close resemblance to certain federal administrative agencies, infra, at —, (Infra AIR 1970 USSC 44) = 23 L Ed 2d at 427, and to the offices of prosecuting attorneys. These agencies have one salient feature in common, which distinguishes them from those designed simply to "expose." None of them is the final arbiter of anyone's guilt or innocence. Each, rather, plays only a preliminary role, designed, in the usual course of events, to initiate a subsequent formal proceeding in which the accused will enjoy the full panoply of procedural safeguards. For this reason, and because such agencies could not otherwise practically pursue their investigative functions, they have not been required to follow "adjudicatory" procedures.

62. I see no constitutionally relevant distinction between this State Commission and the federal administrative agencies that perform investigative functions designed to discover violations which may result in the initiation of criminal proceedings. In (1960) 363 US 420, 445-448, 454-485, 4 L Ed 2d 1307, 1323, 1324, 1328-1351, 80 S Ct 1502 the Court expressly condoned the denial of "rights such as appraisal, confrontation and cross-examination" in such "nonadjudicative, fact-finding investigations." Id., at 446, 4 L Ed 2d at 1323. The Court recognized, for example, that the Federal Trade Commission "could not conduct an efficient investigation if persons being investigated were permitted to convert the investigation into a trial. We have found no authorities suggesting that the rules governing Federal Trade Commission investigations violate the Constitution, and this is understandable since any person investigated by the Federal Trade Commission will be accorded all the traditional judicial safeguards at a subsequent adjudicative proceeding. . . ." Id., at 446, 4 L Ed 2d at 1324.

And the Court said of the Securities and Exchange Commission:

"Although the Commission's Rules provide that parties to adjudicative proceedings shall be given detailed notice of the matters to be determined, . . . and a right to cross-examine witnesses appearing at the hearing, . . . those provisions of the Rules are made specifically inapplicable to investigations, . . . even though the Commission is required to initiate civil or criminal proceedings if an investigation discloses violations of law.' Undoubtedly, the reason for this distinction is to prevent the sterilization of investigations by burdening them with trial-like procedures." Id., at 446 — 448, 4 L Ed 2d at 1324. (Emphasis (here in ' ') added.)

63. The statutory safeguards afforded persons being investigated by the Louisiana Commission are at least equal to those provided by most of these federal agencies. See id., (1960) 363 US 420 at 454-485, 4 L Ed 2d 1307 at 1328-1351.

64. The Commission's functions also find close analogies in the investigations and determinations that take place daily in the offices of state and federal prosecuting attorneys. In both instances, the responsible officials proceed by interrogating persons with knowledge of possible violations of the criminal law. If the prosecutor believes that an individual has committed a crime, he files an information or seeks a grand jury indictment. When the Commission reaches a similar conclusion, it turns its intelligence over to a prosecutor so that he may initiate the formal criminal process.

65. For obvious reasons, it has not been seriously suggested that a "person under investigation" by a district attorney has any of the "adjudicative" constitutional rights at the investigative stage.(4) These rights attach only after formal proceedings have been initiated. Nor, of course, does one under investigation have a constitutional right that the investigations be conducted in secrecy, or that the official keep his plans to prosecute confidential. The decision whether or not to disclose these matters rests in the sound discretion of the responsible public official. Various factors, such as the fear that a suspect will flee or the concern for obtaining an unbiased jury when the matter comes to trial, may militate in favor of secrecy. On the other hand, an appropriate disclosure of a pending investigation may bring forth witnesses and evidence, and serves a proper ancillary function in keeping the public informed.(5)

4. Of course, a person called upon to participate in the investigation, e.g., by answering questions, may have relevant rights at this stage. Cf., e.g., Mancusi v. De Forte, 392 US 364, 20 L Ed 2d 1154, 88 S Ct 2120 (1968). But appellant does not intimate, and the majority does not assume, that he has been or will be subpoenaed to testify or produce documents.

5. It is ironic that appellant should complain of the open nature of the Commission's proceedings. The statutory requirement that the Commission "shall base its findings and reports only upon

66. The Commission does differ from the operations of a prosecuting attorney in one important respect, however. The very formality of the Commission's investigatory process may lend greater credibility and a greater aura of official sanction to the testimony given before it and to its findings. Although in this respect the Commission is not different from the federal agencies discussed above, I am not ready to say that the collateral consequences of government-sanctioned opprobrium may not under some circumstances entitle a person to some right, consistent with the Commission's efficient performance of its investigatory duties, to have his public say in rebuttal. However, the Commission's procedures are far from being niggardly in this respect. They include not only the right to make a personal appearance, but the right to submit the statements of others, and under some circumstances, to present questions to adverse witnesses. This is far more than is given persons under investigation by the federal agencies, and certainly serves adequately to neutralize and adverse collateral effects of the Commission's investigative proceedings.

67. As I noted above, the very insubstantiality of appellant's complaint leaves it unclear what the Court holds today. It may be that some of my Brethren understand the complaint to allege that in fact the Commission acts primarily as an agency of "exposure", rather than serving the ends required by the state statutes. If so — although I do not believe that the complaint can be reasonably thus construed—the area of disagreement between us may be small or non-existent.

68. Before the Court holds that a purely investigatory agency must adopt the full roster of adjudicative safeguards, however, it would do well to heed carefully its own warning in Hannah, that such a requirement "would make a shambles of the investigation and stifle the agency in its gathering of facts". (1960) 363 US 420 at 444, 4 L Ed. 2d 1307 at 1322. Such a requirement would not only incapacitate state criminal investigatory bodies at a time when their need cannot be gainsaid, but would cast a evidence and testimony given at public hearings," La Rev Stat S. 23:880.12 (A), is plainly designed to protect witnesses and persons under investigation from what some members of the Court have criticized as secret inquisitions or Star Chamber proceedings. See In re Groban, 352 US 330, 337, 1 L Ed 2d 376, 383, 77 S Ct 510 (1957) (Mr. Justice Black, dissenting); Anonymous No. 6 v. Baker, 360 US 287, 298, 3 L Ed 2d 1234, 1241, 79 S Ct 1157 (1959) (Mr. Justice Black, dissenting).

broad shadow of doubt over the propriety of long-standing procedures employed by many federal agencies—procedures which less than a decade ago the Court believed to be proper and necessary.

AIR 1970 U. S. S. C. 45
(V 57 C 7)

(1969-23 L Ed 2d 430)*

BLACK, HARLAN, DOUGLAS,
BRANDEIS AND HOLMES, JJ.

Clarence Brandenburg, Appellant v.
State of Ohio, Respondent.

(No. 492) Decided on 9-6-1969.

† Constitution of India, Article 19 (1) (a) — Case from America — State is not permitted to forbid or proscribe advocacy of use of force or of law violation except where such advocacy is directed to incite or produce imminent lawless action and is likely to incite or produce such action — Whitney v. California, (1927) 274 US 357 = 71 L Ed 1095 = 47 S Ct 641, Overruled — (Constitution of America, First Amendment and Fourteenth Amendment).

Constitutional guarantees of free speech and free press under the First and the Fourteenth Amendments do not permit a State to forbid or proscribe advocacy of the use of force or of law violation except where such advocacy is directed to inciting or producing imminent lawless action and is likely to incite or produce such action. The mere abstract teaching of the moral propriety or even moral necessity for a resort to force and violence, is not the same as preparing a group for violent action and steeling it to such action. A statute which fails to draw this distinction impermissibly intrudes upon the freedoms guaranteed by the First and Fourteenth Amendments. It sweeps within its condemnation speech which the American Constitution has immunized from Governmental control. (Para 6)

Where a State Criminal Syndicalism Act punishes persons who "advocate or teach the duty, necessity, or propriety" of violence "as a means of accomplishing industrial or political reform"; or who publish or circulate or display any book or paper containing such advocacy; or who "justify" the commission of violent acts "with intent to exemplify, spread or advocate the propriety of the doctrines

* Reproduced from 1969-23 L Ed 2d 430 with kind permission of the publishers.

† Reference is given to a parallel Indian Provision for the convenience of Indian Lawyers.

LM/AN/F18/69/RGD/M

of criminal syndicalism"; or who "..... voluntarily assemble" with a group formed "to teach or advocate the doctrines of criminal syndicalism", the Act cannot be sustained. The statute by its own words purports to punish mere advocacy and to forbid on pain of criminal punishment assembly with others merely to advocate the described type of action such a statute falls within the condemnation of the First and the Fourteenth Amendments. Whitney v. California, (1927) 274 US 357 = 71 L Ed 1095 = 47 S Ct 641, Overruled.

(Para 7)

Cases Referred: Chronological Paras

- (1968) 393 US 948 = 21 L Ed 2d 360 = 89 S Ct 377
 (1967) 391 US 367 = 20 L Ed 2d 672 = 89 S Ct 63, United States v. O'Brien
 (1967) 391 US 308 = 20 L Ed 2d 603 = 88 S Ct 1601, Food Employees v. Logan Plaza
 (1967) 389 US 258 = 19 L Ed 2d 508 = 88 S Ct 419, United States v. Robel
 (1967) 385 US 589 = 17 L Ed 2d 629 = 87 S Ct 675, Keyishian v. Board of Regents (1966) 385 US 116 = 17 L Ed 2d 235 = 87 S Ct 330, Bond v. Floyd (1966) 384 US 11 = 16 L Ed 2d 321 = 86 S Ct 1238, Elfbrandt v. Russell
 (1964) 379 US 559 = 13 L Ed 2d 487 = 85 S Ct 478, Cox v. Louisiana
 (1964) 378 US 500 = 12 L Ed 2d 992 = 84 S Ct 1659, Aptheker v. Secy. of State
 (1964) 377 US 260 = 12 L Ed 2d 377 = 84 S Ct 1316, Baggett v. Bullitt
 (1963) 377 US 58 = 12 L Ed 2d 129 = 84 S Ct 1063, Labour Board v. Fruit Packers
 (1961) 367 US 290 = 6 L Ed 2d 836 = 81 S Ct 1517, Noto v. United States
 (1961) 367 US 203 = 6 L Ed 2d 782 = 81 S Ct 1469, Scales v. United States
 (1958) 360 US 109 = 3 L Ed 2d 1115 = 79 S Ct 1081, Barenblatt v. United States
 (1957) 357 US 513 = 2 L Ed 2d 1460 = 78 S Ct 1332, Speiser v. Randall
 (1957) 354 US 208 = 1 L Ed 2d 1356 = 77 S Ct 1064, Cf. Yates v. United States
 (1951) 341 US 494 = 95 L Ed 1137 = 71 S Ct 857, Dennis v. United States
 (1949) 339 US 460 = 94 L Ed 985 = 70 S Ct 718, Hughes v. Superior Court

- (1948) 336 US 490 = 93 L Ed 834 = 69 S Ct 684, Giboney v. Empire Storage Co.
 (1943) 322 US 680 = 88 L Ed 1534 = 64 S Ct 1233, Hartzel v. United States
 (1941) 315 US 769 = 86 L Ed 1178 = 62 S Ct 816, Bakery Drivers Local v. Wohl
 (1941) 314 US 252 = 86 L Ed 192 = 62 S Ct 190, Bridges v. California
 (1937) 301 US 242 = 81 L Ed 1066 = 57 S Ct 732, Herndon v. Lowry
 (1937) 299 US 353 = 81 L Ed 278 = 57 S Ct 255, De Jonge v. Oregon
 (1931) 283 US 359 = 75 L Ed 1117 = 51 S Ct 532, Stromberg v. California
 (1927) 274 US 380 = 71 L Ed 1108 = 47 S Ct 655, Cf. Fiske v. Kansas
 (1927) 274 US 357 = 71 L Ed 1095 = 47 S Ct 641, Whitney v. California
 (1919) 252 US 239 = 64 L Ed 542 = 40 S Ct 205, Pierce v. United States
 (1919) 251 US 466 = 64 L Ed 360 = 40 S Ct 259, Schaeffer v. United States
 (1918) 250 US 618 = 83 L Ed 1173 = 40 S Ct 17, Abrams v. United States
 (1918) 249 US 204 = 63 L Ed 561 = 39 S Ct 249, Frohwerk v. United States
 (1918) 249 US 211 = 83 L Ed 568 = 39 S Ct 252, Debs v. United States
 (1918) 249 US 47 = 83 L Ed 470 = 39 S Ct 247, Schenk v. United States
 263 NY 652, Gitlow v. N. York
 Allen Brown, for Appellant; Leonard Kirschner, for Appellee (Respondent).

SUMMARY

The defendant, a leader of a Ku Klux Klan group, spoke at a Klan rally at which a large wooden cross was burned and some of the other persons present were carrying firearms. His remarks included such statements as: "Bury the niggers", "the niggers should be returned to Africa", and "send the Jews back to Israel". In an Ohio State Court, he was convicted, under Ohio's criminal syndicalism statute, both for advocating the duty, necessity, or propriety of crime, sabotage, violence, or unlawful methods of terrorism as a means of accomplishing industrial or political reform, and for voluntarily assembling with any society, group, or assemblage of persons formed to teach or advocate the doctrines of criminal syndicalism. Although he challenged the constitutionality of the criminal syndicalism statute under the First and Fourteenth Amendments to the Federal Constitution, the intermediate appellate Court of Ohio affirmed his conviction without opinion, and the Supreme Court of Ohio dismissed his appeal on the ground that no substantial constitutional question was presented.

On appeal, the United States Supreme Court reversed. In a per curiam opinion, expressing the unanimous views of the Court and overruling Whitney v. California, (1927) 274 US 357, 71 L Ed 1095, 47 S Ct 641, it was held that the constitutional guaranties of free speech and free press did not permit a State to forbid or proscribe advocacy of the use of force or of law violation, except where such advocacy was directed to inciting or producing imminent lawless action and was likely to incite or produce such action, and that since the Ohio criminal syndicalism statute, by its own words and as applied, purported to punish mere advocacy and to forbid, on pain of criminal punishment, assembly with others merely to advocate the described type of action, the statute violated the First and Fourteenth Amendments.

BLACK AND DOUGLAS, JJ.: each concurring separately, joined the Court's opinion, but expressed disagreement with the "clear and present danger" test which had been applied in an earlier decision cited by the Court.

OPINION OF THE COURT

Per Curiam.

The appellant, a leader of a Ku Klux Klan group, was convicted under the Ohio Criminal Syndicalism statute of "advocat[ing] . . . the duty, necessity, or propriety of crime, sabotage, violence, or unlawful methods of terrorism as a means of accomplishing industrial or political reform" and of "voluntarily assembl[ing] with any society, group or assemblage of persons formed to teach or advocate the doctrines of criminal syndicalism". Ohio Rev Code S. 2923.13. He was fined $1,000 and sentenced to one to 10 years' imprisonment. The appellant challenged the constitutionality of the criminal syndicalism statute under the First and Fourteenth Amendments to the United States Constitution, but the intermediate appellate Court of Ohio affirmed his conviction without opinion. The Supreme Court of Ohio dismissed his appeal, sua sponte, "for the reason that no substantial constitutional question exists herein". It did not file an opinion or explain its conclusions. Appeal was taken to this Court, and we noted probable jurisdiction. (1968) 393 US 948, 21 L Ed 2d 360, 89 S Ct 377. We reverse.

2. The record shows that a man, identified at trial as the appellant, telephoned an announcer-reporter on the staff of a Cincinnati television station and invited him to come to a Ku Klux Klan "rally" to be held at a farm in Hamilton County. With the co-operation of the organizers, the reporter and a cameraman attended the meeting and filmed the events. Portions of the films were later broadcast on the local station and on a national network.

3. The prosecution's case rested on the films and on testimony identifying the appellant as the person who communicated with the reporter and who spoke at the rally. The State also introduced into evidence several articles appearing in the film, including a pistol, a rifle, a shotgun, ammunition, a Bible, and a red hood worn by the speaker in the films.

4. One film showed 12 hooded figures, some of whom carried firearms. They were gathered around a large wooden cross, which they burned. No one was present other than the participants and the newsmen who made the film. Most of the words uttered during the scene were incomprehensible when the film was projected, but scattered phrases could be understood that were derogatory of Negroes and, in one instance, of Jews.⁽¹⁾ Another scene on the same film showed the appellant, in Klan regalia, making a speech. The speech, in full, was as follows:

"This is an organizers' meeting. We have had quite a few members here today which are—we have hundreds, hundreds of members throughout the State of Ohio. I can quote from a newspaper clipping from the Columbus Ohio Dispatch, five weeks ago Sunday morning. The Klan has more members in the State of Ohio than does any other organization. We're not a revengent organization, but if our President, our

1. The significant phrases that could be understood were:

"How far is the nigger going to — yeah"

"This is what we are going to do to the niggers"

"A dirty nigger"

"Send the Jews back to Israel"

"Let give them back to the dark garden"

"Save America"

"Let's go back to constitutional betterment"

"Bury the niggers"

"We intend to do our part"

"Give us our state rights"

"Freedom for the whites"

"Nigger will have to fight for every inch he gets from now on".

Congress, our Supreme Court, continues to suppress the white, Caucasian race, it's possible that there might have to be some revenge taken.

"We are marching on Congress July the Fourth, four hundred thousand strong. From there we are dividing into two groups, one group to march on St. Augustine, Florida, the other group to march into Mississippi. Thank you".

5. The second film showed six hooded figures one of whom, later identified as the appellant, repeated a speech very similar to that recorded on the first film. The reference to the possibility of "revenge" was omitted, and one sentence was added: "Personally, I believe the nigger should be returned to Africa, the Jew returned to Israel". Though some of the figures in the film carried weapons, the speaker did not.

6. The Ohio Criminal Syndicalism Statute was enacted in 1919. From 1917 to 1920, identical or quite similar laws were adopted by 20 States and two territories. E. Dowell, A History of Criminal Syndicalism Legislation in the United States 21 (1939). In 1927, this Court sustained the constitutionality of California's Criminal Syndicalism Act, Cal Penal Code §§. 11400-11402, the text of which is quite similar to that of the laws of Ohio. Whitney v. California, (1927) 274 US 357, 71 L Ed 1095, 47 S Ct 641. The Court upheld the statute on the ground that, without more, "advocating" violent means to effect political and economic change involves such danger to the security of the State that the State may outlaw it. Cf. Fiske v. Kansas, (1927) 274 US 380, 71 L Ed 1108, 47 S Ct 655. But Whitney has been thoroughly discredited by later decisions. See Dennis v. United States, (1951) 341 US 494, at 507, 95 L Ed 1137, at 1151, 71 S Ct 857. These later decisions have fashioned the principle that the constitutional guarantees of free speech and free press do not permit a State to forbid or proscribe advocacy of the use of force or of law violation except where such advocacy is directed to inciting or producing imminent lawless action and is likely to incite or produce such action. (2) As

2. It was on the theory that the Smith Act, 54 Stat 670, 18 USC § 2385, embodied such a principle and that it had been applied only in conformity with it that this Court sustained the Act's constitutionality. Dennis v. United States, 341 US 494, 95 L Ed 1137, 71 S Ct 857 (1951). That this was the basis for Dennis was emphasized in Yates v. United States, 354 US 298, 320-324, 1 L Ed 2d 1356, 1375-1378, 77 S Ct 1064 (1957), in which the Court overturned convictions for advocacy of the forcible we said in Noto v. United States, (1961) 367 US 290, 297-298, 6 L Ed 2d 836, 841, 81 S Ct 1517, "the mere abstract teaching . . . of the moral propriety or even moral necessity for a resort to force and violence, is not the same as preparing a group for violent action and steeling it to such action". See also Herndon v. Lowry, (1937) 301 US 242, 259-261, 81 L Ed 1066, 1075, 1076, 51 S Ct 732; Bond v. Floyd, (1966) 385 US 116, 134, 17 L Ed 2d 235, 246, 87 S Ct 339. A statute which fails to draw this distinction impermissibly intrudes upon the freedoms guaranteed by the First and Fourteenth Amendments. It sweeps within its condemnation speech which our Constitution has immunized from Governmental control. Cf. Yates v. United States, (1957) 354 US 298, 1 L Ed 2d 1356, 77 S Ct 1064; De Jonge v. Oregon, (1937) 299 US 353, 81 L Ed 278, 57 S Ct 255; Stromberg v. California, (1931) 283 US 359, 75 L Ed 1117, 51 S Ct 532. See also United States v. Robel, (1967) 389 US 258, 19 L Ed 2d 508, 88 S Ct 419; Keyishian v. Board of Regents, (1967) 385 US 589, 17 L Ed 2d 629, 87 S Ct 675; Elmbrandt v. Russell, (1966) 384 US 11, 16 L Ed 2d 321, 86 S Ct 1238; Aptheker v. Secretary of State (1964) 378 US 500, 12 L Ed 2d 992, 84 S Ct 1659; Bargrett v. Bullitt, (1964) 377 US 360, 12 L Ed 2d 377, 84 S Ct 1316.

7. Measured by this test, Ohio's Criminal Syndicalism Act cannot be sustained. The Act punishes persons who "advocate or teach the duty, necessity, or propriety" of violence "as a means of accomplishing industrial or political reform"; or who publish or circulate or display any book or paper containing such advocacy; or who "justify" the commission of violent acts "with intent to exemplify, spread or advocate the propriety of the doctrines of criminal syndicalism"; or who ". . . voluntarily assemble with a group formed 'to teach or advocate the doctrines of criminal syndicalism'". Neither the indictment nor the trial judge's instructions to the jury in any way refined the statute's bald definition of the crime in terms of mere advocacy not distinguished from incitement to imminent lawless action. (3) overthrow of the Government under the Smith Act, because the trial Judge's instructions had allowed conviction for mere advocacy, unrelated to its tendency to produce forcible action.

2. The first count of the indictment charged that appellant "did unlawfully by word of mouth advocate the necessity, or propriety of crime, violence, or unlawful methods of terrorism as a means of accomplishing political reform" The second count charged that appellant "did unlawfully voluntarily assemble equate safeguard, even though it be by prescribing merely the conditions and guidelines in conformity with which the power to terminate has to be exercised.

38. We have come a long way from the age when the tenure of a Government servant rested entirely at the pleasure of the sovereign. The doctrine of absolute power in the sovereign which then held away (sway?) has now lost its validity. Increasingly, down the years, expression has been given to the need to assure the Government servant in his security of service. In AIR 1964 SC 1585 the Supreme Court observed:—

"It is hardly necessary to emphasise that for the efficient administration of the State it is absolutely essential that permanent public servant should enjoy a sense of security of tenure."

39. I have pointed out earlier that it is possible, upon the language of paragraph (1) of the proviso, to terminate the service of a Government servant under the clause at any point of time after the age of 55 years. That power hovers over him constantly, and inasmuch as it is not confined to grounds which appear from the Rule nor does its exercise require the disclosure of any reasons, its impact in undermining the sense of security and certainty of tenure, to which the Supreme Court has adverted, assumes vital significance.

40. I shall now turn to the cases cited before us.

41. In AIR 1954 SC 369 the question before the Supreme Court was whether the compulsory retirement of a Government servant amounted to his removal or dismissal so as to entitle him to the protection of Art. 311 (2) of the Constitution. The provision under consideration was Note 1 to Art. 465-A of the Civil Service Regulations. The Supreme Court did not consider the question whether the provision was contrary to Arts. 14 and 16 of the Constitution. Besides, the Note specifically provided that the right of the Government to retire an officer prematurely could not be exercised except when it was in the public interest to dispense with the further services of the officer.

42. The next case is AIR 1957 SC 892. There, the provision under consideration was R. 165-A of the Bombay Civil Services Rules, as adopted by the State of Saurashtra, which after reciting that the Government retained an absolute right to retire any Government servant after he had completed 25 years qualifying service or 50 years of age declared that the right would not be exercised except when "it is in the public interest to dispense with the further services of a Government servant such as on account of inefficiency or dishonesty." The question before the Supreme Court was whether action under the rule amounted to casting a stigma upon the Government servant and Art. 311 (2) was attracted. No question as to the validity of the Rule in relation to Arts. 14 and 16 was raised.

43. Reliance has been placed before us upon the following observations of the Supreme Court:—

"When the Government decides to retire a servant before the age of superannuation it does so for some good reason, and that, in general, would be misconduct or inefficiency."

The observation takes meaning according to the context in which it was made. The argument for the petitioner in that case was that R. 165-A of the Bombay Civil Services Rules specifically stated that a Govt. servant may be removed from service or required to retire from it on account of inefficiency or dishonesty. That, urged the petitioner, would bring the case within Art. 311 (2). It was contended that the decision of the Supreme Court in Shyam Lal, AIR 1954 SC 369 (supra) holding that an order retiring a Government servant under Note 1 of Art. 465-A of the Civil Service Regulations would not attract Art. 311 (2), was distinguishable. Repelling the contention, the Supreme Court pointed out that although, unlike Note 1 of Art. 465-A, R. 165-A expressly stated that the power to retire a Government servant would not be exercised except on grounds of inefficiency or dishonesty, an order under R. 165-A could not be held to be one of dismissal or removal as it did not entail forfeiture of the proportionate pension due for past services. The Supreme Court proceeded to say:—

"Indeed, in Shyam Lal's case, AIR 1954 SC 369 the Government did give to the officer concerned, notice of charges of misconduct and inefficiency and called for his explanation, though a formal enquiry was not held. In providing that no action would be taken except in case of misconduct or inefficiency Rule 165-A only made explicit what was implicit in Note 1 of Article 465-A".

These observations were made entirely for the purpose of determining whether Article 311 (2) came into play. It is not possible to speculate what the Supreme Court would have held in case the question was whether Note 1 of Article 465-A violated Articles 14 and 16 of the Constitution.

44. Apart from this, it is worthy of note that the provision considered in Shyam Lal, AIR 1954 SC 369 (Supra), reproduced in full as set out by the Supreme Court in that case, reads as follows:—

"Note I— Government retains an absolute right to retire any officer after he has completed 25 years qualifying service without giving any reasons, and no claim to special compensation on this account will be entertained. "This right will not be exercised except when it is in the public interest to dispense with the further services of an officer." (Emphasis here in ' ') mine.]

45. The power conferred by Note I of Art. 465-A was circumscribed by the limitation that the right to retire could not be exercised except in the public interest.

46. The respondents relied upon Gopal Narain, AIR 1964 SC 370 (Supra). In that case it was clearly found that the power in the Municipal Board to select a part of the municipality for levying a tax was controlled by the purpose intended to be achieved by the statute itself, and the Supreme Court referred to several considerations clearly indicating the objects confining the exercise of the power.

47. In Shivcharan v. State of Mysore, AIR 1965 SC 220 the provision entitled the Government to retire a Government servant at any time after he had completed 25 years of qualifying service or on attaining 50 years of age "if such retirement was considered necessary in the public interest." The guideline was laid down by the provision itself and distinguishes the case from those before us.

48. We have also been referred to certain observations of the Supreme Court in AIR 1965 SC 1567:

"Now It cannot be urged that if Government decides to retain the services of some public servants after the age of retirement it must retain every public servant for the same length of time. The retention of public servants after the period of retirement depends upon their efficiency and the exigencies of public service, and in the present case the difference in the period of retention has arisen on account of exigencies of public service." These observations were made while upholding the validity of the Rules specifying the different ages on attaining which different categories of servants would retire. The exercise of the power to retire was controlled by the rule itself.

49. Reference was also made to AIR 1960 SC 1305. The question considered there was whether the compulsory retirement of a Government servant for "administrative reasons" amounted to removal within the meaning of Art. 311 (2) of the Constitution, and the Court held that the retirement would amount to such removal.

50. In Moti Ram v. N. E. Frontier Rly., AIR 1964 SC 600 the question was whether R. 148 (3) of Volume I of the Indian Establishment Code contravened Art. 14 of the Constitution. The rule provided for the termination of service of certain railway servants, and did not mention any grounds upon which the termination could be effected. Gajendragadkar, J., who expressed the majority view of the Court, noted the contention but specifically declined to express any opinion on it.

51. It is also necessary to refer to AIR 1968 Punjab 189. The learned Judges noted what was stated in Shridhar Prasad Nigam, 1966 All LJ 153 = (AIR 1966 All 560) (Supra), but, apart from this, proceeded upon considerations which were not identical with those placed by the petitioners before us.

52. Finally, the respondents have also referred to AIR 1957 SC 397. An order made by the Board of Revenue transferring a case under Section 5 (7-A) of the Indian Income-tax Act, 1922 was challenged before the Supreme Court. That was a case where no substantial right of the subject was involved and there was no denial of equal rights. As the Supreme Court pointed out:—

"It is further to be noted that the infringement of such a right by the order of transfer under Section 5 (7-A) of the Act is not a material infringement. It is only a deviation of a minor character from the general standard and does not necessarily involve a denial of equal rights for the simple reason that even after such transfer the case is dealt with under the normal procedure which is prescribed in the Act. The production and investigation of the books of account, the enquiries to be made by the Income-tax Officer and the whole of the procedure as to assessment including the further appeals after the assessment is made by the Income-tax Officer are the same in a transfer case as in others which remain with the Income-tax Officer of the area in which the other assessee reside or carry on business. There is thus no differential treatment and no scope for the argument that the particular assessee is discriminated against with reference to others similarly situated."

53. In conclusion, I think it right to point out that a rule conferring discretionary power upon an authority which affects the rights of a citizen must always be carefully formulated. This is especially so when the Rule of Law extends its mantle of protection wherever the power of the State impinges upon the right of the individual. On this, it is necessary to recall what the Supreme Court said in Jaisinghani v. Union of India, AIR 1967 SC 1427:

".....It is important to emphasise that the absence of arbitrary power is the first essential of the rule of law upon which a whole constitutional system is based. In a system governed by the rule of law, discretion, when conferred upon executive authorities, must be confined within clearly defined limits. The rule of law from this point of view means that decisions should be made by the application of known principles and rules and, in general, such decisions should be predictable and the citizen should know where he is. If a decision is taken without any principle or without any rule it is unpredictable and such a decision is the antithesis of a decision taken in accordance with the rule of law (See Dicey—“Law of the Constitution”—Tenth Edn., Introduction cx). “Law has reached its finest moment”, stated Douglas, J. in United States v. Wunderlich, (1951) 342 US 98, “when it has freed man from the unlimited discretion of some ruler..... where discretion is absolute, man has always suffered.” It is in this sense that the rule of law may be said to be the sworn enemy of caprice. “Discretion”, as Lord Mansfield stated it in classic terms in the case of John Wilkes, (1770) 4 Burr 2528 at p. 2539 “means sound discretion guided by law. It must be governed by rule, not by humour; it must not be arbitrary, vague, and fanciful.”

54. Upon the considerations to which I have adverted, I find myself unable to agree with the conclusion expressed in Shridhar Prasad Nigam, 1966 All LJ 153= (AIR 1966 All 560) (Supra) that paragraph (1) of the proviso to Fundamental R. 56 (a) does not violate Art. 14 of the Constitution. In my judgment, it does.

55. Accordingly, I answer the two questions referred in Civil Misc. Writ Petitions Nos. 1254, 3958, 4033, 4394 and 4400 of 1968 as follows:—

- (1) Under CL (a) of Fundamental R. 56 the age of compulsory retirement is 58 years.
- (2) Paragraph (1) of the proviso to CL (a) of Fundamental R. 56 violates Arts. 14 and 16 of the Constitution.

56. In respect of Special Appeals Nos. 307 and 320 of 1968, the entire case has been referred for decision. While the only questions raised in those appeals before us are the two questions referred in the writ petitions mentioned above, and should be answered accordingly, the facts disclose that the appellant in Special Appeal No. 307 of 1968 would have ordinarily retired on January 1, 1969 and the appellant in Special Appeal No. 320 of 1968 would have ordinarily retired on January 11, 1969 even if the impugned orders terminating their services prematurely had not been passed. Even if the impugned orders are held to be invalid in the two appeals, the period during which the respective appellants would have ordinarily served has already expired. In the circumstances, both the appeals are infructuous and are accordingly dismissed, except that the order of the learned single Judge decreeing costs against the appellants is substituted by an order directing the parties to bear their own costs throughout.

57. BY THE COURT—In view of the majority opinion we answer the two questions referred to us in Civil Miscellaneous Writ Petitions Nos. 1254, 3958, 4033, 4394 and 4400 of 1968 as under:—

- (1) Under CL (a) of Fundamental R. 56 the age of compulsory retirement is 58 years.
- (2) Paragraph (1) of the proviso to CL (a) of Fundamental Rule 56 violates Arts. 14 and 16 of the Constitution.

Special Appeals Nos. 307 and 320 of 1968 are dismissed but the parties are directed to bear their own costs.

Order accordingly.

AIR 1970 ALLAHABAD 307 (V 57 C 48)

B. S. PATHAK, J.

Bhondoo and others, Appellants v. Udatoo, Respondent.

Second Appeal No. 2741 of 1967, D/- 16-1-1970, against Judgment of Civil and S. J., Tehri, D/- 20-7-1967.

(A) Easements Act (1882), S. 1—Applicability — Act not applicable to certain area — Still principles incorporated in the provisions of the Act can be applied. AIR 1962 Punj 299, Rcl. on. (Para 5)

(B) Civil P. C. (1908), O. 41, R. 33, O. 7, R. 7 — Trial Court can mould relief and grant decree as required by merits of case — Appellate Court has the same powers.

The appellate Court has as wide a jurisdiction as the trial Court in granting relief, and it is now settled law that when disposing of a suit the trial Court has power to mould the relief and to grant such appropriate decree as it called for by the merits of the case. Though the plaintiff merely prayed for a prohibitory injunction the appellate Court could grant a mandatory injunction instead.

Under Order 41, Rule 33 the appellate Court has power to pass any decree which ought to have been passed or made as the case may require and this power may be exercised by the court in favour of all or any of the respondents, although such respondents may not have filed any appeal or objection. (Para 6)

Cases Referred: Chronological Paras (1962) AIR 1962 Punj 299 (V 49)=

ILR (1962) 2 Punj 255, Nuniamal v. Mahadeo

5

S. N. Doyal, for Appellants.

JUDGMENT:— This is a defendant's appeal arising out of a suit for an injunction.

2. The suit was brought on the allegation that the plaintiff had been taking water to his field through a Gool which passed through two plots belonging to the defendants, that the defendants had demolished a portion of the Gool and thus stopped the water flowing to the plaintiff's fields. The plaintiff prayed for a permanent injunction restraining the defendants from interfering with his taking water to his field through the said Gool.

CN/CN/A964/70/DHZ/A

3. The suit was contested on the ground that no Gool at all passed through the said plots and there was no right in the plaintiff to receive water passing through the defendants' fields.

4. The suit was decreed by the trial Court and a perpetual injunction was granted in the terms prayed for by the plaintiff. The defendants appealed. The learned Civil & Sessions Judge modified the decree of the trial Court in so far that a mandatory injunction was granted directing the defendants to restore the Gool in question to its original condition as marked in the map forming part of the decree.

5. Learned counsel for the defendants-appellants points out that the matter arises in the district of Tehri Garhwal, that the district originally formed the State of Tehri Garhwal which merged in 1949 in the United Provinces, and urges that there is no law applying the Indian Easements Act, 1882 to that area. He has referred to the provisions of the Merged States (Laws) Act, 1949 to show that the Indian Easements Act, 1882 is not one of the Acts mentioned in the schedule to that Act. Reference has also been made to Section 3(2) of the U.P. Merged States (Application of Laws) Act, 1950 and it is pointed out that in the absence of the Notification contemplated by Section 3(3) the Indian Easements Act, even if referred to by Section 3(2), cannot be said to have been extended to that area.

Learned counsel for the plaintiff-respondent concedes that the Indian Easements Act does not apply as such to the district of Tehri Garhwal. But he relies upon the principles incorporated in the provisions of that Act. It does appear that in respect of areas where the Indian Easements Act in terms does not apply, the Courts in this country have applied the principles incorporated there. It is not necessary to set out the several decisions of the Courts in that regard. It seems to me sufficient to refer to what was said by Tek Chand, J. in Nunia Mal v. Mahadev, AIR 1962 Punj 239:

"there is an imposing array of authority for the view that in those parts of the country where Indian Easements Act is not in operation, there is no reason why the principles underlying the provisions of the Indian Act, should not be followed in so far as they embody the rules of equity, justice and good conscience. Where the provisions of the Act coincide with the equitable principles, the Indian Easements Act will equally serve as a safe guide and as the measure and standard of such principles"

I respectfully agree with those observations. In the circumstances, I have no hesitation in holding that the courts below were plainly right in recognising a right in the plaintiff-respondent to flow water through the Gool passing through the defendants-appellants' fields for the purpose of irrigating his own fields.

6. The next contention of learned counsel for the defendants-appellants is that the plaintiff-respondent had merely prayed for a prohibitory injunction and the lower appellate Court should not have granted a mandatory injunction. Instead, it cannot be disputed that the appellate Court had as wide a jurisdiction as the trial Court in granting relief, and it is now settled law that when disposing of a suit the trial Court has power to mould the relief and to grant such appropriate decree as is called for by the merits of the case. It is pointed out that having regard to the terms of the trial Court decree, it was for the plaintiff-respondent to have appealed and to have claimed a mandatory injunction, and in the absence of such appeal it is said, the lower appellate Court should not have granted the decree which it did. Now, Order 41, Rule 33 of the Code of Civil Procedure clearly declares that the appellate Court shall have power to pass any decree which ought to have been passed or made as the case may require and this power may be exercised by the Court in favour of all or any of the respondents, although such respondents may not have filed any appeal or objection. It seems to me that what the lower appellate Court did cannot be said to have exceeded the power conferred upon it by Order 41, Rule 33.

7. The last contention of learned counsel for the defendants-appellants is that the terms of the decree made by the lower appellate Court are vague and consequently effect cannot be given to the decree. The lower appellate Court has decreed a mandatory injunction directing the defendants to "restore the Gool in question to its original condition as marked in the map 7C Ex. I forming part of the decree.....". The map referred to here is the settlement map, as is clear from the observations contained in the judgment of the lower appellate Court. It is, therefore, apparent that in complying with the decree the defendants must proceed according to the position of the Gool as shown in the settlement map. No question of vagueness can then arise.

8. The appeal fails and is dismissed. In the circumstances, there is no order as to costs.

Appeal dismissed.

AIR 1970 ALLAHABAD 309 (V 57 C 49)

FULL BENCH

GYANENDRA KUMAR, J. S. TRIVEDI
AND T. P. MUKERJEE, JJ.

Jagannath Prasad and others, Appellants v. Smt. Chandrawati and another, Respondents.

Second Appeal No. 1379 of 1963, D/-
23-9-1969.

(A) Houses and Rents — U.P. (Temporary) Control of Rent and Eviction Act (3 of 1947), S. 3 — Payment of arrears of rent — Modes of — Decree against tenant for arrears of rent — Service of notice under S. 3 by landlord — Deposit of decretal amount in Court under O. 21, R. 1, Civil P. C. — Amounts to payment to landlord.

One of the modes of payment of the decretal amount to the decree-holder is by depositing it in Court. The additional requirement of Section 3 of the U. P. (Temp.) Control of Rent and Eviction Act is that the amount should be paid within a month of the service of notice of demand, if the tenant wants to escape the penalty of ejectment. However, no mode of payment is prescribed in Sec. 3 or any other section of the Act. Section 3 only says that payment of arrears should be made to the landlord. Hence if the landlord also happens to be the decree-holder of the amount of rent, the same can be paid by deposit of the decretal amount in Court, which will amount to payment to the landlord. Thus the deposit under Order XXI, Rule 1, C. P. C. does amount to payment of arrears to the landlord, within the meaning of Section 3 of the Act. (Paras 3, 15 and 25)

(B) Civil P. C. (1908), Ss. 146, 100-101 — Decree for arrears of rent, mesne profits and ejectment — Death of tenant thereafter — Competency of his heirs to file appeal — Decree, whether can be set aside in its entirety — Houses and Rents — U.P. (Temporary) Control of Rent and Eviction Act (3 of 1947), S. 3.

A landlord holding a decree for certain amount of rent served a notice under S. 3 for payment of the decretal amount. The tenant deposited the amount in Court under O. 21, R. 1, C.P.C. within one month of service of notice. The landlord, however, filed a suit against tenant for arrears of rent, mesne profits and ejectment on ground that decretal amount was not paid to him. Suit was dismissed by the trial Court but decreed in first appellate Court. Due to death of tenant after passing of decree, his heirs filed second appeal challenging the decree.

Held (i) (Per Full Bench) that as the appellants were the heirs of the deceased tenant and were bound for the payment of money decree to the extent of the assets of the deceased received by them, they were competent to file the second appeal. (Paras 2, 16)

(ii) Per Majority (J. S. Trivedi, J. Contra) that the decretal amount already having been deposited in Court, there was no cause of action for filing the suit and hence the decree was liable to be set aside in its entirety. (Paras 3, 4, 9, 22)

Per Gyanendra Kumar, J.:

Once it is held that the heirs of the deceased tenant were liable for the money part of the decree and that the suit was not maintainable for want of cause of action, there could be no question of maintaining the decree for ejectment for such a decree did not exist in the eye of law. There could not also be any question of such a decree exhausting itself on account of the death of tenant, for before it could exhaust itself, it must have had a legal existence, which was totally wanting. (Para 8)

Per Mukerjee, J.:

The decree passed by the lower appellate Court, though wrong, cannot be said to be one which "did not exist in the eye of law". A decree may be said to be non-existent in the eye of law when it is a nullity, for instance, when a decree is passed by a court without jurisdiction. In such a case the decree may be ignored and challenged even in collateral proceedings. When, however, a court having jurisdiction in respect of a suit or action passes a decree, but the decree is a wrong one, it cannot be said to be non-existent in the eye of law. It has a valid legal existence, and it would be binding on the parties concerned, if it is not set aside or reversed in due course of law. (Paras 28, 29)

(C) Civil P. C. (1908), O. 7, R. 11 — Total want of cause of action — Dismissal of plaint on that ground, when permissible.

Per Gyanendra Kumar, J.:

There is a clear distinction between a case where the plaintiff himself does not disclose any cause of action and a case in which, after the parties have produced oral and documentary evidence, the Court, on consideration of the entire material on record, comes to the conclusion that there was no cause of action for the suit. In the latter case, obviously, the plaint cannot be rejected under O. 7, R. 11. (Para 6)

Where on the face of the plaint it could not be said that it did not disclose any cause of action, but it was only after the entire evidence had been led and documents produced in the case considered that the trial Court came to the conclusion that in point of fact and law it had not been proved that the tenant had committed any default in payment of arrears of rent within the statutory period, so as to expose him to the penalty of eviction from the accommodation, it was a case where it was ultimately proved that there was no cause of action for the suit and not a case where the plaint itself did not disclose a cause of action. (Para 6)

(D) Houses and Rents — U.P. (Temporary) Control of Rent and Eviction Act (3 of 1947), S. 3 — Scope — Prohibition under S. 3 to file suit — Its effect on right of landlord to determine tenancy — Transfer of Property Act (1882), S. 111 — Civil P. C. (1908) Pre. — Interpretation of Statutes.

Per Trivedi, J.:

The whole scheme of the U.P. Act is to control the letting out of premises and to restrict ejectionment of tenants. It is true that the power to allot an accommodation is given to the District Magistrate and the choice of the landlord in choosing his tenant is restricted but nonetheless it is the landlord who lets the accommodation. The District Magistrate under Sec. 7(2) only directs the landlord to let or not to let an accommodation to any person. The contractual relationship of landlord and tenant, though regulated by the statute, remains. The U.P. Act does not provide the manner of determination of tenancy, for which purpose one has to fall back upon the provisions of the Transfer of Property Act. The prohibition under S. 3 of the Act is against filing of a suit and not from determining the tenancy. The tenancy is determined under Section 111 of the T. P. Act and a suit for ejectionment can only follow the determination of the tenancy. S. 3 only postpones or defers the filing of the suit till the fetters mentioned in S. 3 are removed. The section does not create a fetter to the determination of the tenancy. The words "no suit can be filed" in S. 3 cannot be interpreted also to mean that no tenancy can be determined. It would be adding certain words to the statute which do not exist there. It would also amount to speculating the intention of the Legislature as against the express and clear words of the statute. The intention of the Legislature has always to be gathered from the words used by it, giving to the words their plain, normal and grammatical meaning. (Para 19)

Cases Referred: Chronological Paras

- | | |
|---|--------|
| (1966) 1966 All WR (HC) 55, Smt. Bhartoo v. Mst. Asa Devi | 14, 18 |
| (1965) AIR 1965 SC 414 (V 52) = (1964) 4 SCR 892, Anand Nivas v. Anandji | 14, 18 |
| (1961) AIR 1961 SC 1067 (V 48) = (1961) 3 SCR 813, Ganga Dutt v. Kartik Chandra Das | 14, 18 |
| (1960) AIR 1960 SC 236 (V 47) = (1960) 3 SCR 578, Mahadeolal v. Administrator General | 19 |

Shantil Bhusan, for Appellants; K. C. Agarwal and K. C. Saxena, for Respondents.

GYANENDRA KUMAR, J.:— I have had the advantage of reading the judgment of Trivedi, J. It is not necessary to reiterate the facts of the case which are clearly contained in his judgment. However, it may be recollected that the trial Court had dismissed the suit in toto. But on appeal, it was decreed by the Civil Judge, who granted three reliefs to the plaintiff, viz. (a) ejectionment of the defendant, Behari Lal (since deceased) from the premises in question, (b) recovery of Rs. 41/- as arrears of rent from 22-10-1958 to 14-12-1958 and (c) recovery of damages for use and occupation at the rate of Rs. 23/- per month from the date of termination of tenancy to the date of defendant's ejectionment.

2. It cannot be doubted that so far as the decree for arrears of rent and damages for use and occupation is concerned, the present appellants (who are the personal heirs and legal representatives of the deceased defendant, Behari Lal) would be liable to pay the same to the extent of the assets inherited by them, from the deceased. I, therefore, respectfully agree with the finding of my brother Trivedi that they were competent to file the instant second appeal in this Court.

3. I further agree that the deposit of the decretal amount of arrears of rent by Behari Lal under Order XXI, Rule 1, C.P.C., within one month of the receipt of the notice of demand, amounted to valid payment to the landlord decree-holder himself, within the meaning of Section 3 of the U.P. (Temporary) Control of Rent and Eviction Act. It may also be remembered that the subsequent arrears of rent had further been directly paid by the defendant to the landlord, within one month of the aforesaid notice. The result was that no arrears of rent remained due from the defendant at the time of the institution of the suit. Consequently, there could be no default or failure on the part of the tenant to pay any arrears of rent, as none existed at the time of the filing of the suit. That being so, the landlord had no cause of action for instituting the suit either for ejectionment or for recovery of rent and damages on the ground of alleged default of the tenant in payment of rent, in spite of notice of demand.

4. Under Section 3 of the Act there was also a statutory bar against the institution of such a suit. In fact, Trivedi, J. has himself observed: "In view of my finding that Behari Lal did not commit any default, within the meaning of Section 3 of the Act, no suit for his ejectionment could have been legally filed. If Behari Lal could not be ejected, his status continued to be that of a tenant, with the result that a decree for mesne profits could not have been passed against him." Towards the end of his judgment, Trivedi, J. again held that the decree in question "was a wrong decree" and that "the suit was not maintainable". Needless to repeat that inasmuch as there were no arrears of rent due against the defendant and he still continued to be a statutory tenant, in spite of the termination of his contractual tenancy under the Transfer of Property Act, there was no case for ejectment of the tenant and recovery of arrears of rent, much less for mesne profits. Thus it proved to be a case of total want of cause of action or right of suit in the plaintiff, so far as it was based on the ground of supposed default of payment of arrears of rent by the tenant.

5. Undoubtedly an appeal is a projection of the suit and the suit can still be said to be pending decision in this second appeal. It has been argued on behalf of the appellants that clause (a) of O. VII, Rule 11, C.P.C., inter alia, provides that "the plaint shall be rejected where it does not disclose a cause of action". This is a mandatory provision of law which goes to the root of the matter and the Court has no option but to reject the plaint where there is total want of cause of action, as is alleged to be the position in this case. Therefore, it is urged that there was no valid plaint or suit in the present case before the Court below and, therefore, no decree could have legally been passed on the basis of such a plaint, which did not disclose any cause of action and had to be rejected.

6. Initially I was impressed by the above argument and was inclined to accept the same but on closer scrutiny I find that there is a clear distinction between a case where the plaint itself does not disclose any cause of action and a case in which, after the parties have produced oral and documentary evidence, the Court, on consideration of the entire material on record, comes to the conclusion that there was no cause of action for the suit. In the latter case, obviously, the plaint cannot be rejected under Order VII, Rule 11, C.P.C. The instant one is a case where on the face of the plaint it could not be said that it did not disclose any cause of action. It was after the entire evidence had been led and documents produced in the case considered that the trial Court came to the conclusion that in point of fact and law it had not been proved that the tenant had committed any default in payment of arrears of rent within the statutory period, so as to expose him to the penalty of eviction from the accommodation, on the ground of his alleged default in payment of rent, after the receipt of the notice of demand. The above argument of the appellants, though plausible, has no substance and has to be rejected, because it is a case where it was ultimately proved that there was no cause of action for the suit and not a case where the plaint itself did not disclose a cause of action.

7. At any rate, once it has been held that the appellants have a right of appeal to this Court, they cannot be stopped from challenging the decree for arrears of rent and damages for use and occupation, inter alia, on the ground that the suit was not at all maintainable against their predecessor-in-interest, as it was proved that there was no default on his part and consequently, there was no cause of action for the suit as such and also because there was an absolute statutory bar against the institution of such a suit, in terms of Section 3 of the Act.

8. With the profoundest respect to my learned brother Trivedi, I cannot persuade myself to agree with the proposition that even though no suit, giving rise to the present appeal, could lie and the consequent decree was also illegal and wrong, yet the appellants could not challenge the same notwithstanding that they are liable at least for the money part of the decree and have a right to institute the present appeal. As indicated above, they can obviously challenge the money decree for arrears of rent and so-called damages for use and occupation on the ground that there was no cause of action for such a suit. In these circumstances, there can be no question of maintaining the decree for ejectment, when such a decree did not exist in the eye of law. A fortiori there also cannot be any question of such a decree exhausting itself on account of the death of Behari Lal, for before it could exhaust itself, it must have had a legal existence, which was totally wanting in this case.

9. I find that Trivedi, J. has only set aside the decree for mesne profits, but he has not said anything about the decree for arrears of rent granted to the plaintiff by the lower appellate Court, even though, as held above, there were no actionable arrears due from the defendant at the time of the lodging of the suit. In my view, the suit has to be dismissed in its entirety for want of cause of action and this appeal has to be allowed as a whole, with costs throughout, and it has further to be declared that no valid and legal decree ever came into existence.

10. TRIVEDI, J.: This defendant's second appeal is against a decree for ejectment and recovery of arrears of rent and mesne profits, passed by the lower appellate Court.

11. Behari Lal, the predecessor of the appellants, was the tenant and respondent No. 1 Smt. Chandrawati was the landlord of the premises in suit. Behari

Lal was in arrears of rent and in suit No. 822 of 1957 filed by the landlord a decree for arrears of rent was passed against him. The decretal amount remained unsatisfied. The plaintiff respondent then served a composite notice under Section 3 of the U.P. (Temporary) Control of Rent and Eviction Act, 1947 (hereinafter called the Act) and Sec. 106 of the Transfer of Property Act, on November 14, 1958, on Behari Lal asking him to pay the decreed sum together with the rent that had fallen in arrears for the period beginning from 22-10-1957 to 21-10-1958, within one month of the receipt of the notice. Behari Lal paid the rent that was due for the aforesaid period within one month of the receipt of the notice. However, the amount due under the rent decree of 1957 was not paid to the landlord but was deposited in Court in satisfaction of the decree, under Order XXI, Rule 1, C.P.C.

12. The plaintiff respondent then filed the suit, giving rise to this appeal, on 16-12-1958 for ejectment, for arrears of rent and for damages for use and occupation with the allegation that Behari Lal defendant was liable to ejectment, as he had failed to make the payment of the entire arrears of rent, as required under Section 3 of the Act, within one month from the date of receipt of the notice of demand. Relief for ejectment was also claimed on other ground with which this Court is not concerned in this appeal. Behari Lal contested the suit by alleging that he, having deposited the decretal amount of the previous suit under O. XXI, Rule 1, C.P.C., was not liable to ejectment from the premises. The trial Court dismissed the plaintiff's suit. However, the lower appellate Court decreed the plaintiff's suit holding that the satisfaction of the decree under Order XXI, Rule 1, C.P.C. did not amount to payment of the arrears to the landlord within Section 3 of the Act.

13. The appeal was decided by the lower appellate Court on 4-2-1963. Behari Lal died thereafter before the second appeal could be filed. The appellants, who are the heirs of Behari Lal, then filed this second appeal under Chapter X, Rule 1, Rules of Court.

14. It has been contended by Shri K. L. Misra, learned counsel for the appellants that the deposit of the decretal amount under Order XXI, Rule 1, C.P.C. did amount to valid payment under Section 3 of the Act. Shri K. C. Saxena, learned counsel for the respondent, while supporting the judgment of the lower appellate Court has contended that the tenancy of Behari Lal was terminated by a notice under Section 106 of the Transfer of Property Act and on the expiry of the period of notice, the status of Behari Lal was that of a mere statutory tenant which was non-heritable. He contends that Behari Lal having died after the decree of the lower appellate Court, the appellants are precluded from challenging the decree of ejectment passed against the deceased. The essence of his arguments is that Section 3 of the Act only restricts the filing of a suit for ejectment of a tenant but it does not restrict the right of a landlord to determine the tenancy created under the Transfer of Property Act. According to him, the tenancy can be determined by a notice under Section 106 of the Transfer of Property Act, whereafter the status of a tenant would be reduced to that of a mere statutory tenant, terminable on his death. In support of his arguments he has placed reliance on Ganga Dutt v. Kartik Chandra Das, AIR 1961 SC 1067; Anand Nivas v. Anandji, AIR 1965 SC 414 and Smt. Bhartoo v. Mt. Asa Devi, 1966 All WR (HC) 55. I will revert to this problem a little later.

15. The first question for determination is whether the deposit of the decretal amount under Order 21, Rule 1, C. P. C., made within one month of the service of notice of demand will amount to payment of that amount to the landlord within the meaning of Section 3 of the Act. Section 3 provides that no suit shall without the permission of the District Magistrate be filed in a Civil Court for the eviction of a tenant except on the ground, inter alia, that the tenant is in arrears of rent for more than three months and has failed to pay the same to the landlord within one month of the service upon him of the notice of demand. It is not disputed by the parties that the nature of the arrears was not changed by passing of a decree for the same. All that is contended is that the payment of arrears to the landlord required by the aforesaid section means actual payment to the landlord and a deposit of the amount in Court under O. 21, R. 1, Civil P. C. could not amount to payment to the landlord. The learned counsel attempted to establish the correctness of the proposition by referring to Section 7-C of the Act. His argument is that where the Legislature wanted that the method of payment to the landlord would also be by deposit of the amount in Court it has expressly said so. But in relation to Section 3 (a) of the Act, the Legislature has not said so and, therefore, according to him, the payment of arrears to the landlord, within the meaning of Section 3 (a) has actually to be made to the landlord himself. I do not find any force in this submission of the learned counsel for the respondent. Order 21, Rule 1, Civil P. C., as amended by this Court, reads thus:—

"(1) All money payable under a decree shall be paid as follows, namely,

(a) into the Court whose duty it is to execute the decree; or

(b) out of Court to the decree-holder; or

(c) otherwise as the Court which made the decree directs.

(2) Where any payment is made under Cl. (a) of sub-rule (1) notice of such payment shall be given to the decree-holder."

This rule shows that one of the modes of payment of the decretal amount to the decree-holder is by depositing it in Court. The additional requirement of Section 3 of the Act is that the amount should be paid within a month of the service of notice of demand, if the tenant wants to escape the penalty of ejectment. However, no mode of payment is prescribed in Section 3 or any other section of the Act. Section 3 only says that payment of arrears should be made to the landlord. Hence if the landlord also happens to be the decree-holder of the amount of rent, the same can be paid by deposit of the decretal amount in Court, which will amount to payment to the landlord. The lower appellate Court was, therefore, wrong in holding that the deposit under O. 21, R. 1, Civil P. C. did not amount to payment of arrears to the landlord, within the meaning of Section 3 of the Act.

16. The admitted or proved facts are that a composite notice under Section 106 of the Transfer of Property Act read with Section 3 of the Act was given to Behari Lal on 13-11-1958 and was served on him the next day. The suit out of which this appeal arises was filed on 18-12-1958. The lower appellate Court decreed the suit on 4-2-1963. The decree under appeal is one for ejectment, arrears of rent and damages for use and occupation. Behari Lal died shortly after the decree of the lower appellate Court and this appeal was filed on behalf of his heirs under Chapter X, R. 1, Rules of Court read with S. 146, Civil P. C. As stated above, the contention of the learned counsel for the respondent is that the tenancy of Behari Lal having been terminated, his status after the notice of termination was that of a bare statutory tenant liable to ejectment under the Act. And inasmuch as Behari Lal died without leaving any heritable claim to tenancy, his heirs cannot prosecute the appeal. Section 146 of the Code of Civil Procedure lays down that:—

"Save as otherwise provided by this Code or by any law for the time being in force, where any proceeding may be taken or application made by or against any person, then the proceedings may be taken or the application may be made by or against any person claiming under him." Under R. 1, Chapter X, Rules of Court, a right is given to any legal representative whose interest is affected to appeal from such a decree. The question for determination, therefore, is whether the heirs of Behari Lal, who have filed this second appeal, can be said to be persons claiming under Behari Lal or whose rights are affected by a decree passed against Behari Lal. The decree against Behari Lal was for rent for a specified period, mesne profits thereafter and ejectment. The accrual of mesne profits was dependent on the question whether the status of Behari Lal continued to be that of a tenant or not. In view of my finding that Behari Lal did not commit any default, within the meaning of Section 3 of the Act, no suit for his ejectment could have been legally filed. If Behari Lal could not be ejected, his status continued to be that of a tenant, with the result that a decree for mesne profits could not have been passed against him. The appellants, who are the heirs of Behari Lal and are bound for the payment of money decree to the extent of the assets of the deceased received by them, could very well challenge the correctness of the decree and were quite competent to file the instant second appeal.

17. The next question, which falls for determination, is whether the decree for ejectment granted against Behari Lal can be set aside in this appeal, filed by his legal representatives. The answer to this question involves the determination of Behari Lal's status at the time of his death, i.e. whether Behari Lal's status at that time was that of a contractual heritable tenant or was he a simple statutory tenant, without leaving heritable rights. The cases referred to above and relied upon by the learned counsel for the respondent lay down that where the tenancy is determined but the tenant is still protected from ejectment on account of some provision of a statute, the status of the tenant is reduced to that of a statutory tenant.

18. Shri K. L. Misra, learned counsel for the appellant, has tried to distinguish the above cases. According to him, the case of Ganga Dutt, AIR 1961 SC 1067 (supra) involved the interpretation of the West Bengal Premises Rent Control Act, under which protection from eviction is granted to tenants including tenants whose tenancies have expired. In the case of Anand Nivas, AIR 1965 SC 414 (supra) the Hon'ble Supreme Court was considering the status of a tenant under the Bombay Rents, Hotel and Lodging House Rates Control Act, under which statute also the possession of a tenant, including a tenant whose lease has been determined, is protected, so long as he continues to pay rent. The purpose of the Bombay and Calcutta Acts, according to him, was only to regulate the rent and maintain the possession of the tenant so long as he paid the rent. On the other hand, the U. P. (Temporary) Control of Rent and Eviction Act not only controls the letting of accommodations but also, in substance, obligates the contractual relationship of landlord and tenant. According to Shri Misra, the tenancies in this State, after the enforcement of the U. P. Act, cannot be determined unless the fetters mentioned in Section 3 thereof are removed. Smt. Bhartoo's case, 1966 All WR (HC) 55 (supra) decided by this Court, is distinguished on the ground that the same was a case of fixed term tenancy, where the lease stood determined automatically by the efflux of time. In the case of Anand Nivas, AIR 1965 SC 414 (supra) it was laid down by their Lordships of the Supreme Court:—

"A person remaining in occupation of the premises let to him after the determination or expiry of the period of the tenancy is commonly, though in law not accurately, called a statutory tenant. Such a person is not a tenant at all; he has no estate or interest in the premises occupied by him. He has merely the protection of the statute in that he cannot be turned out so long as he pays the standard rent and permitted increases, if any, and performs the other conditions of the tenancy. His right to remain in possession after the determination of the contractual tenancy is personal; it is not capable of being transferred or assigned, and devolves on the death only in the manner provided by the statute. The right of a lessee from a landlord on the other hand is an estate or interest in the premises and in the absence of a contract to the contrary is transferable and the premises may be sublet by him. But with the determination of the lease, unless the tenant acquires the right of a tenant holding over, by acceptance of rent or by assent to his continuing in possession by the landlord, the terms and conditions of the lease are extinguished, and the rights of such a person remaining in possession are governed by the statute alone."

19. The whole scheme of the U. P. Act is to control the letting out of premises and to restrict ejection of tenants. It is true that the power to allot an accommodation is given to the District Magistrate and the choice of the landlord in choosing his tenant is restricted but nonetheless it is the landlord who lets the accommodation. The District Magistrate under Section 7 (2) only directs the landlord to let or not to let an accommodation to any person. The contractual relationship of landlord and tenant, though regulated by the statute, remains. The U. P. Act does not provide the manner of determination of tenancy, for which purpose one has to fall back upon the provisions of the Transfer of Property Act. The relevant portion of Section 3, which restricts the right of the landlord, is in these words:—

"..... No suit shall without the permission of the District Magistrate be filed in any Civil Court against a tenant for his eviction from any accommodation, except on one or more of the following grounds"

The prohibition is against filing of a suit and not from determining the tenancy. The tenancy is determined under Section 111 of the Transfer of Property Act and a suit for ejection can only follow the determination of the tenancy. Section 3 only postpones or defers the filing of the suit till the fetters mentioned in Section 3 are removed. The section does not create a fetter to the determination of the tenancy. The words "no suit can be filed" in Section 3 of the Act cannot be interpreted also to mean that no tenancy can be determined. It would be adding certain words to the statute which do not exist there. It would also amount to speculating the intention of the Legislature as against the express and clear words of the statute. It has been laid down in Mahadeo Lal v. Administrator General, AIR 1960 SC 936 at p. 939 that the intention of the Legislature has always to be gathered from the words used by it, giving to the words their plain, normal and grammatical meaning.

20. The effect of determination of Behari Lal's tenancy by a valid notice was that his status became that of a person against whom no suit for ejection could be filed till the conditions enumerated in Section 3 of the Act were fulfilled. His status technically, therefore, was that of a statutory tenant and that right in the absence of any provision to the contrary in the statute was personal only. The right to remain in possession being personal, extinguished with the death of Behari Lal. As a matter of fact the decree for ejection itself is a dead decree. The right to remain in occupation of the accommodation being personal and having been extinguished with the death of Behari Lal, his heirs cannot in law be termed as persons affected or claiming under him and cannot challenge the dead decree even though it was a wrong decree and could have been successfully challenged by Behari Lal.

21. The result, therefore, is that this appeal succeeds in part. The decree of the lower appellate Court to the extent of mesne profits is set aside and as the decree for ejection has exhausted itself by the death of Behari Lal, the appellant cannot claim reversal of the same and no order is passed in respect of that part of the decree. In view of my finding that the suit was not maintainable the costs of the suit throughout are awarded to the appellants.

22. MUKERJEE, J.:— I agree with my learned brother Gyanendra Kumar, J. that

The suit has to be dismissed in its entirety. I would however, like to add a few words.

23. The action in ejectment brought by the plaintiff landlord Smt. Chandrawati against the defendant Behari Lal (since deceased) who was her tenant registered as suit No. 1029 of 1958, in the Court of the Munsif, Muzaffarnagar was based on the following grounds:

- (1) That the tenant had installed a flour mill in a part of the premises and thereby used the accommodation for a purpose inconsistent with the purpose of the tenancy;
- (2) That the tenant had caused substantial damage to the accommodation;
- (3) That the tenant had sublet the house without authority; and
- (4) that the tenant had defaulted in payment of rent.

24. At the hearing of the suit before the learned Munsif grounds Nos. (1), (2) and (3) were abandoned and the decree in ejectment was sought for only on the ground of default in payment of rent. The learned Munsif held that there was no default in payment of rent. He dismissed the suit. The learned Civil Judge, however, held otherwise. He was of the view that the tenant, who was the first defendant in the suit, had failed to pay the arrears of rent to the landlord within one month of the service of the notice of demand and he granted a decree to the plaintiff for ejectment, for arrears of rent and for mesne profits.

25. My learned brothers Gyanendra Kumar, J. and Trivedi, J. have both held that there was no default in payment of the arrears of rent within the meaning of Section 3 of Act 3 of 1947. I respectfully concur in the view taken by them in point.

26. The conclusion at which brother Gyanendra Kumar, J. has arrived as a result of his finding, that the tenant was not in default is that the suit was not maintainable at all as there was no cause of action for the suit as such, and also because there was an absolute statutory bar against the institution of such a suit, in terms of Section 3 of the Act. My learned brother also remarks that the decree does not exist in the eye of law and it had no legal existence. He is, therefore, of the opinion that the suit has to be dismissed in its entirety for want of cause of action and the appeal has to be allowed as a whole with costs throughout, and it has further to be declared that no valid and legal decree ever came into existence.

27. The relevant clauses of sub-s. (1) of Section 3 of Act 3 of 1947 are quoted below:—

"Subject to any order passed under sub-section (3) no suit shall, without the permission of the District Magistrate, be filed in any Civil Court against the tenant for his eviction from any accommodation except on one or more of the following grounds:

(a) that the tenant is in arrears of rent for more than three months and has failed to pay the same to the landlord within one month of the service upon him of a notice of demand.

(b) that the tenant has wilfully caused, permitted to be caused substantial damage to the accommodation;

(c)

(d)

(e) that the tenant has on or after the first day of October 1946 sublet the whole or any portion of the accommodation without the permission of the landlord.

(f)

(g)

28. It would appear that Section 3 of Act 3 of 1947 is a bar to the filing of a suit, except on one or more of the grounds set out in the different clauses mentioned in sub-section (1) thereof. There is, however, no bar to the filing of a suit against a tenant for his eviction on one or more of the above grounds. In the present case, as already noted, the plaintiff had pleaded in the plaint that the tenant was in arrears of rent for more than three months and had failed to pay the same to the landlord within one month of the service of the notice of demand, that the tenant had caused substantial damage to the accommodation and that the tenant had sublet a portion of the accommodation without the permission of the landlord. There was therefore, no bar to the filing of the suit in ejectment. In other words, the bar of S. 3 of Act 3 of 1947 did not apply to the suit filed by the plaintiff. It was, however, fit to be dismissed, as the plaintiff had failed to establish and substantiate the grounds or the causes of action upon which she based her suit for the eviction of the tenant. In point of fact, the learned Munsif dismissed the suit, but the learned Civil Judge decreed the same holding that the tenant was in default in payment of rent to the landlord as contemplated in clause (a) of sub-section (1) of Section 3.

29. In my opinion, the decree passed by the learned Civil Judge, though wrong, in the circumstances of the case, cannot be said to be one which, "did not exist in the eye of law." A decree may be said to be non-existent in the eye of law when it is a nullity, for instance, when a decree is passed by a Court without jurisdiction. In such a case the decree may be ignored and challenged even in collateral proceedings. When, however, a Court having jurisdiction in respect of a suit or action passes a decree, but the decree is a wrong one, it cannot be said to be non-existent in the eye of law. It has a valid legal existence, and it would be binding on the parties concerned if it is not set aside or reversed in due course of law.

30. In the present case, as I have already pointed out, there was no statutory bar to the institution of the suit on the grounds of the causes of action pleaded in the plaint. The learned Civil Judge decreed the suit, but as we are unanimously of the view that the decree was a wrong one, the order of the learned Civil Judge has to be reversed and the suit has to be dismissed in its entirety.

31. BY THE COURT: The appeal is allowed. The decree of the lower appellate Court is set aside and that of the trial Court restored, the suit being dismissed in its entirety with costs throughout.

Appeal allowed.

AIR 1970 ALLAHABAD 316 (V 57 C 50)

FULL BENCH

R. S. PATHAK, M. H. BEG AND
H. C. P. TRIPATHI, JJ.

M/s. R. R. Engineering Co., Petitioner v. Zilla Parishad, Bareilly and another, Opposite Parties.

Civil Misc. Writ No. 37 of 1967, D/-23-5-1969.

(A) U. P. District Boards Act (10 of 1922), S. 108 — Circumstance and property tax imposed under — Nature of.

Per Full Bench: Circumstance and property tax is a tax bearing on the circumstances and property of a person. It is a tax on a person in relation to his status or, as it is said, his Haisiat. It is also a tax in respect of his property.

(Paras 6, 29)

Per Pathak, J.:— A tax on circumstances and property is a composite tax and word circumstance means a man's financial position, his status as a whole depending, among other things on his income from trade or business. It is a composite tax, but nonetheless a single tax. Although the status of a person and the property of that person are the two inter-twined strands which enter into the composition of the tax, it is not possible to say that the tax can be considered as two distinct taxes under a single denomination. It is a single tax possessing a separate and distinct identity from all other taxes. It cannot be confused either with a tax on profession, trade, calling or employment nor with a tax on property. It is a composite tax, and the constituent elements which enter into its composition cannot be separated. (Para 6)

Per Beg J.:— Neither incidence of a tax on income nor the fact that income is its yardstick or measure for fixing the amount payable will determine the true character of a tax conclusively. The character of a tax is perhaps determined more accurately by answering the question: what is the legal basis of the tax or the reason without which there could be no such tax? In the case of a tax on circumstances and property probably the best answer one could give to such a question is that it is status (haisiyat to use the Hindi equivalent) which is the legal basis or the subject-matter of the tax. Circumstances (including income) or property may serve as its sources or measures, but the resultant or the amalgam sought to be taxed could not perhaps be described more precisely than by using term "status" for it. (Para 29)

(B) Constitution of India, Arts. 276 (2), proviso and 277 — U. P. District Boards Act (10 of 1922), Section 108 — U. P. Zilla Parishad and Kshettra Samitis Act (33 of 1961), S. 270 (a) — Imposition of circumstance and property tax by District Board — Continuation of its levy by Zilla Parishad is valid — Maximum amount of tax can exceed Rs. 250.

Per Full Bench:— Where the District Board, in exercise of its power under Section 108 of the District Boards Act, has imposed circumstance and property tax, its successor the Zilla Parishad is entitled to continue the levy of that tax on the assessee. The amount of tax to be levied cannot also be restricted to the maximum of Rupees Two hundred and fifty per annum as provided in Art. 276 (2). (Case law discussed). (Paras 7, 37, 58)

Per Pathak J.:— From the fact that a tax is levied with respect to the status of a person it cannot be considered as a tax in respect of his profession, trade, calling or employment. But even if it be assumed that a tax with respect to the status of a person can be identified as a tax in respect of his profession, trade, calling or employment, the element of status does not by itself constitute circumstance and property tax. The constituent element of property plays as essential a part in determining the quality of its composition. Circumstance and property tax is a composite tax, and when the element of property necessarily enters into that composition circumstance and property tax cannot be identified as tax on professions, trades, callings or employments, which as the plain language shows, is a tax exclusively related to the vocational activity of a person and has nothing to do with his property. Consequently circumstance and property tax cannot be considered as a tax contemplated by Article 276 (2) of the Constitution and the protection of the proviso to Art. 276 (2) cannot be invoked by the assessee.

(Para 7)

Moreover by virtue of Art. 277 circumstance and property tax levied before the commencement of the Constitution can be continued even thereafter. When the Constitution of India came into force, circumstance and property tax still did not find place as an entry expressly enumerated in any of the three lists of the Seventh Schedule. But there is the residuary entry, namely Entry 97 of List I, and therefore, circumstance and property tax will now fall within the legislative competence of Parliament. That being so, the provisions of Art. 277 come into play. Circumstance and property tax was levied before the commencement of the Constitution by a local authority. The Zilla Parishad can be identified with the District Board. The area for whose benefit the tax is to be utilised and substantially the purposes for which the utilisation is to take place continued to be the same. The rate of tax remains at the level fixed by the initial Notification of 1933 and the incidence of the tax has not been altered in any manner. In nature and effect, it continues to be the same tax. Art. 277 ensures the continued levy of the circumstance and property tax.

(Paras 11 and 12)

Per Beg, J.:— Circumstance and property tax is a composite tax and not merely a tax upon professions, callings, or employments. Therefore, it is not correct to apply the limit imposed by Art. 276 (2) to such a tax at all. The terms circumstances and property are too vague and undefined to be capable of being confined to Items 49 and 60 of List II of the Seventh Schedule. They could easily embrace other items mentioned in both State and Union Lists. Therefore, entry No. 97 of the Union List I is more appropriate for so vaguely described a tax. But once it is assumed that the circumstance and property tax is fully covered by the State List, there is no need to seek the protection of either Art. 276 or of Art. 277 at all to justify its levy under the Act. Indeed, both Arts. 276 and 277 would become inapplicable if the circumstance and property tax is fully covered by the State List. Section 270 (a) of the Zilla Parishad Act shall save the imposition of circumstance and property tax by Zilla Parishad.

(Paras 35, 37, 38)

(C) Constitution of India, Art. 276 (2), Proviso — Imposition of tax by Government agency before Constitution — Its continuance after Constitution by same agency, whether necessary.

Per Beg, J.:— The composition and identity of the body which levies a tax is one thing, but the identity of the tax which is levied by a body is another matter. It is possible that even though the agency through which the tax is imposed is different, yet, the tax, which continues to be levied through another governmental agency, is the same. All the agencies through which the tax can be imposed are mentioned in the proviso to Art. 276 (2) but the proviso does not anywhere enact that the continuance of the levy must also be by the very authority or agency through which the tax was being levied before the Constitution.

(Para 20)

(D) Constitution of India, Art. 277 — Words "same purpose" appearing in Article 277 — Meaning.

Per Beg, J.:— One of the requirements of attracting Art. 277 is that the tax must be shown to be applied for the same purposes as the pre-Constitution tax. On the language of Art. 277 this seems to be a requirement for testing due application of proceeds of a tax only. Even if it were assumed to be a criterion for determining the character of a tax or for justifying its levy, the test does not seem to be capable of application with precision or strictness to taxation inasmuch as the very nature of a tax, as distinct from license fees, implies that it is not earmarked for specific purposes. It is presumed that taxation is meant for the benefit of the public which results from expenditure incurred or from schemes undertaken by State or local governmental authorities. A fulfilment of this broad purpose with reference to any particular area for which taxation takes place is all that could be required. AIR 1961 SC 459, Foll.

(Para 32)

Cases Referred: Chronological Paras

- (1969) AIR 1969 All 40 (V 56) =
ILR (1968) 2 All 114 (FB), Zila
Parishad Muzaffarnagar v. Jugal
Kishore Ramswarup 6, 17, 28,
35, 37, 39, 47
- (1969) AIR 1969 All 317 (V 56) =
1967 All LJ 999 (FB), S. C. Anand
v. State of U. P. 29
- (1967) Civil Misc. Writ No. 2882 of 1966, D/- 20-2-1967 (All), Allahabad Canning Co., Bamrauli v.
Commr. of Allahabad Division
4, 10, 15, 20,
39, 43, 46, 51
- (1966) AIR 1966 SC 249 (V 53) =
(1965) 3 SCR 135, Bharat Kala
Bhandar Ltd. v. Municipal Committee, Dhamangaon 6, 29
- (1962) AIR 1962 SC 1073 (V 49) =
(1962) Supp 3 SCR 70, Ram Krishna
Ram Nath v. Janpad Sabha 10
12, 15, 16,
25, 46, 50
- (1961) AIR 1961 SC 459 (V 48) =
(1961) 2 SCR 537, Hingir Rampur
Coal Co., Ltd. v. State of
Orissa 37
- (1957) AIR 1957 SC 18 (V 44) =
1956 SCR 664, Ram Narain v.
State of Uttar Pradesh 6, 7, 17,
39, 47

- (1957) AIR 1957 All 433 (V 44),
Western U. P. Electric Power and Supply Co., Ltd. v. Town Area
Jaswant Nagar 6
- (1955) 1955 All LJ 630 = 1955 All
WR (HC) 520, Tata Oil Mills Co.,
Ltd. v. District Board of Allahabad 5, 26, 39, 57
- (1948) AIR 1948 All 382 (V 35) =
1948 All LJ 338 (FB), District
Board of Farrukhabad v. Prag
Dutt 6, 27
- (1939) AIR 1939 All 389 (V 26) =
1939 All LJ 161, District Board
Dehra Dun v. H. Trotter 26

J. Swarup and A. N. Verma, for Petitioner; S. N. Kacker and Sant Prakash, for Opposite Parties.

PATHAK, J.:— The District Board, Bareilly, by resolution No. 3 dated February 18, 1928, imposed circumstance and property tax in exercise of the powers conferred by Section 108 of the District Boards Act, 1922, By Notification No. 2049/II/X-342-11930 dated November 29, 1933 made by the State Government under Section 114 (d) of the Act, it was provided:

"The total amount of the tax on circumstances and property imposed by a District Board on any single assessee shall not, in any year, exceed the sum of Rs. 2,000."

The tax continued to be levied for many years.

2. On April 20, 1958 the U.P. Antarim Zila Parishad Ordinance 1958 was enacted providing for the establishment of Antarim Zila Parishads for the interim administration of local self-Government in rural areas facilitating the establishment of Zila Parishads for the co-ordinated administration of affairs concerning economic and social planning and local self-Government in the districts in Uttar Pradesh. The Ordinance was replaced by the U. P. Antarim Zila Parishads Act, 1958. It was followed by the U. P. Kshettra Samitis and Zila Parishads Adhiniyam, 1961. By Section 274 of the Act, the U. P. District Boards Act was repealed as from the date on which Kshettra Samitis were established in a district, and the U. P. Antarim Zila Parishads Act, 1958 was repealed from the date on which the Zila Parishad was established in a district.

3. The petitioner carries on business in Bareilly. Although the business is carried on within what were the local limits of the District Board, Bareilly and thereafter of the Antarim Zila Parishad, Bareilly the petitioner was never assessed to circumstance and property tax by those local bodies. Some time after the Zila Parishad, Bareilly was constituted, the petitioner, who was carrying on business within what were now the local limits of the Zila Parishad, Bareilly received a notice on January 5, 1965 from the Zila Parishad demanding circumstance and property tax in the sum of Rs. 1,500 for the year 1964-65. The petitioner objected, but upon the assurance of the Adhyaksha of the Zila Parishad that the matter would be looked into, it paid the sum demanded. In 1966 the petitioner received a bill for the year 1965-66 demanding circumstance and property tax in the sum of Rs. 2,000. The petitioner filed an objection contending that the levy was illegal and that the Zila Parishad had no power to levy it. In particular, the petitioner contended that the Zila Parishad could not demand circumstance and property tax in excess of Rs. 250 and relied upon Article 276 of the Constitution. The objection was rejected by the Zila Parishad, which issued a notice of demand dated August 20, 1966 requiring the petitioner to pay the tax levied. The petitioner has filed this petition praying for relief against the demand.

4. The case was first heard by me sitting as a single Judge. The petitioner contended that the demand contravened Article 276 (2) of the Constitution declaring that the total amount payable by any one person to any local authority by way of taxes on professions, trades, callings or employments shall not exceed Rupees 250 per annum. The Zila Parishad relied, however, upon the proviso to Article 276 (2) which excepted from the substantive provision of Article 276 (2) a tax in force during the financial year preceding the commencement of the Constitution imposed by a local authority on professions, trades, callings and employments even if the rate exceeded Rs. 250 per annum unless Parliament by law provided to the contrary. In reply to the submission of the petitioner that the proviso contemplated a local authority which was the same as that imposing the tax before the commencement of the Constitution and that the Zila Parishad, Bareilly could not be said to be the same as the District Board, Bareilly, the Zila Parishad relied upon Allahabad Canning Co., Bamrauli v. Commissioner of Allahabad Division Civil Misc. Writ. No. 2882 of 1966, D/- 20-2-1967 (All). Upon the submissions of learned counsel for the parties it appeared necessary that the view taken in that case should be reconsidered and accordingly the case was referred to a larger Bench. It was then placed before a Division Bench consisting of myself and Gulati, J., and as the Bench found itself unable to accept the view taken in Allahabad Canning Co., Bamrauli, Civil Misc. Writ. No. 2882 of 1966, D/- 20-2-1967 (All) (Supra) it directed the case to be laid before a larger Bench. Accordingly, this case has now been laid before us.

5. The submissions of learned counsel for the parties proceeded on the assumption that circumstance and property tax is a tax on professions, trades, callings and employments. While the petitioner relied upon the substantive provision of Art. 276 (2) the Zila Parishad seeks to escape its severity by recourse to the proviso to that provision.

6. The first question, I think, is whether circumstance and property tax is a tax on professions, trades, callings and employments. Circumstance and property tax, it has been repeatedly laid down, is a tax bearing on the circumstances and property of a person. It is a tax on a person in relation to his status or, as it is said, his 'Haisiat'. It is also a tax in respect of his property. It is a composite tax, in relation to his status and property. Reference may be made to the decisions cited before us as to the nature of circumstance and property tax. In District Board of Farrukhabad v. Prag Dutt, AIR 1948 All 382 a Full Bench of this Court held that circumstance and property tax cannot be identified with a tax on income. Subsequently a Bench of this Court consisting of Agarwala and Chaturvedi, JJ., expressed the view in Tata Oil Mills v. District Board of Allahabad, 1955 All LJ 630 that circumstance and property tax was nothing else but a tax on income. This was followed by the decision in Western U. P. Electric Power and Supply Co. Ltd. v. Town Area, Jaswant Nagar, AIR 1957 All 433, where Mootham & Srivastava, JJ., took the view that circumstance and property tax was a composite tax on property and circumstances. The Supreme Court laid down in Ram Narain v. State of U. P., AIR 1957 SC 18 that a tax on circumstances and property was a composite tax and the word 'circumstance' means a man's financial position, his status as a whole depending, among other things, on his income from trade or business. We have also been referred to Bharat Kala Bhandar Ltd. v. Municipal Committee, Dhamangaon, AIR 1966 SC 249 but that is a case concerned with a tax on professions, trades, callings or employments.

A tax on professions, trades, callings or employments is a tax imposed on a person because he carries on a vocational activity which can be described as a profession, a trade, a calling or an employment. It is neither in respect of his status nor of his property. An example of such a tax is that imposed by the U. P. Vriti, Vyapar, Ajivika Aur Sevaoyan Kar Adhiniyam, 1965. The two taxes are different in quality. A tax on the circumstances and property of a person is a tax in respect of his status and his property. It is a composite tax, but nonetheless a single tax. Although the status of a person and the property of that person are the two intertwined strands which enter into the composition of the tax, it is not possible to say that the tax can be considered as two distinct taxes under a single denomination. It is a single tax possessing a separate and distinct identity from all other taxes. It cannot be confused either with a tax on professions, trades, callings or employments nor with a tax on property. It is a composite tax, and the constituent elements which enter into its composition cannot be separated. In that regard, I confess I am unable to agree with the contrary view expressed in Zila Parishad, Muzaffarnagar v. Jugalkishore Ramswarup, AIR 1969 All 40 (FB) where legislative sanction for the tax was traced to two distinct provisions in List II of the Seventh Schedule of the Constitution, namely Entry 49 relating to tax on lands and buildings and Entry 60 relating to tax on professions, trades, callings and employments. But having regard to the ultimate conclusion to which I have come in this case, I do not think reference to a larger Bench is called for.

7. Now, as the Supreme Court observed in AIR 1957 SC 18 (supra) the word "circumstance" means "a man's financial position, his status as a whole depending upon, among other things, on his income from trade or business". The income from trade or business may be only one of the considerations determining his status and there may be other considerations which enter into that determination. Since a man's standing in his trade or business may not be the only consideration determining his status, I find it difficult to accept that if a tax is levied with respect to the status of a person it must be considered as a tax in respect of his profession, trade, calling or employment. But even if it be assumed that a tax with respect to the status of a person can be identified as a tax in respect of his profession, trade, calling or employment, it cannot be forgotten that the element of status does not by itself constitute circumstance and property Tax. The constituent element of property plays as essential a part in determining the quality of its composition. It appears to me that there can be no dispute that circumstance and property tax is a composite tax, and when the element of property necessarily enters into that composition I find it difficult to conceive that circumstance and property tax can be identified as a tax on professions, trades, callings or employments, which, as the plain language shows, is a tax exclusively related to the vocational activity of a person and has nothing to do with his property.

8. I may at once say that we are not concerned when determining the nature of circumstance and property tax, with the measure or quantum of the tax. The measure or quantum of the tax may be determined by reference to the income from the vocational activities of a person and from his property. It is possible that a person may have no property and yet circumstance and property tax may be assessed in his hands quantified on the basis of his vocational income. The quality or nature of the tax is a thing apart from its measure or quantum.

9. Upon these considerations, in my opinion, Art. 276 (2) of the Constitution cannot be invoked by the petitioner.

10. The decision in Civil Misc. Writ No. 2882 of 1966, D/- 20-2-1967 (All) (Supra) dealt with circumstance and property tax but it proceeded on the basis that it was a tax falling within the contemplation of Art. 276 (2) of the Constitution. The learned Judges relied upon the decision of the Supreme Court in Ram Krishna Ram Nath v. Janpad Sabha, AIR 1962 SC 1073. That case was concerned with Section 143 (2) of the Government of India Act, 1935 and Art. 277 of the Constitution and not with Sec. 142-A of the Government of India Act, 1935 and Art. 276 of the Constitution. In the view that circumstance and property tax cannot be considered as a tax contemplated by Art. 276 (2) of the Constitution, the protection of the proviso to Art. 276 (2) cannot be invoked by the petitioner. And as that is the entire submission on the basis of which relief is claimed by the petitioner, the case could have ended here.

11. It may, however, be desirable to ascertain whether circumstance and property tax levied before the commencement of the Constitution can be continued even thereafter. Article 277 of the Constitution provides, in my opinion, for the continued levy of such tax. It declares that a tax which immediately before the commencement of the Constitution was lawfully levied by a local authority for the purpose of a local area may, notwithstanding that the tax is mentioned in the Union List, continue to be levied and applied to the same purposes until provision to the contrary is made by Parliament by law. Circumstance and property tax was imposed in the constitutional context prevailing before the Government of India Act, 1935 came into force. It is not disputed before us that the tax continued as a valid imposition throughout, before the Government of India Act, 1935 was enacted and through all the years thereafter. Proceeding on that assumption, we must examine the effect upon that tax of the constitutional change over from the Government of India Act, 1935 to the Constitution of India. When the Constitution of India came into force, circumstance and property tax still did not find place as an entry expressly enumerated in any of the three Lists of the seventh Schedule. But there is the "residuary" entry, namely Entry 97 of List I, which deals with any matter not enumerated in the previous entries in List I nor enumerated in List II or List III. It seems to me upon this that circumstance and property tax will now fall within the legislative competence of Parliament. That being so, the provisions of Art. 277 come into play.

12. Circumstance and property tax was levied before the commencement of the Constitution by a local authority, and Art. 277 declares that it may be continued to be levied and applied to the same purposes notwithstanding that the tax now falls in the Union List until provision to the contrary is made by parliamentary law. There was considerable argument before us as to the true understanding of the Supreme Court decision in Ram Krishna Ram Nath, AIR 1962 SC 1073 (Supra). It seems to me that what was said there applies fully to the case before us. On the reasoning which appealed to the Supreme Court in that case, the Zila Parishad, Bareilly can be identified with the District Board, Bareilly. The area for whose benefit the tax is to be utilised and substantially the purposes for which the utilisation is to take place continued to be the same. It is true that some additional functions have been conferred upon the Zila Parishad, but that, in my opinion, is merely an extension of the functions imposed in the scope of local self-Government. The rate of tax remains at the level fixed by the Notification of 1933 and the incidence of the tax has not been shown to have altered in any manner. In nature and effect, it continues to be the same tax. Article 277 of the Constitution ensures the continued levy of the circumstance and property tax demanded from the petitioner.

13. In the result, the writ petition is dismissed with costs.

14. M. H. BEG, J.:— This reference to a Full Bench was occasioned by doubts entertained by my learned brethren R. S. Pathak and Gulati, JJ. about the correctness of the Division Bench decision of this Court in Civil Misc. Writ No. 2882 of 1966, D/- 20-2-1967 (All) by Hon'ble Beg, C. J. and Hon'ble Dwivedi, J., where it was held that circumstance and property tax of Rs. 2,000/-, imposed upon the assessee for the year 1965-66 by the Zila Parishad Allahabad, was not hit by the provisions of Article 276 (2) of the Constitution. This article reads as follows:—

"The total amount payable in respect of any one person to the State or to any one municipality, district board, local board or other local authority in the State by way of taxes on professions, trades, callings and employments shall not exceed two hundred and fifty rupees per annum.

Provided that if in the financial year immediately preceding the commencement of this Constitution there was in force in the case of any State or any such municipality, board or authority a tax on professions, trades, callings or employments the rate, or the maximum rate, of which exceeded two hundred and fifty rupees per annum, such tax may continue to be levied until provision to the contrary is made by Parliament by law, and any law so made by Parliament may be made either generally, or in relation to any specified States, municipalities, boards or authorities."

15. It appears from the judgment of the Division Bench in Allahabad Canning Co.'s case, Civil Misc. Writ No. 2882 of 1966, D/- 20-2-1967 (All.) (supra) that the contention of the petitioner's counsel in that case was that the tax imposed upon the petitioner was not the same tax as was being imposed under the U.P. District Boards Act X of 1922 before the commencement of the Constitution. The submission seemed to be that the identity of the tax was altered if it was levied under a subsequent enactment by a different body. Relying upon the decision of the Supreme Court, AIR 1962 SC 1073, the Division Bench rejected this contention. It pointed out that even if the body levying the tax was different, the identity of the tax was preserved. The Division Bench observed that the U.P. District Boards Act of 1922 had not been repealed by the U. P. Antaram Zila Parishad Act of 1958 which was a temporary Act revived by an amending Act I of 1960 after a gap of at least 13 days from the expiry of the temporary Act. It seems to have been also contended by the petitioner's counsel there that an expired Act could not be revived, but this contention was also rejected by the Division Bench. The case, was, however, decided on the assumption that the contention of the petitioner that the tax under consideration was one of the taxes mentioned in Article 276 of the Constitution was correct. Their Lordships observed:

"The law provided for the assessment of the tax on circumstances and property and fixing the amount of such tax as well as the resultant liability of a person to be assessed to such tax always remained in force, and will continue to be in force even after the assumed expiry of the Antaram Zila Parishad Act. Accordingly, the proviso to Article 276 will apply to the case."

16. It may also be pointed out that the Supreme Court decision in the case of Ram Krishna Ram Nath, AIR 1962 SC 1073 (supra), which was relied upon by the Division Bench, dealt with the application of Section 143(2) of the Government of India Act, 1935 which corresponds to Article 277 of the Constitution and not with Section 142-A which corresponds to Article 276 of the Constitution. Section 143(2) of the Government of India Act, 1935 enacted:

"143(2). Any taxes, duties, cesses or fees which, immediately before the commencement of Part III of this Act, were being lawfully levied by any Provincial Government, municipality or other local authorities or body for the purposes of the province, municipality, district or other local area under a law in force on the first day of January, nineteen hundred and thirty five, may, notwithstanding that those taxes, duties, cesses or fees are mentioned in the Federal Legislative List, continue to be levied and to be applied to the same purposes until provision to the contrary is made by the Federal Legislature."

17. It seems that no contention was advanced before the abovementioned Division Bench that the case of the petitioner before it did not fall within the purview of Article 276 inasmuch as a tax on the circumstances and property is not identical with a tax on a profession, trade, calling or employment with which Article 276 deals. It has been held recently by a Full Bench of this Court in AIR 1969 All 40, relying on the case of AIR 1957 SC 18, as follows:—

"In our view circumstances and property tax is leviable only on immoveable property (lands and buildings) or on financial status derived from profession, business or employment; and legislation in relation to such a tax is clearly within the competence of the said legislature by virtue of Items 49 and 60 of List II of the VII Schedule of the Constitution."

In other words, although the circumstances and property tax may include a tax on a profession, calling, or employment, yet, it cannot be said to be confined to the limits of such taxes. It is a composite tax. I confess that I find the terms 'circumstances and property' to be very vague. But, the validity of the 'circumstances and property' tax as such has not been questioned before us either on the ground that it is too vague and wide a class or a subject to taxation that it is outside the competence of the State Legislature to impose a tax which may fall within its scope. This brings me to the facts upon which the petitioner now before us came to this Court and the questions which have been argued before us.

18. The petitioner is a partnership firm manufacturing machinery and machine tools and carrying on the business of structural engineers. Its business extends all over India, but the registered office of the partnership is located at Clutter-buckganj within the area subject to the authority of the Zila Parishad, Bareilly. This very area was previously subject to the authority of the District Board, Bareilly, which functioned under the U.P. District Boards Act. The District Boards ceased to exist from 1st of May, 1958, but their powers were vested in or were transferred to the Antarim Zila Parishads set up under the U.P. Antarim Zila Parishad Act of 1958. The U.P. District Boards Act X of 1922 was only repealed districtwise, by Sec. 274 of the U.P. Kshettra Samitis and Zila Parishads Act XXXIII of 1961 (hereinafter referred to as the Act), from the date on which Kshettra Samitis were established in each district. The petitioner before us, on whom circumstances and property tax of Rs. 2,000/-, the maximum permissible under a rule notified on 25-9-1930 with reference to provisions of Sec. 114(d) of the U.P. District Boards Act, was imposed in 1965-66, objected to the payment of the tax on the ground that the levy was not the same as that made by the former District Board. The ground put forward for denying the identity of the tax imposed with what was being levied by the District Board before the Constitution was that the Kshettra Samitis and Zila Parishads under the Act were legally different entities from the District Board under the repealed Act.

19. Mr. Jagdish Swarup appearing for the petitioner drew our attention to the preamble of the U.P. District Boards Act of 1922 where the object of the Act was stated to be 'to make better provision for local self-Government in rural areas of the United Provinces' and to that of the U.P. Act No. XXXIII of 1961 which was intended to enable the Kshettra Samitis and the Zila Parishads established in the districts of Uttar Pradesh under the Act to undertake certain governmental functions in furtherance of the principle of democratic decentralization of governmental functions and for ensuring proper municipal government in rural areas. I do not think there is any need to refer to the preamble of the two Acts for the purpose of showing that the District Boards functioning under the Act of 1922 were very different bodies from the Zila Parishads and the Kshettra Samities set up under the Act XXXIII of 1961. The preamble need only be referred to if there is any ambiguity in the interpretation of the provisions of an Act. There is no such difficulty before us. In coming to the conclusion that the District Boards constituted under Chapter II of the U.P. Act X of 1922 and incorporated under Section 4 of that Act were entirely different in composition from the Kshettra Samities and Zila Parishads set up under Chapter II of the U.P. Act XXXIII of 1961 and incorporated under Sections 5 and 17 of the Act performing the functions given in Chapter III of the Act. The separate identity of a corporate body is sufficiently established by a separate incorporation which puts the seal of birth upon a new corporate entity.

20. The composition and identity of the body which levies a tax is one thing, but the identity of the tax which is levied by a body is another matter. It is possible that even though the agency through which the tax is imposed is different, yet, the tax, which continues to be levied through another governmental agency, is the same. It may not be out of place to mention here that the definition of the term "State", given in Article 12 of the Constitution, includes all governmental authorities within the territorial limits of the State whether they operate at the State level or at lower levels. One of the questions of construction which arises before us is whether the Article 276 (2) is applicable to the tax before us, and, if so, whether the proviso in Article 276(2) makes it imperative, as a condition precedent to the protection it gives to certain taxes, that the tax for which protection is sought must be levied by the same body which levied it in the financial year immediately preceding the commencement of the Constitution. It will be noticed that the proviso to Article 276(2) would only apply if the particular tax was being levied in the financial year immediately preceding the commencement of the Constitution. All the agencies through which the tax can be imposed are mentioned in the proviso, but the proviso does not anywhere enact that the continuance of the levy must also be by the very authority or agency through which the tax was being levied before the Constitution. Therefore, if Article 276(2) was really applicable to the circumstances and property tax imposed upon the petitioner, there was much to be said for adopting the interpretation accepted by the Divisional Bench in the Allahabad Canning Co.'s case, Civil Misc. Writ No. 2832 of 1966, D/- 20-2-1967 (All) according to which the identity of the body continuing to levy the tax was immaterial.

21. It, however, appears to me that we are bound to hold, in view of the authorities already mentioned above, that the tax before us is a composite tax and not merely a tax upon professions, callings, or employments. Therefore, it would not be correct to apply the limit imposed by Article 276(2) to such a tax at all. Hence, the question of invoking the aid of the proviso would not arise. Although, the circumstances and property tax may include a tax on an assessee's profession, calling, or employment, yet, the petitioner has not shown that the tax imposed upon him in the present case can be apportioned between a tax upon his business and a tax on his property. Nor has the petitioner taken up the case that the Zila Parishad of Bareilly is really taxing only a business or trade under the guise of taxing circumstances and property. The argument advanced on behalf of the petitioner proceeds on the basically incorrect assumption that a tax on circumstances and property must always be equated or identified with a tax on a business, calling, or employment. If that assumption is erroneous, as it appears to me to be clearly, the main plank of the petitioner's attack upon the assessment is removed.

22. I may mention here that one of the grounds taken up by the petitioner was that imposition of the tax is entirely arbitrary. No attempt was, however, made to show that the imposition of the tax was not correlated to the circumstances and property or the status of the petitioner. The burden of proving facts to justify such a contention lay upon the petitioner. As no argument was based on alleged arbitrariness in applying the maximum rate to the petitioner, it would be safe to assume that this ground has now been abandoned although taken up vaguely in the petition.

23. Learned counsel for the petitioner, in the course of argument, however, also relied on the provisions of Article 265 of the Constitution which prohibits the levy and collection of tax except by the authority of law. This provision only places the burden of showing the legal authority for the levy upon taxing authorities. The opposite parties, therefore, relied on provisions other than proviso to Art. 276(2) also to justify the tax.

24. As it appeared, in the course of the hearing, that the tax in question could not be entirely covered by Article 276 of the Constitution, the learned counsel for the petitioner was asked what reply he had to give to the possible view that the tax in question, not being a tax confined to a tax upon a business or calling wholly, did not fall under Article 276 of the Constitution but could be covered completely by Article 277 of the Constitution which corresponds to Section 143(2) of the Government of India Act. Article 277 reads as follows:—

"Any taxes, duties, cesses or fees which, immediately before the commencement of this Constitution, were being lawfully levied by the Government of any State or by any municipality or other local authority or body for the purposes of the State, may, notwithstanding that those taxes, duties, cesses or fees are mentioned in the Union List, continue to be levied and to be applied to the same purposes until provision to the contrary is made by Parliament by law."

25. The answer which the learned counsel for the petitioner gave to this point of view was that Article 277 applies only to taxes "mentioned in the Union List". It was contended that this conclusion was reinforced by the provision that the tax would continue to be levied and to be applied to the same purposes until provision to the contrary is made by Parliament by law. It was urged that unless the tax was specifically mentioned in the Union List it could not be protected by Article 277 of the Constitution. It was pointed out that, in Ram Krishna Ram Nath's case, AIR 1962 SC 1073 (supra), the Supreme Court was concerned with the validity of the 'terminal tax' which was specifically mentioned as item 58 of the Federal List in the seventh Schedule of the Government of India Act, 1935 and is now found as item 89 of the Union List in the Seventh Schedule to the Constitution. It was submitted that the contention of the opposite parties themselves also was that the tax in question was covered by the proviso to Art. 276.

26. It is true that the opposite parties had also primarily contended that the tax in question was protected by the proviso to Article 276. Learned counsel for the opposite parties, however, did not give up the alternative submission that it is also protected by Article 277 of the Constitution. Indeed, the learned counsel for the opposite parties relied upon 1955 All LJ 680 where a Division Bench of this Court held: "The circumstances and property tax, therefore, being a tax on income, is saved by reason of the provisions of Article 277 of the Constitution, provided that it was lawfully levied prior to the commencement of the Constitution. The Act was valid when it was enacted in 1922 when there was no division of powers between the Centre and the Provinces, as was held in District Board, Dehra Dun v. H. Trotter, 1939 All LJ 161 = (AIR 1939 All 389). It continued to be valid even under the Government of India Act, 1935 by reason of the provisions of Section 143, Clause (2) of that Act read with the seventh Schedule, List I, item 54."

27. The view adopted by the above mentioned Division Bench was that circumstances and property tax could be equated with income tax, and, therefore, was covered by item 82 of the Union List. Agarwala, J., speaking for the Division Bench, interpreted the majority view of Dayal and B. Prasad, JJ. in 1948 All LJ 338 = (AIR 1948 All 382 FB) to be that the tax on circumstances and property was really a tax on income. This view was sought to be supported by an application of the pith and substance rule and an examination of the provisions of Section 114 of the U.P. District Boards Act, 1922, indicating the character of a tax on circumstances and property. The relevant part of Section 114 which may be reproduced here, reads as follows:—

"The power of a board to impose a tax on circumstances and property shall be subject to the following conditions and restrictions, namely:

(a) the tax may be imposed on any person residing or carrying on business in the rural area (provided that such person has so resided or carried on business for a total period of at least six months in the year under assessment);

(b) no tax shall be imposed on any person whose total taxable income is less than two hundred rupees per annum;

(c) the rate of tax shall not exceed four pies in the rupee on the total taxable income; and

(d) the total amount of tax imposed on any person shall not exceed such maximum (if any) as may be prescribed by rule.

Explanation— For the purpose of this Section "taxable income means estimated income," but shall not include income of the following classes;

(i) "agricultural income" as defined in the Indian Income Tax Act, 1922,

(ii) income on which any tax has previously been imposed under Section 123 of the United Provinces Municipalities Act, 1916,

(iii) income on which any tax has previously been imposed by any other board under clause (b) of Section 108".

28. The Division Bench's view that circumstances and property tax could be identified with income tax was not accepted by the recent Full Bench in Zila Parishad Muzaffarnagar's case, AIR 1969 All 40 (FB) (supra).

29. I may respectfully point out that the nature of a tax cannot be conclusively shewn by the fact that its incidence is upon income. Even taxes upon professions, trades, callings, and employments can be viewed as taxes on income. It was for this reason, as Mudholkar, J. pointed out in AIR 1966 SC 249 at p. 257, that Section 142-A of the Government of India Act and Article 276 of our Constitution were enacted. But for these provisions taxes on businesses, professions, callings, and employments, could have been excluded from the State List as taxes on income. Article 276(1) clearly indicates that this was the reason for the provision. The incidence of taxes on circumstances and property will also generally fall on income. Again, income may be adopted as a yard stick for "quantifying" the tax as pointed out in S. C. Anand v. State of U.P., 1967 All LJ 999 = (AIR 1969 All 317) (FB) where the character of taxes covered by Article 276 was analysed by me (see at pp. 1009 to 1013 of All LJ) = (at pp. 326 to 329 of AIR). But, neither incidence of a tax on income nor the fact that income is its yardstick or measure for fixing the amount payable will determine the true character of a tax conclusively. The character of a tax is perhaps determined more accurately by answering the question; what is the legal basis of the tax or the reason without which there could be no such tax? In the case of a tax on circumstances and property, probably the best answer one could give to such a question is that it is a status (haisiyat) to use the Hindi equivalent which is the legal basis or the subject matter of the tax. Circumstances (including income) or property may serve as its sources or measures, but the resultant or the amalgam sought to be taxed could not perhaps be described more precisely than by using the term 'status' for it. Could such a tax on the petitioner's 'status' be saved by Article 277?

30. Both Articles 276 and 277 occur in Chapter I on 'Finance', in Part XII of the Constitution, under the heading; 'Distribution of Revenues between the Union and the States'. Each of these two articles seeks to preserve for authorities within a State, including local government bodies, certain pre-Constitution taxes which may otherwise fall outside the competence of State bodies. Article 276(2), however, imposes an upper limit of Rs. 250/- per person per annum on a fresh tax of the nature indicated there and levied by any particular State or local authority, but Article 277 deals more generally with pre-Constitution taxation. Even if it could be urged that the subject matter of Article 276(2), which deals with impositions by particular authorities, should govern the scope of the proviso intended to exempt "a tax" from the ambit of impositions which used to be made by particular authorities, it appears to me that the reference in Article 277 to "taxes, duties, cesses, or fees" which were being lawfully levied by any of the authorities mentioned there was intended only to describe the kind of taxation which had been taking place before the commencement of the Constitution and not to confine the power of continued taxation in future of the same character to the very authorities already in existence before the Constitution.

31. On the face of it, Article 277 of the Constitution means that if a tax fell within the class mentioned there it could be continued by an authority otherwise authorised to levy it and could be applied "to the same purposes" as it had been applied before the commencement of the Constitution. It could be contended that the non obstante clause only removes the bar which may arise from a mention of the tax, duty, cess, or fees in the Union List. Even if the non obstante clause was held to cut down the scope of the apparently wide sweep of Article 277, it seems to me that a tax on "circumstances and property" of every kind, not having been mentioned either in the State List or in the Concurrent List, could only be covered by entry No. 97 of the Union List read with Article 248 of the Constitution. Entry 97 reads as follows: "Any other matter not enumerated in List II or List III including any tax not mentioned in either of those lists". This entry thus mentions taxes not specifically mentioned in other lists. The Constitution makers must be deemed to be aware of the existence of a tax on "circumstances and property". A tax covered by entry 97 seems to me to satisfy the requirement that a tax, to be protected by Article 277, must be mentioned in the Union List. Such a requirement for all taxes sought to be saved by Article 277 seems logical and implied, although it is not clearly expressed in the article, because taxation falling full within the competence of State legislatures does not require to be saved at all with the help of either Article 276 or of Article 277.

32. The next requirement for the protection given by Article 277 of the Constitution is said to be that the tax must be shown to be applied for the same purposes as the pre-Constitution tax. On the language of Article 277 this seems to be a requirement for testing due application of proceeds of a tax only. Even if it were assumed to be a criterion for determining the character of a tax or for justifying its levy, the test does not seem to me to be capable of application with precision or strictness to taxation inasmuch as the very nature of a tax, as distinct from license fees, implies that it is not earmarked for specific purposes (see: The Himgir-Rampur Coal Co., Ltd. v. State of Orissa, AIR 1961 SC 459 at p. 464). It is presumed that taxation is meant for the benefit of the public which results from expenditure incurred or from schemes undertaken by State or local governmental authorities. A fulfilment of this broad purpose with reference to any particular area for which taxation takes place is all that could be required.

33. The areas for which District Boards were set up under Section 4 of the U.P. District Boards Act are identical with the areas for which Zila Parishads were set up under Section 17 of the Act. Both the District Boards as well as the Zila Parishads exercise their powers by means of resolutions and bye-laws operating in the districts under their authority. Section 174 of the U.P. District Boards Act enabled a District Board to make bye-laws for the purpose of promoting the health, safety, and convenience of the inhabitants of a district and for the furtherance of the administration of the district under the Act. Similarly, Sec. 239 of the Act enables a Parishad to make bye-laws for the same area "for the purpose of promoting or maintaining the health, safety, and convenience of the inhabitants of the rural area of the district and for the furtherance of the administration of this Act in the Khand and the District". There seems to be no real difference in the purposes stated in the two provisions.

34. A glance at the illustrative subjects given in Section 174(2) of the U.P. District Boards Act and their comparison with the much longer and more comprehensive list in Section 139(2) of the Act only indicates the growth of activities serving the same broad purposes. It appears to me that although the names of the bodies making the bye-laws have changed and the activities of the Zila Parishads and Kshettra Samities have become more extensive, yet, the broad purposes served by the District Boards set up under the U.P. District Boards Act are the same as those of the new bodies set up under the Act.

In judging the purposes of taxation by local Government bodies, the term "purposes", as it is used in a constitutional provision, cannot be narrowly construed because, as already indicated, all taxation is presumed to be for public benefit. So long as the areas served remain the same, the purpose cannot be said to be altered by any expansion of activities or changes in the composition of the local Government authority imposing the same tax for corresponding purposes under a fresh enactment. The object of Article 277 of the Constitution appears to be to provide for continuance of pre-existing taxes in the same local areas for the same broad purposes. That continuity is not broken by the succession of a new statutory body imposing the same tax and expending its activities for the benefit of the public of the same area. Article 277 appears to me to be enough to save and continue the impugned tax for purposes which have also continued.

35. The difficulty in accepting the line of reasoning indicated above is caused by the ratio decidendi of the recent Full Bench decision in AIR 1969 All 40 (FB) (supra) where an attack upon the validity of the tax on circumstances and property was repelled from a different angle. It was held there that such a tax was within the competence of the State Legislature as it was covered fully by Entries 49 and 60 of List II or the State List of the Seventh Schedule of the Constitution. If the circumstances and property tax is fully covered by the State List, there is no need to seek the protection of either Article 276 or of Article 277 at all to justify its levy under the Act. Indeed, both Articles 276 and 277 would become inapplicable if the circumstances and property tax is fully covered by the State List. As already indicated above, the presence of these articles in the Constitution, when Article 372 is there to save all laws existing before the Constitution until other provisions are made in that behalf, is explained by the need to bring within the competence of State and local governmental authorities and organs what would otherwise fall outside their taxing powers. Therefore, as soon as we adopt the line of reasoning and the ratio decidendi of the Full Bench decision in the case of Zila Parishad Muzaffarnagar, AIR 1969 All 40 (FB) (supra), as we are bound to do unless we were to refer the case to a still larger bench, it becomes unnecessary to decide whether the proviso to Article 276(2) or Article 277 protects the levy under consideration. On this view of the law, the tax could be supported simply by the authority of a post constitution statutory provision of the State Legislature. It would not require any other authority of law to sustain it.

36. Our attention has been drawn to such a post-Constitution provision made by the U. P. State Legislature. This is Section 270(a) of the Act which keeps alive, inter alia, any tax, rule, or bye-law or notification in force in a local area under the provisions of the U.P. District Boards Act X of 1922 until other provisions are made under the Act. S. 279(a) speaks also of other laws in force before "the appointed date", but, so far as taxes imposed under the provisions of the U.P. District Boards Act X of 1922 are concerned, this is immaterial. The impugned tax satisfies the requirements of Section 270(a) of the Act.

37. The only answer given by the learned counsel for the petitioner to the abovementioned contention was that Section 270(a) could not conflict with the provisions of Article 276 of the Constitution. This reply presupposes that Article 276 of the Constitution really applies to a case of circumstances and property tax. It is only if neither Article 276 nor Article 277 of the Constitution could apply to the case that the Zila Parishad need rely, as it did, on Section 270(a) of the Act. Article 372 of the Constitution also saves law existing before the Constitution until altered by competent authority provided it is not hit by other provisions of the Constitution to which it is subjected. Articles 276 and 277 of the Constitution were meant to protect certain pre-Constitution taxes even if they were hit by other provisions of the Constitution. If, however, as held by the Full Bench in the Zila Parishad Muzaffarnagar's case, AIR 1969 All 40 (FB) (supra), the circumstances and property tax falls fully within the State List, there would be no conflict between the legislative spheres of the Parliament and State Legislatures when the State Legislature authorises it. Section 270(a) of the Act thus seems to provide a complete answer to the petitioner's attack upon the circumstances and property tax imposed by the Zila Parishad.

38. I confess that I find some difficulty, with great respect, in unhesitatingly accepting the view expressed by the Full Bench in the Zila Parishad Muzaffarnagar's case, AIR 1969 All 40 (FB) as the terms 'Circumstances and Property' are too vague and undefined to be capable of being confined to Items 49 and 60 of List II of the Seventh Schedule. They could easily embrace other items mentioned in both State and Union Lists. Therefore, I find entry No. 97 of the Union List I to be more appropriate for so vaguely described a tax. But, as the ultimate result will be the same whether the tax is held to be covered and protected by Article 277 or by Entries 49 and 60 of the State List, I do not think that this particular case would justify a reference by us to a still larger bench. We must, under the circumstances, follow the earlier Full Bench decision.

39. I may summarise my views as follows—

The conclusion reached by the Division Bench in Allahabad Canning Company's case, Civil Misc. Writ No. 2882 of 1966, D/- 22-2-1967 (All) (supra), that the continuance of the circumstances and property tax was legally justified, was correct, but the assumption on which it rested, that the tax was within the purview of Article 276 exclusively, cannot be said to be correct as it is inconsistent with the view that it is a composite tax as held by the Full Bench of this Court in the case of Zila Parishad Muzaffarnagar, AIR 1969 All 40 (FB) (supra) following the Supreme Court's decision in Ram Narain's case, AIR 1957 SC 18 (supra). The view expressed by another Division Bench in Tata Oil Mills' case, 1955 All LJ 630 (supra), that such a tax is protected by Article 277 of the Constitution, could be justified on the footing that the tax falls under Item 97 of the Union List instead of by holding, as this Division Bench held, that it fell under Item No. 82 of the Union List which is there for "taxes on income other than agricultural income". But, as the ratio decidendi of the Full Bench decision in Zila Parishad Muzaffarnagar's case, AIR 1969 All 40 (FB) (supra), which we are bound to follow, was that circumstances and property tax is fully within the competence of the State Legislature, its levy did not need any authority beyond what is found in Sec. 270(a) of the Act to justify it on facts set up in the case before us.

40. This writ petition must, therefore, be dismissed with costs.

41. TRIPATHI, J.— I concur with my learned brother Beg. J. that this petition must be dismissed, but my reasons are different.

42. The petitioner is a partnership firm having its registered office at Clutterbuckganj, Bareilly, which lies within the jurisdiction of the Zila Parishad of Bareilly. The petitioner-firm deals in the repairs and manufacture of sugar-cane machinery and machine tools. For the year 1964-65 the Zila Parishad Bareilly demanded and realised from the petitioner a sum of Rs. 1500/- as circumstances and property tax, and for the year 1965-66 it assessed a sum of Rs. 2000/- which is the maximum amount permissible, as circumstances and property tax on the petitioner. The petitioner has filed the present writ petition challenging the validity of the aforesaid assessment and has, inter alia, prayed for the issue of "a writ, order or direction in the nature of mandamus or any other appropriate writ, direction or order commanding the opposite parties not to recover from the petitioner the impugned tax, at any rate, not in excess of Rs. 250/- per annum."

43. On reference, the petition came up for hearing before a Division Bench (Hon'ble Pathak and Gulati JJ.) where the respondents placed reliance on an unreported decision of another Division Bench (N. U. Beg. C. J. and S. N. Dwivedi, J.) in the case of the Allahabad Canning Co., Bamrauli, Civil Misc. Writ No. 2882 of 1966 (All.) which completely covered the issues arising in the case. The Division Bench, however, felt some difficulty in accepting the dictum enunciated in the aforesaid decision and thought it expedient to refer the petition for consideration by a Full Bench. That is how the case has come up before us.

44. It is not disputed that prior to the commencement of the Constitution and even after such commencement but before the enactment of Kshettra Samities and Zila Parishads Act 1961, the U.P. District Boards Act (Act X of 1922) applied to the district of Bareilly and the rules framed thereunder permitted the imposition of a tax on circumstances and property upto the extent of Rs. 2000/-. It is also admitted that even after the repeal of the aforesaid Act the circumstances and property tax had been levied to that extent in the area under the Antaram Zila Parishad Act which came into force on the 29th of March, 1958.

45. Mr. Jagdish Swarup, learned counsel for the petitioner, has argued the case on the footing that the circumstances and property tax levied by the local bodies is in the nature of a tax in respect of professions, trades, callings or employments within the meaning of Article 276 of the Constitution. His contention, however, is that under Clause (2) of the aforesaid Article the total amount payable in respect of any one person to the State or to any local authority in the State by way of such taxes cannot exceed Rs. 250/- per annum and the proviso to the aforesaid Article does not come into play in the instant case. It is contended that the proviso to Article 276 of the Constitution is in the nature of a saving clause intended to prevent sudden dislocation of the finances and working of the particular local bodies which were in existence at the time of the commencement of the Constitution. But where new local bodies have been incorporated and constituted under different enactments, and the earlier ones have ceased to exist such new bodies being separate and distinct corporate entities from those which had been levying the circumstances and property tax on the eve of the Constitution, cannot take advantage of the proviso to continue levying such taxes beyond the permissible limit of Rs. 250/- per annum.

It is urged that for saving such a taxation under the proviso it is necessary that the local body levying such a tax is identical in its nomenclature, objective and area of operation with one which had been imposing such a tax before the commencement of the Constitution, and with the repeal of United Provinces District Boards Act, 1922 under Section 274 of the Kshettra Samities and Zila Parishads Act, the District Board of Bareilly ceased to exist and the Zila Parishad which was established and incorporated under Section 17 of the Act was a different and distinct entity than the former having a different and more comprehensive aim for its achievement and as such it cannot claim the benefit of the proviso to Article 276 of the Constitution. Mr. Jagdish Swarup contends that in the case of the Allahabad Canning Co., Bamrauli (supra) this aspect of the question was not canvassed before the Division Bench, with the result that the decision in that case requires reconsideration.

46. Having given my anxious consideration to the points raised by the learned counsel, I regret my inability to agree with him. In my opinion, the questions posed by the learned counsel were equally in view of the Division Bench which heard Civil Misc. Writ No. 2882 of 1966 (All.), and the Division Bench, relying on a decision of their Lordships of the Supreme Court in AIR 1962 SC 1073 has given correct answers to those questions.

47. In the light of the decision of the Supreme Court in AIR 1957 SC 18 a Full Bench of this Court, inter alia, held in the case of AIR 1969 All 40 (FB) that,

"circumstances and property tax is leviable only on immovable property (lands and buildings) or on financial status derived from profession, business or employment."

In view of this Full Bench decision Mr. Jagdish Swarup conceded that the circumstances and property tax in the instant case was in the nature of a tax on professions, trades or callings, as envisaged under Article 276 of the Constitution. That being so, I have to determine the validity or otherwise of the aforesaid tax in the light of Article 276 only because the question relating to the applicability of Article 277 of the Constitution has not been seriously canvassed at the Bar from either side.

48. The relevant part of Article 276 of the Constitution reads:

"276 (1) Taxes on professions, trades, callings and employments. Notwithstanding anything in Art. 246, no law of the Legislature of a State relating to taxes for the benefit of the State or of a municipality, district board, local board or other local authority therein in respect of professions, trades, callings or employments shall be invalid on the ground that it relates to a tax on income.

(2) The total amount payable in respect of any one person to the State or to any one municipality, district board, local board or other local authority in the State by way of taxes on professions, trades, callings and employments shall not exceed two hundred and fifty rupees per annum:

Provided that if in the financial year immediately preceding the commencement of this Constitution there was in force in the case of any State or any such municipality, board or authority a tax on professions, trades, callings or employments the rate, or the maximum rate, of which exceeded two hundred and fifty rupees per annum, such tax may continue to be levied until provision to the contrary is made by Parliament by law, and any law so made by Parliament may be made either generally or in relation to any specified States, Municipalities, boards or authorities."

Clause (2) of the Article puts a ban on payment of tax on professions, trades or callings, referred to in Clause (1) in excess of rupees two hundred and fifty per annum to the State or to any local authority after the commencement of the Constitution. The proviso however calls out an exception and lays down that:

"Where in the financial year immediately preceding the commencement of this Constitution there was in force in the case of any State or any such municipality, board or authority a tax on professions, trades, callings or employments the rate, or the maximum rate, of which exceeded two hundred and fifty rupees per annum, such tax may continue to be levied"

49. Mr. Jagdish Swarup has argued that the word 'such' which falls before the words 'municipality, board or authority' indicates that in order to take advantage of this proviso the identity of the pre-Constitution and post-Constitution local bodies must be the same. I am unable to agree with this contention. It will be noticed that in Clause (1) of the Article the words used are "the State or a municipality, district board, local board". In the proviso the word 'such' has been used in a generic sense to distinguish the local bodies from the State and not from one another amongst themselves.

50. In the case of AIR 1962 SC 1073 the Supreme Court had, inter alia, observed:

"The principal contention however, raised on behalf of the appellant before the High Court was based upon a denial of the identity of the authorities—three Janpad Sabhas with the District Council, Bhandara which levied and collected the tax prior to April 1, 1937. The learned Judges of the High Court rejected this contention and held that the three Janpad Sabhas which replaced the District Council of Bhandara were in substance identical with the "latter principally for the reason that the area covered by the three newly created Janpads was the same as that for which the District Council functioned and that the purposes for which the tax collected would be utilized—which are the criteria specified in Section 143 (2) — were exactly the same. Just as it could not be disputed that if there were any change in the composition of the District Council the identity of a local authority would not be altered for the purposes of S. 143(2), the mere splitting up of that local area for being administered by a plurality of Local Government units would not effect any change material for the purposes of the continued exigibility of the tax under S. 143(2). The learned Attorney-General therefore very properly did not press before us this point based upon the disappearance of the District Council and its being replaced by the respondent Sabhas as any ground for denying to the respondent-Sabhas the right to levy the tax."

51. In the light of this observation it must be held that it is the identity of purpose for which the tax has been imposed prior to and in the post-Constitution era and the area of its operation which is of paramount importance and not the identity of the bodies levying such taxes. While delivering the judgment of the Division Bench in the case of Canning Company, Civil Misc. Writ No. 2882 of 1966, D/- 20-2-1967 (All) (Supra) Hon'ble Dwivedi J. referring to the aforesaid decision of the case observed as follows:—

"This case arose under Section 143 (2) of the Government of India Act, 1935, the provisions of which were analogous to Art. 276 of the Constitution. In that case a terminal tax was originally levied under Section 51 of the Central Provinces and Berar Local Self-Government Act, 1920. Subsequently the said tax was continued to be levied by the Central Provinces and Berar Local Self-Government Act, 1948 which came into force on June 11, 1948. It may be noted that the Act of 1920 contemplated the formation of a District Council. Under the Act of 1948, however, these District Councils were replaced by Janpad Sabhas which comprised smaller areas. In spite, however, of the change in the nature of the groups that constituted councils and Janpads, and in spite of the fact that a new Act was enacted to continue the said tax, their Lordships of the Supreme Court held that the tax remained the same. In view of the principle laid down in this case we find it difficult to accept the contention of the learned counsel for the petitioner."

52. I am in respectful agreement with this observation and propose to analyse the facts in its light.

53. The Kshettra Samitis and Zilla Parishads Act, 1961 provides for the incorporation of two separate entities. The Kshettra Samitis incorporated under Section 5 are to be a body corporate having perpetual succession and common seal. Same is the case with the Zila Parishads which are to be incorporated under Section 17 of the Act. The powers, functions and duties of the two bodies incorporated under the Act are entirely distinct and their funds are separate from one another. A perusal of the various sections of the Act will indicate that while the Kshettra Samitis have been constituted "to undertake certain Governmental functions at Kshettra level", the Zila Parishads have been constituted "for ensuring proper municipal Government in Rural Areas". It must, therefore, be held that the object of the incorporation of the Zila Parishads is the same, namely "to make proper provision for Local Self-Government in rural areas" as has been that of the Boards constituted under the District Boards Act, 1922. It cannot be disputed that there is no other local authority except the Zila Parishad which is making provisions for Local Self Government in the rural areas. There is no dispute also that the area of operation of the present Zila Parishads and the erstwhile District boards is the same.

54. Chapter VI of the Act deals with funds, property and contracts. Sections 99 and 100 which are relevant to the questions in controversy are these:

"99. Zila Nidhi and Kshettra Nidhi—

(1) There shall be established for each Zila Parishad a fund called Zila Nidhi and for each Kshettra Samiti a fund called Kshettra Nidhi, to the credit whereof shall be placed all sums received and all loans raised by or on behalf of the Zila Parishad or the Kshettra Samiti, as the case may be;

Provided that a Zila Parishad or a Kshettra Samiti shall earmark parts of the fund received by it for a particular purpose for that purpose and shall expend the same in carrying out that purpose.

(2) Nothing in this section shall affect any obligations of a Parishad or a Kshettra Samiti arising from a trust legally imposed upon or accepted by it.

(3) A Parishad or a Kshettra Samiti may receive such contributions in cash or in kind as may be made by any person for any work of public utility and the Parishad or the Kshettra Samiti shall, thereupon, utilize the same together with its contributions, wherever necessary, in executing such work.

100. Parishad to be local authority under the Local Authorities Loans Act.

(1) A Parishad shall be deemed to be a local authority as defined in the Local Authorities Loans Act, 1914, and shall be subject to all its provisions and the rules made thereunder for the purpose of borrowing money under that Act.

(2) Subject to the provisions of S. 31 of the Reserve Bank of India Act, 1934 and with the prior sanction of the State Government a Parishad may raise loans in the open market by the issue of debentures in the manner and for the objects and subject to the conditions, including the condition of maintaining a sinking fund to be prescribed by rules."

55. It is obvious that the two local bodies constituted under the Act have their separate funds and the Parishad alone is to be recognised as the local authority as defined in the Local Authorities Loans Act, 1950. Section 33 of the Act which defines the powers and functions of the Zila Parishad, read with Schedule II indicates that the primary function of the Zila Parishad is nothing else but to continue and improve upon the services which were formerly rendered by the District boards to the rural community in the matter of municipal Government. In view of these provisions I am of opinion that the District Boards constituted under the Act of 1922 and the present Zila Parishads are substantially identical in respect of their objectives, area of operation and the purposes for which the taxes were levied, collected and used by them.

56. Section 119 gives powers to the Zila Parishad to impose a tax on Circumstances and Property and Section 120 (1) provides for the continuance of Circumstances and Property tax. The relevant part of Section 120 (1) reads,

"Where immediately before the appointed date there was in force a tax on Circumstances and Property in any district imposed or continued under the United Provinces District Boards Act, 1922, such tax shall until abolished or altered with the previous sanction of the State Government, continue to be levied by the Zila Parishad at the same rates and under the same conditions at and under which it was being levied under the Act....."

This section authorises the Zila Parishad to continue to levy at the same rates. The contention of the petitioner that Sec. 120 of the Zila Parishads Act is in contravention of Art. 276 of the Constitution, and as such is either wholly void or cannot be held to authorise imposition of more than Rs. 250 per year as Circumstances and Property tax, is, in my opinion, without any substance in view of the proviso to Art. 276 of the Constitution.

57. Mr. S. N. Misra, learned counsel for the respondents, invited our attention to Section 270 of the Zila Parishads Act which provides for the continuation of appointments, taxes, budget estimates, assessments, made, issued, imposed or granted under the United Provinces District Boards Act or the Uttar Pradesh Antarim Zila Parishad Act or any other law in force in any local area immediately before the enforcement of the Zila Parishads Act and to a Division Bench decision of this Court in the case of Tata Oil Mills Co., Ltd. v. The District Board of Allahabad, 1955 All LJ 830 in which it was, inter alia, held that "the circumstances and property tax being a tax on income is saved by reason of the provisions of Art. 277 of the Constitution, provided that it was lawfully levied prior to the commencement of the Constitution".

58. As however, the case was argued by the petitioner on the footing that such a tax was in the nature of a tax on professions, trades and callings and as I am satisfied that the points raised in support of this writ petition are fully covered by the Judgment of the Division Bench in the case of Allahabad Canning Co., Civil Misc. Writ No. 2882 of 1966, D/- 20-2-1967 (All), referred to above, with which I am in respectful agreement, I refrain from expressing any opinion on these points.

59. I will, therefore, dismiss this petition with costs.

60. BY THE COURT:— For the reasons set out in our respective judgments the writ petition is dismissed with costs.

Petition dismissed.

AIR 1970 ALLAHABAD 330 (V 57 C 51)
FULL BENCH

JAGDISH SAHAI, SATISH CHANDRA
AND R. L. GULATI, JJ.

M/s. Hajilal Mohammad Bidi Works, Allahabad, Petitioner v. The State of U. P. and others, Opposite Parties.

Civil Misc. Writ Petns. Nos. 955, 1369 and 1621 of 1968, D/- 30-9-1969.

Sales Tax — U. P. Sales Tax Act (15 of 1948), S. 8 (1-A) — Scope — For recovery of interest under the section — Sales Tax Officer not required to make assessment order in respect of interest and issue a notice of demand in respect of interest — 1968 All LJ 970, Overruled.

Per Majority (Gulati J. Contra)— In order to recover interest under S. 8 (1-A) of the U. P. Sales Tax Act it is not necessary for the sales tax officer to make an assessment order in respect of the interest and to issue a notice of demand in respect of such interest. 1968 All LJ 970, Overruled. (Paras 15, 30)

Per Gulati, J. (Contra)— In order to recover the interest under S. 8 (1-A) of the U. P. Sales Tax Act as arrears of land revenue, it is necessary for the sales tax officer to serve upon the assessee a notice of demand in pursuance of an order quantifying the amount of interest (even though it may not be an order of assessment) and on the assessee's failure to comply with the notice of demand to issue a recovery certificate to the Collector specifying therein the amount of interest sought to be recovered. (Para 68)

Cases Referred: Chronological Paras

(1968) 1968 All LJ 970 = 23 STC

423, Beni Ram Mool Chand v. Sales Tax Officer, Fatehgarh 14, 17, 29, 34, 35

(1968) Writ No. 1659 of 1967, D-13-9-1968 (All), Ram Autar Agarwal v. Sales Tax Officer 63

(1967) AIR 1967 SC 556 (V 54) = (1967) 63 ITR 310, Commr. of Income Tax v. Godawari Sugar Mills Ltd. 49

(1967) AIR 1967 Mad 249 (V 54) = (1967) 65 ITR 301, Collector of North Arcot v. Kannan 63

(1965) AIR 1965 SC 1818 (V 52) = (1965) 57 ITR 149, Narayan Row v. Ishwarlal Bhagwandas 49

(1964) AIR 1964 SC 1473 (V 51) = (1964) 52 ITR 538, Income Tax Officer, Kolar Circle v. Sekhu Buchiah Setty 29, 63

(1964) (1964) 51 ITR 29 (Bom), Vimlaben Khimji v. H. S. Manvi- kar 63

(1964) 1964-52 ITR 408 (Mys), Sri- ramiah v. Income Tax Officer 63

(1959) AIR 1959 SC 352 (V 46) = (1959) 35 ITR 408, Commr. of Income-tax, Delhi v. Teja Singh 49

(1958) AIR 1958 SC 875 (V 45) = (1958) 34 ITR 143, M. K. Venkata- chalam v. Bombay Dyeing and Manufacturing Co., Ltd. 49

(1952) 1952 AC 109 = (1951) 2 All ER 587, East End Dwellings Co. v. Finsbury Borough Council 49

S. N. Kacker, Dhar and A. S. Kapoor, for Petitioners; Standing Counsel, for Op- posite Parties.

JAGDISH SAHAI, J.:— The following question of law has been referred for the opinion of this Full Bench by a Division Bench of this Court:—

"Whether, in order to recover interest under Section 8 (1-A) of the U. P. Sales Tax Act, it is necessary for the Sales Tax Officer to make an assessment order in respect of the interest and to issue a notice of demand in respect of such interest."

2. In 1963 the Sales Tax (Second Amendment) Act was enforced. Section 2 of this Act added sub-section (1-A) to Section 8 of the principal Act. That provision reads:—

"If the tax payable under sub-section (1) remains unpaid for six months after the expiry of the time specified in the notice of assessment and demand, or the commencement of the Uttar Pradesh Bikri Kar (Dwitiya Sanshodhan), Adhiniyam, 1963, whichever is later, then without prejudice to any other liability or penalty which the defaulter may in consequence of such non-payment, incur under this Act, simple interest at the rate of eighteen per cent per annum 'shall run on the amount' then remaining due from the date of expiry of the time specified in the said notice, or from the commencement of the said Adhiniyam, as the case may be and shall be added to the amount of tax and be deemed for all purposes to be part of the tax."

Provided that where as a result of appeal, revision or reference, or of any other order of a competent Court or authority, the amount of tax is varied, the interest shall be 'recalculated accordingly':

Provided further that the interest on the excess amount of tax payable under an order of enhancement shall run from the date of such order if such excess remains unpaid for six months after the order".

(Underlined (here into ' ') by me) Section 3 of the amending Act introduced Section 33 in the principal Act. It provides that in respect of a sum recoverable under the Act as arrears of land revenue the assessing authority could forward to the Collector a certificate of recovery specifying the sum due. This provision further provides that the certificate would be conclusive evidence of the existence of the liability, the amount of liability and the person so liable. The Collector is required to recover the amount mentioned in the certificate as if it were arrears of land revenue.

3. The controversy between the parties relates to the interpretation of Section 8 (1-A) and the question for consideration is whether in the absence of notices of demand having been issued by the Sales Tax Officer requiring the petitioners to pay interest, the recovery proceedings in that behalf are competent.

4. To decide the question of law referred to us it is necessary to mention in brief certain facts relating to the cases before us. The dispute between the parties relates to the assessment years 1957-58 and 1958-59. Assessment orders on the petitioners in respect of these years were passed by the Sales Tax Officer on June 10, 1959 and February 12, 1963 respectively.

5. Recovery certificates were issued under Section 8 of the Act by the Sales Tax Officer to the Collector in respect of the assessments mentioned above as the amount assessed was not paid. The petitioners' case is that the entire amount of tax assessed by means of the two orders mentioned above has been paid and now the objection is confined only to the recovery of interest.

6. It has been contended on behalf of the assessee petitioners that Section 8 (1-A) creates a legal fiction that the amount of interest which is added to the tax is a part of the tax and for that reason the procedure for the demand of the tax should be followed also in respect of the recovery of the amount of interest.

7. What is provided in Section 8 (1-A) is:—

(1) That if the tax payable under sub-section (1) remains unpaid for six months after the expiry of the time specified in the notice of assessment and demand, or the commencement of the Uttar Pradesh Bikri Kar (Dwitiya Sanshodhan) Adhiniyam, 1963, whichever is later, interest at the rate of eighteen per cent per annum shall run on the amount then remaining due from the date of expiry of the time specified in the said notice, or from the commencement of the said Adhiniyam, as the case may be.

(2) That the amount of interest shall be deemed for all purposes to be part of the tax.

(3) That if as a result of appeal, revision or reference, the amount of tax is varied, the interest shall be recalculated.

(4) That the interest on the excess amount of tax payable under an order of enhancement shall run from the date of such order if such excess remains unpaid for six months after the order.

8. The entire argument of Mr. Kacker is based upon the words "and be deemed for all purposes to be part of the tax". He contends that inasmuch as the law makes the interest a part of the tax, the formalities required for the enforcement of the tax liability must be followed in the case of the enforcement of interest liability also and that inasmuch as in the case of the enforcement of liability of tax simpliciter, a notice of assessment and demand should issue. In the case of interest also a notice of assessment and demand should issue. In support of this contention it has been contended that the language of the statute is clear and that inasmuch as it declares that the interest shall "be deemed for all purposes to be part of the tax", it must be treated to be tax. Learned counsel has contended that there is no reason to whittle down the clear language of Section 8 (1-A) of the Act. It is contended that the words being clear, full effect should be given to them and the full benefit of the legal fiction should be extended to the petitioners. In this connection it has been contended that in case restricted meanings are given to these words, the result would be that if there is any dispute between the revenue and the assessee in respect of either the chargeability or the quantum of interest, the assessee would have no forum to go.

It is contended that that could not be the intention of the legislature. It is urged that on the other hand if the words mentioned above are given their full grammatical meaning, the interest liability can also be made subject matter of appeal under Section 9, of revision under Section 10 and of reference to this Court under Section 11 of the Act. Learned counsel contends that the legislature could not have intended to make an assessee remediless in respect of an appeal or a revision or a reference with regard to interest liability. It is also contended that if restricted meanings are given to the words "and be deemed for all purposes to be part of the tax", the result would be that in a case where there has been default in the payment of tax, but the tax amount has been paid before recovery certificate is actually issued, the amount of interest would not be recoverable as arrears of land revenue. It is contended that clearly the legislature could not have intended that even though it creates a legal fiction that interest was a part of the tax and tax itself can be recovered as arrears of land revenue under certain circumstances, interest cannot be so recovered.

9. Having heard the learned counsel for the parties, I am of the opinion that the question referred to us should be answered in the negative, against the assessee petitioners and in favour of the Commissioner, Sales Tax.

10. My reasons are as follows:—

(1) Section 8 falls under Chapter IX, which is headed "Payment and Recovery of Tax". Section 8 itself is headed as "Payment and recovery of tax" and deals with the manner in which the tax shall be realised. The legislature has added sub-section (1-A) to Section 8 of the Act. The provision for interest has been introduced in the Act in order to facilitate recovery of the tax and to bring pressure on the assessee to pay it. Consequently the provisions of Section 8 (1-A) operate only in the field of recovery and the scope of the words "be deemed for all purposes to be part of the tax" must necessarily be confined to interest being treated as a part of the tax for the limited purpose of recovering the tax. It appears to me that the sole purpose of creating this legal fiction was to make the recovery of interest as also as arrears of tax whether it be recovery from a living assessee or partners of a dissolved firm (S. 3-C) or executors, administrators and other legal representatives of a deceased assessee (Section 7-C) or it was the invocation of Section 14 of the Act, i.e. to launch prosecution with a view to realise or recover interest. It has been contended on the basis of Section 8 (8) of the Act that the amount of interest could be recovered as arrears of land revenue under that provision and for that reason the object of creating the legal fiction under S. 8 (1-A) could not be to recover the interest as arrears of land revenue.

11. Section 8 (8) reads:—

"Any tax or 'other dues' payable to the State Government under this Act, or any amount of money which a person is required to pay to the assessing authority under sub-section (3) or for which he is personally liable to the assessing authority under sub-section (6) shall be recoverable as arrears of land revenue." (Underlined (here into ' ') by me). The argument is that interest would be comprehended in the expression "other dues and for that reason it could be recovered as arrears of land revenue even though the legal fiction created by Sec. 8 (1-A) was not there.

12. It is submitted that inasmuch as there is already a provision in the Act making interest recoverable as arrears of land revenue, the legislature could not have provided for the same thing by introducing the legal fiction mentioned above. In the first place, the scope of the words "be deemed for all purposes to be part of the tax" is not confined only to recovery of interest as arrears of land revenue, but extends to recovery of interest by all modes. Secondly, it may be pointed out that the liability to pay interest did not exist under the Act before the introduction of Section 8 (1-A) in it by Act No. 3 of 1964 even though Section 8 (8) existed there. Therefore, when Section 8 (8) was enacted, "other dues" did not comprehend interest at least until Act 3 of 1964 was passed. I am therefore, not impressed with this submission of Mr. Kacker. Section 8 (1-A) is a special provision relating to interest. The legislature decided to provide for payment of interest by tax defaulters and for that reason enacted a self-contained provision for it in the shape of Section 8 (1-A) of the Act. It for the first time creates not only the liability to pay interest, but also provides the rate of interest chargeable and the mode of recovery. Section 8 (8) is a general section and may now for the sake of argument include interest in its scope, whereas Section 8 (1-A) is a self-contained special provision dealing with interest liability only. There can be a general provision as also a special provision and in such cases the special will exclude the general. At best it can be said that there would be some overlapping between Section 8 (8) of the Act and the words "be deemed for all purposes to be a part of the tax" if these words are held to mean "deemed to be a tax for recovery purposes". Assuming it is so, the provisions of Section 8 (1-A) being self-contained in respect of interest and having been brought in by means of an amendment it would be inconsistent with the scheme of that provision to hold that it did not provide mode of recovery of interest and even though the words "be deemed for all purposes to be part of the tax" clearly mean "deemed to be part of the tax for recovery purposes", those meanings should not be given to it.

(2) Section 8 (1-A) uses the words "simple interest at the rate of eighteen per cent per annum shall run on the amount then remaining due" in contradistinction to the words "determine" the turnover and "assess" the tax used in Section 7 of the Act which deals with assessments. The use of the word "run" indicates that the liability to pay interest is automatic and a separate proceeding in respect of it is not required. This conclusion also follows from the words "shall be added to the amount of tax". The addition of interest to the amount of tax is also automatic. Therefore, it appears to me that no separate order for interest is required nor is it necessary to issue a demand notice. Default in payment of the tax would automatically attract the liability of interest being calculated on the amount under default and the liability to pay interest follows from the provisions of Section 8 (1-A) of the Act and is not dependent on any order passed or proceedings started for the assessment of the amount of interest.

(3) The first proviso to Section 8 (1-A) shows that the matter of interest is one of pure calculation, the word used being "recalculated", and not one of assessment. That being the position, neither an assessment order nor a notice of demand is necessary.

(4) It would be noticed that no amendment has been made in Section 9 to provide for an appeal against interest liability. Whereas Section 9 allows an appeal against an order allowing or refusing an application for exemption certificate, an order imposing a penalty under Section 15-A or an order of assessment made under Sections 7, 7-A, 7-B, 7-C and 7-D, it has not been so amended as to provide for an appeal against the supposed order of interest.

13. Section 11 of the Act gives the revising authority the jurisdiction to call for the record and examine the legality or propriety of any order made by the assessing or the revising authority. Inasmuch as there has been no amendment in Section 9 of the Act, providing for an appeal against the supposed order of interest, and inasmuch as the law does not require the assessing authority to pass an order imposing interest, the addition of interest cannot be revised in a revision application. The reference under Section 11 is confined to orders made under Section 10. It would appear that no reference can also be made in respect of interest matter. If interest were a part of the tax for all purposes and if assessment proceedings were required for its imposition, the provisions relating to appeal, revision and reference would have been suitably amended.

(5) By the very nature of things it is not possible to have proceedings started for the assessment of interest and for the issue of a notice of demand for the same. Clearly the notice of demand must mention the specific sum, otherwise it would not be a notice of demand at all. It is not possible to issue such a notice until the defaulting assessee has paid the tax and the Sales Tax Officer knows the date of payment. If what Mr. Kacker says is correct, then the assessing authority has not only to mention in the recovery certificate that a specific amount has to be recovered as unpaid tax, but a certain amount has also to be paid as interest. Obviously the amount of interest that the assessee has to pay cannot be mentioned in the notice of demand because that has to be calculated and one of the factors required in making the calculation would be the date of payment of tax.

(6) A notice of demand or a copy of the assessment order is served on the assessee in order to enable him to know what amount he has to pay. An assessment order is passed in order to determine the liability of the assessee in respect of the tax. In respect of interest, no such considerations exist. The law itself provides that the interest shall run on the unpaid tax at eighteen per cent and shall be added to it. There is thus only a question of calculation and not one of determination as is the case with the orders of assessment of tax.

(7) I find no merits in the submission that if the legal fiction created by Section 8 (1-A) is confined only to recovery proceedings, the assessee would be without a remedy in respect of interest. The assessee can always resort to remedy open to him in cases where tax is sought to be recovered in excess of the amount due. While making such objections, he can also say that the interest has been wrongly calculated or charged. The relief in respect of the interest would clearly be consequential and the Sales Tax Officer would have full jurisdiction to go into the matter. No analogy can be drawn from the Income-tax Act, the provisions of the Act and the Income-tax Act being different.

14. Mr. Kacker has placed reliance upon Beni Ram Mool Chand v. Sales Tax Officer, Fatehgarh, 1968 All LJ 970. This decision, no doubt, supports his contention, but with great respect to the learned Judges who decided it, I am unable to agree that the decision lays down correct law.

15. For the reasons mentioned above I answer the question referred to us by saying that it was not necessary for the Sales Tax Officer to make assessment order in respect of interest and to issue a notice of demand in respect of such interest.

16. SATISH CHANDRA, J.: A Division Bench has referred the following question to a Full Bench:

"Whether, in order to recover interest under Section 8(1-A) of the U. P. Sales Tax Act, it is necessary for the Sales Tax Officer to make an assessment order in respect of the interest and to issue a notice of demand in respect of such interest."

17. The petitioner firm carries on the business of manufacture and sale of Biris. For the year 1957-58, the Sales Tax Officer I, Allahabad, passed an assessment order on 10th June, 1959. For the year 1958-59, the petitioner firm was assessed to sales tax on 12th February, 1963. On 9th October, 1967, the Sales Tax Officer issued a recovery certificate for a sum of Rs. 1,65,684.43P., for the year 1957-58. On 25th October, 1967, another recovery certificate was issued by him for the year 1958-59 for a sum of Rupees 26,238.08 P. The recovery certificate for the year 1957-58 further stated that interest at the rate of 18 per cent per annum calculated on the amount of the tax with effect from 1st February, 1964, till the date of final payment shall also be recovered as an arrear of land revenue, in terms of the provisions of S. 8(1-A) of the U. P. Sales Tax Act. The recovery certificate for the year 1958-59 similarly mentioned that interest would run from 1st February, 1965. It has been stated that the tax has been paid and the amount of interest under the two recovery certificates comes to nearly Rs. 1,38,000. The petitioner challenged the validity of the imposition and recovery of the interest on several grounds, one of which was that without making an assessment order and issuing a notice of demand, the Sales Tax Officer had no jurisdiction to initiate proceedings for recovery of the interest. In support, reliance was placed on the case of 1958 All LJ 970 where a Division Bench held that issuance of a notice of demand was a condition precedent to the recovery of penal interest.

18. The material and relevant provisions of the Act may first be noticed. Section 3 of the U. P. Sales Tax Act creates liability to sales-tax. Under it, every dealer is liable to pay the tax on his turnover of each assessment year which is to be determined in such manner as may be prescribed. Section 7 provides for determination of the turnover and assessment of tax. Section 8 deals with payment and recovery of tax. Under its sub-section (1) the tax assessed under the Act is to be paid within such time, not being less than 15 days from the date of service of the notice of assessment and demand, as may be specified in the notice. In default of such payment, the whole of the amount remaining due becomes recoverable in accordance with sub-section (8). Under sub-section (8) any tax or other dues payable to the State Government under the Act is recoverable as arrears of land revenue. Section 14 provides for offences and penalties. If a person fails to pay the tax within the permitted time he is liable on conviction to a fine which may extend to Rs. 1,000. Under sub-section (2) such a person is also liable to punishment with simple imprisonment which may extend to six months if he evades payment of tax. These provisions did not prove sufficiently deterrent to making defaults in prompt payment of the tax. The State Legislature with a view to lighten up the machinery for collection of sales tax added Cl. (1-A) to Section 8 by the U. P. Sales Tax (Second Amendment) Act, 1963. It also added Section 33 to the Act. Section 8 (1-A) runs as follows:—

"(1-A) If the tax payable under sub-section (1) remains unpaid for six months after the expiry of the time specified in the notice of assessment and demand, or the commencement of the Uttar Pradesh Bkri-Kar (Dwitiya Sanshodhan) Adhiniyam, 1963, whichever is later, then without prejudice to any other liability or penalty which the defaulter may, in consequence of such non-payment, incur under this Act, simple interest at the rate of eighteen per cent per annum shall run on the amount then remaining due from the date of expiry of the time specified in the said notice, or from the commencement of the said Adhiniyam, as the case may be, and shall be added to the amount of tax and be deemed for all purposes to be part of the tax:

Provided that where as a result of appeal, revision or reference, or of any other order of a competent Court or authority, the amount of tax is varied,

the interest shall be recalculated accordingly:

Provided further that the interest on the excess amount of tax payable under an order of enhancement shall run from the date of such order if such excess remains unpaid for six months after the order". Section 33 provided that the assessing authority may forward to the Collector, a recovery certificate in respect of any sum recoverable under this Act as arrears of land revenue. The certificate has to specify the sum due and is to be conclusive evidence of the existence of the liability of the amount and of the person who is liable.

19. For the petitioner It was urged that sub-section (1-A) of Section 8 was an independent provision authorising the levy of interest. The legal fiction that the interest shall be deemed to be part of the tax was for all purposes. It made the interest partake of all the characteristics of tax. So, just like the tax, the interest could be levied by means of an assessment order followed by a notice of demand. If the ambit of the legal fiction is restricted to recovery proceedings only, then the provisions of appeal and revision shall be shut out to the assessee. Section 33 makes the recovery certificate conclusive. The assessee cannot dispute his liability before the Collector. The assessee would, therefore, be without any remedy. Cases may arise involving serious dispute between the revenue and the assessee as to the chargeability or the quantum of interest; but the assessee would have no forum for adjudication of his pleas. It was also submitted that the Legislature could not have contemplated the incorporation of the legal fiction only for the purposes of recovery, because under sub-section (8) of Section 8, not only the tax but "other dues" payable under the Act are also recoverable as arrears of land revenue. The interest would certainly be dues payable under the Act. It was hence unnecessary to provide for the same thing by creating a legal fiction.

20. In my opinion sub-section (1-A) does not require the assessment of interest. Section 7 of the Act authorises the levy of tax. The subject matter of the tax is the turnover, which is required by Section 7 to be determined by the assessing authority on the basis of the return filed by the assessee. The tax is, even though its rate is fixed by the Act, required to be assessed on the turnover. The liability to pay the tax arises on service of the assessment order and the notice of demand. The assessee is not, and cannot possibly be required, to file a return for purposes of assessment of interest because its subject-matter, namely the unpaid tax has already been determined. Unlike Section 7 which requires the assessing authority to "determine" the turnover and "assess" the tax, sub-section (1-A) of Section 8 states that interest shall "run" on the amount of the tax remaining unpaid. This provision does not require any action or order by the assessing authority, before the liability to pay it arises. The liability accrues and becomes a debt payable instantaneously on the happening of the specified event, namely, the non-payment of the tax for six months. On the expiry of the period of six months, interest runs on the unpaid amount of the tax from the date of the expiry of the period mentioned in the notice of demand for the payment of the tax. The creation of the liability to pay cannot hence be made to depend on service of another assessment order and notice of demand. So, it is, in my opinion, inappropriate to say that sub-section (1-A) authorises the levy of interest so as to attract the procedure for the levy of tax.

21. The State Government's notification No. ST-949/X-900(34)-62 dated April 16, 1966, amended Form XI prescribed for the notice of assessment and demand for payment of tax. The amended paragraph 5 of Form XI says:—

"If the tax payable in terms of this Demand Notice remains unpaid for six months after the expiry of the time specified as above, you shall, in consequence of such non-payment, be further liable to pay simple interest at the rate of 18 per cent per annum which shall run on the amount then remaining due from the date of expiry of the time specified in para 3 and shall be added to the amount of tax and be deemed for all purposes to be part of the tax."

Service of notice in the amended form would mean service of a notice of demand for interest also. The intention appears to be that the assessing authority is not to pass any further or fresh orders to levy the interest. The recovery authority can straightway calculate the amount of interest and recover it, as if it was part of the unpaid tax.

22. It was submitted that the deeming is for all purposes. The legal fiction makes the interest part of the tax which has remained unpaid. It accrues as interest, but at once is deemed to merge into and swell the amount of the unpaid tax, for all purposes. The idea appears to be to make the interest payable or recoverable along with the unpaid tax, at the same time, without any further ado. Separate recovery proceedings are not needed. This was one purpose to be subserved by the legal fiction.

23. The Act by Section 3-C fastens liability of a dissolved firm to pay tax and penalty, on its partners. It does not apply to interest. In order to attract Section 3-C to interest, the legal fiction to make it part of the unpaid tax, became necessary. Under Section 7-C, the executor, administrator, or other legal representative of the deceased is liable to pay the tax due from the deceased. On its language, this provision also deals with tax alone. So, to fix the liability to pay interest on the executors etc., interest was made part of the tax. This was another purpose. Similarly the penalty and prosecution provisions of Section 14 will become applicable. In my opinion, the phrase "for all purposes" was meant to attract the provisions which otherwise would not have applied to interest, as well as to facilitate recovery.

24. The other aspect emphasised by learned counsel for the petitioner was lack of any forum, where the assessee can obtain an adjudication of a dispute with the revenue as to his liability or the quantum of the interest. It is true that if the computation of interest is not treated as an order of assessment of the tax, the provision for appeal under Section 9 would not apply. But, in my opinion, a revision would lie under Sec. 10. Under it, the revising authority is entitled to call for and examine the record for satisfying itself as to the legality or propriety of any order made by the assessing authority under the Act. The Act or the Rules do not define the term "order". In my opinion an order would be a written direction, affecting the assessee made in virtue of the Act.

Section 33 requires the assessing authority to issue the certificate under his signatures specifying several particulars. He has, therefore, to specify the interest and to certify it as recoverable under his signatures. This written act fixes the liability of the assessee to recovery as an arrear of land revenue. It would, in my opinion, amount to the making of an order under the Act. So, the assessee can go up in revision.

25. The assessee would also have the remedy provided by Section 22 for rectification of any mistake apparent on the face of the record. A mistake apparent on the face of the record either on the question of chargeability or on the quantum of the tax or the interest would both be curable under Section 22. It is hence not quite right to say that all remedies are shut out to the assessee.

26. If it is held that the legal fiction makes the interest partake of all the characteristics of tax, the interest would be tax, properly so called. Then, as tax, it would attract Section 8 (1-A). If the interest itself is not paid within six months, the assessee would incur the liability to interest all over again on the unpaid amount. That will be contrary to the purpose and the language of sub-section (1-A). The assessee would virtually be liable to compound interest. But the provision expressly says that simple interest at 18 per cent shall run. The only way to avoid this anomalous situation is to confine the legal fiction to the language employed by the legislature, namely to treat the interest only as part of the already assessed tax, and not to treat it as tax independently.

27. The requirement of an assessment order for the interest followed by a fresh notice of demand would entail a deal of practical difficulties. Under Section 8 (1-A) interest runs from the mentioned date till the date of actual payment of the tax. Until the date of payment is known, the exact amount payable as interest cannot be found. Consequently a complete assessment order cannot be passed. Further, even if the original demand of tax has been paid, but the interest which may have accrued thereon till then, has not been paid, its non-payment would entail the accrual of interest under sub-section (1-A). Before this further interest can be recovered, another assessment order would be required. Since the amount of interest has not been paid, an assessment order cannot be passed indicating any specific amount as the additional interest. In practice, it will be virtually impossible to conclude a particular case.

28. For all these reasons I am not inclined to accept the submission advanced on behalf of the petitioner that the making of an assessment order and the issuance of a notice of demand were conditions precedent to the recovery of penal interest.

29. The decision in Beni Ram Mool Chand's case, 1968 All LJ 970 proceeds on two grounds. It was observed that the opening words of sub-section (1) of Section 8 are: "The tax assessed under this Act". The expression makes no mention of an assessment under Section 7 of the Act. Consequently, the expression must be understood in a broad sense. Section 8 (1) would apply to tax assessed under any other provision of the Act as well. That may be so. But, that will not by itself mean that sub-section (1-A) of Section 8 requires the assessment of any tax. Sub-section (1-A) makes the interest part of the tax which has already been assessed. It will, therefore, be payable and recoverable as an integral part of the already assessed tax, and not because it is independently assessed as tax. In the second place, the Bench drew support from the Supreme Court decision in Income-tax Officer, Kolar Circle v. Seghu Buchiah Setty, (1964) 52 ITR 533 = (AIR 1964 SC 1473). In my opinion, this case is distinguishable. The Supreme Court held that the effect of an appellate order was to supersede and supplant the original assessment order. They applied this legal position to Section 29, Income Tax Act, which provided that if any tax, penalty or interest is due in consequence of any order passed under the Act, the Income-tax Officer shall serve upon the assessee a notice of demand specifying the sum so payable. The distinguishing feature is that Section 29 expressly required the service of a notice of demand for payment of interest as well. The Supreme Court only held that when interest became due in consequence of the appellate order, it was a new liability requiring a fresh notice of demand under Section 29. Under the U. P. Sales Tax Act there is no specific provision requiring a notice of demand for interest.

30. I would, therefore, answer the referred question in the negative.

31. R. L. GULATI, J.: This and the connected writ petitions involve a common question with regard to the recovery of interest on the arrears of sales tax. In Writ Petitions Nos. 955 of 1968 and 1621 of 1968 the petitioners are manufacturers of biris while the petitioner in Writ Petition No. 1369 of 1968 is a dealer in cloth. In order to answer the question which has been referred to the Full Bench, I shall confine myself to the facts of Writ Petition No. 955 of 1968.

32. The petitioner is a partnership firm which was assessed to tax under the U.P. Sales Tax Act for the assessment years 1957-58 and 1958-59 under two separate assessment orders, dated June 10, 1959 and February 12, 1963 levying Rs. 362,725/- and Rs. 81,994/- as tax for the two years respectively. The petitioner had applied for composition of the sales tax under Section 7-F of the Act and the Commissioner of Sales Tax had stayed the recovery of the tax during the pendency of the petitioner's application for composition. According to the petitioner's allegation without deciding its application for composition and without any prior notice to it, the State Government by its order dated May 25, 1967 vacated the stay order. Consequent upon the cancellation of the stay order, the Sales Tax Officer, Allahabad issued to the Collector of Allahabad two recovery certificates—one dated October 9, 1967 and the other dated October 25, 1967 requiring the Collector to recover from the petitioners as arrears of land revenue, the arrears of sales tax which at that time stood at Rs. 165,648/- and Rs. 26,238/- for the two years respectively. In the recovery certificates there is a direction that the Collector should realise, besides the arrears of sales tax mentioned therein, the interest at the rate of 18% per annum with effect from February 1, 1964 till the date of final payment of the sales tax. The amount of interest, however, is not mentioned in the recovery certificates.

33. The petitioner alleges that the arrears of tax have since been paid by it, but the Collector is still pursuing the recovery proceedings for the realisation of interest amounting to Rs. 1,38,000/- which is alleged to be due on the arrears of sales tax even for the period during which the demand of tax remained stayed.

34. On these allegations the petitioner moved the writ petition before this Court challenging the recovery proceedings on a large number of grounds. One of such grounds was that as no notice of demand had been served upon the petitioner in respect of the amount of interest, the recovery proceedings through the Collector were unauthorised. In support of this contention the petitioner relied upon a decision of this Court in 1968 All LJ 970. On behalf of the opposite parties, it was contended that that decision was incorrect and required reconsideration. It was in these circumstances that I and brother Pathak, J. referred the following question for the decision of the Full Bench:

"Whether in order to recover interest under Section 8(1-A) of the U.P. Sales Tax Act, it is necessary for the Sales Tax Officer to make an assessment order in respect of the interest and to issue a notice of demand in respect of such interest."

35. Previously there was no provision under the U.P. Sales Tax Act for the levy of interest. By the U.P. Sales Tax Act (Second Amendment) Act, 1963 (Act No. III of 1964), sub-section (1-A) was added to Section 8 of the Act providing for the levy of interest on arrears of sales tax. The newly added Section 8(1-A) reads:

"8(1-A)— If the tax payable under sub-section (1) remains unpaid for six months after the expiry of the time specified in the notice of assessment and demand, or the commencement of the Uttar Pradesh Bikri Kar (Dwitiya San-shodhan) Adhiniyam, 1963, whichever is later, then without prejudice to any other liability or penalty which the defaulter may in consequence of such non-payment, incur under this Act, simple interest at the rate of eighteen per cent per annum shall run on the amount then remaining due from the date of expiry of the time specified in the said notice, or from the commencement of the said Adhiniyam as the case may be, and shall be added to the amount of tax and be 'deemed for all purposes to be part of the tax': (underlining (here in ') mine).

Provided that where as a result of appeal, revision or reference, or of any other order of a competent court or authority, the amount of tax is varied, the interest shall be recalculated accordingly.

Provided further that the interest on the excess amount of tax payable under an order of enhancement shall run from the date of such order if such excess remains unpaid for six months, after the order."

36. The plain purpose of this amendment appears to be to levy interest at a rate which appears to be penal in character in order to exert pressure on the defaulters to pay up the arrears of tax. But while enacting this provision the Legislature has incorporated a legal fiction to the effect that the interest so imposed "shall be deemed for all purposes to be the part of the tax." The question arises as to what is the purpose, scope and the effect of this legal fiction. While this question came up before brother Pathak and myself, I expressed the opinion that one of the effects of the legal fiction would be that interest would partake of all the characteristics of the tax so far as its levy and collection was concerned. The levy of tax under the Act requires an assessment order after a prior notice to the assessee followed by a notice of demand in which is stated the time and place for payment of the tax. If the assessee defaults in making the payment in accordance with the terms of the notice of demand, he becomes a defaulter and the tax can be recovered from him as arrears of land revenue as provided in sub-section (3) of Section 8. I, therefore, took the view that the same procedure should have been followed for the levy and collection of interest and as that admittedly had not been done, I expressed the opinion that the recovery proceedings pending against the petitioner were unauthorised. In other words, I expressed my respectful agreement with the view taken by this Court in the case of Beni Ram Mool Chand, 1963 All LJ 970 (supra).

37. As brother Pathak, J. did not agree with my view, the question set out above was referred to the Full Bench.

38. I have had the advantage of reading the judgments prepared by my brothers Jagdish Sahai and Satish Chandra, JJ. but I regret very much that I cannot persuade myself to change the view that I have already expressed.

39. The main question which was mooted before the Full Bench related to the purpose, scope and effect of the legal fiction which admittedly has been enacted by the Legislature in Section 8(1-A) equating the interest with the tax.

40. Before I deal with this aspect, it would be proper to examine briefly the scheme with regard to the levy and collection of the tax and other incidental dues, payable to the State under the U.P. Sales Tax Act. The tax is leviable under the charging Section 3. The amount of tax payable by an assessee is quantified by means of an assessment order under Section 7 read with the relevant rules and the tax so quantified is demanded from him by means of a notice of demand in Form XI under Rule 45, and the assessee has to pay tax so assessed within the time and in the manner specified in that notice. In case the assessee defaults in the payment of the tax in accordance with the terms of the notice of demand, then under Section 8 (1), the assessee is treated as a defaulter, and the amount of tax become recoverable from him under sub-section (3) of Section 8. That section reads;

"Any tax or other dues payable to the State Government under this Act, or any amount of money which a person is required to pay to the assessing authority under sub-section (3) or for which he is personally liable to the assessing authority under sub-section (3) shall be recoverable as arrears of land revenue." The 'other dues' mentioned in sub-section (3) of Section 8 are obviously penalty, composition fee, exemption fee and interest.

41. Previously, there was no provision in the Act requiring the Sales Tax Officer to forward to the Collector a certificate of recovery authorising him to recover the amount due from the assessee as arrears of land revenue. Such a provision has, however, now to be found in Section 33 which has been added by U.P. Act No. III of 1964 which introduces the provisions relating to levy of interest viz. sub-section (1-A) of Section 8. Sec. 33 provides:—

"Section 33: Further provisions regarding recovery— In respect of any sum recoverable under this Act as arrears of land revenue the assessing authority may forward to the Collector a certificate under his signature specifying the sum due. Such certificate shall be conclusive evidence of the existence of the liability, of its amount, and of the person who is liable and the Collector on receipt of the certificate shall proceed to recover from such person the amount specified therein as if it were an arrear of land revenue;

Provided that without prejudice to the powers conferred by this section the Collector, shall for the purposes of recovering the amount specified in the certificate, have also all the powers which—

(a) a Collector has under the Revenue Recovery Act, 1890; and

(b) a Civil Court has under the Code of Civil Procedure, 1908 for the purpose of recovery of an amount due under a decree."

This newly added Section 33 requires the Sales Tax Officer, to specify in the recovery certificate among other things, the exact amount which is sought to be recovered by the Collector.

42-43. From a perusal of the foregoing provisions, it is clear that where an assessee commits a default in the payment of tax or any other dues, payable to the Government under the Act, the amount can be recovered from him in a summary manner provided under Section 8(8) through the Collector only if:

(i) a notice of demand is served upon him requiring him to pay the amount mentioned therein within the time and at the place mentioned in the notice;

(ii) the assessee commits a default of the terms of the notice of demand;

(iii) a recovery certificate is issued to the Collector by the Sales Tax Officer; and

(iv) the exact amount recoverable is mentioned in the recovery certificate. If any of the steps enumerated above are not taken by the Sales Tax Officer the recovery proceedings cannot be regarded to be valid.

44. In the instant case admittedly no notice of demand was served upon the assessee requiring him to pay the interest which is now being sought to be recovered by the Collector and the two recovery certificates forwarded to the Collector by the Sales Tax Officer do not mention the amount of the interest. This being the situation the recovery proceedings impugned by the assessee in the two writ petitions are plainly unauthorised.

45. Now I shall deal briefly with the contentions raised on behalf of the opposite parties. The first contention is that the legal fiction has been enacted only to enable the interest to be recoverable as arrears of land revenue. This contention is obviously not tenable. I have already pointed out above that Sec. 8(8) which deals with the recovery of Government dues as arrears of land revenue is not restricted to the sales tax only. But it comprehends 'other dues' payable to the Government. The term 'other dues' would obviously include interest also. That being the position, there was no necessity at all for the Legislature to have enacted the legal fiction for the purposes of realising interest as arrears of land revenue because that purpose could be achieved by the already existing provision in Section 8(8). The second contention is that the legal fiction would operate only at the time when the Sales Tax Officer commences proceedings for the recovery of sales tax as arrears of land revenue. This contention is again unsound and, if accepted, would lead to anomalous result. For instance, in a case where the tax has already been paid, there will be no occasion for the Sales Tax Officer to commence recovery proceedings and the legal fiction would become inoperative with the result that the interest which might have been payable by the assessee by reason of his having delayed the payment of the tax for more than six months, would not be recoverable as arrears of land revenue. That would defeat the very purpose for which the legal fiction is said to have been created.

46. The same anomalous position would arise in a case where the recovery certificate in respect of the tax has already been issued and the interest starts accruing afterwards. It must not be forgotten that liability to pay tax and interest is not co-extensive in point of time. The tax becomes payable as soon as the assessment is made and the notice of demand is served but interest becomes payable only if the tax remains in arrears for six months and more. In such a case also the legal fiction would not operate because the recovery proceedings would have been commenced by the Sales Tax Officer before the interest became payable by the assessee. In such a situation, it will have to be conceded that the Sales Tax Officer will have to issue a fresh recovery certificate in respect of the interest and in that case the argument that the legal fiction operates only when the proceedings for recovery of tax start, would fall to the ground.

47. It was next urged that although interest could be recovered under Section 8(8) as arrears of land revenue without the legal fiction, yet the legal fiction had to be created in order to make the newly added provision relating to interest as self-sufficient. Now when one looks minutely at Section 8(1-A), one finds that there are no express words in that provision which talk of the interest being recoverable as arrears of land revenue so that the interest leviable under Section 8(1-A) would not be recoverable as arrears of land revenue as a result of anything contained in that section. The interest would still be recoverable as arrears of land revenue by virtue of Section 8(8). It follows, therefore, that Section 8(1-A) is not self-contained because for the recovery of interest as arrears of land revenue, aid has still to be taken of from the already existing provision contained in Section 8(8).

48. Now reverting to the main question as to the scope and effect of a legal fiction, the position is settled beyond doubt. In the first place, the word "deem" is apt to include obvious, uncertain and impossible. Secondly, the legal fiction has to be carried to its logical conclusion but only within the field of the definite purpose for which the legal fiction is created.

49. Now, interest and tax are two different concepts. When the law declares that they should be deemed to be the same, the purpose of the legal fiction is that something which is unreal, is treated to be real and all facts necessary for the operation of such a legal fiction must be deemed to exist and the consequences which ensue as a result of such a fiction must also be given effect to. In this connection reference may be made to the following observations of Lord Asquith of Bishopstone in East End Dwellings Co., Ltd. v. Finsbury Borough Council, (1952) AC 109 at page 130:—

"If you are forbidden to treat an imaginary state of affairs as real, you must surely, unless prohibited from doing so, also imagine as real the consequences and incidents which, if the putative state of affairs had in fact existed, must inevitably have flowed from or accompanied it. One of those in this case is emancipation from 1939 level of rents. The statute says that you must imagine a certain state of affairs, it does not say that having done so, you must cause or permit your imagination to boggle when it comes to the inevitable corollaries of that state of affairs."

This observation of Lord Asquith of Bishopstone has become classical and has been cited with approval by the Supreme Court in cases which are a legion. To quote some of such cases under the Income Tax Act, reference may be made to the following where this passage of Lord Asquith of Bishopstone has been reproduced and approved:

(a) M. K. Venkatachalam v. Bombay Dyeing & Manufacturing Co., Ltd., (1959) 34 ITR 143 at p. 146—(AIR 1958 SC 875 at pp. 877-878).

(b) Commr. of Income Tax, Delhi v. Teja Singh, (1959) 35 ITR 408 at p. 413—(AIR 1959 SC 352 at p. 355).

(c) Narayan Row v. Ishwarlal Bhagwandas, (1965) 57 ITR 149 at p. 162—(AIR 1965 SC 1818 at p. 1824).

(d) Commr. of Income Tax v. Godawari Sugar Mills Ltd., (1967) 63 ITR 310 at p. 315—(AIR 1967 SC 556 at p. 558).

In the Commissioner of Income Tax v. Teja Singh (supra) the Supreme Court observed at page 413, "it is a rule of interpretation well settled that in construing the scope of a legal fiction, it would be proper and even necessary to assume all those facts on which alone the fiction can operate."

50. Now, the language in which the legal fiction in question is couched is indeed very wide. It says that interest shall be deemed to be tax for all purposes. The expression 'all purposes' obviously means more than one purpose. It would, therefore, be manifestly wrong to suggest that the legal fiction had only one purpose to achieve, namely, to enable the interest to be realised as arrears of land revenue. I have already shown that really that was not the purpose. One of the purposes, to my mind, was to apply to the imposition and collection of interest, the procedure prescribed for the levy of collection of tax. The tax is imposed by means of an order quantifying the tax which is popularly known as assessment order. Such an order is to be followed by a notice of demand. Non-compliance with the term of the notice of demand brings into play coercive machinery contained in Section 8(8) and the arrears of tax become recoverable as arrears of land revenue. This attracts Section 33 of the Act under which the Sales Tax Officer issues to the Collector a recovery certificate specifying therein the amount due from the assessee which the Collector is to recover as arrears of land revenue. As a result of the legal fiction in question, this procedure becomes applicable to the levy and collection of interest. This is one consequence that flows from the legal fiction.

51. The second consequence that flows from the legal fiction is that the statutory remedies available to an assessee, who is aggrieved with the levy or quantum of tax, by way of appeal, revision or a reference to the High Court as also the provision for rectification of an apparent error under Section 22, become available in respect of interest also. Yet another result which would ensue would be to attract the provisions contained in Sections 3-C and 7-C of the Act and the partners of a dissolved firm or the legal representative of a deceased assessee would be liable to interest also in the same manner as they would be liable for the payment of the tax. I cannot persuade myself to believe that it could have been the intention of the legislature to prevent these consequences ensuing from the legal fiction.

52. On behalf of the opposite parties it is contended that the levy of interest is automatic requiring no assessment or any other order inasmuch as the rate of interest being fixed and the arrears of sales tax being known, ascertainment of the quantum of interest would involve merely a simple arithmetical calculation.

53. I find no substance in this argument. The word 'assessment' is a comprehensive word, at least it is so understood under the Income-tax Act. It may mean either the entire process of determination of the income and the assessment of tax or it may mean only the calculation of tax. The fact that rate of interest is fixed is of no consequence, because even the rate of tax is also fixed. It is true that in some cases the levy of interest may not require an elaborate order, but the same can be the position with regard to the tax itself where the turnover is not disputed. There also the rate of tax being fixed, there would be no necessity of passing an elaborate order. But the fact remains that an order of assessment is necessary and cannot be dispensed with in order to quantify the assessee's liability. It is again true that an assessment order relating to tax is preceded by quarterly returns. No such returns are necessary in the case of interest. But that again makes no difference. The two types of orders, one levying tax and the other levying the interest are passed at different stages and under different circumstances. As a result of the legal fiction an order levying interest would be regarded as a supplementary or an additional order levying tax and would become a part of the order of assessment under Section 7. Be that as it may, some sort of order is contemplated by the Act under which the amount of interest payable by an assessee is determined. The only difference is that if such an order is not an order of assessment, the assessee may not be able to avail of the remedy of appeal under Section 9, but the remedies by way of revision under Section 10 and rectification under Section 22 would still be open to him.

54. In the instant case the petitioner disputes its liability to interest at least for the period during which the realisation of the tax remained stayed. Interest is admittedly payable by a defaulter and it is the petitioner's contention that so long as the payment of the tax remained stayed, it could not be regarded a defaulter and therefore no interest was payable by it. The interest might be payable from the date the stay order was discharged to the date of the final payment of the tax. Therefore in the present case the Sales Tax Officer had to determine as to whether the petitioner was liable to pay interest and, if so, from what date. Such a controversy cannot be disposed of by mere subjective and unilateral calculation of interest by the Sales Tax Officer or by the Collector. The controversy raised by the petitioner is of a substantial nature and certainly the petitioner must have some forum to have it decided. The legal fiction, in my opinion, makes available to him such a forum, as already discussed above.

55. In reply it was suggested that no forum was necessary because interest being directly linked with the amount of the tax, the assessee would automatically get relief, if the amount of tax is reduced in appeal or other proceedings. That argument, is plainly wrong. There might be cases where there may be no dispute about the tax at all and the dispute may relate only to levy of interest. The instant case is an example of that type.

The petitioner has not disputed the quantum of tax which in fact it has already paid up. It disputes the levy of interest only.

56. It was then suggested that a remedy under Section 22 may be open to an assessee in case there is a mistake in the calculation of interest. There is no substance in that contention either. Section 22 applies only where an order is sought to be rectified and if according to the contention of the opposite parties, no order levying interest is contemplated, Section 22 goes out of the picture. The same is true about the argument that a revision under Section 10 may lie. That section also applies where the revising authority has to satisfy itself as to the legality or propriety of any order passed by a subordinate sales tax authority (Section 10(3)). Like Section 22, Section 10 also applies only when there is any order to be revised.

57. Lastly it was suggested that the Collector may be approached by an aggrieved assessee. Section 33 provides in categorical terms that "the certificate shall be conclusive evidence of the existence of the liability, of its amount, and of the person who is liable". The Collector, therefore, has absolutely no power to grant any relief to the assessee.

58. Such being the situation, it is difficult to believe that the legislature could have intended that an assessee should be left without any remedy even if there is a serious dispute between him and the revenue with regard to the liability and the quantum of interest.

59. It was then pointed out on behalf of the State that interest being a recurring liability, its amount cannot be specified in a notice of demand or in the recovery certificate. There are two answers to this argument. In the first place, such a difficulty which to my mind, is more imaginary than real, would arise where the default in making payment of the tax is continuing because the total amount of interest payable by an assessee would depend upon the date when the tax is paid. No such difficulty can, however, arise in the present case because the assessee has already paid up the tax. Nothing could have been simpler for the Sales Tax Officer than to have calculated the amount of interest and to have issued a fresh certificate specifying therein the amount of interest. Secondly, an argument of this nature is an argument of despair and cannot override the legal requirements. If the law requires the amount of interest to be specified in the recovery certificate, it is imperative that the same should be done. In the case of a continuing default of payment of tax, it is always open to the Sales Tax Officer to determine the amount of interest on a particular date and to forward to the Collector a certificate for that amount, in case the assessee does not pay that amount when called upon to do so. There is no bar in issuing successive certificates after regular intervals and the Sales Tax Officer can repeat that process as often as necessary until the entire amount of tax and interest is realised. At this stage, it would be appropriate to dispel a misunderstanding under which the learned counsel for the State appears to have been labouring throughout when he argued that as the interest runs from day-to-day, the Sales Tax Officer will be required to issue a notice of demand everyday in order to make the assessee liable for interest. That is not so. There is a distinction between the liability of an assessee to pay interest and the mode in which it is recovered. The liability to pay interest is imposed by the statute and it continues just as in the case of any other creditor, until the debt is paid. In order to create such a liability, it is not necessary to issue any notice of demand. But the necessity of issuing a notice of demand arises when the interest is sought to be recovered through the coercive machinery provided under the Act. There are several modes in which the interest may be realised from an assessee. S. 8(8) is not exhaustive but provides only one of such modes which is of a summary nature. The State may enforce the liability by means of a suit or by other means open to it under the general law. In such a case it would not be necessary for the State to issue any notice of demand, but if the State wishes to enforce the liability through the summary mode provided in Section 8(8), the procedure outlined by me above, becomes necessary. In other words, when the assessee fails to pay interest of his own accord and it becomes necessary for the State to proceed against him under Sec. 8(8), it is imperative that the assessee must be served with a notice of demand and on his failure to comply with it, a recovery certificate should be issued to the Collector specifying therein the amount of interest which is sought to be realised.

60. In the end it may be useful to draw an analogy from the corresponding provisions under the Income Tax Act. The Income Tax Act of 1961 also contains several provisions for the imposition of interest when the assessee defaults in making payment of advance or regular tax. Under Section 156 of the Income Tax Act, "when any tax, interest, penalty fine or any other sum is payable in consequence of any order passed under the Act, the Income Tax Officer has to serve upon the assessee a notice of demand in the prescribed form specifying the sum so payable."

61. Sections 220 and 222 deal with the collection and recovery of tax, interest and penalty etc. The following portion of Section 220 is material for our purpose:

"220. When tax payable and when assessee deemed in default:— (1) Any amount, otherwise than by way of advance tax, specified as payable in a notice of demand under S. 156 shall be paid within thirty five days of the service of the notice at the place and to the person mentioned in the notice:

Provided that, where the Income Tax Officer has any reason to believe that it will be detrimental to revenue if the full period of thirty-five days aforesaid is allowed, he may with the previous approval of the Inspecting Assistant Commissioner, direct that the sum specified in the notice of demand shall be paid within such period being a period less than the period of thirty-five days aforesaid, as may be specified by him in the notice of demand.

(2) If the amount specified in any notice of demand under Section 156 is not paid within the period limited under sub-section (1), the assessee shall be liable to pay simple interest at four per cent, per annum from the day commencing after the end of the period mentioned in sub-section (1): (underlining here in ' ') is mine).

Provided that, where as a result of an order under Section 154, or Section 166, or Section 250 or Section 264, the amount on which interest was payable under this section had been reduced, the interest shall be reduced accordingly and the excess interest paid, if any, shall be refunded.

(3) Without prejudice to the provisions contained in sub-section (2), on an application made by the assessee before the expiry of the due date under sub-section (1) the Income-tax Officer may extend the time for payment or allow payment by instalments, subject to such conditions as he may think fit to impose in the circumstances of the case.

(4) If the amount is not paid within the time limited under sub-section (1) or extended under sub-section (3), as the case may be, at the place and the person mentioned in the said notice the assessee shall be deemed to be in default." Section 222 reads:

"222. Certificate to Tax Recovery Officer— (1) When an assessee is in default or is deemed to be in default in making payment of tax, the Income-tax Officer may forward to the Tax Recovery Officer a certificate under his signature specifying the amount of arrears due from the assessee, and the Tax Recovery Officer on receipt of such certificate, shall proceed to recover from such assessee, the amount specified therein by one or more of the modes mentioned below, in accordance with the rules laid down in the Second Schedule—

(a) attachment and sale of the assessee's movable property;

(b) attachment and sale of the assessee's immovable property;

(c) arrest of the assessee and his detention in prison;

(d) appointing a receiver for the management of the assessee's movable and immovable properties.

(2) The Income-tax Officer may issue a certificate under sub-section (1) notwithstanding that proceedings for recovery of the arrears by any other mode have been taken."

62. The scheme under the Income-tax Act as revealed by the provisions quoted above, is that an assessee has to be served with a notice of demand in respect of any tax, interest or penalty payable by him and if he fails to comply with the terms of the notice of demand, he is treated to be an assessee in default and can then be proceeded against under sub-section (2) of Section 220 under which the Income-tax Officer has to issue a recovery certificate to the Tax Recovery Officer specifying therein the amount sought to be recovered. Any omission on the part of the Income-tax Officer to comply with any of the requirements mentioned above vitiates the recovery proceedings.

63. In (1964) 52 ITR 538 = (AIR 1964 SC 1473), the Supreme Court quashed the recovery proceedings because a fresh notice of demand had not been served upon the assessee after his tax liability had been reduced in appeal. This Court has applied the proposition enunciated in this case in Ram Autar Agarwal v. Sales Tax Officer, Writ No. 1659 of 1967, D/-13-9-1968 (All) holding that "we see no reason why that principle should not be adopted in cases under the U. P. Sales Tax Act". In Vimlaben Khimji v. Manivikar, (1964) 51 ITR 29 (Bom); Sriramiah v. Income-tax Officer, (1965) 52 ITR 408 (Mys) and Collector of North Arcot v. Kannan, (1967) 65 ITR 302 = (AIR 1967 Mad 249); recovery proceedings were quashed because the real amount of tax had not been specified therein.

64. Plainly the scheme under the Income-tax Act is more or less analogous to the scheme under the U. P. Sales Tax Act. If under the Income-tax Act a notice of demand has to be served upon the assessee in respect of the interest payable by it on arrears of tax, there appears to be no good reason why the same procedure should not be practicable under the U. P. Sales Tax Act. There is, however, one difference so far as the recovery is concerned. It would be noticed that under Section 222 recovery certificate is issued when the assessee is in default in making a payment of the tax. Interest, penalty or other dues are not mentioned therein. From this omission it might appear that recovery proceedings can be taken against an assessee only in respect of the arrears of tax. But this omission has been made good by the legislature in Section 229 which says:

"229. Recovery of penalties, fine, interest and other sums.— Any sum imposed by way of interest, fine, penalty, or any other sum payable under the provisions of this Act, shall be recoverable in the manner provided in this Chapter for the recovery of arrears of tax."

The procedure under the Income-tax Act for the levy and collection of interest is, therefore, completely identical with the procedure prescribed under the U. P. Sales Tax Act and no one has ever contended that under the Income-tax Act, the Income-tax Officer can proceed to recover the interest from an assessee without following the procedure for the recovery of Income-tax.

65. The last distinction that was pointed out between the schemes of the two Acts was that under Section 156 of the Income-tax Act a notice of demand is required to be served in respect of all dues including interest, while under the U. P. Sales Tax Act, R. 45, which corresponds to Section 156 of the Income-tax Act requires a notice of demand in respect of the tax only. It is forgotten that as a result of the legal fiction created in Section 8 (1-A), the interest is deemed to be tax for all purposes and therefore, it would be tax for purposes of Rule 45 also so that a notice of demand shall have to be issued in respect of interest also. Moreover, if one examines closely the scheme under the U. P. Sales Tax Act prior to its amendment in 1964, it becomes obvious that a notice of demand was necessary even then in the case of penalty and interest because penalty and interest were also recoverable as arrears of land revenue under Section 8 (8). If in the case of tax, Section 8 (8) becomes operative only when the assessee commits a default of its payment there is no reason to suppose that it would be applicable in the case of interest and penalty even if the assessee is not in default. And as assessee can be said to be in default only if he fails to make the payment when called upon to do so which means when a notice of demand is served upon him.

66. Under the Income-tax Act, there is, of course, no appeal provided against the levy of interest under Section 222 (2) but an order imposing interest under Section 156 is open to revision by the Commissioner under Section 264 and is also liable to rectification under Section 154. In this regard, the U. P. Legislature has gone a step further inasmuch as by equating the interest with the tax, it has automatically made available to the assessee all the remedies which are open to him with regard to the levy of the tax.

67. Although I have discussed and tried to prove that the entire procedure for the levy and collection of tax would be applicable in the case of interest also, yet for purposes of the present case it was not really necessary to have gone to that extent. The writ petition is directed against the recovery proceedings. Those proceedings suffer from two infirmities: (1) the proceedings have been commenced without issuing a notice of demand to the petitioner and (2) the amount of interest has not been mentioned in the recovery certificates. The petitioner is entitled to succeed on either of the two grounds. Therefore, even if one was to assume everything else against the petitioner, the petitioner would still be entitled to succeed on the simple ground that the amount of interest not having been specified in the recovery certificates the recovery proceedings are bad in law. Looking at the matter from that view, the question which has been referred to the Full Bench to my mind is rather hypothetical, couched as it is in an abstract form divorced from the facts of the case and in any case is too widely stated. I would, therefore, prefer to reframe the question to read:

"Whether on the facts and circumstances of the case the proceedings for the recovery of interest from the petitioner by the Collector are valid?" and would answer it in the negative.

68. The wider proposition of law embodied in the question referred is comprehensive and goes beyond the scope of the controversy which arises in this and the connected cases. However, as I have dealt with it quite exhaustively, I would not hesitate to answer the question referred to the Full Bench. My answer is:

"In order to recover the interest under Section 8 (1-A) of the U. P. Sales Tax Act as arrears of land revenue, it is necessary for the Sales Tax Officer to serve upon the assessee a notice of demand in pursuance of an order quantifying the amount of interest (even though it may not be an order of assessment) and on the assessee's failure to comply with the notice of demand to issue a recovery certificate to the Collector specifying therein the amount of interest sought to be recovered."

69. As admittedly, this procedure has not been followed in this and the connected writ petitions the recovery proceedings are unauthorised and are liable to be quashed.

70. BY THE COURT:—In view of the majority judgment, we answer the question referred to us by saying that it was not necessary for the Sales Tax Officer to make an assessment order in respect of interest and to issue a notice of demand in respect of the same.

Reference answered accordingly.

AIR 1970 ALLAHABAD 344 (V 57 C 52)

FULL BENCH

S. D. KHARE, B. B. MISRA AND
M. N. SHUKLA, JJ.

Bikarma Singh and others, Appellants v. The State of U. P. and others, Respondents.

Special Appeal No. 472 of 1966, D/- 29-4-1969. Decided by Full Bench on order of reference made by Mathur, J., D/- 4-4-1966.

Tenancy Laws — U. P. Consolidation of Holdings Act (5 of 1954), S. 5 (as it stood in the year 1961) — Section 4 and S. 49 (as amended upto 1958) — Scope of S. 5 — Effect of stay order under S. 5 — Notification under S. 4 during pendency of civil appeal — Fact of notification brought to notice of Court — Appellate Court holding that S. 5 did not apply to facts of case and deciding appeal — Decision allowed to become final between parties — Decree passed by Civil Court held was not a nullity — Assumption of jurisdiction by erroneous decision of jurisdictional facts can be set aside in appeal or revision — Even under S. 49, jurisdiction of Civil Court is not absolutely barred — (Civil P. C. (1908), Ss. 9 and 115).

Where a Civil Court in its appellate jurisdiction had given a decision that the provisions of Section 5 of the U. P. Consolidation of Holdings Act did not apply to the facts of the case and that decision had been allowed to become final between the parties, the decree passed by the Civil Court after the publication of the notification under Section 4 of that Act and after that fact had been brought to the notice of the Court is not a nullity. Case law discussed. 1968 All LJ 570 & 1964 All LJ 1049, Rel. on. (Para 29)

From the language of Section 5 of the Act it is clear that the Legislature did not take away the jurisdiction of the Civil Court completely. It merely directed the stay of the proceedings to avoid conflict of decisions by two competent authorities on one and the same point between the same parties. If the matter had already been finally disposed of between the parties by a competent Court that decision had to be accepted by the consolidation authorities. However the scheme of the Act is that if no such decision had been given or if the matter was still pending before any civil or revenue Court it was to stay its hands and ultimately at the end of the consolidation proceedings, to record its decision in accordance with the decision of the consolidation authorities.

(Para 15)

Even under Section 49 of the Act the jurisdiction of the Civil Court was not absolutely barred. It was barred only in respect of matters for which a proceeding could or ought to have been taken under the Act.

(Para 17)

After the publication of the notification under Section 4 of the Act the stay of the proceedings as provided under Section 5 cannot be automatic for one more reason. The Court before which the suit or the appeal or the proceedings are pending will have to decide whether or not the provisions of Section 5 of the Act would apply to the case. A Civil Court has inherent power to decide the question of its own jurisdiction. The assumption of jurisdiction by erroneous decision of jurisdictional facts can be questioned in a revision application filed under Section 115, Civil P. C. Case law discussed.

(Paras 24, 26)

A Court having jurisdiction can decide a matter rightly or wrongly. If it decides a matter wrongly it is open to the appellate or the revisional Court to correct the mistake. However, if no appeal or revision is filed and the decision becomes final between the parties it will be difficult to say that the wrong decision on jurisdictional facts relating to its suspension of jurisdiction renders the decision in the appeal a nullity.

(Para 27)

Cases Referred: Chronological Paras
(1968) 1968 All LJ 77 = 1968 All WR

(HC) 305, Gokul v. Deputy Director Consolidation 24

(1968) 1968 All LJ 570 = 1968 All WR (HC) 425, Tribeni v. State of U. P. 11, 21

(1967) AIR 1967 SC 1386 (V 54) = 1967 All LJ 593, Mulraj v. Murti Raghunathji Maharaj 18

(1964) 1964 All LJ 1049 = ILR (1965) 1 All 152, Lakhpat Singh v. Dal Singh 11, 20

(1963) AIR 1963 All 186 (V 50) = 1962 All LJ 817, Bahadur v. Bachai 23

(1960) ILR (1960) Ker 528 = 1960 Ker LT 264, C. Alikutty v. T. Alikutty 18

(1959) AIR 1959 SC 492 (V 46) = 1959 Supp 1 SCR 733, Chaube Jagdish Prasad v. Ganga Prasad Chaturvedi 26

(1954) AIR 1954 SC 340 (V 41) = 1955 SCR 117, Kiran Singh v. Chaman Paswan 25

(1954) AIR 1954 Punj 46 (V 41) = ILR (1954) Punj 639, Din Dayal v. Union of India 18

(1953) AIR 1953 SC 16 (V 40) = 1953 SCR 185, Bhatia Co-operative Housing Society Ltd. v. D. C. Patel 24

(1953) AIR 1953 SC 65 (V 40) = 1953 SCR 377, Mohanlal v. Benoy Kishna 24

(1952) AIR 1952 Nag 275 (V 39) = ILR (1952) Nag 534, Laxmichand Nanhulal v. Mt. Sundarabai 27

(1951) AIR 1951 Pat 130 (V 38) = ILR 30 Pat 1018 (SB), Liakat Mian v. Padampat Singhania 18

(1927) AIR 1927 All 401 (V 14) = 25 All LJ 430 (FB), Parsotam Saran v. Brahma Nand 18

(1918) AIR 1918 Mad 391 (V 5) = ILR 41 Mad 151 (FB), Venkata-chelapati Rao v. Kameshwar-amma 18

(1906) ILR 33 Cal 927 = 3 Cal LJ 67, Hukum Chand v. Kamalanand Singh 18

(1897) 1 Cal WN 226, Besseswari Chowdhurany v. Horro Sundar Mozumdar 18

R. B. Misra, Radhey Shyam, R. S. Misra, Ambika Pd. and Krishna Pd., for Appellants; Ram Surat Singh, for Respondents.

S. D. KHARE, J.:— This reference to a Full Bench arises out of a Special Appeal filed against an order of a learned single Judge of this Court, dismissing the writ petition. The Division Bench, which heard the Special Appeal, was of the opinion that the case of Tribeni v. State of U. P., 1968 All LJ 570 affirming the view taken in Lakhpat Singh v. Dal Singh, 1964 All LJ 1049 required reconsideration. It has, therefore, referred the following question for the consideration of this Full Bench:—

"Whether the judgment and decree of the learned Additional Civil Judge was a nullity when a notification under Sec. 4 of the U. P. Consolidation of Holdings Act in respect of the land in dispute in the appeal before him was made during the pendency of the appeal and that fact had been brought to his notice."

2. Considering all the facts of the present case we would slightly modify the point for reference by adding one more clause (underlined (here in ' ') towards the end so that it will read as follows:—

"Whether the judgment and decree of the learned Additional Civil Judge was a nullity when a notification under Sec. 4 of the U. P. Consolidation of Holdings Act in respect of the land in dispute in the appeal before him was made during the pendency of the appeal and that fact had been brought to his notice 'and he had recorded a decision that the provisions of Sec. 5 did not apply in the facts of the case'."

3. The facts leading to the Special Appeal, out of which this reference has arisen, might be briefly stated as follows.

4. Originally Dalai Singh, Daljit Singh and Hanuman Singh were the fixed rate tenants of plot No. 10, situate in village Chanchalia, pargana Kiriyaat Sikhar, district Mirzapur. They mortgaged that plot in favour of Jokhu Singh, father of the respondents Nos. 4 to 6. Subsequently Dalai Singh executed a sale deed in respect of his one-third share in favour of the aforesaid Jokhu Singh. The equity of redemption in the remaining two-thirds share of the property vested in Daljit Singh and Hanuman Singh. On 11th December, 1907, they also executed a sale deed in respect of their two-thirds share in that plot in favour of Vikrama Singh (appellant). The plaintiff's case was that it had been agreed between Jokhu Singh and Vikrama Singh that Jokhu Singh will remain in possession over his one-third share of the plot No. 10 in dispute towards the north while Vikrama Singh will remain in possession over the two-thirds share of the same plot towards the south.

5. There was litigation between Jokhu Singh and Vikrama Singh and the latter was directed to deposit Rs. 300 in Court. He could not do so and, therefore, he executed a usufructuary mortgage deed on 14th February, 1928, in favour of one Sitaram Tiwari with the condition that the mortgagee should pay Rs. 300 to Jokhu Singh. This mortgage was in respect of two-thirds southern share of plot No. 10 and certain other plots. Sitaram Tiwari deposited Rs. 300 in Court and redeemed the two-thirds share of plot No. 10. Later on, as a result of an agreement between Vikrama Singh and Sitaram Tiwari, the two-thirds share in plot No. 10 came into possession of Vikrama Singh.

6. After the death of Sitaram Tiwari, his son Lakshmi Shanker filed a suit against Vikrama Singh and the aforesaid two-thirds share in plot No. 10 was put to sale in execution of the decree. Respondent No. 4 claimed to be an adhvasi and sirdar of the land in dispute on the allegation that Sitaram Tiwari had sublet the land to him. The Judicial Officer in whose Court the decree was being executed held by his order dated 6th April, 1959, that respondent No. 4 had failed to prove any sub-letting in his favour. His objection was dismissed and he, therefore, filed a suit in the Court of the Munsif for declaration that his two-thirds share in plot No. 10 was not liable to sale in execution of the aforesaid decree. By his judgment dated 24th May, 1961, the learned Munsif decreed the suit. While the appeal against the decision of the learned Munsif was pending in the Court of the Additional Civil Judge a notification under Section 4 of the U. P. Consolidation of Holdings Act (hereinafter referred to as the Act) was published in the U. P. Gazette on May 27, 1961, and the fact was brought to the notice of the Court. The learned Additional Civil Judge, however, held that Section 5 of the Act could not apply to a suit of that nature and, therefore, he heard and allowed the appeal on 12th October, 1961.

7. When the Consolidation proceedings started the petitioner-appellant filed an objection before the A. C. O. for expunction of the names of respondents Nos. 4 to 7, and the said respondents also filed a cross objection claiming themselves to be sirdars of the land in dispute. The Consolidation Officer on 30th April 1962, allowed the objection of the present appellant and dismissed the objection of respondents Nos. 4 to 7. Respondents Nos. 4 to 7 filed an appeal against the decision of the Consolidation Officer. The appeal against the order of the Consolidation Officer was dismissed. Respondents Nos. 4 to 7 filed a second appeal before the Deputy Director of Consolidation who, without referring to the order passed by the Additional Civil Judge, allowed the appeal and declared respondents Nos. 4 to 7 to be the tenure holders.

8. Thus respondent No. 4, whose suit for declaration under O. 21, R. 63, C. P. C. had been dismissed by the Civil Court was successful before the Deputy Director of Consolidation, who allowed the second appeal against the order of the Settlement Officer.

9. It was against that order of the Deputy Director of Consolidation passed on 30th March, 1963, that the writ petition was filed by the present appellant. The learned single Judge who heard the writ petition, dismissed it on the ground that the matter was concluded by a finding of fact, based on evidence, recorded by the consolidation authorities, as between the same parties regarding one and the same property.

10. It has been contended on behalf of the respondents that the effect of the notification under S. 4 of the Act is automatic and as soon as the notification is published in the Gazette the jurisdiction of Courts other than the consolidation Courts is suspended and, therefore, any decree passed by the Civil Court in its appellate jurisdiction after the issue of the notification under Section 4 of the Act without taking into consideration the final decision of the consolidation authorities, must be considered to be a nullity.

11. The contention of the learned counsel for the appellant, on the other hand, is that the decree passed by the civil appellate Court cannot be considered to be a nullity because that Court, and no other Court, had the jurisdiction to dispose of the appeal. It is further contended that the decision given by the appellate Court, even, though it might have been erroneous on the point that the stay as contemplated under Section 5 of the Act did not apply to that appeal, could have been questioned only by way of an appeal or a revision.

12. Section 5 of the Act, as it stood in the year 1961, read as follows:—

"Upon the publication of the notification under Section 4 in the official gazette, the consequences, as hereinafter set forth, shall, subject to the provisions of this Act, from the date specified thereunder till the publication of notification under Section 52 or sub-section (1) of S. 6, as the case may be, ensue in the area to which the declaration relates, namely—

(a) the district or part thereof, as the case may be, shall be deemed to be under consolidation operations and the duty of maintaining the record of rights and preparing the village map, the field book and the annual register of each village shall be performed by the District Deputy Director of Consolidation, who shall maintain or prepare, them, as the case may be, in the manner prescribed.

(b) (i) all proceedings for correction of the records and all suits for declaration of rights and interests over land, or for possession of land, or for partition pending before any authority or Court whether of first instance, appeal or reference or revision, shall stand stayed, but without prejudice to the right of the persons affected to agitate the right or interests in dispute in the said proceeding or suits before the consolidation authorities under and in accordance with the provisions of this Act and the rules made thereunder.

(ii) the findings of the consolidation authorities in proceedings under this Act in respect of such rights or interest in the land, shall be acceptable to the authority or Court before whom the proceeding or suit is pending which may on communication thereof by the parties concerned, proceed with the proceedings or suit, as the case may be.

(c)

13. Section 5 of the Act is couched in general terms and it was for the Courts, where proceedings of the nature which could be disposed of by consolidation Courts were pending, to decide whether or not the proceedings were of such nature to which the bar of Section 5 of the Act could apply. Therefore, even in cases where the notification under Section 4 of the Act came to the notice of the Court the Civil Court, where the proceedings were pending could, after hearing the parties, arrive at a decision that the bar of Section 5 of the Act did not apply to the proceedings before it and that the same could be disposed of by it. All the proceedings before the Civil Court were not to be stayed merely because consolidation proceedings had been started and a notification under Section 4 of the Act had been issued. The bar of Section 5 could apply only to those proceedings where any matter could be finally disposed of by the consolidation authorities. If the Civil Court before which any proceeding was pending wrongly arrived at the conclusion that, considering the nature of the proceedings pending before it, the bar of Section 5 did not apply to it, the mistake could be corrected either by the appellate Court or by the revisional Court. It is obvious that in a case like the present one no application under Section 151, Civil P. C. for vacating the order could be filed and it was only for the appellate Court or the revisional authority to correct the mistake, if any.

14. On the point of the jurisdiction of the learned Additional Civil Judge to dispose of the appeal the following facts are not disputed:—

(1) The Civil Court had the initial jurisdiction to entertain the appeal and the Additional Civil Judge could hear it and dispose it of.

(2) After the stay period provided under Section 5 of the Act was over the appeal could be heard and finally disposed of by the Additional Civil Judge.

(3) No other Court or authority was competent to hear and dispose of the appeal.

The contention, however, is that—

(i) the operation of stay under Sec. 5 of the Act was automatic and the stay took effect from the date the notification under S. 4 was published, and

(ii) the effect of the notification under Section 4 of the Act was that the jurisdiction of the Civil Court was suspended so that any disposal of the case or appeal made during the period the jurisdiction remained suspended, was without jurisdiction and, therefore, a nullity.

15. In our opinion there is no force in the contention that the effect of the stay under Section 5 of the Act was automatic. From the language of Section 5 of the Act it is clear that the legislature did not take away the jurisdiction of the Civil Court completely. It merely directed the stay of the proceedings to avoid conflict of decisions by two competent authorities on one and the same point and between the same parties. If the matter had already been finally disposed of between the parties by a competent Court that decision had to be accepted by the consolidation authorities. However, the scheme of the Act is that if no such decision had been given or if the matter was still pending before any civil or revenue Court it was to stay its hands and ultimately, at the end of the consolidation proceedings, to record its decision in accordance with the decision of the consolidation authorities (vide Section 5 of the Act). The consolidation authority, while giving its decision, was to be deemed to be a Court of competent jurisdiction (vide Sections 10 and 11 of the Act).

16. Section 49 of the Act (as amended up to the year 1958) reads as follows:—

"No person shall institute any suit or other proceeding in any Civil or Revenue Court with respect to any matter arising out of consolidation proceedings or with respect to any other matter in regard to which a suit or application could be filed under the provisions of this Act."

17. Even under Section 49 of the Act the jurisdiction of the Civil Court was not absolutely barred. It was barred only in respect of matters for which a proceeding could or ought to have been taken under the Act.

18. The law relating to the stay of proceedings by a superior Court was considered and clarified by the Supreme Court in the case of Mulraj v. Murti Raghunathji Mahraj, 1967 All LJ 593 = (AIR 1967 SC 1386). Till then there was good deal of difference of opinion between the High Courts in India on the question of the effect of the stay order, particularly with a reference to execution proceedings. The High Courts of Calcutta (vide Hakum Chand Bold v. Kamalanand Singh, (1906) ILR 33 Cal 927. Patna (vide Lakot Mian v. Padampat Singhania, AIR 1951 Pat 130 (SB) and Punjab (vide Din Dayal v. Union of India, AIR 1954 Punj 46) had held that in such a case the stay order takes effect from the moment it is passed and the fact that the Court executing the decree has no knowledge of it makes no difference and all proceedings taken in execution after the stay order has been passed are without jurisdiction. On the other hand, the view taken by the Calcutta High Court in an earlier decision (vide Bessesswari Chowdhurany v. Horro Sundar Mazumdar, (1897) 1 Cal WN 226) and the High Courts of Madras (vide Venkatachalapati Rao v. Karneswararamma, ILR 41 Mad. 151 = (AIR 1918 Mad 391) (FB)) and Kerala (vide C. Alikutti v. T. Alikutti, ILR (1960) Ker 523) was that the executing Court does not lose its jurisdiction from the moment the stay order is passed and that the order being in the nature of a prohibitory order, the Court carrying on execution does not lose its jurisdiction to do so till the order comes to its knowledge and that the proceedings taken in between are not a nullity.

The Allahabad High Court took an intermediate view in the Full Bench case of Parsotam Saran v. Brahma Nand, 25 All LJ 530 = (AIR 1927 All 401) (FB) and held that where the rights of third parties, like a stranger auction purchaser, have intervened, the fact that the executing Court had no knowledge would protect third parties. The Supreme Court, in the case of Mulraj (Supra) arrived at the conclusion that the view of the Madras High Court and of the Calcutta High Court taken in its earlier decision (vide (1897) 1 Cal WN 226 (Supra)) was correct and that the order of stay in an execution matter was in the nature of a prohibitory order and is addressed to the Court that is carrying out execution and that a mere order of stay of execution does not take away the jurisdiction of the Court. In that connection the Supreme Court observed:—

"An order of stay..... Is not of the same nature as an order allowing an appeal and quashing execution proceedings. That kind of order takes effect immediately it is passed, for such an order takes away the very jurisdiction of the Court executing the decree as there is nothing left to execute thereafter. But a mere order of stay or execution does not take away the jurisdiction of the Court. All that it does is to prohibit the Court from proceeding with the execution further, and the Court unless it knows of the order, cannot be expected to carry it out. Therefore, till the order comes to the knowledge of the Court its jurisdiction to carry on execution is not affected by a stay order which must in the very nature of things be treated to be a prohibitory order directing the executing Court which continues to have jurisdiction to stay its hands till further orders. It is clear that as soon as a stay order is withdrawn, the executing Court is entitled to carry on execution and there is no question of fresh conferment of jurisdiction by the fact that the stay order has been withdrawn. The jurisdiction of the Court is there all along. The only effect of the stay order is to prohibit the executing Court from proceeding further and that can only take effect when the executing Court has knowledge of the order".

19. From what has been stated above it is clear that the Supreme Court in the case of Mulraj, (1967 All LJ 593) = (AIR 1967 All 1386) (Supra) not only affirmed the Allahabad view but went one step further in affirming the view held by the Madras High Court.

20. The question whether or not the Civil Court lost its jurisdiction from the date of the notification under Section 4 of the Act was considered by Hon'ble Jagdish Sahal and Hon'ble G. C. Mathur, JJ. in the case of 1964 All LJ 1049 and it was held that if an appeal is decided on merits in ignorance of the fact that a notification under Section 4 of the Act has been issued the judgment would not be a nullity but it would be a case of the Court acting with material irregularity in the exercise of its jurisdiction. It was further held that the effect of the notification under Section 4 of the Act is that even though the Court has jurisdiction to entertain and hear the appeal it cannot pass an order in derogation of the provisions of sub-clauses (i) and (ii) of Cl. (b) of Section 5 of the Act. The Court has, therefore, to stay the hearing of the appeal until the consolidation authorities have decided the matter and thereafter to pass an order in accordance with the decision of the consolidation authorities.

21. The same view was reiterated in the case of 1968 All LJ 570 (Supra) decided by a Division Bench of this Court. It was held by Hon'ble Jagdish Sahai and Hon'ble Gangeshwar Prasad, JJ. that—

"It is clear from the language of the unamended Section 5 (b) (i) and (ii) of the Act that merely because a village came under consolidation operations, the Court seized of a suit or an appeal was not divested of the jurisdiction to hear and decide it. All that the law required was that the proceedings before it should be stayed and after the matter had been decided by the consolidation authorities the decision was to be communicated to the Court who shall 'proceed with the proceeding or suit, as the case may be'. It is, therefore, clear that the effect of Section 5 (b) (i) of the Act was not to destroy or take away the jurisdiction of the court before whom a suit or an appeal was pending. It remained seized of the case throughout and ultimately it had to pass a judgment or order or decree in the case. It was that court and that court alone which had the jurisdiction to and could finally dispose of the matter. Therefore it cannot be said that a decree or order or judgment passed by such a court would be nullity even though it alone had the jurisdiction to pass the order or the decree of the judgment."

22. We respectfully agree with the view taken by a Division Bench of this Court in the above mentioned case.

23. In the case of Bahadur v. Bechal, 1962 All LJ 817=(AIR 1963 All 186), a Division Bench of this Court held that an appeal decided in ignorance of the notification under Section 4 of the Act could be reviewed and the order recalled under the provisions of Section 151, C.P.C. but not under Order 47, Rule 1, C.P.C., so that the appeal could remain pending till the consolidation proceedings were over. The decision in the case of 1962 All LJ 817=(AIR 1963 All 186), is hardly of any help for determining this reference for the simple reason that the court has always the power in the interest of justice to recall its own order under the provisions of Section 151, C.P.C.

24. After the publication of the notification under Section 4 of the Act the stay of the proceedings as provided under Section 5 cannot be automatic for one more reason. The Court before which the suit or the appeal or the proceedings are pending will have to decide whether or not the provisions of Section 5 of the Act would apply to the case. A civil Court has inherent power to decide the question of its own jurisdiction, vide Gokul v. Deputy Director of Consolidation, 1968 All LJ 77, Bhatia Co-operative Housing Society Ltd. v. D. C. Patel, AIR 1953 SC 16 and Mohanlal v. Benoy Kishna, AIR 1953 SC 65.

25. It is well settled law that a decree passed without jurisdiction is a nullity—vide Kiran Singh v. Chaman Paswan, AIR 1954 SC 340.

26. It was held in the case of Chaube Jagdish Prasad v. Ganga Prasad Chaturvedi, AIR 1959 SC 492, that there are two classes of cases dealing with the power of tribunal: (1) where the legislature entrusts a tribunal with the jurisdiction including the jurisdiction to determine whether the preliminary state of facts on which the exercise of its jurisdiction depends exists, and (2) where the legislature confers jurisdiction on such tribunals to proceed in a case where a certain state of facts exists or is shown to exist. It was further observed that the difference between these two kinds of cases is that in the former case the tribunal has the power to determine the facts giving it jurisdiction and in the latter case it has only to see that a certain state of facts exists. It was further held that the assumption of jurisdiction by erroneous decision of jurisdictional facts could be questioned in a revision application filed under Section 115, C.P.C.

27. There can be no doubt that an erroneous decision of a jurisdictional fact can be set aside in an appeal or revision. The question before us is what can be done if a court having both initial and ultimate jurisdiction has given a wrong decision on a jurisdictional fact relating to its suspension of jurisdiction. In our opinion the answer to that question is a simple one. A court having jurisdiction can decide a matter rightly or wrongly (vide Laxmichand Nanhulal v. Mt. Sundrabai, AIR 1952 Nag 275.) If it decides a matter wrongly it is open to the appellate or the revisional Court to correct the mistake. However, if no appeal or revision is filed and the decision becomes final between the parties it will be difficult to say that the wrong decision on jurisdictional fact relating to its suspension of jurisdiction renders the decision in the appeal a nullity.

28. We have refrained from expressing any opinion on the point as to what the consolidation authorities should have done after the appeal had been disposed of by the learned Additional Civil Judge and the decision had become final between the parties, because this will be a matter for the consideration of the Division Bench, which will now hear and dispose of the Special Appeal. We are also not expressing any opinion on the point as to whether or not the decree passed in appeal by the learned Additional Civil Judge would be a nullity if the appeal was heard and decided (i) after the notification under Section 4 of the Act had been published and brought to the notice of the Court and (ii) the Court had taken no notice of such publication without specifically holding that the bar of Section 5 of the Act did not apply to a case of this nature.

29. Our answer to the question referred to the Full Bench (and as subsequently modified by us) is as follows:—

"Inasmuch as the learned Additional Civil Judge had given a decision that the provisions of Section 5 of the Act did not apply to the facts of the case and that decision had been allowed to become final between the parties, the decree passed by the learned Additional Civil Judge after the publication of the notification under Section 4 of the Act, and after that fact had been brought to the notice of the Courts, is not a nullity."

Reference answered in negative.

AIR 1970 ALLAHABAD 350 (V 57 C 53)

FULL BENCH

JAGDISH SAHAI, YASHODANANDAN AND J. S. TRIVEDI, JJ.

Samharu, Defendant-Appellant v. Dharamraj Pandey and others, Plaintiffs-Respondents.

Second Appeal No. 4063 of 1962, D/- 25-8-1969.

Tenancy Laws — U.P. Zamindari Abolition and Land Reforms Act, 1950 (1 of 1951), Ss. 21 (1) (d), 18 and 19 — Expression "mortgagee" in S. 21 (1) (d) — Not confined to valid mortgages only — 1963 RD 288 & 1964 RD 410 & 1965 RD 23 & AIR 1965 All 504 & AIR 1955 NUC (All) 4171 & F.A.F.O. No. 227 of 1966, D/- 9-12-1968 (All) & 1968 RD 456, Overruled.

The word "mortgagee" in S. 21 (1) (d) of the Act has been used therein in a comprehensive or a loose sense and the expression is not confined only to valid mortgages. This view is based on an analysis of the provisions of Ss. 18 and 19 of the Act. Therefore, a mortgagee who is in possession under an invalid mortgage prior to the date of vesting can claim to be an asami by virtue of S. 21 (1) (d) of the Act. 1963 RD 288 & 1964 RD 410 & 1965 RD 23 & AIR 1965 All 504; AIR 1955 NUC (All) 4171 & F.A.F.O. No. 227 of 1966, D/- 9-12-1968 (All) & 1968 RD 456, Overruled. (Para 13)

It can be said that a hereditary tenant under the provisions of Section 18 of the Act must possess the right to transfer the holding by sale. No such restriction is imposed upon a hereditary tenant under Section 19 of the Act. The result that follows from this is that if a hereditary tenant who is not subject to the restrictions contained in Clause (d) of Section 18 has made a mortgage, which is not valid, then the mortgagee would come to acquire rights under Section 21 (1) (d) of the Act. (Para 12)

Cases Referred: Chronological Paras

(1968) 1968 All WR (HC) 182, Sukh-nandan v. Board of Revenue	14, 16
(1968) 1968 RD 456, Sri Ram Sakal Singh v. Dy. Director of Consolidation	14
(1968) F.A.F.O. No. 227 of 1966, D/- 9-12-1968 (All), Budhu Ahir v. Budhram Komhar	14
(1965) AIR 1965 All 504 (V 52) = 1965 All LJ 255, Jagat Narain v. Laljee	14
(1965) 1965 RD 23, Bodhan v. Bhundal Singh	14
(1964) 1964 RD 410, Harkhoo v. Bindeshwar	14
(1963) 1963 RD 288, Hamid Hussain v. R. N. McIlhah	14, 15
(1955) AIR 1955 NUC (All) 4171 (V 42), Juchisther Prasad v. Shanti Prasad Shukla	14

K. P. Singh, for Appellant; Bharatiji Agarwal, for Respondents.

JAGDISH SAHAI, J.:— This defendant's appeal has come to us on a reference made by our brothers W. Broome and G. C. Mathur.

2. The suit giving rise to this appeal was filed by the plaintiffs-respondents for the ejectment of the defendants from certain plots of agricultural land on the allegation that they (the plaintiffs-respondents) were the Sirdars of the plots in suit. It was alleged that about thirty years next preceding the date of the filing of the suit the ancestors of the plaintiffs-respondents had borrowed a sum of Rs. 200/- from the ancestors of the defendants and had executed an unregistered mortgage deed for the same and on the basis of that transaction the defendants' ancestors were put in possession over the land in suit. It has been pleaded that the entire mortgage debt has been satisfied through the receipt of profits of the disputed land by the ancestors of the defendants and thereafter the defendants themselves. Relief of rendition of account and delivery of possession was claimed by the plaintiffs.

3. The suit was contested by the defendants inter alia on the ground that they were sub-tenants of the plots in dispute by virtue of the provisions of U.P. Act XX of 1954 and had by the operation of law become Sirdars of the same.

4. The trial Court dismissed the suit. On appeal by the plaintiffs the first appellate Court decreed the suit, subject to the plaintiffs depositing a sum of Rs. 200/- on the finding that the amount of debt had not been satisfied from the usufruct.

5. The defendant appellant then filed the instant second appeal which came up for hearing before one of us (Yashodanandan, J.), who referred it to a larger Bench which referred it to us.

6. The sole question that requires consideration and that has been canvassed at the bar before us is whether the defendant-appellant is a mere licensee of the plots in dispute or he has become an Asami thereof.

7. We have heard Mr. K. P. Singh for the defendant-appellant and Mr. Bharatji Agarwal for the plaintiffs-respondents.

8. Section 21 (1) (d) of the U.P. Zamin-dari Abolition and Land Reforms Act (hereinafter referred to as the Act) reads:

"21(1). Notwithstanding anything contained in this Act, every person who, on the date immediately preceding the date of vesting, occupied or held land as—

... ..

(d) a mortgagee in actual possession from a person belonging to any of the classes mentioned in clauses (b) to (e) of sub-section (1) of Section 18 or clauses (i) to (vii) and (ix), Section 19,

... .. shall be deemed to be an asami thereof."

9. Sri K. P. Singh has contended that the word "mortgagee" as occurring in clause (d) of Section 21 (1) of the Act must not be confined in its meaning to valid or legal mortgages only, but should also include cases in the nature of mortgages or akin to mortgages which, even though not valid, have been entered into as transactions of mortgages. Learned counsel relies upon Clause (iv) of Sec. 19 of the Act which reads:—

"19. All land, held or deemed to have been held on the date immediately preceding the date of vesting by any person

... .. as—

(iv) a hereditary tenant,

... .. shall, save in cases provided for in clause (d) of sub-section (1) of Section 18, be deemed to be settled by the State Government with such person, who shall,

... ..

(d) held as such by
(i) an occupancy tenant,
(ii) a hereditary tenant,
(iii) a tenant of patta
davami or istamarari referred to in Sec. 17.

subject to the provisions of this Act, be entitled except as provided in sub-section (2) of Section 18, to take or retain possession as a Sirdar thereof."

It is significant to note that this provision does not require a hereditary tenant to possess the right of sale as is required by Section 18. Sri K. P. Singh contends that clause (d) of Section 21(1) of the Act should be read as "a mortgagee in actual possession from a person who is a hereditary tenant".

Learned counsel contends that under the provisions of the U. P. Tenancy Act, 1939 (hereinafter referred to as the 1939 Act) a hereditary tenant could not create a mortgage of his holding and if the legislature, even after knowing that legal position, has used the word "mortgagee" in relation to a transaction made by a hereditary tenant, it is obvious that the word "mortgagee" has been used in a loose sense so as to include even mortgages which are not valid in the eye of law.

10. On the other hand Mr. Bharatji Agarwal has forcefully contended that in the absence of the word "mortgage" or "mortgagor" or "mortgagee" having been defined in the Act, we must give to these terms the same meaning which they had in the Transfer of Property Act with the result that the expression "mortgagee" as used in clause (d) of Section 21(1) of the Act can only mean a person who is a mortgagee on the basis of a valid mortgage. Mr. Bharatji Agarwal submits that the Court must so interpret the word as to uphold only valid transactions and that normally a Court should discountenance transactions which are invalid in the eye of law. The argument in a general way can be considered to have some force, but it is well known that the Act has in several instances given protection even to trespassers or to persons whose only claim to the plots claimed by them is the entry of their names in respect thereof.

11. The Act is not a conventional legislation, but has taken in view practical and pragmatic considerations also.

12. We would have found force in the submissions of Sri Bharatji Agarwal if we had not been cognisant of the provisions of Section 18(1)(d) of the Act. That provision reads:—

"18(1). Subject to the provisions of Sections 10, 15, 16 and 17 all lands—possessing the right to transfer the holding by sale.

It is clear that a hereditary tenant under the provisions of Section 18 of the Act must possess the right to transfer the holding by sale. No such restriction is imposed upon a hereditary tenant under Section 19 of the Act. The result that follows from this is that if a hereditary tenant who is not subject to the restrictions contained in clause (d) of Section 18 has made a mortgage, which is not valid, then the mortgagee would come to acquire rights under Section 21(1)(d) of the Act.

13. It is true that under the provisions of Act II of 1901 as also under the provisions of the Agra Tenancy Act, 1926 an occupancy tenant or a non-occupancy tenant (we are not concerned with exproprietary tenant) cannot transfer his holding with the result that he could not execute mortgage deeds or enter into transactions which resulted in the mortgage of the holding. This bar continued also under the provisions of the 1939 Act (See Section 33 of that Act). Reading sub-section (2) of Section 33 of the 1939 Act along with Section 251 of the same Act, Mr. Bharatji Agarwal contended that under certain circumstances a hereditary tenant could sell or mortgage his holding and therefore only mortgages by the persons who could so hold be saved under the provisions of sub-section (2) of Section 33 read with Section 251 of the 1939 Act. Section 251 of the 1939 Act does not deal with a voluntary transfer, but only with auction sales. Sub-sec. (2) of Section 33 of the 1939 Act no doubt permits transfers under certain circumstances, but having examined the language of clause (d) of Section 21(1) of the Act we are of the opinion that the word "mortgagee" has been used therein in a comprehensive or a loose sense and the expression is not confined only to valid mortgages. This view of ours is founded upon an analysis of the provisions of Sections 18 and 19 of the Act which we have made earlier in this judgment.

14. Learned counsel for the parties have placed reliance upon certain decisions in support of their respective contentions. Mr. K. P. Singh has placed reliance upon Sukhnandan v. Board of Revenue, 1968 All WR (HC) 182. Mr. Bharatji Agarwal has placed reliance upon Har-khoo v. Bindeshwar, 1964 RD 410, Bodhan v. Bhundal Singh, 1965 RD 23, Jagat Narain v. Laljee, 1965 All LJ 255—(AIR 1965 All 504), Judhister Prasad v. Shanti Prasad Shukla, AIR 1955 NUC (All) 4171, an unreported decision of Rafeshwar Prasad and A. K. Kirty, JJ. in Buddhu Ahir v. Budhram Komhar, F.A.F.O. No. 227 of 1968, D/- 9-12-1968 (All), Sri Ram Sakal Singh v. Dy. Director of Consolidation, 1968 RD 456 and Hamid Hussain v. R. N. Mallah, 1963 RD 288.

15. The main decision in favour of Mr. Bharatji Agarwal's contention is 1963 RD 288 (supra) where a Division Bench of this Court took the view that the word "mortgagee" means a person who is a mortgagee by virtue of a valid mortgage deed. That decision has been followed in other cases relied upon by Mr. Bharatji Agarwal. With great respect to the learned Judges who decided 1963 RD 288 (supra) we find ourselves in disagreement with the view that they have taken. We may point out that the provisions of Sections 18 and 19 of the Act were not brought to the notice of the learned Judges and the point that has been canvassed before us that a mortgage deed executed by a hereditary tenant though not valid in the eye of law has been accepted by the legislature in clause (d) of Section 21(1) of the Act was not raised before the learned Judges. Inasmuch as in the other cases on which Mr. Bharatji Agarwal has placed reliance this aspect of the matter was not placed, we are unable to agree with those decisions also.

16. Coming to Sukhnandan's case, 1968 All WR (HC) 182 (supra), we would like to say that we do not wish to base our decision only on the authority of that case. In the first place there was no categorical finding on the basis of the language of Section 21(1)(d) of the Act by Desai C. J. that even a person who has become a mortgagee by virtue of an invalid transaction of mortgage would be comprehended in the word "mortgagee" as used in clause (d) of Section 21(1) of the Act. Secondly Desai C. J. was considering whether or not a mistake apparent on the face of the record had been committed, when a contrary view was taken, in the order impugned before him.

17. For the reasons mentioned above we are of the opinion that in the instant case the defendant-appellant is an Asami and not a mere licensee of the plaintiffs-respondents. In that view of the matter the suit of the plaintiffs-respondents is bound to fail. We, therefore, set aside the decree passed by the first appellate Court and restore that of the trial Court, but in the circumstances of the case we direct the parties to bear their own costs.

18. We would like to add that the dismissal of the suit would not bar the plaintiffs-respondents, if so advised, from seeking any other remedy either for the recovery of a sum of Rs. 200/- or for an order or decree under Section 202 of the Act. Our decision rests on the circumstance that the suit was not maintainable.

Appeal allowed.

and proceedings other than revisional in respect of debts not existing on or before the notified date under Section 11 of the Act, pending in any Civil or Revenue Court involving the questions as set out in that section."

The matter was then placed before a Division Bench consisting of Satyanarayana Raju and Kumarayya JJ. The learned Judges thought that the matters involved important questions which should be decided by the Full Bench, and therefore referred the matter to a Full Bench.

44. Kumarayya, J., who spoke for the Full Bench, at the outset observed:

"The question proceeds on the assumption that the debts which are the subject-matter of execution proceeding or the debts which will not be in existence on the notified date i.e., 30th June, 1953. The correctness of this assumption, no doubt, has been challenged by Mr. R. V. Rama Rao, but since the whole case is not referred to us, the argument should not detain us."

The learned Judge then proceeded to answer the first question. Making a reference to the earlier Full Bench decision in 1958-1 Andh WR 387 = (AIR 1958 Andh Pra 361) (FB), the learned Judge observed:

"By this provision (Section 25 (1)) the position of the parties in pending legal proceedings has been equated to those who make a direct application under Section 11. But to come thus constructively within the ambit of Section 11, it is however necessary that the suit or other proceeding must relate to a debt in respect of which an application under Section 11 could be made to the Board. It is also necessary that it should be before the Court on the notified date for Section 11, contemplates an application before the notified date. Of course, if an application has been made to the Board under Section 11, subsequent filing of a suit or initiation of other proceedings in any Court will not affect the situation and such proceedings shall be transferred on the notice given by the Board. That in short seems to be the clear intendment of Section 25."

It was however argued that the expression "pending" occurring in Sec. 25 is of wider amplitude and covers all cases of debt whether incurred before or subsequent to the notified date. This contention was negatived. It was held:

"To attract this provision, therefore, it is essential that the debts should be such as can be dealt with by the Board under the provisions of the Act. Otherwise, the transfer would be of no avail. The requirement of an application under Section 11 to be necessarily made with due details of the debts before the notified date to the Board for taking cognizance of the matter, necessarily implies that debts subsequent to that date are not within the competence of the Board to be settled or scaled down. Such limitation is consistent with the policy of an emergency measure which has for its object affording relief to the jagirdar-debtors to enable them to tide over the sudden and unexpected situation treated by the advent of the Regulations and to adjust themselves to the changed circumstances... The various provisions of the Act are replete with clear indications that the debts to be determined and scaled down by the Board are only such debts as were existing on the date of application under Section 11... Thus the entire scheme of the Act makes it abundantly clear that matters concerned with the debts prior to the date of application alone (which date, of course, cannot extend beyond the notified date under Section 11) are within the cognizance and competence of the Board. It follows that only cases relating to such debts and no other debts are liable to be transferred to it under Section 25 (1)." The learned Judge went on to observe:

"It follows therefore that in order to transfer a pending suit, it is necessary that the Board should be competent to deal with such questions in accordance with the Act. That is possible only when the case otherwise satisfies the requisites referred to above, to wit, that it is a pre-notification debt in respect of which the proceeding has been pending on the notified date."

45. It will be evident from the above said extracts that the Full Bench categorically found that the debts incurred after the notification prescribing the date before which application under Section 11 can be filed are not covered by the provisions of the said Act. That answer had to be given because the question itself was posed as to whether Section 25 applies to the pending suits, etc., in respect of debts not existing on or before the notified date. That question has been answered that the Act does not apply to such debt. If the question were to be as to whether the said Act applies to the debts incurred after the Act came into force, then the Full Bench had to consider that question and answer it. Since that question was not posed, it is natural that it was not answered. The Full Bench decision however substantially supports our conclusion at least to the extent that the debts incurred after the notified date are not governed by the provisions of the Act which as stated earlier are very much similar to the Jagirdars Debt Settlement Act. We have considered this question which directly arose in this case and have no hesitation in reaching the conclusion taking support from the Full Bench decision that the provisions of the Act do not apply to the debts incurred after the Act although they might have been incurred before the notified date. It will therefore not be correct to place reliance upon the Full Bench decision to support a proposition that although the Jagirdars Debt Settlement Act would not apply to debts incurred after the notified date, it would apply to debts after the commencement of the Act but before the notified date. On the analogy and parity of reasons given by the Full Bench the debts incurred during that period also have necessarily to be excluded from the operation of the Act. In fact that position is clear from a decision of the Bombay High Court on which reliance was placed by the Full Bench, Babibai Thakurji v. Fazluddin Usmanbhai, I.R. (1954) Bom 535 = (AIR 1954 Bom 282). Chagla, C. J. who spoke for the Court, expressed himself thus:

"Section 19 (1) has been construed fairly often by this Court and what we have laid down is that only those suits are liable to be transferred which were pending at the date when an application for adjustment of debts could have been made under Section 4 (corresponding to Sec. 11). In other words, if a suit was filed after the time to make an application for adjustment of debts had expired such a suit would not be liable to transfer."

46. This decision makes it abundantly clear that the Act applies to the debts which were existing on the date when the Act came into force. An application for adjustment of such debts however can be made on or before the prescribed date. Suits and other proceedings pending on the date of the application actually filed or on the date when the application could have been filed, that is to say on or before the notified date, shall have to be transferred to the special Court because constructively the suits and other proceedings have been equated with an application filed either by the creditor or by the debtor under Section 4 for adjustment of debts. If no application under Section 4 is filed or no statement of account is furnished and no suit or other proceeding was pending on or before the notified date, Section 16 declares that the debts shall stand extinguished and it is obvious that any suit relating to an extinguished debt would be misconceived and consequently no question of transfer of such a suit can possibly arise.

47. What must necessarily follow from the abovesaid discussion is that the Full Bench accepts in principle the approach which we have made to this question and goes a long way in expressing the view which we have taken. Where it falls short of is that it does not decide as to whether the provisions of the Act are applicable to the debts incurred between the date when the Act came into force and the notified date. Whereas the Full Bench is silent on that matter, we have no shred of doubt that the provisions of the Act do not apply even to such debts.

48. Bearing in mind the principles enunciated above, if we look to the facts of the present case, it would be evident that since the debt was incurred for the first time on 18-10-1959, which date although was subsequent to the commencement of the Act was before the notified date. This debt therefore is not governed by the provisions of the Act. In that view of the matter, no question of transfer of such a suit can arise. The conclusion of the lower Court therefore appears to us to be correct, although we have reached that conclusion (by) altogether a different route.

49. The revision petition therefore is dismissed with costs.

Petition dismissed.

AIR 1979 ANDHRA PRADESH 210
(V 57 C 39)

GOPAL RAO EKBOTE AND RAMA-CHANDRA RAO, JJ.

Mohd. Abdus Samad, Petitioner v. Mahboobunnisa Begum, Respondent.

Civil Revn. Petn. No. 1216 of 1969 D/-
11-6-1969.

Civil P. C. (1008), O. 41, R. 5 (3) (c) — Rule is mandatory — What it provides is that order on application cannot be made unless security is filed and not that application itself would not be maintainable.

The language of sub-rule (3) is emphatic and imperative, which categorically lays down that no order for stay of execution shall be made unless the Court is satisfied that security has been given by the applicant for the due performance of a decree which may ultimately be binding upon him; in other words, the decree under appeal. This provision is couched in mandatory language and unless the Court finds that security has been furnished by the applicant, no order of stay of execution can be made under sub-rule (1) by the Appellate Court. AIR 1935 Mad 43 and AIR 1947 Nag 28, Rel. on. (Para 4)

This is far from saying that the application under O. 41, R. 5, Civil P. C., would not be maintainable unless security is filed. It is not that the application is not maintainable, but no order on any such application can be made by the Court before any such security is given. (Para 5)

Cases Referred: Chronological Paras

(1947) AIR 1947 Nag 28 (V 34) =

ILR (1948) Nag 49, Dadoo Balaji v. Kanhaiyalal Dhanaram

(1935) AIR 1935 Mad 43 (V 22) =

ILR 58 Mad 116, Sundaram Chettiar v. Valli Ammal

Mirza Munawar Ali Balgh, for Petitioner; S. Mazhar Hussain, for Respondent.

GOPAL RAO EKBOTE, J.: This revision petition arises out of an order passed by the First Additional Chief Judge, City Civil Court, Hyderabad, on 23-8-1967, in I. A. No. 545 of 1967 in A.S. No. 45 of 1967.

2. The necessary facts are that the respondent-plaintiff filed O.S. No. 8 of 1966 on the file of the Second Assistant Judge,

BM/JM/E429/69/RSK/D

City Civil Court, Hyderabad. It was alleged by her in the plaint that the defendant, her husband, had divorced her. She, therefore, sought to recover her meher, some jehaz, articles or their value and also maintenance amount for the period of Iddat. The defendant, who is the petitioner before us, contested the suit. The suit was ultimately decreed on 21-12-1966. The defendant thereupon preferred A. S. No. 45 of 1967. Along with the appeal, he filed I.A. No. 545 of 1967 under O. 41, R. 5, Civil P. C. He sought the execution of the decree to be stayed till the appeal was disposed of. This petition was resisted by the wife, who was the respondent in that appeal. Her contention was that since the husband has not furnished security as is required under O. 41, R. 5 (3) (c), Civil P. C., the petition was not maintainable. The learned Judge accepted this contention and held that the petition was not maintainable as the petitioner had not complied with the mandatory provisions of Order 41, R. 5 (3) (c), Civil P. C. Consequently, the petition was dismissed. It is this order that is now challenged in this revision petition.

3. The civil revision petition first came before Basi Reddy, J. (as he then was). By his order dated 21-2-1968 the learned Judge directed the C.R.P. to be posted before a Bench and that is how it has come before us.

4. Now, O. 41, R. 5, Civil P.C., relates to the stay of the execution of the decree by an appellate Court. In so far as it is relevant, it reads as follows:—

“(1) An appeal shall not operate as a stay of proceedings under a decree or order appealed from, except so far as the Appellate Court may order, nor shall execution of a decree be stayed by reason only of an appeal having been preferred from the decree; but the Appellate Court may, for sufficient cause, order stay of execution of such decree, and may, when the appeal is against a preliminary decree stay, the making of the final decree in pursuance of the preliminary decree or the execution of any such final decree, if already made.

x x x x
x x x x

(3) No order for stay of execution shall be made under sub-rule (1) or sub-rule (2) unless the Court making it is satisfied—

x x x x

(c) that security has been given by the applicant for the due performance of such decree or order as may ultimately be binding upon him.”

A careful reading of sub-rule (1) and sub-rule (3) of Rule 5 of Order 41, Civil P.C., can leave no one in doubt that the appellant would not be entitled to have an order of stay without furnishing security for the due performance of the decree that may be ultimately binding upon him. The language of sub-rule (3) is emphatic and imperative, which categorically lays down that no order for stay of execution shall be made unless the Court is satisfied that security has been given by the applicant for the due performance of a decree which may ultimately be binding upon him; in other words, the decree under appeal. This provision is couched in mandatory language and unless the Court finds that security has been furnished by the applicant, no order of stay of execution can be made under sub-rule (1) by the Appellate Court. This view is supported by the following decisions: Sundaram Chettiar v. Valli Ammal, AIR 1935 Mad 43 and Dadoo Balaji v. Kanhaialal Dhanaram, AIR 1947 Nag 26. It is thus clear that the Appellate Court without being satisfied that the security has been given as is required under sub-rule (3), clause (c) of the said rule will not be empowered to make an order for stay of the execution of the decree under sub-rule (1) of that Rule.

5. This is far from saying that the application under Order 41, Rule 5, Civil P.C., would not be maintainable unless security is filed. The application can be filed by the appellant under that rule. What the rule says is that before any order for the stay of execution is made, the Court ought to satisfy itself that proper security is given by the appellant. In other words, it is not that the application is not maintainable, but order on any such application can be made by the Court before any such security is given. The lower Court, therefore, in our view, went wrong in holding that the application itself was not maintainable. The lower Court could have directed the appellant to furnish the security as is required under Order 41, Rule 5 (3) (c), Civil P.C., before the application could be considered on its merits under that rule. No such opportunity was given to the appellant. Since we are of the opinion that the application cannot be summarily rejected on the ground that it is not maintainable, we would allow the revision petition, set aside the order of the Court below and direct it to give a reasonable opportunity to the petitioner to furnish security. After the security is furnished, it is open to the Court to consider the application filed under Order 41, Rule 5, Civil P.C., in the light of the objections raised by the decree-holder and decide it in accordance with law. In the circumstances of the case, however, we make no order as to costs.

Petition allowed.

AIR 1970 ANDHRA PRADESH 211
(V 57 C 31)

KUMARAYYA AND

MADHAVA REDDY, JJ.

Conugunta Subbarayudu, Petitioner v.
Eluri Brahmanandan and others, Respondents.

Civil Revn. Petn. No. 615 of 1963, D/-
6-8-1968, from order of Principal Sub.J.
Ongole, D/- 23-2-1963.

JL/KM/E419/68/LGC/M

(A) Civil P. C. (1908), S. 146, O. 22, R. 10 and O. 23, R. 3 — Scope of — Settlee pendente lite of one of items of suit properly not coming on record as party to suit — Application by settlee to be brought on record in appeal — On next day appellant and settlor filing compromise memo — Settlee can take benefit of S. 146 — Filing of compromise memo is no bar to entertaining application or inquiry into its merits — Application can be entertained under S. 146 notwithstanding that the truth and validity of settlement was disputed. (1951) 2 Mad LJ 26, Overruled.

The scope of Or. 22, R. 10, C. P. C. is not wide enough so as to permit a settlee during pendency of suit to apply to be impleaded as a party in the appeal, because the transfer was not effected pending that proceeding but prior thereto. But the settlee can take benefit of Section 146 and apply to be brought on record, for such a course is not prohibited by any other provision of the Code. Section 146 being a beneficent provision should be construed liberally so as to advance the cause of justice and not in a restricted or technical sense. The expression "claiming under" is wide enough to include cases of devolution and assignment mentioned in O. 22, R. 10. AIR 1958 SC 394 & AIR 1955 SC 376 Rel. on. Case law discussed. (Paras 8, 11)

The filing of compromise memo on the next day of making the application by settlee to be brought on record as a person interested in appeal by reason of settlement deed, is no bar to entertaining the application or inquiry into its merits. Filing of a compromise per se does not terminate the proceedings before the appellate Court. The petitioner who has filed his petition earlier than the compromise memo, has a right to object to the compromise and the Court has a duty to inquire into it once he is added as a party. Though addition as a party is discretionary with the Court, it is a discretion which is to be exercised judicially after duly considering the petition. The application of the settlee pendente lite in such a case is one under S. 146 and it would be entertained notwithstanding that the truth and validity of the settlement was disputed. AIR 1960 Andh Pra 32, Approved. AIR 1954 Mad 592 Foll. (1951) 2 Mad LJ 26, Overruled. Case law discussed. (Para 16)

(B) Civil P. C. (1908), S. 151, O. 1, R. 10, O. 22 R. 10 and O. 41, R. 20 — R. 20 is not exhaustive — Inherent powers can be exercised in adding parties to appeals.

Apart from the provisions of O. 41, R. 20 C. P. C. the appellate Court has inherent powers to permit parties to be added to appeals in suitable cases and the language of Rule 20 of Or. 41 is not exclusive or exhaustive so as to deprive the appellate Court of the inherent powers in this behalf. When once it is clear that R. 20 of Or. 41 is not exhaustive of the powers of the appellate Court for impleading or adding parties to the appeal, certainly powers under Or. 1, R. 10 C. P. C. read with Section 107 (2) C. P. C., and under other appropriate provisions including Section 151 C. P. C. in proper cases can be availed of even in appeals. A transferee during the pendency of an appeal can be added as a party to the appeal under the express provisions of Or. 22, R. 10 C. P. C. That could not have been possible if Or. 41, R. 20 C. P. C. was intended to be exhaustive of the powers of the appellate Court. (Para 11)

Cases Referred: Chronological Paras

- (1960) AIR 1960 Andh Pra 32
(V 47) = (1958) 2 Andh WR 291,
Venkata Narasimha Raju v. Kot-teboyina Yellamanda 2, 3, 15
(1959) AIR 1959 Punj 277 (V 46) =
ILR (1959) Punj 1066 (FB), Notified Area Committee, Buria v.
Gobind Ram Lachman Dass 11
(1958) AIR 1958 SC 394 (V 45) =
1958 SCJ 743, Sella Bala Dass
v. Nirmala Sundari Dass 10, 11
(1955) AIR 1955 SC 376 (V 42) =
1955 SCJ 371, Jugalkishore Saraf
v. Raw Cotton Co. Ltd. 11
(1954) AIR 1954 Mad 592 (V 41) =
1954-1 Mad LJ 530, Nanjammal
v. Eswaramurthi 14
(1951) 1951-2 Mad LJ 26, Doraikannu
Asari v. Nataraja Chetty 2, 3, 12,
13, 14, 15
(1941) AIR 1941 FC 16 (V 28) =
1940 FCR 110, United Provinces
v. Atiqah Begum 11
(1934) AIR 1934 Mad 337 (V 21) =
66 Mad LJ 517, Seethai Achi v.
Meyappa Chettiar 3, 13
(1932) AIR 1932 All 478 (V 19) =
1932 All LJ 650, Laraiti v. Shlam
Sunder Lal 12, 13
(1926) AIR 1926 Cal 173 (V 13) =
90 Ind Cas 267, Surendra v. Nitendra 13
(1926) AIR 1926 Mad 341 (V 13) =
50 Mad LJ 59, Sethupathi v.
Secy. of State 12, 13
(1924) AIR 1924 Cal 188 (V 11) =
27 Cal WN 755, Lakshan Chunder
v. Nikunjamonil Dass 12, 1:
(1919) AIR 1919 Cal 323 (V 6) =
29 Cal LJ 362, Enday v. Binodini 1:
(1919) AIR 1919 Mad 755 (2)
(V 6) = ILR 41 Mad 510, Sitaramaswami v. Lakshmi Narasimha 11

M. B. Ramasarama, for Petitioner; R.
V. Vidyasagar, for Respondent No. 1.

KUMARAYYA, J.: This petition which, on reference, is before us raises a short point, whether a settlee pendente lite of one of the items of suit property can be added as a party to an appeal brought by the plaintiff, as a person interested in the result thereof.

2. It may be expedient to make a brief statement of facts which are in a narrow compass. Gonugunta Subbarayudu (petitioner-plaintiff) laid an action in the year 1959 for partition of joint family properties against his brother Srisailam, his mother Viramma, and two other persons, alienees of items 5 of the suit property. The brother did not survive long. He died leaving his mother as his only heir, who had already claimed in the suit that items 1 to 6 of the suit schedule property constituted her separate properties and hence could not be made available for partition. Her claim eventually was accepted but only in relation to item 1 and also item 6, which she had already settled on May 17, 1960, on her daughter's son, Eluri Brahmanandam. The settlee did not choose to come on record as a party to the suit. The decision in the suit went favourable to his interest. The plaintiff preferred his appeal in 1961. Some time thereafter the settlee thought it necessary in his interest to come on record. On April 6, 1962, he accordingly made an application to be brought on record as a person interested in the appeal by reason of the settlement deed in his favour. On the following day i.e. on April 7, 1962, the appellant (plaintiff) and the settlor (2nd defendant) filed a compromise memo wherein the latter gave up her claim to item 6 as her separate property. Then both of them opposed the petition of the settlee on the ground that the settlement relied on was vitiated by fraud and undue influence and was not binding having been obtained at a time when the settlor was highly grief-stricken on account of the demise of her son and was not in a position to understand the nature of the transaction. The Principal Subordinate Judge nevertheless allowed the application following the dictum in Venkata Narasimha Raju v. Katteboyina Yellamanda, (1958) 2 Andh WR 291 = (AIR 1960 Andh Pra 32) in preference to that in Doraikannu Asari v. Nataraja Chetty, (1951) 2 Mad LJ 26 and directed that he be added as a party to the appeal. Aggrieved by that order the appellant has filed this revision petition.

3. It is the conflict in the above decisions that has given occasion to reference of the matter to this Bench. Perhaps the conflict would not have arisen if the Divisional Bench case in Seethai Achi v. Meyappa Chettiar 66 MLJ 517, which was followed in (1958) 2 Andh WR 291 =

(AIR 1960 Andh Pra 32) (supra), were cited before the learned Judge who decided 1951-2 Mad LJ 26 (supra). Curiously enough, of the two decisions in question, the earlier was not brought to the notice of the learned Judge who decided the later case. Be that what it may, the question now for consideration is whether the Principal Subordinate Judge had jurisdiction to add Eluri Brahmanandam as a party to the appeal.

4. It must always be borne in mind that addition of parties to a pending proceeding is not a matter of substantive right but only one of procedure. Procedure being handmaid of justice, rules of procedure are always designed to advance the cause and subserve the ends of justice. The right application thereof must necessarily rest on the discretion of the Court which has to be exercised on principles of equity, justice and good conscience of the Court having regard to the facts and circumstances of each case. There are several provisions made in the Civil Procedure Code for the addition of parties in various contingencies and at various stages. We may refer in this behalf to some of the provisions of the Civil Procedure Code contained in Or. 1 R. 10, O. 22, Rules 10 to 12, O. 41, R. 20 and Section 146 C. P. C. The policy underlying these provisions is that the parties necessary to the very constitution of the suit i.e., persons in whose absence the suit cannot be determined or persons whose presence is essential in order to effectively and completely adjudicate upon and settle all questions involved in the suit or who will be prejudiced by their not being joined as parties may, consistent with the principles of equity and justice, be added as parties. Thus, it all turns upon facts and circumstances of each case and demands of equity and justice having regard to the relevant procedural rule.

5. We, therefore, propose to notice whether the third party is interested in the result of the appeal, whether he will be prejudiced by his not being joined as a party, whether the provisions of the Code permit his joinder and circumstances of the case warrant the same.

6. Eluri Brahmanandam, who seeks to be added as a party, is no other than the 2nd defendant's daughter's son. The settlement deed, on the strength of which he has made his application, was registered on May 17, 1960, when the suit for partition was still pending. The subject-matter of settlement is item 6 of the plaint schedule property, which was claimed in the suit to be the separate property of the settlor and was eventually found so. It is plain the transfer was pendente lite and the right of the settlee was therefore governed by the provisions of Section 52 of the Transfer of Property Act, which reads thus:

"During the pendency in any Court having authority within the limits of India excluding the State of Jammu and Kashmir or established beyond such limits by the Central Government of any suit or proceeding which is not collusive and in which any right to immovable property is directly and specifically in question, the property cannot be transferred or otherwise dealt with by any party to the suit or proceeding so as to affect the rights of any other party thereto under any decree or order which may be made therein except under the authority of the Court and on such terms as it may impose.

Explanation: For the purposes of this section, the pendency of a suit or proceeding shall be deemed to commence from the date of the presentation of the plaint or the institution of the proceeding in a Court of competent jurisdiction, and to continue until the suit or proceeding has been disposed of by a final decree or order and complete satisfaction or discharge of such decree or order has been obtained, or has become unobtainable by reason of the expiration of any period of limitation prescribed for the execution thereof by any law for the time being in force."

7. It is manifest from the above provision that transfer of right or interest in the suit property effected by any of the parties to a suit during the pendency of the suit or proceeding, without the authority of the Court, shall not defeat the object or prevail over the result of that suit or proceeding. The case would be different if the suit or proceeding, during the pendency of which the transfer was effected, is collusive. No such limitation would then arise. It is also manifest that this provision in order to remove all uncertainty as to duration of the limitations placed on the right of the transferee, determines in no uncertain terms the duration of the suit or proceeding in the Explanation to that provision.

8. It is therefore clear that the settlement in favour of Eluri Brahmanandan, which was effected during the pendency of the suit, by reason of Section 52 of the Transfer of Property Act, was subject to the final result of the suit. Bound as he was by the result of the suit it was open to the settlor to come on record under O. 22, R. 10 C. P. C. with the leave of the Court, at any time till the final decree in the partition suit is passed and take part in the proceedings safeguarding the interests of the settlor under whom he claims title to the particular property. He did not apply to the trial Court to be made a party to the suit. He allowed the suit to continue as ever against his settlor alone and eventually a preliminary decree was passed, which was favourable to his interests. Obviously enough, he was entitled to the benefit thereof. There was no occasion for him therefore to carry the matter in appeal as a person claiming under the settlor. After the aggrieved party, i.e. the plaintiff, had gone in appeal, the dispute with regard to the right to the particular property was again at large. Thus, he was interested in the result of the appeal for the right that he got in the settled property was subject to the result of that appeal as well. The scope of O. 22, Rule 10, C. P. C. is not wide enough so as to permit him to apply to be impleaded as a party in the appeal, because the transfer was not effected pending that proceeding but prior thereof. Nor does Order 22, Rule 11, C. P. C. which provides that in the application of O. 22, to appeals, so far as may be, the word 'suit' shall be held to include an appeal, can confer that right on him. But that does not mean that bound as he is by the result of the appeal, he is left without any remedy of safeguarding his interests. We have already noticed that in the interests of justice, the Civil Procedure Code has sought to make provision in relation to various contingencies. We have, therefore, to examine what is the relevant provision applicable to this contingency. Order 1, Rule 10 and Section 146 are some of the other provisions whereunder third parties may come on record. Order 1, Rule 10 applies to suit but read with Section 107 (2), C. P. C. may even be applicable to appeals:

9. Section 146, C. P. C., reads thus:—

"Save as otherwise provided by this Code or by any law for the time being in force, where any proceeding may be taken or application made by or against any person, then the proceeding may be taken or the application may be made by or against any person claiming under him".

10. Two conditions are to be fulfilled before a proceeding be taken or an application be made by or against any person under Section 146, C. P. C. It is firstly essential that the Civil Procedure Code does not provide otherwise in any of its provisions. Then again, the person who seeks to make an application must be claiming under one who could make such application. If these two requirements are satisfied, the third party can apply for being brought on record in order that the appeal be continued against him. As declared by the Supreme Court in Saila Bala Dassi v. Nirmala Sundari Dassi, 1958 SCJ 743 at p. 746 (AIR 1958 SC 394 at p. 397), Section 146 being a beneficial provision should be construed liberally so as to advance the cause of justice and not in a restricted or technical sense. There is little doubt that the settlor was a necessary party to the appeal. The settlee in relation to one of the suit items is her representative in interest. As such he claims that item of property under her. Under the provisions of Section 146, he can make an application to be brought on record so that the appeal may be continued against him. The only further requisite condition for the exercise of such a right is that the Code should not provide otherwise. The question that would arise then is whether any provision in the Code is expressly against or inconsistent with this procedural privilege. In this connection the only provision that requires to be examined or considered in that behalf is Order 41, Rule 20, C. P. C. It reads thus:

"Where it appears to the Court at the hearing that any person who was a party to the suit in the Court from whose decree the appeal is preferred, but who has not been made a party to the appeal is interested in the result of the appeal, the Court may adjourn the hearing to a future day to be fixed by the Court and direct that such person be made a respondent".

11. This provision is concerned with a party to the suit who was not made a party to the appeal though interested in the result of the appeal. The Court then in exercise of its discretion may direct that he be made a respondent. Cases where the party sought to be impleaded in the appeal was not eo nomine a party to the suit are outside the purview of this provision. So also are the cases where persons seek to be added as co-appellants. Indubitably the rule contained therein is based on the salutary principle that no person should be prejudiced by modification made behind his back in the decree on appeal. That rule being of universal application is wide in its scope and is not limited to the language of this provision. This provision having regard to its language being limited to only certain contingency, does not appear to be exclusive or exhaustive of the powers of the appellate Court in relation to appeals before it. Indeed there has been some divergence of views in this behalf. The conflict of decisions between the High Courts of Calcutta and Patna on one hand and the High Courts of Allahabad, Bombay, Lahore and Rangoon on the other, seems to have been set at rest by the decision of the Federal Court in United Provinces v. Atiq Begum, AIR 1941 FC 16. A Full Bench of the Punjab High Court in Notified Area Committee Buria v. Gobind Ram Lachhman Dass, AIR 1959 Punj 277 (FB) has held inter alia that apart from the provisions of Order 41, Rule 20, C. P. C. the appellate Court has inherent powers to permit parties to be added to appeals in suitable cases and the language of Rule 20 of O. 41, is not exclusive or exhaustive so as to deprive the appellate Court of the inherent powers in this behalf. When once it is clear that Rule 20 of Order 41 is not exhaustive of the powers of the appellate Court for impleading or adding parties to the appeal, certainly powers under Order 1, Rule 10, C. P. C. read with Section 107 (2), C. P. C., and under other appropriate provisions including Section 151, C. P. C., in proper cases can be availed of even in appeals. A transferee during the pendency of an appeal can be added as a party to the appeal under the express provisions of Order 22, Rule 10, C. P. C. That could not have been possible if Order 41, R. 20 C. P. C. was intended to be exhaustive of the powers of the appellate Court. It is obvious that a person who was not eo nomine a party to the suit also can be added as a party to the appeal under the provisions of the Code. In other words, the Code permits such addition of parties. The transferee can, therefore, take benefit of Section 146 and apply to be brought on record, for such a course is not prohibited by any other provision of the Code.

In fact, in 1958 SCJ 743 = (AIR 1958 SC 394), where it was contended on behalf of the appellant that the application made to the appellate Court under Order 22, Rule 10, C. P. C. was unsustainable as the transfer in favour of the applicant had been made prior to the filing of the appeal and not during its pendency, the Supreme Court, having accepted this contention, observed that the application filed by the appellant fell within Section 146, C.P.C. and she was entitled to be brought on record under that Section. It is obvious that the appellant before the Supreme Court was not a party to the suit even though the transfer was made pending suit. The application was made pending appeal. Relying on Sitaramaswami v. Lakshmi Narasimha, ILR 41 Mad 510 = (AIR 1919 Mad 755 (2)), it was held that appeal was a proceeding for the purpose of the section. It was also held referring to the dictum in ILR 41 Mad 510 = (AIR 1919 Mad 755 (2)) (supra) which was approved in Jugalkishore Saraf v. Raw Cotton Co. Ltd., 1955 SCJ 371 = (AIR 1955 SC 376), that the expression "claiming under" is wide enough to include cases of devolution and assignment mentioned in Order 22, Rule 10, C. P. C. In view of this high authority it is clear that the application of the settlee to be brought on record is maintainable under Section 146, C. P. C. and the Court below has committed no error of law in entertaining this petition and granting the same.

12. It was then argued that inasmuch as the plaintiff (appellant) and the 2nd defendant (settler) had filed a compromise memo adjusting their claims the Court had no power to consider the application of the third party and bring him on record as Rule 3 of Order 23 is mandatory in character and enjoins on the Court the duty of recording the compromise and passing a decree in terms thereof. In support of this contention reliance has been placed on (1951) 2 Mad LJ 26. That was a case where the transferee of the suit property from one of the parties to the suit between the date of the decree and the filing of the appeal to the District Court by the aggrieved party, had applied to be brought on record a day after the compromise memo filed by the parties to the appeal was recorded though the decree in terms was not passed immediately. The application of the transferee was resisted by all the parties to the appeal on the ground that the assignment was not true and further it was vitiated by fraud and collusion. The alienee was nevertheless directed to be impleaded as a party to the appeal. When the matter came up in appeal Chandra Reddy J. (as he then was) relying inter alia on the decisions in Laraitl v. Shiamsunderlal, AIR 1932 All 478 and Setupathi v. Secy. of State, (1925) 50 Mad LJ 59 - AIR 1926 Mad 341 and distinguishing the ruling in Lakshan Chunder v. Nikunjamoni Dass, AIR 1924 Cal 183 allowed the appeal and held that the alienee could not be impleaded as a party to the appeal after the compromise memo was recorded though his interests might be prejudiced by the compromise reached between the parties. It was also observed that the inquiry into the genuineness and validity of the assignment was foreign to the scope of the appeal and could not, therefore, be gone into.

13. Of course, in the case with which we are concerned, the memo of compromise was filed a day later and not earlier than the date of the petition of the alienee. It is, therefore, obvious that on the date of the application the question whether there was a compromise in the appeal did not fall for consideration. It was subsequent thereto that the compromise memo was filed. No action was taken thereon by the Court. Having regard to the provisions of Rule 3 of Order 23, it is only where it is proved to the satisfaction of the Court that the suit or appeal has been adjusted by a lawful agreement or compromise that the Court has to record the said compromise. In other words, whether the compromise memo is lawful or not cannot be a mere matter of assumption. It is left to the satisfaction and decision of the Court after due inquiry, if need be. So then the filing of the memo by itself does not warrant the recording of the compromise; much less passing a decree in terms of the compromise. There is still a long way off between the two stages. The petition filed earlier by the third party must necessarily receive prior consideration. The right to apply implies a right to have an adjudication on the application, for otherwise the right would be merely illusory or nugatory. Of course, the granting of leave by the Court for addition of the party is discretionary with the Court but it is a discretion which is to be exercised judicially after due consideration of all the circumstances of the case. It cannot be rejected in limine without consideration of the circumstances simply because a compromise memo has been filed subsequently. Nor can the petition be rejected simply on the ground that the transferor had denied the genuineness of the assignment or the parties' alleged fraud or collusion.

The language of Order 22, Rule 10 places no such limitation that for its application, assignment, creation or devolution referred to therein should be an admitted or undisputed fact. It is always open to the Court, as held in Enday Ali v. Binodini, (1910) 29 Cal LJ 362 = (AIR 1919 Cal 323) and Surendra v. Nityendra AIR 1926 Cal 173, to enquire into such dispute and pass the necessary order. The dictum of a Division Bench of the Madras High Court, consisting of Sundaram Chetty and Pandrang Row, JJ. in 66 Mad LJ 517 = (AIR 1934 Mad 337) also is to the same effect. Unfortunately that case was not brought to the notice of the learned Judge who decided, (1951) 2 Mad LJ 26. The rulings cited in the later case, referred to above, were considered by the said Division Bench. The learned Judges followed the decision in AIR 1924 Cal 183 (supra) in preference to the dictum in 50 Mad LJ 59 = (AIR 1926 Mad 341) (supra) and AIR 1932 All 478 (supra). In the above-mentioned Calcutta case even after the parties actually on record had reported the terms of settlement and the Court ordered that a decree should be drawn up accordingly, an assignee was added under Order 22, Rule 10, C. P. C. to enable him to impeach the settlement. On the question whether Order 22, Rule 10 is confined only to cases of undisputed assignment, creation or devolution of interest, the Division Bench, following the view taken in 29 Cal LJ 362 = (AIR 1919 Cal 323) and Surendra v. Nitendra, AIR 1926 Cal 173, observed that no such limitation is contained in that order. We believe that the view expressed in (1951) 2 Mad LJ 26 would not have been the same had this Divisional Bench case been brought to the notice of the learned Judge who decided that case.

14. In Nanjammal v. Eshwaramurthi, (1954) 1 Mad LJ 530 = (AIR 1954 Mad 592) a Divisional Bench of the Madras High Court, consisting of Satyanarayana Rao and Balakrishna Ayyar, JJ., held that the transferee pendente lite on being brought on record as a party to the litigation, is not bound by the compromise between his transferor and the opposite party and is entitled to object to a decree being passed in terms of such a compromise. If the application to be brought on record is filed prior to the filing of the compromise memo, his right to object can in no way be defeated. Nor can the filing of compromise memo per se terminate the proceeding. It was also held that merely because the settlement deed is disputed by one party or the other the jurisdiction of the Court to inquire into the truth or genuineness of the deed is not taken away, nor can such inquiry be deemed to be foreign to the scope of appeal in which application is made. The learned Judges then practically overruled the decision in (1951) 2 Mad LJ 26 (supra) as being erroneous in law and referred to earlier cases in support of their dicta.

15. The view taken by this Court in (1958) 2 Andh WR 291 = (AIR 1960 Andh Pra 32) accords with the settled view of the Madras High Court already discussed above. It has been held there that till a compromise decree is passed under O. 23, Rule 3, C. P. C., the litigation cannot be regarded to have terminated and an alienee pendente lite is entitled to object to a decree being passed under Order 23, Rule 3 in terms of compromise between the alienor and the opposite party after he is brought on record. With due deference to the learned Judge, we are of the view that (1951) 2 Mad LJ 26 (supra) was not correctly decided and that (1958) 2 Andh WR 291 = (AIR 1960 Andh Pra 32) (supra), if we may say so with respect, correctly states the law consistent with the view taken by the earlier Division Benches on the points discussed above.

16. It follows from the above discussion that the application of the settlee pendente lite was one under Section 146, C. P. C., that it could be entertained notwithstanding that the truth and validity of the settlement was disputed, that the inquiry into the truth and validity of the settlement cannot be deemed to be foreign to the scope of the appeal, that filing of a compromise memo was no bar to entertaining the application or inquiry into its merits, that filing of a compromise per se does not terminate the proceedings before the appellate Court, that the petitioner who has filed his petition earlier than the compromise memo, has a right to object to the compromise and the Court has a duty to inquire into it once he is added as a party, that though addition as a party is discretionary with the Court, it is a discretion which is to be exercised judicially after duly considering the petition that the Court below did not err in entertaining the petition or deciding it on merits for the petitioner being made a party.

17. This Revision Petition, therefore, fails. It is dismissed with costs.

Petition dismissed.

AIR 1970 ANDHRA PRADESH 217

(V 57 C 32)

OBUL REDDI AND

MADHAVA REDDY, JJ.

G. Raghavareddi, Appellant v. Government of A. P. Home (Transport II) Department by its Secretary, Hyderabad and others, Respondents.

Writ Appeal No. 215 of 1966, D/- 23-9-1969, against order of High Court in Writ Petn. No. 1732 of 1966, D/- 1-12-1966.

(A) A. P. Motor Vehicles Rules (1969), R. 212 (1) (iv) (a) — Grant of stage carriage permit — Applicant must have place of business at either terminus of the route applied for — Whether applicant has such place of business — Relevant date to be taken into consideration is date on which application is made — Rule does not contemplate that applicant should have a valid permit on date when application is considered by Regional Transport Authority. Writ Petn. No. 1732 of 1966 D/- 1-12-1966 (A. P.), Reversed.

(Paras 5, 6)

(B) Constitution of India, Art. 226 — Writ of certiorari — Jurisdiction of High Court to issue — Decision of competent authorities based on misconstruction of provision of law and not on erroneous finding of fact — Writ can be issued. AIR 1964 SC 477 Rel. on. (Paras 10, 11)

Cases Referred: Chronological Paras

(1964) AIR 1964 SC 477 (V 51) =

1964-5 SCR 64, Syed Yakoob v.

Radhakrishnan

10

K. Amareswari and P. Rajagopalachari, for Petitioner; 4th Govt. Pleader, for Respondents Nos. 1 to 3; P. Babul Reddy, for Respondent No. 4.

AN/BN/A337/70/YPB/M

OBUL REDDI, J.: The question involved in this writ appeal is whether the appellant was having a place of business at Venkatagiri one of the termini of the route applied for.

2. The facts necessary for determination of this question are these: In June 1964, the appellant was one of the applicants for stage carriage permit on the route Balireddipalem to Venkatagiri in Nellore district. The Regional Transport Authority, Nellore at its meeting held on 2-11-1964, after considering the applications of all the applicants before it, granted a stage-carriage permit to Badri Rajalah the 4th respondent herein. That order was taken up in appeal to the appellate authority by four of the unsuccessful applicants among whom was the appellant. The appellate authority, in its proceedings A No. 287/A1/64, dated 7-4-1966, set aside the order of the Regional Transport Authority and granted the permit to the appellant herein. It is against that order that the matter was carried in revision to the Government and the Government set aside the order of the appellate authority and granted the permit to Bhadri Rajalah, the 4th respondent herein, restoring the order of the Regional Transport Authority. It is against this order passed by the Government in revision that the appellant filed the writ petition on the ground that the Government misconstrued the scope of Rule 212 (1) (iv) (a) of the Motor Vehicles Rules, Narasimham, J. dismissed the writ petition on the ground that "the place of business in the context must be understood as the place of bus business which, in its very nature, depended on the petitioner having a valid permit on that date to run a bus or buses". According to the learned Judge, the material date for considering whether the appellant had a place of business or not is the date on which the Regional Transport Authority took up the applications for consideration and on that date i.e. 2-11-1964, the appellant did not have any permits and, therefore, it cannot be said that he had a place of business at Venkatagiri, although he might have run buses previous to the date when the Regional Transport Authority took up the applications for consideration.

3. Srimathi Amareswari, the learned counsel appearing for the appellant, contended that all that is required under the relevant rule (Rule 212(1)(iv)(a)) is that the applicant must have a place of business or residence at either terminus of the route applied for and that the appellant had his place of business at Venkatagiri, one of the termini, as evidenced by the certificate issued by the Tahsildar, Venkatagiri, and that the fact that, on the date (2-11-1964) when the Regional Transport Authority took up the applications for consideration, the appellant did not have a valid stage carriage permit, is not at all relevant for deciding the question whether the appellant had his place of business at either terminus of the route applied for.

We may now notice the relevant rule, Rule 212(1)(iv)(a):

"Sector of residential qualification.— (1) Four marks may be awarded to the applicant who has his place of business or residence at either terminus of the route applied for, and two marks may be awarded to the applicant who resides on the route (but not at either terminus) or within 8 kilometres from the route."

4. In order to entitle the applicant to four marks, he must have either residence at either terminus of the route applied for or he must have place of business at either of the points i.e., the starting point or the terminus. It was not the case of the 4th respondent or the lower authorities that the appellant did not have his place of business at Venkatagiri. They only proceeded on the footing that, on the relevant date when his application came up for consideration, he had no running business and not that Venkatagiri was not his place of business. The appellant applied for the route on 16-6-1964 giving his address as "Bazar Street, Venkatagiri Town, Nellore District." In support of his case that his place of business is Venkatagiri he obtained a certificate from the Tahsildar, Venkatagiri dated 24-7-1964. This certificate reads:

"Certified that Sri Gudur Raghava Reddi (the appellant) of Jayampu village is running an office and bus-shed at No. 13-1-16 Velampalem of Venkatagiri Town from 16-10-63 for the bus A. P. G. No. 4147 which was running from Venkatagiri to Kalahasti and back".

5. This certificate, as may be seen from the date, was issued subsequent to the date of the application of the appellant and before the Regional Transport Authority took up the matter of granting a stage-carriage permit on the route in question Balireddipalem to Venkatagiri, for consideration. So what is required under the said rule is that the applicant must have a place of business at either terminus of the route applied for. So, the relevant date to be taken into consideration as to whether an applicant had a place of business at either terminus of the route applied for is the date on which the application is made for the grant of a stage carriage permit. The rule, as we read it, does not require that, on the date when the applications came to be considered by the Regional Transport Authority, the applicant must be actually holding any stage carriage permit. It is not in dispute that the appellant had a temporary permit till 13-9-1964 on the route Nellore to Tirupathi and that he was again granted a stage carriage permit on 24-12-64. The certificate issued by the Tehsildar shows that on 24-7-64 he was running a bus under a permit between Venkatagiri and Kalahasti and back. Before the expiry of the temporary permit and before the expiry of the permit which enabled A. P. G. No. 4147 to ply between Venkatagiri and Kalahasti, the appellant had made the application in respect of the route in question.

6. The learned Judge, Narasimham, J., was of the view that the place of business must mean that, on the date when the Regional Transport Authority took up the subject of granting a stage carriage permit for consideration, an applicant must have had a valid permit. We are unable to agree with the learned Judge that the rule in question is capable of such construction. The only dispute before the lower authorities was whether, on the relevant date when the matter came up for consideration by the Regional Transport Authority, the appellant had a valid permit so as to say that he had a place of business at either termini and not that he had no place of business at Venkatagiri one of the termini. All that is required under the rule is that he must have a place of business and not that he must have a valid permit so as to call his office as a place of business on the date when the matter came up for consideration by the Regional Transport Authority.

7. Mr. Babul Reddy, the learned counsel appearing for the 4th respondent, strenuously contended that, in exercise of this Court's extraordinary jurisdiction under Article 226 of the Constitution, it ought not to interfere unless the authorities below act wholly without jurisdiction or in excess of it, or in violation of the principles of natural justice, or refuse to exercise a jurisdiction vested in them, or there is an error apparent on the face of the record and such act, omission, error, or excess has resulted in manifest injustice. According to Mr. Babul Reddy, it is on appreciation of the material placed before the lower authorities that they came to the conclusion that the appellant did not have a place of business at Venkatagiri so as to entitle him to four marks and that being a finding of fact, this Court cannot interfere with that finding, even if, on the material placed, it may be possible for us to come to a different conclusion.

8. The question before us is not whether the conclusion reached by the authorities below is one of fact, but whether the construction given by Narasimham, J., to the words "place of business" is a proper construction. The relevant portion of the learned Judge's order may, therefore, be noticed:

"The material date is the date when the matter of issuing the permit was considered by the Regional Transport Authority namely 2-11-1964. If, so, it cannot be said that the petitioner had a business of running the bus at the material time. He might have run buses previously. The place of business in the context must be understood as the place of business which, in its very nature, depended on the petitioner having valid permit on that date to run a bus or buses."

9. The rule does not, as already pointed out, contemplate that the appellant should have a running business at the time of the consideration of the applications by the Regional Transport Authority. All that is required is that he must have a place of business at either termini of the route applied for and it is not in dispute that, though, on 2-11-1964 when the subject of granting a stage carriage permit came up for consideration, the appellant did not have a valid permit to ply a bus, he still had his place of business at Venkatagiri. Whether, on that date when the Regional Transport Authority took up the matter for consideration, the appellant had a permit to run a bus or not, is not relevant for determining the question whether the appellant had his place of business at either termini of the route applied for. Since, indisputably, the appellant had his place of business at Venkatagiri, the terminus of the route applied for, he would be entitled to four marks under the rule.

10. Mr. Babul Reddy relied upon the decision of the Supreme Court in Syed Yakoob v. Radhakrishnan, AIR 1964 SC 477 to impress upon us that a writ of certiorari can be issued for correcting errors of jurisdiction committed by inferior Courts or tribunals and is not meant to interfere with decisions on questions of fact. As already pointed out by us, it is not a case where we are seeking to reverse the finding of fact, but where the scope of the provision has been misconstrued by the authorities below and the learned Judge. As has been pointed out by Gajendragadkar, J. (as he then was) in the same decision:

"Where it is manifest or clear that the conclusion of law recorded by an inferior Court or Tribunal is based on an obvious mis-interpretation of the relevant statutory provision, or sometimes in ignorance of it, or may be, even in disregard of it, or is expressly founded on reasons which are wrong in law, the said conclusion can be corrected by a writ of certiorari.

11. We, therefore, set aside the order under appeal and quash the order of the State Government in G. O. Ms. No. 2214, dated 10-10-1966 reversing the order of the appellate authority.

12. In the result, the writ appeal is allowed with costs. Advocate's fee Rs. 100.

Appeal allowed.

AIR 1970 ANDHRA PRADESH 220

(V 57 C 33)

SAMBASIVA RAO AND KUPPUSWAMI JJ.

The Motor Workers Union by its Secretary, Petitioner v. Rayapwaddi Apparao and others, Respondents.

Writ Appeal No. 125 of 1966, D/-13-8-1969, against order of Gopalakrishna Nair J. in W. P. No. 212 of 1964 D/- 7-4-1966.

Motor Vehicles Act (1939), S. 64A — Andhra Pradesh Motor Vehicles Rules, (1964), R. 195(1) — Power of Government to correct orders and proceedings of lower authorities — Filing of unmaintainable application by aggrieved party does not fetter Government's power to act suo motu — Use of word "or" between 'of its own motion' and 'on application made to it' shows that Government can act in either case — Rule 195(1) only prescribes limitation for filing of petition by aggrieved party.

There is nothing in Section 64-A or in Rule 195, which prevents the Government from taking suo motu action, when it comes to know of a defective order or proceeding of a lower authority, through a petition filed by an aggrieved party though it is not maintainable on account of bar of limitation or is otherwise irregular. Obviously, the main intention of the legislature is to confer on the Government power to correct orders and proceedings of the lower authorities and officers. The power is conferred on the Government and for the exercise of that power no limitation is prescribed. What Rule 195(1) imposes is only a limit on the aggrieved parties' right to file a petition. It does not in any way interfere with or restrict the power of the Government to correct an incorrect order of a lower authority. If the petition filed by the aggrieved party is not maintainable for any reason, it could only mean that there is no application made to the Government. Such a situation cannot be worse than there being no application at all. The filing of an unmaintainable application by an aggrieved party cannot alter the situation and take away the power of the Government to act suo motu. After all, the application which is irregular and not maintainable for some reason or other could be a source of knowledge for the Government of the incorrect order. Once it comes to know of an order, either through the application of an aggrieved party or in some other way, the Government can exercise its power suo motu.

(Para 7)

The absence of any period of limitation for exercise of suo motu power by the Government is very significant and revealing. That can lead to the only inference that even if the right of an aggrieved party to file an application before it is time barred, the Government can none the less, proceed in the matter suo motu.

(Para 9)

Moreover, S. 64-A uses the word 'or' between 'of its own motion' and 'on application made to it' which shows that the Government can act in either case and set right the order or proceeding. If the latter method is not available, the first one is certainly open to the Government. The use of the word 'or' certainly imports into the section the meaning 'that the Government's power to correct orders covers each of the two contingencies viz., 'acting on its own motion' or 'on application made to it' by an aggrieved person. To argue that the existence of one contingency excludes the other is clearly violating the meaning and intention of the section. It can therefore be said that even if an application is filed before the Government which is not maintainable on account of bar of limitation or for some other reason, the Government nevertheless continues to have the power to act suo motu. AIR 1955 Mad 660 and AIR 1962 SC 1135 and AIR 1964 SC 264, Rel. on.

(Paras 8, 9)

Cases Referred: Chronological Paras

- | | |
|--|----|
| (1964) AIR 1964 SC 264 (V 51) = | |
| 1964 (1) Cri LJ 156, Afzal Ullah v. State of U. P. | 13 |
| (1962) AIR 1962 SC 1135 (V 49) = | |
| 1962 Supp (1) SCR 728, Nilkanth Prasad v. State of Bihar | 12 |
| (1955) AIR 1955 Mad 660 (V 42) = | |
| JLR (1956) Mad 498, A. M. Transport v. State of Madras | 12 |
| D. V. Reddi Pantulu, for Appellant; C. V. Subba Rao, for P. Ramachandra Rao, for Respondent No. 1; 3rd Govt. Pleader for Respondents Nos. 2 and 3. | |

SAMBASIVA RAO J.: This Writ Appeal is directed against the order of Gopalakrishna Nair, J. in W. P. No. 212 of 1964. The third respondent in the writ petition is the Appellant.

2. The dispute in the appeal relates to the permit of a stage carriage MDV 1947 which was subsequently renumbered as

A. P. V. 482, which belonged to the Motor Works Union of Bheemunipatnam in Visakhapatnam District, which is the third respondent appellant. One Babulal, claiming to be a member of the Union, purported to have sold the vehicle to the first respondent in the appeal (petitioner in the writ petition). The first respondent and a person by name J. V. Ramanaiah, who purported to be the Secretary of the Union filed in 1958, a joint application to the Regional Transport Authority, Visakhapatnam, for transfer of the stage carriage to the 1st respondent (the petitioner). That application was notified by the Regional Transport Authority calling for objections. The appellant Union, represented by its Secretary, K. Ramanaiah, (different from J. V. Ramanaiah) who signed the Joint application for transfer filed its objections two days beyond time prescribed for filing the objections. The objections raised are Babulal had no right to sell the stage carriage belonging to the Union, that J. V. Ramanaiah had no locus standi or any capacity to sign the transfer application on behalf of the Union, as he had been removed from the post of Secretary on 15-2-1952, and removed from the membership of the Union itself on 30th of July, 1952, i.e., years before the application for transfer was filed. Since the objections were filed two days late, the Regional Transport Authority transferred the vehicle to the first respondent.

Felt aggrieved by this order recognising the transfer, the Union represented by its Secretary, K. Ramanaiah filed a revision petition before the Government of Andhra Pradesh under Section 64-A of the Motor Vehicles Act, 1939. The main contention in that petition was that the transfer application signed by J. V. Ramanaiah as representing the appellant Union is a rank forgery having no concern with the Union at all, that the Union was not at all represented at the meeting of the Transport Authority held on 19-7-60 (in which the transfer was recognised) as the notice of the meeting was not served on K. Ramanaiah, the real Secretary, of the Union; nor was a copy of the resolution communicated to the Union and that for these reasons the resolution of the Regional Transport Authority transferring the permit in favour of the first respondent was vitiated by fraud, collusion and mistake. The Government considered that the transfer of the permit made by the Regional Transport Authority, was void and should be set aside, because that authority was not in a position to conclusively decide as to who actually was the Secretary of the Union.

Having set aside the order of transfer, the Government remanded the case back to the Regional Transport Authority, for fresh disposal according to law, having due regard to the representation of the Union. The first respondent filed W. P. No. 442 of 1961 questioning the correctness of this order. The principal contention in the writ petition was that the Government had passed the impugned order, without issuing any notice to the first respondent and giving him an opportunity to represent his case. The writ petition was allowed on that ground and the Government was directed to adjudicate upon the grievance of the Union, after giving due notice and opportunity to the first respondent. When the matter went back to the Government due notice was given to both parties including the first respondent and after hearing both sides, the Government passed an order on 15-1-64, once again setting aside the order of the Regional Transport Authority as illegal, improper and irregular and remanding the case back to that authority for fresh disposal according to law, having due regard to the representation of the appellant Union. While passing this order, the Government once again pointed out that the Regional Transport Authority allowed the transfer without deciding as to who actually was the Secretary of the Union in the interval of nearly two years period from the date of publication of the matter. Once again, the first respondent filed a writ petition in this court impugning the order of the Government. That is W. P. No. 212 of 1964. Gopalakrishna Nair, J. allowed the writ petition and quashed the order of the Government. This writ appeal has been filed by the Union which was the third respondent in W. P. No. 212 of 1964.

3. The ground on which the order of the Government was quashed in the writ petition was that the Government had no jurisdiction to entertain the revision petition, because it was time barred. A contention was put forward before the learned Judge that the Government must be deemed to have taken suo motu action under Section 64-A of the Motor Vehicles Act. This contention was repelled by the learned Judge, who said that:

"A reading of impugned order shows that the Government took action on the revision petition filed by the third respondent and that they passed the impugned order on it. It is, therefore, difficult to accept the contention of Mr. Reddipantulu that the Government took suo motu action under Section 64-A and that they totally disregarded the revision petition filed by the third respondent (appellant)".

4. The correctness of this view of the learned Judge is canvassed before us by Sri Srirama Sastry, appearing for the appellant. His contention is that under Section 64-A power is conferred on the State Government to call for the records of any order passed by any authority or officer subordinate to it, either on its own motion or on application made to it. Simply because an application was made before it by an aggrieved party the Government does not cease to have the suo motu power to call for the records and examine the same. The learned counsel for the respondent, on the other hand, argues that once an aggrieved party files a revision petition, the Government loses all power to act suo motu. The point for decision in this appeal is which of these two contentions is correct and acceptable.

5. Section 64-A is in the following terms:—

"The State Government may of its own motion or on an application made to it call for the records of any order passed or proceeding taken under this Chapter by any authority or officer subordinate to it, for the purpose of satisfying itself as to the legality or regularity or propriety of such order or proceeding and after examining such records may pass such order in reference thereto as it thinks fit". It is to be seen that the section, by itself, does not impose any restriction as to limitation with regard to the filing of an application or exercise of the suo motu power by the State Government. That is, however, found in Rule 195 of the Andhra Pradesh Motor Vehicles Rules, 1964. Sub-Rule (1) of that Rule says:

"An application to the Government under Section 64-A shall be in the form of a memorandum setting forth concisely the purport of the petition and shall be presented to the Govt. within thirty days of the date of receipt by the person aggrieved of the order or proceedings against which the application is preferred. The application shall be accompanied by five additional copies of the same and the original or certified copy of the order or proceedings against which the application is preferred.

Provided if any doubt arises as to the date of receipt of the order or proceedings by the person aggrieved, the decision of the Government shall be final". Even Rule 195(1) does not limit the time within which the State Government can exercise its suo motu power. The rule prescribes a period of 30 days, as a period of limitation within which an aggrieved party can file an application before the Government. That period of 30 days has to be reckoned from the date of the receipt of the order by the person aggrieved. It is not disputed before us that the application before the Government was preferred by the appellant beyond 30 days, though the reason for the delay is stated to be the fact that J. V. Ramananiah, masqueraded as the Secretary of the appellant Union and, therefore no copy of the resolution of the Regional Transport Authority allowing the transfer was communicated to the Union through its real Secretary. It is stated that for that reason, the filing of the petition before the Government was delayed. Whatever might be the reason for the delayed presentation of the petition, it is clear that it comes within the mischief of the limitation prescribed by Rule 195(1) and could not, therefore, be entertained by the Government. This much is conceded by the learned counsel for the appellant himself.

6. But, then, the question is whether under the circumstances, the Government was precluded from exercising its suo motu power also by virtue of the fact that the aggrieved party had filed before it a time barred petition. We have no doubt that the question is capable of only one answer and that is, that the Government still continue to have the power of acting suo motu. The language of the section does not lend any support to the contention of the respondent. It is impossible to construe the section as laying down that, if an application by an aggrieved party is made to it, the Government cannot exercise its suo motu power, but should only adjudicate on the application one way or the other. Neither the section nor any rules made under the Act prescribe the manner in which an order or proceeding of any authority or officer subordinate to the Government can be brought to its notice, so that it may of its own motion call for the records and examine them. It may come to know of an order by the lower authority or officer by way of such authority or officer sending it a copy of such order or proceeding or it may come to know of a proceeding, while it is examining some other connected matter. It is equally possible for the Government to come to know of an order or proceeding when the aggrieved party itself files a petition before it. Since the knowledge of the Government of any order or proceeding may arise at any time, it was thought necessary and desirable by the rule-making authority that no period of limitation should be prescribed for the exercise of suo motu power by the Government.

7. We fail to see anything either in Section 64-A or in Rule 195, which prevents the Government from taking suo motu action, when it comes to know of a defective order or proceeding of a lower authority, through a petition filed by an aggrieved party though it is not maintainable on account of bar of limitation or is otherwise irregular. Obviously, the main intention of the legislature is to confer on the Government power to correct orders and proceedings of the lower authorities and officers. The power is conferred on the Government and for the exercise of that power no limitation is prescribed. What Rule 195(1) imposes is only a limit on the aggrieved parties' right to file a petition. It does not in any way interfere with or restrict the power of the Government to correct an incorrect order of a lower authority. If the petition filed by the aggrieved party is not maintainable for any reason, it could only mean that there is no application made to the Government. Such a situation cannot be worse than there being no application at all. It is admitted and indeed there cannot be any dispute that if there is no application at all and if the Government comes to know of an incorrect order at any time, it can call for the records and correct it. The filing of an unmaintainable application by an aggrieved party cannot alter the situation and take away the power of the Government to act suo motu. After all, the application which is irregular and not maintainable for some reason or other could be a source of knowledge for the Government of the incorrect order. Once it comes to know of an order, either through the application of an aggrieved party or in some other way, the Government can exercise its power suo motu.

8. It should also be noted that Section 64-A uses the word 'or' between 'of its own motion' and 'on application made to it' which shows that the Government can act in either case and set right the order or proceeding. If the latter method is not available, the first one is certainly open to the Government. The use of the word 'or' certainly imports into the section the meaning 'that the Government's power to correct orders covers each of the two contingencies viz., 'acting on its own motion' 'or' on application made to it by an aggrieved person. To argue that the existence of one contingency excludes the other is clearly violating the meaning and intention of the section. We can also test the same in another way. Suppose within 30 days, the Government of its own motion called for the records and found that there was no error in the order of the lower authority. Would it prevent the aggrieved party from presenting an application within 30 days from the date of receipt of the order. We do not think it would. It can as well happen that after re-examination of the records with the aid of the aggrieved party's representation, the Government may detect some error which should be rectified. Even then the Government will continue to have the power to correct such an order. It is thus clear that one method does not exclude the other.

9. In this context, the absence of any period of limitation for such exercise of suo motu power by the Government is very significant and revealing. That should necessarily mean that even if the right of an aggrieved party to file an application before it is time barred, the Government can none the less, proceed in the matter suo motu. We cannot, therefore, accede to the argument of the learned counsel for the respondent that, once an aggrieved party files an application, the Government loses all power to act suo motu. On a reading of Section 64-A and Rule 195(1) we have no hesitation to hold that even if an application is filed before the Government which is not maintainable on account of bar of limitation or for some other reason, the Government nevertheless continues to have the power to act suo motu.

10. It is then contended that the Government in its impugned order purported to adjudicate only upon the application of the appellant, though it was barred by time. The learned Judge observed that it is difficult to accept the contention that the Government took suo motu action under Section 64-A and that they totally disregarded the revision petition filed by the appellant. We do not think it is necessary that the application filed by the appellant should be totally disregarded. Perhaps in this case, the Government came to know of the order of the Regional Transport Authority only through the application of the appellant. Consequently, the application of the appellant could not be disregarded by the Government. It was thus referred not only in the preamble but also in the preliminary portions of the order. But the body of the main order does not refer to the revision petition filed by the aggrieved party nor does it purport to adjudicate on that petition. The order merely points out to the drawbacks in the decision of the Regional Transport Authority and records the conclusion that the transfer of the permit is void and should be set aside. Then the Government directed that the case should go back to the Regional Transport Authority for fresh disposal according to law having due regard to the representation of the revision petitioner. No doubt it is true that the Government did not state that it was exercising its suo motu power. It was only exercising the obvious power it had of correcting an order of the lower authority conferred on it under Section 64-A. It should also be noted that the contention that the revision petition was barred by time was not raised before the Government; at any rate it was not argued before it. Had it been argued perhaps, the Government would have specifically stated that it was exercising its suo motu power. Having failed to argue the point before the Government and thus to create an occasion for the Government to specifically state the power it was exercising, the first respondent cannot now turn round and say that the Government passed the order only on the revision petition filed by the appellant.

11. That apart, as we have stated, it is indisputable that the Government had power under Section 64-A to correct an incorrect order passed by a lower authority. When it had undisputed authority to pass the order which it did, in our view it is immaterial whether the nature of the power it exercised was stated or not. Further, even supposing that the impugned order was stated to be on the revision petition alone it is not vitiated by the mistaken reference in it as an order on the revision petition. The crux of the problem is whether the Government had power to pass such an order. Undoubtedly it has and, therefore, the impugned order is a valid one, passed in exercise of that power.

12. This view of ours finds support from the following decisions. In A. M. Transport v. State of Madras, AIR 1953 Mad 660 a contention was urged that:

"No appeal lay to the Government against the order of the Central Road Traffic Board passed through its Secretary, refusing the variation, and the order of the Government did not disclose that their revisional jurisdiction (under Section 64-A) was invoked or that they intended to exercise such revisional powers."

The argument was the aggrieved party sought to file an appeal which did not really lie, and nevertheless, the Government entertained and allowed it. Finding that the Government had ample revisional power under Section 64-A to interfere in the matter Rajamannar, C. J. speaking for the Division Bench, observed in paragraph 9 of the judgment:

"The other contention that was urged was that no appeal lay to the Government against the order of the Central Road Traffic Board passed through its Secretary, refusing the variation, and that the order of the Government did not disclose that their revisional jurisdiction was invoked or that they intended to exercise such revisional powers. We do not consider that there is much substance in this objection because if the authority had the power to pass the order such an order could not be held to be vitiated by the caption given to it".

In Nilkanth Prasad v. State of Bihar, AIR 1962 SC 1135 the Supreme Court held that the appeal Board was entitled, when the record was before it, to revise the order of the Regional Transport Authority even if the appeal was incompetent in view of the vast powers of revision under Section 64-A.

13. In Afzal Ullah v. State of Uttar Pradesh, AIR 1964 SC 264 certain bye-laws were prepared by the Municipal Board, but it purported to have made them under a wrong provision of the Act. The Supreme Court finding that the provision of law invoked by the Municipal Board in making bye-laws was wrong and that the impugned bye-laws could be justified under other provisions of the Act, then held that mention of wrong provision under which bye-laws were purported to be made was not sufficient to declare the bye-laws invalid. It was held that once it was shown that the Municipal Board had the competence to make bye-laws, the fact that the preamble to the bye-laws mentioned clauses which were not relevant, would not effect the validity of the bye-laws. It was observed—

"The validity of the bye-laws must be tested by reference to the question as to whether the Board had the power to make those bye-laws. If the power is otherwise established, the fact that the source of the power has been incorrectly or inaccurately indicated in the preamble to the bye-laws would not make the bye-laws invalid."

We have, therefore, no doubt that the Government was fully competent to pass the order dated 15-1-64, which was impugned in W. P. No. 212 of 1964 and it cannot be quashed for the reason that the appellant had filed a revision petition before it after the period of limitation.

14. We must also note that the learned 4th Government Pleader appeared for the State of Andhra Pradesh and the Secretary of the Regional Transport Authority, who are respondents 2 and 3 in the appeal, supported the appellant.

15. For these reasons the order of Gopalakrishna Nair, J. in W. P. No. 212 of 64 is liable to be set aside. Accordingly the appeal is allowed. The order in W. P. No. 212 of 64 is set aside and that of the Government dated 15-1-1964 in G. O. Ms. No. 67 is restored. The appellant will have his costs from the first respondent. Advocates fee Rs. 100.

Appeal allowed.

AIR 1970 ANDHRA PRADESH 225
(V 57 C 34)

VENKATESAM AND VAIDYA, JJ.

Maturi Umamaheswara Rao and others, Appellants v. Pendyala Venkatrayudu and others, Respondents.

Appeal No. 269 of 1963, D/- 1-7-1968.

(A) Companies Act (1956), Section 10 — Company Court has no exclusive jurisdiction in matters falling outside Companies Act such as suits on contracts or mortgage bonds executed by companies — (Civil P. C. (1908), Section 9.)

On a plain reading of the provisions contained in Section 2 (11) and Section 10 it is clear that the High Court or the District Court, where the jurisdiction had been transferred to it, is the Court having jurisdiction under this Act, i.e., to deal with matters provided for by the Act, and it is not correct to say that the Company Court has exclusive jurisdiction in matters falling outside the Companies Act, e.g., suits on contracts or mortgage bonds executed by Companies. Where the suit on a mortgage executed by the company was filed by the plaintiff-mortgagee under Order 34, R. 1, C. P. C. in the Subordinate Judge's Court:

Held, that the suit could be entertained by that Court. The contention that only the District Court had the jurisdiction to entertain the suit but not the Subordinate Judge's Court, was without substance. (Para 10)

(B) Companies Act (1956), Section 125 — Specific charge and floating charge — Distinction between — (T. P. Act (1882), Section 100).

A specific charge is one that without more fastens on ascertained or definite property capable of being ascertained and defined, whereas a floating charge is ambulatory and shifting in its nature, hovering over and, so to speak, floating with the property which it is intended to affect, until some event occurs or some act is done which causes it to settle and fasten on the subject of the charge within its reach and grasp. When the charge is fixed, it affects the title of the property and transfer of interest takes place immediately and the company can only deal with the property affected, subject to the charge. But when the charge is a floating one, the company may, in the ordinary course of business, deal with the property covered by the charge mortgaging, selling, disposing of it or using it up as the business requires, at any time before the charge attaches. A liability in floating charge for the recovery of money from the general assets is contingent, i.e., on the occurrence of some event a fixed sum of money becomes recoverable from the specific assets which are in existence at the time. When the contingency arises, the charge is crystallized and then becomes a fixed charge. 1904 AC 355, Foll. (Para 12)

(C) Companies Act (1956), Section 125 — Mortgage of property by company — Mortgage not registered under section — Purchase of mortgaged property in execution of money decree against Company — Suit by mortgagee for realisation of mortgage debt — Purchaser cannot contend that mortgage was nullity and not enforceable against him.

The mortgaged property of a company was sold in execution of a money decree against the company and was purchased by D. The company subsequently went into liquidation and after the conclusion of the winding up proceedings its name also was struck off the register of Companies. In a suit filed by the mortgagee against D for recovery of the mortgage amount, D contended that as the mortgage was not registered under Section 125, the mortgage was void and not enforceable against him.

Held, that the failure to have the mortgage registered under Section 125 did not in any way invalidate it as against the company when it was a going concern, and its only effect was that the security created by the mortgage was rendered void against the liquidator and the creditor in winding up proceedings. Even though the mortgage was not registered, a person claiming to have purchased the mortgaged property in execution of a money decree, could not contend that his purchase was free from the mortgage, nor was Section 125 a bar to the mortgagee enforcing his mortgage as against the transferee of the company. Hence, it was not open to D to contend that the mortgage was a nullity, or that the properties purchased by him were not subject to the rights of the mortgagee. AIR 1927 Rang 288 and AIR 1963 Assam 56, Foll. (Paras 13 and 14)

(D) Limitation Act (1908), Article 132 — Mortgage for term certain with default clause — Money does not become due within meaning of Article 132 until both mortgagor's right to redeem and mortgagee's right to enforce his security has accrued — Mortgagor cannot take advantage of his own default and contend that suit must be filed within 12 years from default — Suit filed within twelve years from date fixed for redemption is in time — AIR 1932 PC 207, Foll. (Para 25)

Cases Referred: Chronological Paras
(1963) AIR 1963 Assam 56 (V 50) =
ILR (1963) 15 Assam 257, Bhramar Lal v. Promode Ranjan	14
(1932) AIR 1932 PC 207 (V 19) =
59 Ind App 376, Lasa Din v. Mt. Gulab Kunwar	25
(1927) AIR 1927 Rang 288 (V 14)
= ILR 5 Rang 585, Aung Ban Zeya v. Chettiar Firm	13, 14
(1915) 1915-1 Ch 643 = 84 LJ Ch 134, Monolithic Building Co., Tacon v. The Company	13
(1904) 1904 AC 355 = 73 LJ Ch 739, Illingworth v. Houldsworth	12

K. B. Krishna Murthy, for T. Raman, for Appellants; B. Ramalingeswara Rao, for Respondents.

VENKATESAM, J.: This is an appeal preferred by defendants 1 to 7 against the judgment and decree of the learned Subordinate Judge, Rajahmundry, in O. S. 9/61 on his file.

2. The relevant facts may be stated as follows: Gopal Glass Works Ltd. a company registered under the Indian Companies Act of 1913 having its registered office at Rajahmundry, borrowed Rs. 60,000/- from late P. S. R. V. K. Rangarao on 19-1-1948 and for its due repayment, executed a mortgage-cum-debenture deed (Ex. A9) dated 5-6-1948 agreeing to repay the same with interest at 7-1/2% per annum on the terms and conditions set out therein. The bond provided for the issue of debentures, but eventually they were not issued. Though some attempts were made to have the bond registered with the Registrar on the Joint Stock Companies under Section 109 of that Act, the bond was also not registered.

3. The plaintiffs' case is that the plaintiffs who are fourteen in number, are the legal representatives of late Rangarao (hereinafter referred to as the mortgagee) and they have agreed that by virtue of a registered partition deed, the 1st plaintiff alone became entitled to the money due under this deed and prayed for a decree in his favour and if that is not possible, in favour of all the plaintiffs. As per the terms of the bond, the interest has to be paid every year and the principal shall be repayable on or before 5-6-1954, and in default of payment of interest in any year, the entire principal money as well as the interest accrued shall become immediately payable and security became enforceable after the expiry of 30 days from such due date. The Company having committed default in payment of even the first year's interest, (which was due by 5-6-1949) the entire principal and interest became payable by 5-7-1949. One Boda Venkataratnam obtained a decree against the Company

In O. S. 39/49 on the file of the District Munsif's Court, Rajahmundry which was transmitted to District Munsif's Court, Peddapuram for execution and in E. P. 87/50, some of the suit mortgaged properties were sold in auction on 26-7-1951 and purchased by the 1st defendant for Rs. 3045/-, subject to the debt due under Ex. A9. The sale was confirmed on 1-9-1951 as evidenced by the sale certificate Ex. A25. The 1st defendant applied in E. A. 38/52 for delivery of the property purchased by him to one Palakurti Kameswararao on behalf of Kotha Suryanarayana, on the ground that the said Kotha Suryanarayana agreed to purchase the properties from the 1st defendant for Rs. 3100/- under the agreement dated 15-1-1952. On that application the Court passed an order that the property may be delivered to Palakurti Kameswararao instead of the 1st defendant. The property was accordingly delivered to Kameswararao on 17-1-1952 as per the delivery receipt Ex. B3.

It may be mentioned here, that on the date the sale took place, the Company was a going concern. Subsequently as the Company had sustained losses it went into voluntary liquidation by resolution of the Directors dated 17-5-1958, and the resolution of the Extraordinary General body dated 10-6-58 (Ex. A-15). After the completion of the liquidation proceedings, the name of the Company was also struck off by the Registrar of the Companies and the Company ceased to exist. After the death of the mortgagee, the plaintiffs issued notices to the defendant No. 1 demanding repayment of the mortgage debt but he failed to do so, and hence they filed the present suit on 20-3-1961.

4. The suit was resisted by the 1st defendant as well as by defendants 2 to 7, the legal representatives of Kotha Suryanarayana, on several grounds. The 1st defendant contended that the Subordinate Judge's Court, Rajahmundry had no jurisdiction to entertain the suit as per Section 10 of the Indian Companies Act, 1956 (hereinafter referred to as the Act). The debentures and debenture certificates not having been issued as per the mortgage deed, the mortgage itself is void and unenforceable, and the mortgage deed as well as the debentures not having been registered with the Registrar of Joint Stock Companies, the mortgage became void and unenforceable under Section 125. As the mortgage itself was void, even though the properties were sold subject to the mortgage, the 1st defendant is not liable to discharge the same. The properties purchased by the 1st defendant having been delivered through Court to Kameswararao, the remedy of the plaintiffs is only to proceed against Kotha Suryanarayana, who, it was contended, was a bona fide purchaser for value without notice of the mortgage. The 1st defendant did not undertake to discharge the mortgage liability. He did not sell any of the items of the machinery mortgaged under Ex. A-9 nor realised any substantial sums thereby and that he is not a trustee nor personally liable. He never gave any personal undertaking to discharge the mortgage debt. Some of the mortgaged properties were subject to the first charge in favour of one Chauhan as stated in the deed itself. As the mortgage deed was not registered under the Companies Act the amount thereunder became immediately payable under the provisions there, and the suit is barred by limitation.

5. Defendants 2 to 7 were impleaded as parties to the suit on 16-2-1962 by an order on I. A. 789/61. They substantially adopted the contentions of the 1st defendant and also raised the plea of limitation. It was averred that as per the terms of the mortgage deed executed on 5-6-1948 both the principal and interest became due on the failure of payment of one year's interest, and as the first year's interest itself due on 5-6-1949 was not paid the suit should have been filed within 12 years hereafter, i.e., 5-6-1961, but inasmuch as they were impleaded on 16-2-62, the suit as against them was time barred.

6. On these contentions, the learned Subordinate Judge framed appropriate issues and he rejected all the material contentions of the defendants and granted a preliminary mortgage decree directing the defendants to pay on or before 29-3-1963 or any extended date Rupees 70,076-34 with interest at 5-1/2% per annum on 60,000/- from the date of the decree. In default of such payment, he directed that the plaintiffs may apply for a final decree for sale of the mortgage property and on such application, the mortgage property or sufficient part thereof shall be directed to be sold and the money realised by such sale shall be paid to the 1st plaintiff under this decree. The 1st plaintiff was also given the liberty to take such further proceedings as are open to him against the 1st defendant, if any part of the plaintiff schedule property did not exist.

7. Aggrieved by this judgment and decree, this appeal was preferred by the defendants.

8. Sri T. Raman, the learned counsel for the appellants raised before us the following contentions:

(1) The Subordinate Judge's Court, Rajahmundry had no jurisdiction to entertain the suit;

(2) The mortgage deed Ex. A-9 is void and unenforceable under Section 125 of the Companies Act and as such the suit is not maintainable;

(3) Kotha Suryanarayana, the predecessor-in-title of defendants 2 to 7, was a bona fide purchaser for value without notice, and the properties purchased by him not subject to the mortgage debt;

(4) The suit is barred by limitation. After hearing Sri Raman and the counsel for the respondents we posted the case for judgment today, giving leave to Mr. Raman to cite any authorities which he wanted. To-day Sri K. B. Krishnamurthy, appears for Mr. Raman raises a few more contentions, viz.,

(i) Ext. A-9 had only created a floating charge but not a fixed charge, and therefore the only remedy of the plaintiffs was to sue for specific performance of the contract Ex. A-9 for the issue of debentures;

(ii) The Several clauses in Ex. A-9 provided only for redemption of the debentures and for payment of the interest due thereunder but not for payment of interest or principal under the mortgage deed, and as the mortgage debt became immediately payable and the suit filed beyond 12 years from 5-6-1948 is barred by limitation.

9. We shall now consider the validity of all these contentions. The first contention of the appellants is that it is only the District Court, Rajahmundry that had the jurisdiction to entertain the suit, but not the Subordinate Judge's Court. In order to appreciate this contention, it may be relevant to note that the suit was filed, as is evident from paragraph 14 of the plaint, to enforce the mortgage by sale of the mortgaged properties under Order 34 Rule 1 C. P. C. and for recovery of the suit amount Rs. 60,000/- with interest at 5-1/2% per annum and costs by sale of the mortgaged properties or a sufficient part thereof. The suit was filed only against the 1st defendant purchaser of the suit properties, subject to the mortgage debt. By way of abundant caution, defendants 2 to 7 were also impleaded as the 1st defendant contended that he sold the properties in favour of Kotha Suryanarayana, their predecessor-in-title. The relevant provisions of the Act, may now be referred to.

10. Section 2 (11) defines 'Court' to mean, with respect to any matter relating to a Company, the Court having jurisdiction under this Act with respect to that matter in relation to that Company, as provided in S. 10. Section 10 lays down that the Court having jurisdiction under this Act shall be — (a) the High Court having jurisdiction in relation to the place at which the registered office of the company concerned is situate, except to the extent to which jurisdiction has been conferred on any District Court under sub-section (2). On a plain reading of these provisions it is clear that the High Court or the District Court, where the jurisdiction had been transferred to it, is the Court having jurisdiction under this Act, i.e., to deal with matters provided for by the Act, and it is not correct to say that the Company Court has exclusive jurisdiction in matters falling outside the Companies Act, e.g., suits on contracts or mortgage bonds executed by Companies. As already stated, the present suit is filed for recovery of the mortgage amount by sale of the mortgaged properties under Order 34 Rule 1 C. P. C. and we fail to see how the Subordinate Judge's Court at Rajahmundry which is the Original Court with unlimited jurisdiction cannot entertain the suit. We accordingly reject this contention.

11. The next argument is that the mortgage deed Ex. A-9 is void and unenforceable under S. 125 of the Companies Act. Section 125, omitting unnecessary words, is in the following terms:

"Subject to the provisions of this part, every charge created on or after the 1st day of April, 1914, by a company and being a charge to which this section applies shall, so far as any security on the company's property or undertaking is conferred thereby, be void against the liquidator and any creditor of the company, unless the prescribed particulars of the charge, together with the instrument, if any, by which the charge is created is filed with the Registrar for registration in the manner required by this Act within twenty-one days after the date of its creation."

The Registrar is given the power to register it in seven days thereafter. If he is satisfied that there is sufficient cause for not filing the instrument within the particular period. Sub-section (2) lays down that:

"Nothing in sub-section (1) shall prejudice any contract or obligation for the repayment of the money secured by the charge."

Sub-section (3) provides that "When a charge becomes void under this Section, the money secured thereby shall immediately become payable."

According to sub-section (4), this section applies to the following charges:

(a) a charge for the purpose of securing any issue of debentures;

(b) a charge on uncalled share capital of the company;

(c) a charge on any Immovable property, wherever situate, or any interest therein;

(d) a charge on any book debts of the company;

(e) a charge, not being a pledge, on any movable property of the company;

(f) a floating charge on the undertaking or any property of the company including stock-in-trade;

(g) a charge on calls made but not paid;

(h) a charge on a ship or any share in a ship;

(i) a charge on goodwill, on a patent or a licence under a patent, on a trade mark, or on a copyright or a licence under a copyright.

Sub-section (8) provides the holding of debentures entitling the holder to a charge on immovable property shall not, for the purposes of this section, be deemed to be an interest in immovable property. Section 141 provides for rectification of register of charges on the ground of any mistake having crept in, and Section 142, the penalties for non-compliance with these provisions.

12. The distinction between a specific charge and a floating charge is well settled in law and may be stated at the outset. A specific charge is one that without more fastens on ascertained or definite property capable of being ascertained and defined, whereas a floating charge is ambulatory and shifting in its nature, hovering over and, so to speak, floating with the property which it is intended to affect, until some event occurs or some act is done which causes it to settle and fasten on the subject of the charge within its reach and grasp. (Per Lord Macnaghten in Illingworth v. Houldsworth 1904 A. C. 355). Debentures may create a fixed or floating charge or both. When the charge is fixed, it affects the title of the property and transfer of interest takes place immediately and the company can only deal with the property affected, subject to the charge. But when the charge is a floating one, the company may, in the ordinary course of business, deal with the property covered by the charge mortgaging, selling, disposing of it or using it up as the business requires, at any time before the charge attaches. A liability in floating charge for the recovery of money from the general assets is contingent, i.e., on the occurrence of some event a fixed sum of money becomes recoverable from the specific assets which are in existence at the time. When the contingency arises, the charge is crystallized and then becomes a fixed charge. In other words, a floating charge is an agreement by which the creator of the charge stipulates that in the event of certain contingency an interest in the property, which happens to be in his possession at the time, shall be conveyed to the holder of that charge.

13. The scope of Section 125 (corresponding to section 109 of Companies Act, 1913) is well settled by authorities. Its non-compliance only makes the security void, not against everybody but as against the liquidator and any creditor of the Company. It leaves the security to stand as against the company while it is a going concern, but does not make the security binding on the liquidator as successor of the company. In Aung Ban Zeya v. Chettiar Firm, AIR 1927 Rang. 288 the suit was filed for recovery of a sum of money as being due on a mortgage of the company mill and other properties. The mortgagors admitted the debt and the mortgage but pleaded that the mortgagees were not entitled to a mortgage decree because under Section 109 of the Indian Companies Act of 1913, the security on the company's property was void against the liquidator or any creditor of the company, since the prescribed particulars of the mortgage and a copy thereof were not filed with the registrar. That contention was rejected by the trial Court on the ground that there was no question in that case of any claim by a liquidator or any creditor of the company, and gave the respondents a mortgage decree. On appeal the same contention was repeated and a Bench of the Rangoon High Court rejected that contention summarily. An application for leave to the Privy Council was rejected by the Bench of that High Court quoting with approval the observations of the Master of the Rolls and Phillimore L. J. in In Re Monolithic Building Co., Tacon v. The Company, (1915) 1 Ch. 643, which construed Section 93 of the corresponding provisions of the English Companies Consolidation Act of 1908. With regard to a deed which is not registered, the Master of the Rolls observed:

"Of course the deed is not void to all intents and purposes. 'It is a perfectly good deed against the company as long as it is a going concern'."

Phillimore L. J. observed:

"We have to construe section 93 of the Statute. It makes void a security; not the debt, not the cause of action, but the security and not as against every body, 'not as against the company while it is a going concern.'" (Italics (here in ' ') ours).

These two cases are authority for the position that the failure to have the mortgage registered under Section 125 of the Act does not in any way invalidate it as against the company when it is a going concern, and its only effect is that the security created by the mortgage is rendered void against the liquidator and the creditor in winding up proceedings. In the instant case, as already noticed, even before the Company went into liquidation the mortgaged property was sold in execution of a money decree against the company and the property was purchased by the 1st defendant, subject to the mortgage. We also noticed that the company subsequently, not only went into liquidation but after the conclusion of winding up proceedings its name was struck off the register of Companies.

14. The next case where the facts are similar is a decision of a Bench of the Assam High Court in Bhramar Lal v. Promode Ranjan, AIR 1963 Assam 56. In that case a company executed a mortgage in respect of its properties but it was not registered with the registrar of companies. Pursuant to the mortgage, the mortgagee was also put in possession of the property. The mortgaged property was subsequently brought to sale and purchased by a third party, who contended that the possession of the mortgagee was illegal and was that of a trespasser, because the mortgage not having been registered, it was void. On a review of the case law by Mehrotra, C. J. and C. S. Nayudu J. rejected this contention. The position was summed up by the learned Chief Justice thus:

"To our mind on the plain reading of S. 109 it cannot be said that the failure to register the mortgage renders the mortgage invalid and a nullity. The effect of the section is that if the mortgage is not registered, the liquidator is not to take notice of it as a mortgage. The debt will survive and it will be treated on a par with other debts. The property which is the subject-matter of the security will be available as the assets of the company to the liquidator for payment to the creditors. The creditors in liquidation will not be affected by the mortgage. This section does not take away the right of the company to deal with its property; If the company can validly deal with its property, any transfer made by the company will be binding on the company. If the company mortgages certain property, any person who subsequently purchases the property from the company will take it subject to the mortgage and Section 109 is no bar to the mortgagee enforcing his mortgage as against the transferee of the company simply because it has not been registered under Section 109."

In the present case there is no evidence to show that the company has gone into liquidation. It is not the liquidator who in the course of the liquidation proceeding is contending that the mortgage is not binding on him. It is the creditor of the company who in execution of his decree has purchased the property and is contending that his purchase is free from the mortgage. Section 109 does not warrant such an interpretation.

The question of the liquidator's avoiding it would only arise if the Company has gone into liquidation. So far as the creditor is concerned, the right to avoid would also arise in liquidation. The purpose of Section 109 in calling upon a company to register the charge or mortgage is for the benefit of the liquidator and the creditors in liquidation. 'A creditor who has no interest in the property cannot put any restraint on the powers of the company to mortgage its property.' Neither the language of section 109 nor the purpose behind it can justify such an interpretation. In effect the contention of the plaintiff is that from the date of the auction purchase he became the owner of the property free from encumbrance. The possession of the mortgagee or his lessee became illegal. What he purchased was the property and not only the right of redemption." (Italics here in 'ours.') The learned Chief Justice extracted the observations of Phillimore, L. J. in the case already cited, and followed the decision of the Rangoon High Court in AIR 1927 Rang. 288. This case is an authority for the position that even though the mortgage is not registered under the Companies Act, a person claiming to have purchased the mortgaged property in execution of a money decree, cannot contend that his purchase is free from the mortgage, nor is Section 109 a bar to the mortgagee enforcing his mortgage as against the transferee of the company. We follow this decision and hold that in the case before us, the mortgaged property having been purchased by the 1st defendant subject to the mortgage, it is not open to him to contend that the mortgage is a nullity, or that the properties purchased by him are not subject to the rights of the mortgagee. In this view, this contention also has to be rejected.

15. One of the contentions raised before us by Mr. K. B. Krishnamurthy is that the remedy of the plaintiffs is only to ask for specific performance of the contract embodied in Ex. A-9 for the issue of debentures within the prescribed period, but not to sue for sale of the mortgage properties. Though this contention was not raised in the lower Court, since it goes to the root of the matter, we shall decide that question also. There is no substance in the contention, as we have held that the right to obtain debentures is not the only right conferred on the plaintiff. In our judgment, Ex. A-9 created both a specific as well as a floating charge, and the right to obtain debentures, and the mere fact that the debentures were not issued, would not take away the rights, otherwise conferred on the mortgagee.

16. We shall now consider the plea of limitation. In doing so, it may be helpful to dispose of this contention in relation to defendants 2 to 7 first. As already stated, their plea was that they were impleaded as defendants on 16-2-1962. According to Ex. A-9 both the principal and interest become due on the date of the default in paying the first year's interest on 5-6-49, and the suit should have been filed against them within 12 years i. e., on or before 5-6-61, and since they have been impleaded on 16-2-62, the suit is barred by limitation. This contention is on the assumption that defendants 2 to 7 were the purchasers of a portion of the mortgage property. The trial Judge found issue No. 3 viz., "whether the sale to Kotha Suryanarayana by defendant is true", in the negative and held that by the date the suit was filed or even by now the legal title continued to remain in the name of the first defendant, and if the suit was in time against the first defendant, it would also be within time against defendants 2 to 7.

The question incidentally for consideration is, whether there was a valid sale by the 1st defendant in favour of Kotha Suryanarayana. There are a number of circumstances which lead to an irresistible conclusion to the contrary. The first and foremost circumstance is that the property in question consists of land, buildings and also machinery, embedded in earth which constitute immovable property, and any title therein can only be conveyed by means of a registered instrument. Admittedly there was no registered sale-deed. The 1st defendant only stated that there was an agreement entered into between him and Suryanarayana for the sale of the property purchased by him, but an agreement by itself would not convey any title. From the evidence of D. W. 1, Kotha Venkataratnam, son of Suryanarayana, (3rd defendant), it is evident that their family had no property except a small Kirana shop in Pithapuram, which they were running till one year after the death of Suryanarayana. It is unimaginable that Suryanarayana, would in those circumstances have ventured to purchase the suit properties subject to the discharge of the mortgage debt. The evidence of D. W. 1 reveals that he was absolutely ignorant of any details of the property, which would not have been the case, if his father was the purchaser. It is also an admitted fact that the 1st defendant and Suryanarayana married the daughters of sisters. It is therefore, clear that the 1st defendant hit upon the idea of creating, if possible, a semblance of title in Suryanarayana in order to evade the discharge of the mortgage liability.

For all these reasons, we agree with the learned Subordinate Judge that there was no sale in favour of Kotha Suryanarayana and the device of making Kameswara Rao, take delivery of the property on behalf of Suryanarayana on the ground that he agreed to purchase the properties, was only a vain attempt to evade the mortgage liability. We have no doubt that the legal title as well as possession of the suit property always remained in the 1st defendant, and even if any of the defendants 2 to 7 are in possession of the mortgage property, it is only on behalf of the 1st defendant. It therefore, follows that the plea of limitation has to be considered only from the standpoint of the 1st defendant.

17. In the written statement of the 1st defendant, he pleaded that inasmuch as Ex. A-9 was not registered under Section 125 of the Companies Act, it became void and the money secured became immediately payable. But as already stated the contention of Sri K. B. Krishna Murthi, now is different, viz., that there is no clause in Ex. A-9 creating a fixed charge and all the clauses only provide for a floating charge. His further contention is that none of the clauses contemplated the payment of interest or the principal advanced under Ex. A-9, apart from the redemption of the debentures. For appreciating this contention, it is necessary to construe the several terms of Ex. A-9. Before doing so, it may be as well to state briefly what preceded the execution of Ex. A-9. By a resolution dated 2-12-47 (Ex. A-1) the company had first authorised the Managing Agents to raise a loan to the extent of Rs. 50,000/- on the first charge of the assets of the company and then on 12-1-48 (Ex. A-4) there was another resolution whereby it resolved that Rangarao, should advance Rs. 60,000/- as against Rs. 50,000/- previously resolved to be borrowed, and that should carry interest $7\frac{1}{2}\%$ per annum and that debentures that may be sanctioned at the ensuing General Body meeting be allotted in full to the value of the loan and that in failure of the issue of such debentures, the Directors shall create a first charge on the assets of the company by a registered mortgage deed.

Thereafter there was an agreement entered into between the company and Rangarao (Ex. 9-A) on 19-1-48, by which the company requested him to grant a loan of Rs. 60,000/- for the working capital of the company, and that the Directors would summon a special General Body meeting authorising the issue of debentures of that value to be allotted to the creditor or his nominee and that the debentures will carry interest of $7\frac{1}{2}\%$ per annum, and that they will have the first charge on all the assets of the company viz., land, buildings, plant and machinery, manufactured goods, stock in trade, raw materials, debts owing to the company, and bank balances. It also provided that if within one month from that date the necessary resolution authorising the issue of debentures was not forthcoming, the company agreed to give a registered mortgage deed covering all immovable properties of the company to the creditor: Pursuant to that agreement, Rangarao paid Rupees 60,000/- by a cheque dated 19-1-48. Thereafter a special General Body resolution was passed authorising the Directors to borrow not exceeding Rs. 60,000/- at $7\frac{1}{2}\%$ per annum and to issue debentures of the denomination of Rs. 100/- each. The Board of Directors passed a resolution on 17-2-48 stating that as no application having been received from any share-holder for debentures in response to the notice dated 7-2-48, the managing Agents were authorised to allot and issue all the debentures of the value of Rs. 60,000/- to Rangarao or his nominees.

18. Pursuant to these resolutions, Ex. A-9 was executed on 5-6-48. This document is styled a debenture deed and executed by the company in favour of Rangarao who was described as the mortgagee. It acknowledges the receipt of the sum of Rs. 60,000/- from the mortgagee and recites that it is executed to secure the repayment of the principal monies and the payment of interest thereon for the time being accrued and payable in the manner appearing therein, and that the mortgagee had consented to the terms therein. Ex. A-9 states that 'Debenture Holder' means the said mortgagee Sri Rangarao, his heirs or his legal representatives or administrators for the time being. The important recital is that the company granted and assigned the mortgagee as security for the debentures all and singular the lands premises described in the first schedule annexed thereto, with all buildings annexed to or erected thereon or on some parts thereof and all trees, fences, hedges, ditches, ways, sewers, drains, water-courses, liberties, privileges etc., and to the security of the mortgagee for the purpose therein mentioned and concerning the same. The Company also assigned as security to the mortgagee the machinery, plant, engines, boilers, mill etc., set out in the second schedule which now are or shall from time to time during the continuance of this security be in or upon or about the premises to hold the same premises unto to mortgagee as security.

It also recites that there was a first charge in favour of one H. V. Chauhan, in respect of some of the engines, dynamos, air compressors etc., mentioned in the 3rd schedule and that the mortgagee will have only the rights of a second mortgagee in respect of the same. Clause IX of the deed provides that the principal monies and interest payable in respect of the debentures shall be a first mortgage charge on the premises and plant and machinery and also first charge on the properties detailed under schedules 1 and 2 and shall be a second mortgage charge ranking next to the first charge in respect of the property in the third schedule. The relevant portion in Clause X may be usefully extracted.

"The principal money as well as the interest accrued and payable upto date shall immediately become payable and the security hereby constituted shall after the expiry of 30 days of grace from such due date become enforceable.

(a) If the company makes default in the payment of interest on the stipulated date in any year;

(b) If the company makes default in the payment of the principal amount at the time stipulated therein.

(c) If a distress or execution is levied upon any part of the mortgaged premises or if a Receiver of the Company's undertakings or property or any part thereof is appointed by any Court and such distress or execution is not satisfied or such Receiver is not discharged within fifteen days from the date of the levy or the appointment of the Receiver as the case may be;

(d) If the company commits a breach of any of the presents or provisions herein contained and on its part to be observed and performed;

xx xx xx xx".

19. Clause XI then provides, that when and so soon as the principal money secured shall have become immediately payable, the registered holder was entitled to appoint a Receiver of the premises charged and such receiver shall conform to all lawful directions given to him by the mortgagee and the mortgagee may in writing under his hand, remove any Receiver and appoint another. Clause XIV recites that the debentures shall be redeemed in accordance with the contingency mentioned therein, inter alia, that (a) the company will on the 5th day of June, 1954 or on such earlier day as the principal money hereby secured becomes payable in accordance with the conditions therein mentioned, pay the registered debenture-holder hereof for the time being the full and entire sum of Rs. 60,000/-. It also provides that the company will during the continuance of this security pay such registered holder interest on the said principal sum of Rs. 60,000/- or such less amount as is unpaid at the rate of Rs. 7½ per cent per annum subject to deduction of income-tax by annual payments on the 5th day of June in every year.

20. To this document, were attached three schedules as already referred to. The first schedule consists of land, site factory office, buildings etc., the second and third schedules described the machinery. It is needless to point out that the machinery described in schedules 2 and 3 were those in existence on the date of the mortgage, and were embedded in or attached to the earth and therefore, formed part of the factory itself, and immovable property along with the site and buildings. Clause IX of Ex. A-9 already referred to, created a first charge for the repayment of Rs. 60,000/- advanced by the mortgagee on the properties described in schedules 1 and 2 and a second charge on the property described in schedule No. 3. In addition to the said first charge the document also created a charge on the items mentioned in Clauses III to V and a floating charge on the machinery which may be brought in future on the premises, its uncalled capital, its goodwill, and undertaking, the monies now standing or hereafter carried to the reserve fund, depreciation fund etc. There can therefore, be little doubt that in addition to creating a specific charge on the existing immovable properties, Ex. A-9 also created a floating charge. This is also made clear in Clause V which says that the charge created by way of floating charge, is in addition to the specific charge.

21. Sri Krishnamurthi, the learned counsel relying upon some clauses of the deed, dealing with the issue of debentures and the other ancillary matters contends that Ex. A-9 only created a floating charge for the debentures intended to be issued and that the debentures could be redeemed only as per the clauses mentioned therein, and that a specific charge was not created by it, though the counsel concedes that a specific charge in addition to a floating charge can also be created.

22. Having referred to the several clauses of Ex. A-9 extracted above, we have no doubt in our mind that a floating charge was created in addition to the specific charge on the properties described in the schedules. It follows that the rights which the mortgagee may have in respect of the specific charge would not be destroyed or impaired by reason of additional rights intended to be conferred as the holder of the floating charge. We therefore, agree with the learned Subordinate Judge that this action for the sale of the properties which were specifically charged under Ex. A-9 would lie even though a floating charge was also created under Ex. A-9.

23. The next argument of Sri Krishna-murthi is that granting for the sake of argument that a specific charge was also created, there is no period of redemption provided therefor in Ex. A-9, and the suit for enforcement of the charge, should have filed within 12 years thereof i.e., on or before 5-6-1960 and the present suit filed in 20-3-61, is barred by limitation. We are unable to accept this contention, for the following reasons. As already noticed, the mortgagee is the person to whom all the 600 debentures were intended to be allotted, but in fact never allotted. The rights as a debenture holder as well as mortgagee, were all vested only in Rangarao, and it is for that reason that the phrase 'mortgagee' and registered holder of the debentures were used as interchangeable terms. The undisputed fact is that the entire sum of Rs. 60,000/- was advanced by Rangarao to the company, and a fixed charge, apart from the floating charge, was created as security for the discharge of that mortgage debt.

It is against this background that we have to construe the clauses in Ex. A-9 in this context. Clause X already referred to provides that the principal money as well as the interest accrued and payable upto date shall immediately become payable and the security hereby constituted shall after the expiry of 30 days of grace from such due date becomes enforceable, if the company makes default in the payment of interest on the stipulated date in any year. In order to ascertain the stipulated date, reference has to be made to Clause XIV (b) which provides that the company will during the continuance of this security pay such registered holder interest on the said principal sum of Rs. 60,000/- or such less amount as is unpaid at the rate of 7½ per cent per annum on the 5th day of June in every year. According to these two clauses, the first year's interest became payable on 5th June 1949 and admittedly that was not paid. The company had 30 days of grace and hence the right to enforce the security for the realisation of interest and principal accrued on 5th July, 1949, and suit could be filed on or before 5th June, 1961.

24. The present suit having been filed on 20-3-61 we have no hesitation in holding that it is filed within time. In another view also we must find that the suit is within time. Clause X (c) provides, that 'if a distress or execution is levied upon any part of the mortgaged premises or if a receiver of the company's undertakings of property or any part thereof is appointed by any Court and such distress or execution is not satisfied or such receiver is not discharged within fifteen days from the date of the levy or the appointment of the receiver as the case may be, the principal and interest became payable. In this case admittedly Venkataratnam filed E. P. 87/50 which resulted not only in execution but also a sale on 26-7-51 in favour of the 1st defendant. The Execution Petition was filed some time in 1950 and even assuming that it was filed on 2nd January, 1950 and was ordered the very day, a suit for enforcing the mortgage security could be filed within 12 years thereafter, i.e., on or before 2nd January, 1962.

25. There is yet another reason for holding that the suit is within time. It is no doubt true that the first year's interest due on 5-6-49 itself was not paid, and the mortgagor could not take advantage of its own default. The mortgage money does not become due within the meaning of Article 132 until both the mortgagor's right to redeem and the mortgagee's right to enforce his security have accrued. As laid down by the Privy Council in Lasa Din v. Mt. Gulab Kunwar, AIR 1932 PC 207, the clauses which empower the mortgagee to enforce security for non-payment of interest of any particular year, would not entitle the mortgagor to rely upon Article 132 and contend that the mortgagor is bound to file the suit within 12 years from the date he committed default in paying interest. At page 211, Sir George Lowndes speaking on behalf of the Judicial Committee observed thus:—

"There can be no doubt that as pointed out by Lord Blanesburgh a proviso of this nature is inserted in a mortgage deed "exclusively for the benefit of the mortgagees" and that it purports to give them an option either to enforce their security at once, or, if the security is ample to stand by their investment for the full term of the mortgage. If on the default of the mortgagor — in other words, by the breach of his contract — the mortgage money becomes immediately "due" it is clear that the intention of the parties is defeated and what was agreed to by them as an option in the mortgagees is in effect converted into an option in the mortgagor. For if the latter after the deed has been duly executed and registered finds that he can make a better bargain elsewhere, he has only to break his contract by refusing to pay the interest and "eo instanti", as Lord Blanesburgh says, he is entitled to redeem. If the principal money is 'due' and the stipulated term has gone out of the contract it follows in their Lordships' opinion that the mortgagor can claim to repay it, as was recognized by Wazir Hasan, J., in his judgment in the Chief Court. Their Lordships think that this is an impossible result. They are not prepared to hold that the mortgagor could in this way take advantage of his own default. They do not think that upon such default he would have the right to redeem and in their opinion the mortgage money does not 'become due' within the meaning of Article 132, Limitation Act, until both the mortgagor's right to redeem and the mortgagee's right to enforce his security have accrued. This would of course, also be the position if the mortgagee exercised the option reserved to him".

Since we have already held that the registered holder of debentures means the mortgagee, the aforesaid clauses in Ex. A-9 are to be understood as giving an option to the mortgagee to enforce security in default of payment of the first year's interest, or wait till the period of redemption, i.e., 5-6-54, provided for in the document. A contrary construction is not only warranted by the terms of the deed, but would result in manifest injustice as pointed by the Privy Council. Once it is held that the date for redemption is 5-6-54, the mortgagee could file his suit at any time on or before 5-6-56. In this view also the suit is not barred by limitation against 1st defendant.

26. Sri Krishnamurthi, the learned counsel drew our attention to the several clauses in Ex. A-9 dealing with the rights of the debenture holder and contended, that what all was provided by A-9, was only redemption of the debentures but not redemption of the mortgage security on the fixed charge. His argument as already stated was that the only effect of Ex. A-9 was to create debentures with floating charge, and that all the other clauses have to be read as relating to debentures. But as already stated, we are unable to accept that contention especially in view of Clause V "that the additional securities are created in addition to the specific mortgage premises which means that the premises mentioned in schedules 1 to 3 were specifically mortgaged. For all these reasons, this contention has to be rejected.

27. Before we conclude we must advert to the submission of Sri Krishnamurthi, that Clause 5 of the decree of the trial Court is not correctly worded. What all was meant by that clause was that the first plaintiff was at liberty to take such further proceedings as are open to him against the 1st defendant if any part of the plaint schedule property purchased by him was not existing. We are making it clear that there can be no question of any such steps being taken by the plaintiff in respect of the property not purchased by the 1st defendant.

28. In the result all the contentions fail and the appeal is hereby dismissed with costs.

Appeal dismissed.

AIR 1970 ANDHRA PRADESH 234
(V 57 C 35)

SHARFUDDIN AHMED AND A. D. V. REDDY, JJ.

In re V. S. Metha and others, Petitioners.

Criminal Revn. Cases Nos. 312, 313, 333 to 335 of 1968 and Criminal Revn. Petns. Nos. 270, 271, 291 to 293 of 1968, D./ 6-9-1968, from order of Chief City Magistrate City Criminal Court, Hyderabad, in Criminal R. C. Nos. 27, 28 to 31 of 1968.

(A) Factories Act (1948), Section 106 — Period of three months — It means period of three calendar months — General Clauses Act (1897), Section 3 (35). (Para 5)

(B) Factories Act (1948), Section 106 — 'Within three months of the date' — It means within three calendar months after the commission of offence came to knowledge of the Inspector — General Clauses Act (1897), Section 9 (1). (Para 8)

Cases Referred: Chronological Paras
(1961) AIR 1961 All 151 (V 48) =
1961 (1) Cri LJ 338, Sita Ram v. State 3
(1951) AIR 1951 Cal 316 (V 38) =
54 Cal WN 926, Sashi Kumar v. Mrs. D. J. Hill 4
(1938) AIR 1938 Bom 447 (V 25) =
ILR (1938) Bom 734, Ramchandra Govind v. Laxman Savleram 6
(1935) AIR 1935 Lah 391 (V 22) =
38 Pun LR 124, Puran Chand v. Mohd. Din 8
(1906) ILR 29 Mad 75, Varna Dava Desikar v. Murugesu Mudali 4
Ramchandra Rao. (in Cri. R. C. Nos. 312 and 313 of 1968) and Monohar Pershad Mathur (in Cri. R. C. Nos. 333 to 335 of 1968), for Petitioners; Public Prosecutor on behalf of the State in all the Petitions.

A. D. V. REDDY, J.:— The point that arises for consideration in these revisions is what exactly is the period of limitation prescribed in S. 106 of the Factories Act for launching of prosecutions for offences under the Act.

2. In all these cases, the State, through the Assistant Inspector of Factories, had filed complaints in Criminal Courts for breach of certain provisions of the Act punishable under Section 92 of the said Act. Section 106 of the Factories Act reads as follows:—

"No Court shall take cognizance of any offence punishable under this Act unless complaint thereof is made within three months of the date on which the alleged commission of the offence came to the knowledge of an Inspector:

Provided that where the offence consists of disobeying a written order made by an Inspector, complaint thereof may be made within six months of the date on which the offence is alleged to have been committed".

3. In so far as the knowledge of the Inspector is concerned it is contended that in the first two of the revisions i.e., Nos. 312 and 313 of 68, the Inspector had visited the factory on 29-8-66 and the complaint was lodged on 29-11-66 and in the three other cases Cr. R. Cs. 333, 334 and 335 of 1968, he visited the factory on 21-8-66 and the complaint was lodged on 21-11-66. It has been contended that the prosecution is beyond time. Both the lower Courts have held against this contention. Hence these revisions.

4. The real question relates to the interpretation of the words "within 3 months of the date on which the alleged commission of the offence came to the knowledge of an Inspector". What has to be seen is whether the complaints had been laid within a period of three months from the date of knowledge. It is first contended that the word 'month' means a month of 30 days and therefore the complaint should be filed within 90 days from the date of knowledge. For this reliance is placed on Vama Dava Desikar v. Murugesu Mudali, (1906) ILR 29 Mad 75, wherein it was held that in a suit under Section 40 of the Madras Rent Recovery Act, of 1865, the period of limitation of 'one month' prescribed should be construed as meaning 30 days. If that interpretation is to be adopted, these proceedings should have been taken within 90 days from the date of knowledge and in every one of these cases, the complaint admittedly had been filed beyond time. But in Sashi Kumar v. Mrs. D. J. Hill, AIR 1951 Cal 316 it was held that the word 'month' in its ordinary acceptance, means a 'calendar month' and not a 'lunar month' except where in a particular place or business or trade the word 'month' has acquired a secondary meaning. In the above decisions, the provisions of the General Clauses Act of 1897 had not been considered. Section 3 of the said Act, which defines certain terms, says that in all Central Acts and Regulations made after the commencement of this Act (on the principles of this Act) unless there is anything repugnant in the subject or context, the definitions given thereunder would apply. Section 3 sub-clause (35) defines 'month' as:

"'month' shall mean a month reckoned according to the British calendar".

5. It therefore, follows that three months referred to in Section 106 of the Factories Act, which is a Central Act, means three calendar months and not 90 days calculated at the rate of 30 days per month. The Factories Act which had defined 'day' 'week' and 'year' had unfortunately not defined the term 'month', though in several of the provisions, including the important provisions relating to limitation, the word 'month' has come to be used. This necessitates having resort to the provisions of the General Clauses Act and as Section 3 (35) defines, 'month' as a calendar month, the term three months in Section 106 of the Factories Act would only mean a period of three calendar months.

6. The next contention is that the prosecutions will be within three calendar months only if the day of inspection has to be excluded from the calculation (as that is the date of knowledge) but if it is included in the calculation, all the prosecutions would be barred by one day. Under Section 12 (1) of the Limitation Act of 1908 in computing the period of limitation prescribed for any suit, appeal or application, the day from which such period is to be reckoned shall be excluded. The first limb of Section 29 (2) reads as follows:

"Where any special or local law prescribes for any suit, appeal or application a period of limitation different from the period prescribed therefor by the First Schedule the provisions of Section 3 shall apply, as if such period is the period of limitation"

In Sita Ram v. State, AIR 1961 All 151, it is pointed out that a complaint referred to in Section 106 is an application within the meaning of Section 29 (2), Limitation Act, that since the Limitation Act prescribes no period of limitation for a complaint under Section 106, Factories Act, the period prescribed by Section 106 must be held to be different and the first limb of sub-section (2) of Section 29, Limitation Act would apply, and Section 12, Limitation Act, would therefore, apply because it has not been expressly excluded by the Factories Act, and therefore, the day of the knowledge should be excluded. It was further held that even in case that Section 29 (2) and Sec. 12 of the Limitation Act did not apply, under the common law the date on which the offence came to the notice of the Inspector must be excluded when computing the period of three months, that 'within three months' means within the whole course of three months i.e., before the end of the last day of three months and that anything that is done on the last day of the three months is 'within three months'. In Puran Chand v. Mohd. Din, AIR 1935 Lah 291, it was held that the words in a decree 'within three months from today' should be reckoned as excluding the date of the passing of the decree. In Rama chandra Govind v. Laxman Savleram, AIR 1932 Bom 447, it was held that the direction to deposit a certain sum in execution of a decree within 15 days from a certain date, should be taken to exclude that date.

7. Section 9 (1) of the General Clauses Act provides that if in any Central Act or Regulation made after the commencement of this Act, it shall be sufficient, for the purpose of excluding the first in a series of days or any other period of time, to use the word 'from', and for the purpose of including the last in a series of days or any other period of time, to use the word 'to'. But in Section 106 of the Factories Act, the word 'from' has not been used. It is not stated that the complaint thereof is to be made within three months from the date on which the commission of the offence came to the knowledge of the Inspector, "but within three months of the date". In Stroud's Judicial Dictionary at page 1964 it is stated that 'of' is sometimes the equivalent of after, e.g., the word "21 days of the execution" means '21 days after the execution'.

8. We therefore, find that the term 'within three months of the date' in Section 106 of the Factories Act means 'within three calendar months after the commission of the offence came to the knowledge of the Inspector'. This interpretation based on common law as well as on the provisions of the Limitation Act and the provisions of the General Clauses Act results in the exclusion of the day of the knowledge, i.e., the date of inspection and the "three months" being calculated as three calendar months. In this view all the prosecutions are within time.

9. These revisions are therefore, dismissed.

Revisions dismissed.

AIR 1970 ANDHRA PRADESH 236
(V 57 C 36)

CHINNAPPA REDDY, J.

P. Dharmiah and others, Petitioners v. The Chief Engineer, Panchayat Raj, Govt. of A. P. Hyderabad and others, Respondents.

Writ Petn. Nos. 2235, 3907 and 3962 of 1963, D./ 3-2-1969.

(A) Civil Services — Public Employment (Requirement as to Residence) Act (1957), Section 3 — Section 3 and the Andhra Pradesh Public Employment

IM/IM/D917/69/BNP/D

(Requirement as to Residence) Rules, 1959, framed thereunder, are ultra vires the power of Parliament under Article 16 (3) and violates Art. 16 (1) and (2) of the Constitution — Constitution of India, Article 16 (1), (2) and (3).

Section 3 of the Public Employment (Requirement as to Residence) Act is ultra vires the power given to Parliament under Article 16 (3) and is opposed to the fundamental rights guaranteed under Article 16 (1) and (2) of the Constitution as it prescribes, as a condition of employment, residence within Telangana region of Andhra Pradesh and, hence, is invalid. The Andhra Pradesh Public Employment (Requirement as to Residence) Rules, 1959, framed under the section are also invalid. The fact that the Act remained unchallenged for years is of no weight to the validity of the enactment encroaching upon fundamental rights.

(Paras 21, 22)

Article 16 (3) does not permit the division, by Parliamentary Legislation of a State into regions for the purpose of employment under the Government of that State and the consequent mutilation of the unity of the State and the Unity of the Nation, solemnly desired in the Preamble to the Constitution. Article 16 (3) was introduced to promote efficiency of service without sacrificing the principle of equality of opportunity in the matter of Public Employment. It was introduced to secure uniformity. The law to be made by Parliament providing for requirement as to residence was to be uniform and was not to be designed to prevent persons of one State seeking employment under the Government of other States. The law was only to provide for some qualification regarding residence in regard to some classes of employment so as to promote efficiency of service in connection with that class of employment. The law to be made was to attract rather than to prevent, it was to invite officials to develop attachment to the places where they worked rather than to force them to go away. The law was certainly not meant to prescribe requirements as to residence within parts of a State, so as to prohibit residents of other areas of the State from seeking employment.

(Paras 16 and 21)

A comparison of Clause (3) of Article 16 with Clause (4) of Article 16 clearly shows that the 3rd Clause of Article 16 was never meant to safeguard alleged interests of residents of backward States or regions. Even if it was designed to protect interests of the residents of a backward State a further dissection of the State into regions is wholly unjustified by Article 16 (3). (Para 19)

It may be that the division of the State of Andhra Pradesh into the Telangana and non-Telangana areas is an eminently reasonable classification in the context of the historical developments which led to the disintegration of the erstwhile Hyderabad State and the formation of the State of Andhra Pradesh in 1956. Considerations of reasonable classification which may be relevant in deciding questions arising under Article 14 are entirely irrelevant in deciding questions arising under Article 16 (3). (Para 20)

(B) Civil Services — Public Employment (Requirement as to Residence) Act (1957), Section 3 — Validity of — Delegation of power under — Amounts to abdication of legislative function by Parliament — Constitution of India, Articles 16 (3) and 245.

Section 3 of the Public Employment (Requirement as to Residence) Act, is void as the legislative function of prescribing any requirement as to residence prior to employment has been delegated by Parliament to Central Government. It is Parliament and Parliament alone that can say that a person should be a resident within a certain State for a period of one, two, five or ten years as the case may be prior to his seeking employment under the Government of that State in regard to particular posts. That function cannot be delegated to any other authority since that would amount to an abdication of legislative power. AIR 1963 SC 649, Foll. (Para 27)

Cases Referred: Chronological Paras

(1963) AIR 1963 SC 649 (V 50) =
(1963) Supp 1 SCR 439, M. R. Balaji v. State of Mysore 25

(1950) AIR 1950 SC 27 (V 37) =:
1950 SCR 88 = 51 Cri LJ 1383,
A. K. Gopalan v. State 12

B. P. Jeevan Reddy, for Petitioners in W. P. No. 2235 of 1968; P. A. Chowdary, for M. Lakshmana Rao, for Petitioners in W. P. Nos. 3907 and 3962 of 1968; K. G. Kannabhiram, for Respondents in W. P. No. 2235 of 1968 and on behalf of Respondent No. 2 in W. P. Nos. 3907 and 3962 of 1968 and M/s. A. Raghuvir and A. Ananda Reddy, for Respondent No. 1 in W. P. No. 3907 of 1968 and V. Venkataramiah, for Respondents in W. P. No. 2235 of 1968.

ORDER:— The nine petitioners in W. P. No. 2235 of 1968 are temporary employees of the Government of Andhra Pradesh Panchayat Raj Department, working as supervisors under various Panchayat Samithis and Zilla Parishads in the region known as the Telangana Region of the State of Andhra Pradesh. All of them claim that they possess the qualification of residence mentioned in Rule 3 of the Andhra Pradesh Public Employment (Requirement as to Residence) Rules. By an order dated 30-4-1968 the services of all the nine petitioners were terminated by the Chief Engineer Panchayat Raj Department. The petitioners allege that as many as forty-six supervisors belonging to the non-Telangana area in the employment of the Panchayat Raj Department are now working under Panchayat Samithis and Zilla Parishads in the Telangana Area and they claim that so long as even one Supervisor belonging to the non-Telangana area, that is to say, not satisfying the requirement as to residence is working in the Telangana area they cannot be retrenched. They assert that the appointment and continuance of those not satisfying the requirement as to residence is illegal. They seek a mandamus to enforce the Public Employment (Requirement as to Residence) Act and Rules and to direct the respondents to desist from retrenching them. I may mention here that the petitioners do not allege that any of them is senior to any of the non-Telangana employees or that any hostile discrimination has been practised against them.

2. Originally none of the non-Telangana Supervisors was impleaded as a party. Later some were impleaded as parties and some, though proposed to be impleaded, were given up. Those impleaded as parties have also not appeared before me but that does not relieve me of my responsibility in fact, it renders my responsibility the greater because their interests and rights cannot be jeopardised by their non-appearance which may perhaps be due to their incapacity to engage counsel. I considered it desirable to appoint an amicus curiae and I requested Mr. V. Venkataramaiah to assist me and he readily and very kindly agreed to do so. I am grateful to him for his able assistance.

3. In W. P. No. 3907 of 1968 there are 29 petitioners, of whom are teachers employed in various schools under Zilla Parishad, Nalgonda. They claim that they have been in the employment of the Zilla Parishad for over nine years after being selected by the Selection Committee constituted under prescribed rules. All of them have now been informed by the Chairman of the Zilla Parishad that their services are being terminated as they are 'non-mulki temporary candidates' who have been appointed without securing relaxation of Rule 3 of the Andhra Pradesh Public Employment (Requirement as to Residence) Rules, 1959. They question the order of the Chairman of the Zilla Parishad as illegal and the Public Employment (Requirement as to Residence) Act and Rules on which the Chairman's order is based as ultra vires. They seek a writ under Article 226 to quash the proceedings of the Chairman, Zilla Parishad.

4. In W. P. No. 3962 of 1968 there are eight petitioners who, like the petitioners in W. P. No. 3907 of 1968, are teachers in the employment of the Zilla Parishad Nalgonda and whose services are sought to be terminated on the ground that they do not satisfy the requirement as to residence as contemplated by the Public Employment Act and the Rules. They also seek a writ to quash the proceedings of the Chairman, Zilla Parishad.

5. When the cases were opened on Friday, I did consider whether they may not more usefully be placed before a Division Bench. Having heard full arguments, I do not think that it is necessary to do so. The questions raised do not appear to be either involved or difficult to answer in the light of what I have heard from learned counsel. If I err in my decision the aggrieved party has a remedy by way of an appeal under CL 15 of the Letters Patent.

6. Sri Venkataramanalah, amicus curiae and Sri P. A. Chowdary, learned Counsel for the petitioners in W. P. Nos. 3907 and 3962 of 1968 contend that the Public Employment (Requirement as to Residence) Act is void as it offends Article 16 of the Constitution and also because it suffers from the vice of excessive delegation. They also contend that the Act which was to be in force for a period of five years from the date of commencement (21-3-1959) expired on 21-3-64 and the amending Act which came into force on 9-5-1964 could not revive a lifeless Act. These are the main contentions raised before me though learned Counsel have presented different facts of the same questions as different contentions. They have also raised some subsidiary points relating to the validity of the Rules.

7. Sri B. P. Jeevan Reddy, Learned Counsel for the petitioners in W. P. No. 2235 of 1968 and the learned Government Pleader contend that the Act is free from all constitutional disability and is within the competence of Parliament. They also contend that the delegation made to the Central Government is within permissible limits. They urge that Parliament could revive an Act which had expired without break or continuity even as it could make a law retrospective in operation.

8. Article 16 of the Constitution may be fully extracted here:—

"16. Equality of opportunity in matters of Public Employment:— (1) There shall be equality of opportunity for all citizens in matters relating to employment or appointment to any office under the State.

(2) No citizen shall, on grounds only of religion, race, caste, sex, descent, place of birth, residence or any of them be ineligible for or discriminated against in respect of, any employment or office under the State.

(3) Nothing in this article shall prevent Parliament from making any law prescribing, in regard to a class or classes of employment or appointment to an office under the Government of, or any local or other authority within, a State or Union Territory, any requirement as to residence within that State or Union Territory prior to such employment or appointment.

(4) Nothing in this Article shall prevent the State from making any provision for the reservation of appointments or posts in favour of any backward class of citizens which, in the opinion of the State, is not adequately represented in the services under the State.

(5) Nothing in this article shall affect the operation of any law which provides that the incumbent of an office in connection with the affairs of any religious or denominational institution or any member of the governing body thereof shall be a person professing a particular religion or belonging to a particular denomination".

9. The Public Employment (Requirement as to Residence) Act, 1957 was enacted by Parliament in 1957. Before it was amended in 1964 it stood as follows:—

"THE PUBLIC EMPLOYMENT (REQUIREMENT AS TO RESIDENCE) ACT, 1957.

(Act XLIV of 1957)

7th December, 1957.

An Act to make in pursuance of Clause (3) of Article 16 of the Constitution special provisions for requirement as to residence in regard to certain classes of public employment in certain areas and to repeal existing laws prescribing any such requirement.

Be it enacted by Parliament in Eighth Year of the Republic of India as follows:—

1. Short title and commencement.

(1) This Act may be called the The Public Employment (Requirement as to Residence) Act, 1957.

(2) It shall come into force on such date as the Central Government may, by notification in the Official Gazette appoint.

2. Repeal of Existing laws prescribing requirements as to residence.

Upon the commencement of this Act, any law then in force in any State or Union Territory by virtue of Clause (b) of Article 35 of the Constitution prescribing, in regard to a class or classes of employment or appointment to an officer under the Government, of, or any local or other authority within that State or Union Territory any requirement as to residence therein prior to such employment or appointment shall cease to have effect and is hereby repealed.

3. Power to make rules in respect of certain classes of public employment in certain areas. (1) The Central Government may, by notification in the Official Gazette, make rules prescribing, in regard to appointments to —

(a) any subordinate service or post under the State Government of Andhra Pradesh, or

(b) any subordinate service or post under the control of the Administrator of Himachal Pradesh, Manipur or Tripura, or any requirement as to residence within the Telangana area or the said Union Territory, as the case may be prior to such appointment.

(c) any service or post under a local authority, (other than a cantonment board) within the Telangana area of Andhra Pradesh or within the Union Territory of Himachal Pradesh, Manipur or Tripura.

(2) In this section:—

(a) "subordinate service or post" means any service or post appointments to which are not notified in the Official Gazette but includes any service of thasildars.

(b) "Telangana area" comprises all the territories specified in sub-section (1) of Section 3 of the States Reorganisation Act, 1956.

4. Parliamentary security of rules—

All rules made under Section 3 shall, as soon as may be after they are made be laid for not less than thirty days before each House of Parliament and shall be subject to such modifications as Parliament may make during the session in which they are so laid or in session immediately following.

5. Duration of Section 3 and rules.

Section 3 and all rules made thereunder shall cease to have effect on the expiration of five years from the commencement of this Act but such cesser shall not affect the validity of any appointment previously made in pursuance of the said rules".

10. By a notification of the Central Government the Act came into force on 21-3-1959 and by effect of Section 5 of the Act is ceased to be in force on 21-3-1964. However on 9-5-1964 the Public Employment (Requirements as to Residence) Amendment Act 1964 was enacted. This Act is as following:—

"Short title.

1. This Act may be called the Public Employment (Requirement as to Residence) Amendment Act, 1964.

Amendment of Section 4.

2. For Section 4 of the Public Employment (Requirement as to Residence) Act, 1957 (hereinafter referred (44 of 57) to as the principal Act), the following section shall be substituted namely:—

4. * * * *

Amendment of Section 5.

3. In Section 5 of the principal Act, for the words "five years" the words "ten years" shall be substituted and shall be deemed always to have been substituted.

Validity of rules and action taken thereunder.

4. For the removal of doubts, it is hereby declared that all rules made under Section 3 of the principal Act and in force immediately before the 21st March, 1964 shall continue to be in force after that date until amended, varied or rescinded as if such rules were made under the Principal Act as amended by this Act and any action taken (including appointment made) in pursuance of those rules on or after the 21st March, 1964 and before the commencement of this Act shall be as valid and operative as if it had been taken in accordance with law."

11. Pursuant to Section 3 of the Act 1957 rules were made on 21-3-1957 and they are as follows:—

"The Andhra Pradesh Public Employment (Requirement as to Residence) Rules 1959.

1. Short Title:—

These rules may be called the Andhra Pradesh Public Employment (Requirement as to Residence) Rules, 1959.

2. Definitions:—

In these rules, unless context otherwise requires.

(a) "appointing authority" in relation to any post means an authority empowered for the time being to make appointments as to that post.

(b) "appointment" includes a permanent, quasi-permanent or temporary appointment but does not include an appointment of a casual nature.

(c) "post" means a post specified in the First Schedule.

(d) "Prescribed date" in relation to a post means the last date fixed for making applications for appointments to that post.

(e) "Schedule" means a Schedule to these rules.

3. Requirements as a residence prior to appointment:

A person shall not be eligible for appointment to a post within the Telangana Area under the State Government of Andhra Pradesh or to a post under a local authority (other than a cantonment board) in the said area unless —

(i) he has been continuously residing within the said area for a period of not less fifteen years immediately preceding the prescribed date; and

(ii) he produces before the appointing authority concerned if so required by it, a certificate of eligibility granted under these rules;

Provided that in relation to posts in the Secretariat Departments and the Offices of the Heads of Departments of the State Government of Andhra Pradesh situated in the cities of Hyderabad and Secunderabad, the requirement as to residence laid down in the rule shall apply to the filing of only the second vacancy in every unit of three vacancies which are to be filled by direct recruitment;

Provided further that any period of temporary absence from the Telangana area for the purpose of prosecuting his studies or for undergoing medical treatment or any period of such temporary absence not exceeding three months for any other reason shall not be deemed to constitute a break in the continuity of such residence, but for the purpose of calculating said period of fifteen years any such period of temporary absence shall be excluded.

4. Eligibility certificate:—

xx xx xx

5. Relaxation of Rule 3.

(1) The State Government may, in exceptional cases and for reasons to be recorded in writing, relax the provisions of Rule 3.

(2) A quarterly statement of all cases of relaxations shall be published by the Government of Andhra Pradesh in the Official Gazette of the State on the form prescribed in the Third Schedule and a copy of every such statement shall be forwarded to the Central Government.

Sd. V. Viswanathan,
Special Secretary.

THE FIRST SCHEDULE

(See Rules 2 and 3)

POSTS.

(a) any post (whether included in the cadre of a service or not) within the Telangana area under the State Government of Andhra Pradesh the appointment to which is not notified in the Official Gazette of the Andhra Pradesh State.

(b) The post of Tahsildar by whatever name designed within the Telangana area; under the control of Andhra Pradesh.

(c) any post (whether included in the cadre of a service or not) under a local authority (other than a cantonment Board) in the Telangana area of the Andhra Pradesh, which carried a scale of pay the minimum of which does not exceed three hundred rupees per mensem or a fixed pay not exceeding the amount.

Explanation: "Pay" means basic pay plus special pay, if any, sanctioned to a post but does not include various allowances.

THE SECOND SCHEDULE

(See Rules 3 and 4)

xx xx xx

THE THIRD SCHEDULE

(See Rule 5 (2))"

12. Article 16 (1) of the Constitution broadly guarantees to all citizens equality of opportunity in matters of employment under the State. Article 16 (2) in no uncertain terms, prohibits any discriminations on grounds only of religion, race, caste, sex, descent, place of birth, residence of any of them. Clauses (3), (4) and (5) are in the nature of exceptions to Article 16 (1) and (2). We are concerned in the present Writ Petitions with Article 16 (3). Now, it may be noted that Article 16 (3) does not authorise Parliament to make any law prescribing any requirement as to residence within a State or States for employment under the Union Government, (not being connected with Union Territory) what is even more important is that it does not authorise the Legislature of any State to make any law prescribing any requirement as to residence within that State for employment under the Government of that State. The Articles are thus clearly designed to prevent the practice of narrow parochialism in matters of Public Employment by the Government of a State. Parliament, is however, authorised to make a law, prescribing in regard to employment under the Government of a State any requirement as to residence within that State. Thus the law made by Parliament may prescribe a requirement as to residence within the State, as a condition for securing employment under the Government of that State. But surely it cannot be said on the language of Article 16 (3) that Parliament may make law prescribing a requirement as to residence, not within the State, but within a region, an area, a district, a taluk, a town or a village of the State as a condition for securing employment under the Government of the State. The maximum concession that the makers of the constitution were prepared to make, from the broad rule that there should be no discrimination on the ground of residence in matters of public employment, was the imposition of a condition regarding residence within the State, meaning thereby, residence anywhere in the State for employment under the Government of the State. Even this condition, the Constitution makers desired, should be imposed by Parliament and Parliament alone, by making a law in that direction. Conditions regarding and an assessment based on such estimate or proportion shall be deemed to be duly made in accordance with the provisions of this Act.

(4) The power to make rules conferred by this section shall, except on the first occasion of the exercise thereof, be subject to the condition of previous publication.

(5) Rules made under this section shall be published in the Official Gazette, and shall thereupon have effect as if enacted in this Act."

13. In exercise of the powers conferred on the Central Board of Revenue by virtue of Section 59 of the said Act, rules were framed by them and these rules are known as "the Indian Income-tax Rules, 1922". Rules 23 and 24 are relevant and require to be considered in connection with these cases and these rules are as follows:

"23. (1) In the case of income which is partially agricultural income as defined in Section 2 and partially income chargeable to income-tax under the head "Business", in determining that part which is chargeable to income-tax the market value of any agricultural produce which has been raised by the assessee or received by him as rent in kind and which has been utilised as a raw material in such business or the sale receipts of which are included in the accounts of the business shall be deducted, and no further deduction shall be made in respect of any expenditure incurred by the assessee as a cultivator or receiver of rent in kind.

(2) For the purposes of sub-rule (1) "market value" shall be deemed to be:—

(a) Where agricultural produce is ordinarily sold in the market in its raw state, or after application to it of any process ordinarily employed by a cultivator or receiver of rent in kind to render it fit to be taken to market, the value calculated according to the average price at which it has been so sold during the year previous to that in which the assessment is made.

(b) Where agricultural produce is not ordinarily sold in the market in its raw state, the aggregate of —

(1) the expenses of cultivation;
(2) the land revenue or rent paid for the area in which it was grown; and

(3) such amount as the Income-tax Officer finds, having regard to all the circumstances in each case, to represent a reasonable rate of profit on the sale of the produce in question as agricultural produce."

"24. Income derived from the sale of tea grown and manufactured by the seller in the taxable territories shall be computed as if it were income derived from business, and 40 per cent. of such income shall be deemed to be income, profits and gains liable to tax;

Provided that in computing such income an allowance shall be made in respect of the cost of planting bushes in replacement of bushes that have died or become permanently useless in an area already planted, unless such as has previously been abandoned."

14. The petitioners claim that Rule 24 is unconstitutional and ultra vires inasmuch as it involves excessive delegation, and a naked and uncanalised and uncontrolled power is given to the Executive, that is, the Central Board of Revenue under the control of the Central Government to make the rule in question without defining the limits in which the Executive's discretion and judgment has to be exercised in regard to the apportionment of the income between agricultural and income-tax.

15. In this connection, it is necessary to point out that Article 366(1) of the Constitution defines 'agricultural income' and this definition is as follows:

"'agricultural income' means agricultural income as defined for the purposes of the enactments relating to Indian income-tax;"

It may be seen that this definition adopts the definition found in the Indian Income-tax Act, 1922. Thus, what we find now is that the definition given in the Assam Act is exactly, barring the explanation, on all fours with the Indian Income-tax Act and these definitions are accepted and adopted as correct definitions by the Constitution. It may be seen that even the Government of India Act, 1935, adopted the same definition as is done under the Constitution, in Section 311 (2) thereof, which is as follows:

"(2) In this Act, unless the context otherwise require, the following expressions have the meanings hereby respectively assigned to them, that is to say:

'agricultural income' means agricultural income as defined for the purposes of the enactments relating to Indian income-tax;"

and when this provision was included when the Government of India Act 1935 was passed, the Indian Income-tax Act, 1922 as well as Rule 24 framed thereunder were in force as law. Hence, it must be assumed that the Government of India Act, 1935 adopted these definitions under the Indian Income-tax Act and subsequently when the Constitution was passed, the same was in the same manner adopted by the Constitution.

16. The main attack of the petitioners is against the validity of the rule-making power conferred by Section 59 of the Indian Income-tax Act, 1922, and also the validity of Rule 24 made in exercise of the power conferred by that section. On the first point, the contention urged is that there has been an excessive delegation in the section that uncontrolled, uncanalised and unrestricted power is given to the executive to frame rules, the legislature thereby abdicating its power of legislation, as it were, in favour of the executive and that this amounted to excessive delegation, far in excess of the permissible limitations, within which delegation of legislative power could be made in favour of the executive.

17. Before we deal with this aspect of the matter, it would be necessary to notice that the Indian Income-tax Act was passed by the Central Legislature constituted under the Government of India Act, 1915. At that time the Indian Legislature had plenary power to enact the law, whereas the Provincial Legislature had only the power to pass laws in respect of the transferred subjects. Section 65 of the Government of India Act, 1915 dealt with the power of the Indian legislature to make laws. Under that section power was given to the making of laws for all persons, for all courts, and for all places and things, within British India and for all subjects of His Majesty and servants of the Crown, Government officers, and the Armed forces anywhere in India. Section 45A of the Government of India Act, 1915, classified the central and provincial subjects. Prior to 1922 and at the time the Indian Income-tax Act, 1922 was passed, the Central Legislature had the power to impose tax on agricultural income, the local legislature having only the power to legislate in respect of the transferred subjects. Hence, so far as the legislative competence goes, there could be no question that the Indian Income-tax Act 1922 was validly passed by the Indian Legislature. The Indian Income-tax Act 1922 continued to be operative by virtue of Section 311(2) of the Government of India Act, 1935.

18. The contention that Section 59 of the Indian Income-tax Act, 1922, suffers from the vice of excessive delegation has to be examined in the light of the conditions as laid down both by the Privy Council as well as by the Supreme Court in regard to the conditions governing the delegation of legislative power. That delegation to a limited extent must necessarily be made is obvious and accepted as necessary to satisfactorily giving effect to the provisions of any enactment. The leading case on the subject of delegation of legislative power of the Supreme Court is Delhi Laws Act case, reported in AIR 1951 SC 332. It is, however, not necessary to refer to that case in detail in connection with this matter. In Banarsi Das v. State of Madhya Pradesh, AIR 1958 SC 909, the Supreme Court observed as follows:

"While a power to execute a law, it was argued, could be delegated to the executive, the power to make it must be exercised by the Legislature itself.....

x x x

It was also contended that the grant of a power to an outside authority to repeal or modify a provision in a statute passed by the Legislature was unconstitutional, and that, in consequence, the impugned notification was bad in that, in reversal of the policy laid down by the Legislature in Act No. XVI of 1949 that sales to Government should be excluded from the operation of the Act, it withdrew the exemption which had been granted thereunder. And the observations in In re, The Delhi Laws Act, 1912 etc. AIR 1951 SC 332 at pp. 344, 399, 400, and the decision in Rajnarin Singh v. Patna Administration Committee, Patna, AIR 1954 SC 569 were strongly relied on as establishing this contention. Mr. N. C. Chatterjee particularly relied on the following observations of Bose, J., at page 574 of AIR in Rajnarin Singh's case:

"In our opinion, the majority view was that an executive authority can be authorised to modify either existing or future laws but not in any essential feature. Exactly what constitutes an essential feature cannot be enunciated in general terms, and there was some divergence of view about this in the former case, but this much is clear from the opinions set out above, it cannot include a change of policy."

On these observations, the point for determination is whether the impugned notification relates to what may be said to be an essential feature of the law, and whether it involves any change of policy. Now, the authorities are clear that it is not unconstitutional for the legislature to leave it to the executive to determine details relating to the working of taxation laws, such as the selection of persons on whom the tax is to be laid, the rates at which it is to be charged in respect of different classes of goods, and the like.

In Powell v. Appollo Candle Co. Ltd., (1885) 10 AC 282, the question arose as to whether S. 133 of the Customs Regulation Act of 1879 of New South Wales which conferred a power on the Governor to impose tax on certain articles of import was an unconstitutional delegation of legislative powers. In holding that it was not, the Privy Council observed:

"It is argued that the tax in question has been imposed by the Governor and not by the Legislature who alone had power to impose it. But the duties levied under the Order-in-Council are really levied by the authority of the Act under which the Order is issued. The Legislature has not parted with its perfect control over the Governor and has the power, of course, at any moment, of withdrawing or altering the power which they have entrusted to him. In these circumstances, their Lordships are of opinion that the judgment of the Supreme Court was wrong in declaring Section 133 of the Customs Regulation Act of 1879 to be beyond the power of the Legislature."

Similarly, in Hampton Jr. and Co. v. United States, (1928) 276 US 394 = 72 L. Ed. 624, the question arose whether S. 315 (b) of the Tariff Act 1922 under which the President had been empowered to make such increases and decreases in the rates of duty as were found necessary for carrying out the policies declared in the statute was not an unconstitutional delegation. Relying on the above decisions, their Lordships of the Supreme Court in the above case held that the power conferred on the State Government by Section 6 (2) to amend the schedule relating to exemption was in consonance with the accepted legislative practice relating to the topic, and was not unconstitutional.

19. Reliance has been placed on the case of Hamdard Dawakhana v. Union of India, AIR 1960 SC 554 and the following passage in particular, which may be quoted:

"Consequently when the rule-making authority specifies conditions and diseases in the schedule it exercises the same delegated authority as it does when it exercises powers under sub-section (1) and makes other rules and therefore it is delegated legislation. The question for decision then is, is the delegation constitutional in that the administrative authority has been supplied with proper guidance. In our view the words impugned are vague: Parliament has established no criteria, no standards and has not prescribed any principle on which a particular disease or condition is to be specified in the Schedule. It is not stated what facts or circumstances are to be taken into consideration to include a particular condition or disease. The power of specifying diseases and conditions as given in S. 3 (d) must therefore be held to be going beyond permissible boundaries of valid delegation. As a consequence the Schedule in the rules must be struck down."

Reliance is also placed on the following passage:

"We are of the opinion therefore that the words 'or any other disease or condition which may be specified in the rules made under this Act' confer uncanalised and uncontrolled power to the Executive and are therefore ultra vires. But their being taken out of cl. (d) of S. 3 does not affect the constitutionality of the rest of the clause or section as they are severable."

20. It is argued from this decision that as in the instant case also uncanalised and naked power is given to the Executive to decide under Rule 24, as it likes, the Rule must be held to be bad and the delegation must be deemed to be unconstitutional. Reliance has also been placed on M/s. Devi Das v. State of Punjab, AIR 1967 SC 1895. At page 1901, Subba Rao, C. J., enunciated the principle of excess delegation as follows:

"The Constitution confers a power and imposes a duty on the legislature to make laws. The essential legislative function is the determination of the legislative policy and its formulation as a rule of conduct. Obviously it cannot abdicate its functions in favour of another. But in view of the multifarious activities of a welfare State, it cannot presumably work out all the details to suit the varying aspects of a complex situation. It must necessarily delegate the working out of details to the executive or any other agency. But there is a danger inherent in such a process of delegation. An over-burdened legislature or one controlled by a powerful executive may unduly overstep the limits of delegation. It may not lay down any policy at all; it may declare its policy in vague and general terms; it may not set down any standard for the guidance of the executive; it may confer any arbitrary power on the executive to change or modify the policy laid down by it without reserving for itself any control over subordinate legislation. This self effacement of legislative power in favour of another agency either in whole or in part is beyond the permissible limits of delegation. It is for a Court to hold on a fair, generous and liberal construction of an impugned statute whether the legislature exceeded such limits. But the said liberal construction should not be carried by the Courts to the extent of always trying to discover a dormant or latent legislative policy to sustain an arbitrary power conferred on executive authorities. It is the duty of the Court to strike down without any hesitation any arbitrary power conferred on the executive by the legislature." (AIR 1961 SC 4 at pp. 11-12).

21. In that case, under section 5 of the Punjab General Sales Tax Act, 1948, as it originally stood, an uncontrolled power was conferred on the Provincial Government to levy every year on the taxable turnover of a dealer a tax at such rates as the said Government might direct. Under that section the Legislature practically effaced itself in the matter of fixation of rates and it did not give any guidance either under that section or under any other provisions of the Act. Accordingly, it was held that the delegation was excessive and that section 5 of the said Act under which power is given to the Executive was held void.

22. Speaking generally, therefore, we are clearly of opinion that it is not unconstitutional for the Legislature to leave it to the Executive to determine details relating to the working out of the taxation laws, such as the selection of persons on whom the tax is to be laid, the rates at which it is to be charged in respect of different classes of goods, and the like. Applying the tests propounded in the above quoted decisions to the instant case, we find that section 59 of the Indian Income-Tax Act, 1922, laid down the policy of the Legislature in clear terms, namely, the ascertainment and determination of any class of income and provided particularly for prescribing the manner in which and the procedure by which the income, profits and gains shall be arrived at in the case of incomes derived in part from agriculture and in part from business. The Legislature has indicated in Section 59 (3) the circumstances in which the rule like rule 24 could be framed and these are:

(1) Where the income, profits and gains liable to tax cannot be definitely ascertained; or

(2) can be ascertained only with an amount of trouble and expense to the assessee which, in the opinion of the Central Board of Revenue, is unreasonable; and in such circumstances the sub-section provides that the rules may

(a) prescribe the methods by which an estimate of such income, profits and gains may be made; and

(b) in cases coming under sub-clause (1) of clause (a) of sub-section (2) where incomes derived in part from agriculture and in part from business, prescribe the proportion of the income which shall be deemed to be income, profits and gains liable to tax under the Indian Income-tax Act.

It is thus clear that the object and the policy and the circumstances in which the rules have to be framed have all been set out in section 59 (3) and what was left to the Executive, in the instant case the Central Board of Revenue, was to work out the details of the proportion which rule 24 has provided. It is obvious that these are matters of detail which it is more convenient and proper to be left to the Executive to determine, and it is in accordance with the policy indicated, that Rule 24 of the Indian Income-tax Rules had been framed providing for the income derived from the sale of tea, grown and manufactured by the seller in the taxable territories to be computed as if it were income derived from business, and 40 per cent of such income shall be deemed to be income, profits and gains liable to tax. What portion of the income is derived from agriculture in the matter of tea grown and what portion should be business income for the purpose of the Indian Income-tax Act is a matter of detail which could only be effectively determined by the Executive, and Rule 24 lays down that the entire income derived from the growth and manufacture of tea is to be treated as if it were business income and 40 per cent thereof should be liable to income-tax assessment under the Indian Income-tax Act, 1922.

23. In this connection, it must be noted that the income derived from the cultivation and manufacture of tea comprises partly of the value of the tea leaf grown which is utilised in producing the tea, which is accepted as fit for the marketing and partly of the value that it acquires by being put through the process of manufacture. In other words, the marketable commodity of tea acquires its value partly by reason of the fact that it is grown in the tea-gardens and plucked and brought to the factory where the tea is dried and put through certain processes until it acquires the condition that it could be sold in the market, and the expenditure involved in putting the tea leaves through this process of manufacture. Thus the income derived by the sale of tea in the market is partly derived by agricultural operations and partly by adopting the manufacturing processes.

It is common knowledge that the manufacturing process of tea involves the drying or withering of the green tea leaves and the rolling and drying and storing thereof. The process of drying or withering the tea leaf under the sun and rolling it by hand has been replaced by the modern method of effecting it by the machinery. This process in modern times involves the withering of the tea by the use of steam or electric power. It is then fired by means of hot air from a furnace and is then finally sorted into grades and packed for export. This process may vary in different tea gardens, depending on the nature of the machinery employed. But the fact remains that after the tea leaf passes through the manufacturing process, it is still the leaf in specie, but is reduced to a state in which it would be fit for consumption and thus being sold in the market. Hence the grower and the manufacturer of tea incurs the expenditure in producing the tea in its final shape, partly over the agricultural operation involved in growing tea leaf and partly in the manufacturing process involved in making tea leaf fit for marketing, and this income has to be apportioned in the approximate proportion of the expenditure involved in the agricultural operations and in the manufacturing operations. That every tea producer has to grow tea and has to put it through a manufacturing process to make it fit for marketing is beyond question. In such circumstances, the Legislature advisedly thought it not correct to treat the entire income derived from the sale of tea either as agricultural income or as business income and the proportion has to be maintained on a rational basis and it is this that has been done by the passing of Rule 24, which, for the purposes of the Income-tax, treats the entire income as if it were business income, but lays down that only 40 per cent thereof should be assessed as business income. We see no justification for holding that the framing of this rule involved any exercise of excessive delegation of power of legislation, nor are we satisfied that S. 59 of the Indian Income-tax Act, 1922 involved any excess delegation of legislative power.

24. In English and Scottish Joint Co-operative Wholesale Society Ltd. v. Commissioner of Agricultural Income-tax, Assam, 1948-16 ITR 270 = (AIR 1948 PC 142), the assessment made under the Assam Act has been upheld by their Lordships of the Privy Council on the basis of the apportionment made in R. 24 of the Indian Income-tax Rules, 1922 and Rule 5 of the Assam Act. The following observations of their Lordships of the Privy Council may be quoted with advantage:

"The Assam Agricultural Income-tax Act applies to all agricultural income derived from land situated in the Province of Assam (Section 5) and it provides by the charging section (Section 3) that agricultural income-tax at the rate specified in the annual Assam Finance Act shall be charged for each financial year on the total agricultural income of the previous year. The part of the definition section (Section 2) which is relevant to the present case defines agricultural income as any income derived from land used for agricultural purposes by agriculture. The Indian Income-tax Act contains a definition of agricultural income in the same terms, but by a rule (Rule 24) made under it, 'income derived from the sale of tea grown and manufactured by the seller in British India shall be computed as if it were income derived from business and 40 per cent. of such income shall be deemed to be income, profits and gains liable to tax.' The scheme of the Assam Act is to tax the remaining 60 per cent. only of the income derived from the sale of tea grown and manufactured by the seller in Assam and that result is secured by suitable provisions which need not be recited (see the explanation to Section 2, the proviso to Section 8 and Rule 5 made under the Act)."

In the final result, their Lordships upheld the assessment made under the provisions of the Assam Act and the Rules framed thereunder, read with Rule 24 of the Indian Income-tax Rules.

25. The very questions that have arisen for consideration in these cases came up for consideration before a Constitution Bench of the Supreme Court in Karimtharuvi Tea Estates Ltd. v. Kerala State, AIR 1963 SC 760. That was a case under the Kerala Agricultural Income-tax Act, which follows closely the provisions of the Assam Act. In that case, Kerala State's power to tax income from tea to agricultural income-tax is limited to taking 60% of the income computed for the purpose of the Indian Income-tax Act as if it were income derived from business, was questioned on the ground that the provisions of the Kerala Agricultural Income-tax Act 1950 as amended by Act IX of 1961, were null and void. In that case their Lordships had to examine the various provisions of the Act including the definition of 'agricultural income' as well as the rule-making power of the Executive under Rule 24 of the Indian Income-tax Rules. The following observations occurring at page 763 in that case may be quoted with advantage:

"The result of rule 24 is that the income derived from the sale of tea grown and manufactured by the seller is to be computed in the first instance as if it was income derived from business. Consequently, the income would be computed in accordance with the provisions of S. 10 of the Income-tax Act. Clause (xv) of sub-s. (2) of S. 10 provides that in computing the income any expenditure by an assessee not being an allowance of the nature described in any of the cls. (i) to (xiv) inclusive and not being in the nature of capital expenditure or personal expenses of the assessee laid out or expended wholly and exclusively for the purpose of such business, would be deducted. Of the income so computed, 40 per cent is, under R. 24, to be treated as income liable to income-tax and it would follow that the other 60 per cent only will be deemed to be 'agricultural income' within the meaning of that expression in the Income-tax Act. It follows, therefore that the power of the State Legislature to make a law in respect of taxes on agricultural income arising from tea plantations will be limited to legislating with respect to the agricultural income so determined. The State Legislature is free in the exercise of its plenary legislative power to allow further deductions from such computed agricultural income as it considers fit, but it cannot add to the amount of the agricultural income so computed by providing that certain items of expenditure deducted in the computation of the income from a business under the provisions of the Income-tax Act be not deducted and be considered to be a part of the taxable agricultural income."

Lower down, dealing with the power of the State Legislature to enact the law in respect of agricultural income, their Lordships observed:

"It is not disputed for the respondent that the power of the State Legislature to enact a law in respect of agricultural income relates only to such agricultural income as is defined in Article 366 of the Constitution.

It is however urged that for the purpose of this definition, one has to look to the definition of 'Agricultural income' in the Income-tax Act and not to the rules made thereunder. We do not agree, "Agricultural Income" as defined in the Constitution means 'agricultural income for the purpose of the enactments relating to income-tax'. Rule 24 of the Income-tax Rules has been made under the powers conferred by section 59 of the Income-tax Act and has effect as if enacted in that Act. When section 59 of the Income-tax Act provides for the rules made under that Act to prescribe the proportions of income from business, and income from agriculture in the entire income derived in part from agriculture and in part from business, the proportion so prescribed must be taken to be prescribed by the Act. These rules were in existence in 1950 when the Constitution incorporated the definition of 'agricultural income' from the Income-tax Act by reference. The definition of the term was bound up with the rules."

26. In view of the above observations of their Lordships of the Supreme Court, it follows that the explanation to S. 2 (a) of the Assam Act which merely gives effect to R. 24 of the Income-tax Rules cannot be called into question. This explanation is as follows:

"Explanation: Agricultural income derived from such land by the cultivation of tea means that portion of the income derived from the cultivation, manufacture and sale of tea as is defined to be agricultural income for the purposes of the enactments relating to Indian Income-tax."

It may be seen that this explanation contains nothing more than what is laid down in Rule 24, under which the total income is assessed as if it were business income, and 40 per cent is taken for the purposes of assessment under the Income-tax Act. The balance of 60 per cent, which represents the agricultural income is assessable to agricultural income-tax under the Assam Act. Any doubt on the subject has been cleared by the decision of the Supreme Court in AIR 1963 SC 760.

27. It is contended by Mr. Ghosh that having regard to the use of the word

'ordinarily' in Rule 23 (2) (a), quoted earlier in this judgment, it excludes tea from its operation. The argument is not understood. There may be agricultural produce which may be sold in the market in its raw state or after application of an ordinary process to render it fit to be taken to the market. But that makes no difference at all, particularly when it is obvious that tea has to be put through the process of manufacture before it is rendered fit for marketing. The decisions relied on by Mr. Ghosh, namely: In re, Bhikanpur Sugar Concern, AIR 1919 Pat 260 (FB) and Sheolal v. Income-tax Commissioner, AIR 1932 Nag 61, have no application to the instant case as they do not deal with tea. Another case cited by Mr. Ghosh reported in Killing Valley Tea Co. Ltd. v. Secretary of State, AIR 1921 Cal 40, is a case long before the Indian Income-tax Act, 1922 and the Rules framed thereunder became law and, therefore, is not of much assistance.

28. Taking all the facts and circumstances into consideration we are satisfied that both the proviso to Section 8 of the Assam Act and Rule 5 and the Explanation thereto are in conformity with the Indian Income-tax Act and the Rules framed thereunder and therefore cannot be struck down as unconstitutional.

29. By way of reply Mr. Ghosh raised a new point, in a faint way, that although the Indian Income-tax Act, 1922 is a pre-Constitution Act, it can certainly be struck down under Article 13 of the Constitution as offending or being violative of fundamental rights. But this argument has not been advanced earlier in the case. We consider that there is no substance in this contention, which does not, in our opinion, merit serious consideration.

30. In the result, therefore, we are clearly of opinion that no exception can be taken to the assessment made against the petitioners under the Assam Act and they are liable to pay agricultural income tax as assessed under the said Act. These petitions are dismissed and the rules are discharged. In the circumstances, we make no order as to costs.

Petitions dismissed.

AIR 1970 ASSAM & NAGALAND 70
(V 57 C 14)

S. K. DUTTA, C. J. AND
K. C. SEN, J.

The Managements of Tea Gardens of Assam, Petitioner v. The Presiding Officer, Industrial Tribunal Assam, Gauhati and others, Opposite Parties.

Civil Rule No. 261 of 1965, D/- 7-5-1969.

FM/FM/C698/69/JHS/P.

Industrial Disputes Act (1947), Sch. 3, Item 5 — Payment made as bonus to labour of various tea companies according to agreement — Payment, however, not related to profits of individual establishment — Payment is not bonus within meaning of formula evolved by Bombay Full Bench in (1950) 2 Lab LJ 1247 (LATI-Bom) and could be deducted from gross profits for purpose of calculating profit for payment of bonus to other members of staff.

In respect of the years 1953 and 1954 certain lump sum payments were made as bonus, by various tea companies, to labour according to an agreement in that behalf. As regards years 1955 and 1956, the tea garden areas of the State were divided into different zones. Then ten companies were selected in each zone by drawing of lots and the bonus payable to labour was fixed on the basis of profits made by the said companies. The question for consideration was whether in determining the amount of profits for the purpose of paying bonus to other members of the staff, the payment made to labour as bonus could be deducted from gross profits. It was contended that the formula evolved by Bombay Full Bench in 1950-2 Lab LJ 1247 (LATI-Bom.) applied and the payment made to labour was bonus which could not be deducted to arrive at the profit for payment of bonus to the other members of the staff.

Held, that, according to the Full Bench formula, it was the profit of a particular establishment which was the basis for the payment of bonus. That being so, the payment made to the labour according to the agreement was not bonus within the meaning of the formula. It was a mere ad hoc payment to labour. The formula could not be applied for one purpose viz. to hold that bonus could not be a prior charge, when it was abandoned for another purpose viz. to arrive at what was bonus. As pointed out by the Supreme Court, in AIR 1967 SC 691, gross profit had to be arrived at after deducting wages and dearness allowances paid to the employees and "other items of expenditure", and the ad hoc payment that was made under the agreement to the labour had to be deducted as "other expenditure". (Para 4)

Cases Referred: Chronological Paras

(1967) AIR 1967 SC 691 (V 54) =
(1967) 1 SCR 15, Jalan Trading Co. Private Ltd. v. Mill Mazdoor Sabha 3

(1959) AIR 1959 SC 967 (V 46) =
1959 SCR 925, Associated Cement Companies Ltd. v. Its Workmen 3

(1950) 1950-2 Lab LJ 1247 (LATI-Bom.), Mill Owners' Association, Bombay v. Rashtriya Mill Mazdoor Sangh, Bombay 3

S. D. Banerjee, D. N. Das and S. R. Khound, for Petitioner; P. Chaudhuri and G. K. Talukdar, for Opposite Parties.

DUTTA, C. J.: This is a writ petition filed by the Assam Branch of the Indian Tea Association. The petitioner's case is as follows. A large number of tea gardens in Assam are members of the Indian Tea Association which is an Association of the employers having a Branch in Assam known as the Assam Branch of the Indian Tea Association with its head office at Dikom. This Association on behalf of the member gardens in Assam concluded an agreement with the workmen of the said gardens (opposite party No. 2) on 7-10-55 in respect of the payment of bonus to the clerical and medical staff and the artisans for the years 1954 to 1958. In January, 1956, an agreement had been reached in Delhi regarding bonus to labour. It related to the claims for payment of bonus for the years 1953, 1954, 1955 and 1956. It was agreed by the parties that in respect of the claims for the years 1953 and 1954 a lump sum payment will be made on certain conditions. For the years 1955 and 1956, it was agreed that the labour bonus would be given on the basis of zonal area prosperity of the year compared with 1954 and the resultant co-efficient applied to the basic of lump sum agreed for the years 1953 and 1954. Thus the bonus payable to labour had no relation to the profits of the individual companies and it was a lump sum payment in addition to the wage of a worker and in the nature of a fixed charge. In determining the profits for payment of bonus to the members of the clerical and medical staff and the artisans under the agreement dated 7-10-55, the bonus payable to the labourers under the Delhi agreement of 1956 was accounted as costs and the said amounts were deducted from the amount of profits. The Union however, took the stand that amounts paid as bonus to the labourers could not be deducted from the gross profits for the purpose of calculating the profits for payment of bonus to the clerical and medical staff and the artisans.

2. A dispute thus having arisen, the State Government referred it to the Industrial Tribunal, Assam for adjudication on the following points:

(i) Whether the managements of Tea Gardens in Assam under the membership of Indian Tea Association are justified in deducting amounts paid as bonus to workers pursuant to an agreement effected in New Delhi on 8th January, 1956 from the amounts of gross profits for the purpose of paying bonus to the members of the staff?

(ii) If not, to what relief are the members of the staff entitled?

3. The case of the petitioner before the Tribunal was that the bonus paid to the labourers under the Delhi agreement was not related to any profit, but in fact was a mere lump sum payment being a fixed charge in addition to the wages of the workers. Such bonus, according to the petitioner, was a mere revenue charge. The Union on the other hand, submitted that the Full Bench formula evolved by the Full Bench of the Labour Appellate Tribunal in The Millowners' Association, Bombay v. Rashtriya Mill Mazdoor Sangh, Bombay, 1950-2 Lab LJ 1247 (LATI-Bom) would apply and that the payment made to the labourers was bonus which could not be deducted to arrive at the profit for payment of bonus to the clerical and medical staff and the artisans. The learned Tribunal held that the above formula did apply and that the said formula did not provide labour bonus as a prior charge for deduction from the gross profit to arrive at the available surplus. The short point that we have to decide is whether the payment made as bonus to the labourers is to be deducted to arrive at the profit on the basis of which bonus has to be paid to the clerical and medical staff and the artisans. The Full Bench formula was considered by the Supreme Court in several cases and in Jalan Trading Co., Private Ltd. v. Mill Mazdoor Sabha, AIR 1967 SC 691 the Supreme Court explained the formula as follows:

"These problems were for the first time elaborately considered by this Court in the Associated Cement Companies Ltd. v. Its Workmen, 1959 SCR 925 = (AIR 1959 SC 967). Since that decision numerous cases have come before this Court in which the basic formula has been accepted with some elaboration. The principal incidents of the formula as evolved by the decisions of this Court may be briefly stated: Each year for which bonus is claimed is a self-contained unit and bonus will be computed on the profits of the establishment in that year. In giving effect to the formula as a general rule from the gross profits determined after debiting the wages and dearness allowances paid to the employees, and other items of expenditure against total receipts, as disclosed by the profit and loss account are accepted, unless it appears that the debit entries are not supported by recognized accountancy practice or are posted mala fide with the object of reducing gross profits. Debit items which are wholly extraneous to or unrelated to the determination of trading profits are ignored. Similarly income which is wholly extraneous to the conduct of the business e.g. book profits on account of revaluation of assets may not be included in the gross profits. Against the gross profits so ascertained the following items are charged as prior debits: (1) Depreciation: such depreciation being only the normal or notional depreciation; (2) Income-tax payable for the accounting year on the balance remaining after deducting statutory depreciation. The income-tax to be deducted is not the actual amount, but the notional amount of tax at the rate for the year, even if on assessment no tax is determined to be payable. For the purpose of the Full Bench Formula income-tax at the rate provided must be deducted, but in the computation of income-tax statutory depreciation under the Indian Income-tax Act only may be allowed, (3) Return on paid-up capital at 6 per cent and on reserves used as working capital at a lower rate. In the Associated Cement Companies' case, 1959 SCR 925 = AIR 1959 SC 967 it was suggested that this rate should be 2 per cent, in later cases 4 per cent on the working capital was regarded as appropriate. (4) Expenditure for rehabilitation which includes replacement and modernisation of plant, machinery and buildings, but not for expansion of building, or additions to the machinery."

4. It is quite obvious that the payment made to the labour under the Delhi agreement by the various tea companies was not based on the above formula at all. In respect of 1953 and 1954 lump sum payments were made. As regards 1955 and 1956, a particular formula was adopted by agreement. The tea garden areas of the State were divided into different zones. Then ten companies were selected in each zone by drawing of lots and the bonus payable to labour was fixed on the basis of profits made by the said companies. Thus, the amounts paid had no relation to the profit made by a particular tea company but were calculated on the basis of zonal prosperity. According to the Bombay Full Bench formula, it is the profit of a particular establishment which is the basis for the payment of bonus. This being so, it can be said that the payment made to the labour according to the Delhi agreement is not bonus within the meaning of the formula. It is a mere ad hoc payment to labour. In laying down the basis for payment of certain sums in the Delhi agreement the Bombay Full Bench formula was not followed. Therefore it appears that whereas the payment made to labour was not calculated according to the said formula, the ad hoc payment mentioned above is treated as bonus for the contention that according to the formula bonus cannot be a prior charge. The formula cannot be applied for one purpose viz. to hold that bonus cannot be a prior charge, when it was abandoned for another purpose viz., to arrive at what was bonus. As pointed out by the Supreme Court, in the passage cited above, gross profit has to be arrived at after deducting wages and dearness allowances paid to the employees and "other items of expenditure". We think the ad hoc payment that was made under the Delhi agreement to the labour has to be deducted as "other expenditure". As such the answer to the first question in the reference to the Labour Tribunal must be answered accordingly.

5. In the result, this petition must be allowed and the award is set aside. The rule is made absolute. There will be no order as to costs.

6. K. C. SEN, J.: I agree.

Petition allowed.

AIR 1970 ASSAM & NAGALAND 73 (V 57 C 15)

S. K. DUTTA, C. J. AND

P. K. GOSWAMI, J.

M/s. Ashoka Construction Co., Petitioner v. Union of India and another, Opposite Parties.

Civil Revn. No. 26 of 1968, D/- 13-5-1969, from order of Addl. Deputy Commr. Shillong, D/- 27-3-1968.

(A) Arbitration Act (1940), S. 33 — Application under S. 33 need not be in any particular form. AIR 1959 Madh Pra 102 & AIR 1954 Mad. 560 & ILR (1951) 1 Cal. 438 & AIR 1967 SC 1233, Foll.

(Para 4)

(B) Civil P. C. (1908), S. 115 — Court exercising jurisdiction under S. 115 cannot correct errors of fact. (Para 9)

Cases Referred: Chronological Paras

(1967) AIR 1967 SC 1233 (V 54) =
(1967) 3 SCR 147, Madan Lal v. Sunder Lal 7

(1959) AIR 1959 Madh Pra 102
(V 46) = 1959 MPLJ 87, Sheoram-prasad v. Gopalprasad 4

(1954) AIR 1954 Mad 560 (V 41) =
1954-1 Mad LJ 7, Ramaswami Servai v. Muthiralayee 5

(1951) ILR (1951) 1 Cal 438, Pan-chanan Pal v. Mani Gopal Niyogi 6
B. K. Das, for Petitioner; D. K. De and G. K. Talukdar, for Opposite Parties.

DUTTA, C. J.: This petition has been filed against the order of the Additional Deputy Commissioner, United Khasi & Jaintia Hills District, setting aside an award. The petitioner entered into a contract with the Union of India (hereinafter called the Government) for the construction of buildings of the Assam Rifles at Tezu in the N. E. F. A. The contract contained a clause being clause No. 25 for settlement of disputes arising out of the contract by arbitration. The works were completed on 18-10-57 but disputes in respect of certain items arose and could not be settled. The petitioner (hereinafter called the contractor) took final payment on 18-10-57 under protest and without prejudice to his claims. Thereafter on 29-10-60 the contractor requested the Government for appointment of a sole arbitrator as the disputes had arisen between the parties as aforesaid. The Superintending Engineer as per agreement appointed one Shri N.M. Malkani as arbitrator on 1-1-62. The contractor objected to this appointment and prayed for the appointment of one Shri Nath as arbitrator by an application purported to be under Sections 8, 20, 31 and 41 of the Arbitration Act 1940 (hereinafter called the Act) filed before the Assistant to the Deputy Commissioner at Shillong who held that the appointment of Shri Malkani was valid. Shri Malkani, however, died before he could act as arbitrator and in his place one Shri P. S. Rao was appointed as arbitrator.

The contractor again objected to the appointment of Sri Rao and filed an application purported to be under Sections 8 and 20 of the Act praying for appointment of another person as arbitrator. The Government resisted the petition. The learned Assistant to the Deputy Commissioner however, allowed the petition after hearing both the parties and appointed Shri G. N. Dutta, as arbitrator by an order dated 29-4-65. The Government then filed a revision petition before this Court against the order of the Assistant to the Deputy Commissioner. This Court dismissed that petition. The Government then preferred an appeal before the Supreme Court and this appeal was also dismissed. The arbitrator Shri G. N. Dutta filed his award in Court on 21-1-66 and the Government filed a petition on 17-2-66 for setting aside the award. The learned Assistant to the Deputy Commissioner after hearing both the parties dismissed the said objection petition on 27-4-67 and made the award a rule of the Court and ordered drawing up of a decree in terms of the same. Thereafter the Government filed an appeal before the Additional Deputy Commissioner and the contractor also filed a cross-appeal. The contractor, however, did not press his appeal and it was dismissed. The Additional Deputy Commissioner allowed the appeal of the Government and set aside the award. The contractor has filed this petition against the order of the Additional Deputy Commissioner.

2. This petition is said to be under Rule 36 of the Rules for the Administration of Justice and Police in the Khasi & Jaintia Hills District and also under Sections 115 and 151 of the Civil Procedure Code. It is not disputed that the Act applies to the present proceedings. Under section 41 of the Act, the provisions of the Code of Civil Procedure shall apply to all proceedings before the Court and all appeals under the Act. In the present case the original order was passed by a Munsiff in his capacity as Assistant to the Deputy Commissioner in Shillong. There was an appeal to the Additional Deputy Commissioner whose position is analogous to that of a District Judge. Sub-section (2) of Section 39 of the Act bars a second appeal against an appellate order passed under the said section. The appeal before the Additional Deputy Commissioner was filed under Section 39 (1) (vi) of the Act for setting aside the award. Hence this petition must be treated only as a revision petition under Section 115 of the Civil Procedure Code. The High Court has no power to interfere under this section except in three cases viz. where the subordinate court appears (1) to have exercised a jurisdiction not vested in it by law; or (2) to have failed to exercise a jurisdiction vested in it by law; (3) to have acted in exercise of its jurisdiction illegally or with material irregularity.

3. It appears that a preliminary objection was raised before the Assistant to the Deputy Commissioner regarding the maintainability of the petition. It may be noted that the objection petition was at first said to have been filed under Section 33 of the Act. But later this was corrected and the petition was shown to be under Section 17 of the Act. The learned Assistant to the Deputy Commissioner held that the award should be made a rule of the court since there was no petition under Section 33. But all the same, he went on to examine the contentions raised by the Government. It is argued before us by the learned counsel for the contractor that this view of the learned Assistant to the Deputy Commissioner was not set aside by the appellate court. In fact, it was not gone into by it and hence he had no jurisdiction to set aside the award.

4. The word application has not been defined in the Act. It is not necessary to make the application in any particular form. Under Section 33 the Court should decide the objections raised ordinarily on affidavits. But it is clear from the proviso to Section 33 that the Court is entitled to decide them on other evidence also. It has been laid down by several High Courts as well as the Supreme Court that there is no special form prescribed for an objection petition. In Sheorampasad v. Gopalprasad, AIR 1959 Madh Pra 102, it was held by the Madhya Pradesh High Court that an application filed for permission to inspect record could be treated as an application under Section 33. All the grounds of challenge to the award were mentioned in that application, but details thereof were furnished later in the written statement. It was held that the absence of details could not come in the way of the court treating the application as one falling under Section 33.

5. In Ramaswami Servai v. Muthiralayee, AIR 1954 Mad. 560, the petitioner before the Madras High Court had filed an award into the Court of the Munsiff with a request that a decree might be passed in terms of the award. Notice was served on the respondents and within 30 days of the receipt of the same, the respondents filed a counter attacking the genuineness and validity of the award. In that counter it was prayed that the court might be pleased to pass an order dismissing the request for a decree. It was contended that as there was no application with a prayer "to set aside the award" within 30 days as required under Section 17 of the Act and Article 158 of the Limitation Act, the objection of the respondents could not be entertained. The Munsiff rejected this contention. On a revision petition being filed against the order of the Munsiff the High Court held that form of the application for setting aside an award being not prescribed the Court correctly did not insist on a particular form of application with court-fee stamp affixed thereon.

6. In Panchanan Pal v. Nani Gopal Niyogi, ILR (1951) 1 Cal. 438, it was held by the Calcutta High Court that courts could ignore technicalities and treat a petition of objection filed in course of proceedings under the Arbitration Act as one under Section 33 where, in substance, it complied with the terms thereof.

7. The above views were approved by the Supreme Court in Madan Lal v. Sunder Lal, AIR 1967 SC 1233. The facts of that case in brief were as follows. The award was filed in Court on September 7, 1957 and notice of filing was issued to the appellant and served upon him on September 30, 1957. It was in November 1957 i.e. more than 30 days later, that the appellant filed an objection in the nature of a written statement. Although the appellant attacked the validity of the award on various grounds, the objection did not contain any prayer at the end, nor did it indicate what relief the appellant desired. The trial Court held that the appellant's objection was not maintainable as his remedy was to apply under Section 33 if he wanted the award to be set aside. Such an application has to be filed within 30 days of the service of notice of filing the award vide Article 158 of the Limitation Act (old Act). As the objection was filed beyond the period of limitation of 30 days, it was rejected. The appellant then went in appeal to the High Court which dismissed his appeal. Then he went to the Supreme Court which also dismissed the appeal on the ground of limitation. In this connection the Supreme Court observed as follows:

"It is clear, therefore, from the scheme of the Act that if a party wants an award to be set aside on any of the grounds mentioned in S. 30 it must apply within 30 days of the date of service of notice of filing of the award as provided in Art. 158 of the Limitation Act. If no such application is made the award cannot be set aside on any of the grounds specified in section 30 of the Act. It may be conceded that there is no special form prescribed for making such an application and in an appropriate case an objection of the type made in this case may be treated as such an application, if it is filed within the period of limitation. But if an objection like this has been filed after the period of limitation it cannot be treated as an application to set aside the award, for if it is so treated it will be barred by limitation.

It is not in dispute in the present case that the objections raised by the appellant were covered by Section 30 of the Act, and though the appellant did not pray for setting aside the award in his objection that was what he really wanted the Court to do after hearing his objection. As in the present case the objection was filed more than 30 days after the notice it could not be treated as an application for setting aside the award, for it would then be barred by limitation."

8. In the instant case it may be noted that the trial Court actually treated the petition as one under Section 33 although he expressed the opinion that there was no petition under the said section. This is obvious from the first sentence of the judgment viz. "This is a petition for setting aside the award dated 17-1-66 made by the appointed arbitrator Sri G. N. Dutta, retired Chief Engineer of Assam." Moreover, towards the end of the judgment, the trial court said "In the result, the present petition of the Union of India praying for setting aside the award is dismissed with costs of Rs. 50/-." In the above circumstances, I do not find that the courts below wrongly assumed jurisdiction by entertaining the objection.

9. The first appellate court held that the arbitrator misconducted himself by violating a principle of natural justice inasmuch as he made the award without giving a chance to the Government to close its case by putting in written arguments. Whether there was such a violation or not, is a question of fact and this Court, while exercising jurisdiction under Section 115 of the Civil Procedure Code cannot correct errors of fact, however gross they may be. It is true that an award may be set aside on the ground of an error of law only when it is apparent on the face of the award. But this principle will not apply when there is violation of a principle of natural justice e.g. when evidence is shut out. In such a case the Court can examine the proceedings. In the present case the appellate court did this to arrive at the conclusion that there was such a violation.

10. The appellate court also held that the arbitrator exceeded his jurisdiction by entertaining some new claims. It is contended that the appellate court was barred by res judicata from entering into this question. As the award is liable to be set aside on the ground of violation of a principle of natural justice, it is not necessary to examine the said contention.

11. In the result, this revision petition fails and it is dismissed. There will be no order as to costs.

12. P. K. GOSWAMI, J.: I agree.

Revision dismissed.

AIR 1970 ASSAM & NAGALAND 75 (V 57 C 16)

P. K. GOSWAMI, J.

Keshab Chandra Das and others, Petitioners v. On the death of Sriram Chandra Das (Plaintiff) his legal representatives (Madhab Chandra Das and others) and another (Pro forma defendant), Respondents.

Second Appeal No. 99 of 1965, D/- 23-7-1969, from order of Sub. J., No. II, Lower Assam Districts Gauhati, D/- 30-1-1965.

(A) Civil P. C. (1908), O. 41 R. 23 — Case sent back to first appellate Court to dispose of appeal on merits — Court of first appeal is competent to rehear entire matter.

Where the judgment in the first appeal is set aside by the High Court in revision and the case is sent back to dispose of the appeal on merits, the matter is in the same position as it was after the passing of the judgment and decree by the trial Court. The reasonings and the findings of the Judge in the earlier appeal do not survive and he is competent to rehear the entire matter in the appeal which is before him after the remand.

(Para 7)

(B) Transfer of Property Act (1882), S. 53 — Plea of benami referring to sham transaction — Want of consideration for transaction must be established by party

JM/JM/E592/69/HGP/D

pleading — (Evidence Act (1872), Ss. 101-104).

Where the plea of benami transaction refers not to a transaction in favour of a person other than a real owner but to a type of sham transaction such as that there was no sale at all, the party pleading benami has to establish that there was absolutely no consideration for the sale. Where the courts below concurrently found after appreciation of oral and documentary evidence that there was passing of consideration for the sale in question the plea of benami set up falls through. AIR 1957 SC 49, Rel. on.

(Para 8)

(C) Registration Act (1908), S. 49 — Lease — Non-registration of — Document can be used as proof of nature of possession.

The defendant who sold the suit land to plaintiff had his house over it and although it was recited in the sale deed that possession was delivered, the defendant took plaintiff's permission for removal of his house within 6 or 7 months. The defendant was unable to remove the house within that time and he executed an unregistered kabuliyat in favour of the plaintiff agreeing to pay a certain rent and stay there for one year. After the expiry of one year also he could not vacate and executed two successive unregistered kabuliyats. When the plaintiff in a suit for declaration of his right, title and khas possession, relied on those kabuliyats not for the purpose of establishing his right or title but only as an answer to defendant's claim to a possible plea of adverse possession.

Held that the unregistered kabuliyats showed the nature or character of defendant's possession. Although, therefore, those documents were not admissible as lease, they could however establish the nature of at least the permissible possession of the property by the defendant. That being the position, there was no question of limitation, AIR 1958 SC 199, Disting.

(Para 9)

Cases Referred: Chronological Paras

(1958) AIR 1958 SC 199 (V 45) =

1958 SCR 948, Mst. Kirpal Kuar v. Bachan Singh 10

(1957) AIR 1957 SC 49 (V 44) =

1956 SCR 691, Sree Meenakshi Mills Ltd. v. Commr. of Income tax, Madras B

(1919) AIR 1919 PC 44 (V 6) =

46 Ind App 285, Varada Pillai v. Jeevarathnammal 10

R. K. Goswami and D. C. Goswami, for Appellants; D. K. Sarma and J. N. Sarma, for Respondents.

JUDGMENT: This second appeal is on behalf of the principal defendant. The plaintiff brought a suit for declaration of his right and title over the suit land measuring 2 Kathas 12 1/2 lechas in Barpeta town described in schedule Kha to the plaint. This land originally belonged to the principal defendant, who sold the same to the plaintiff by executing a registered sale deed on 11-2-43 for a consideration of Rs. 1,000/-. The defendant had his houses over the suit land and although it is recited in the document that possession was delivered, he took permission from the plaintiff for removal of his houses within 6 or 7 months and the plaintiff agreed to the same. The plaintiff got his name mutated in the record of rights. The defendant was unable to remove the houses within that time and requested for permission to continue there and on 14-8-43 he executed an unregistered kabuliyat in favour of the plaintiff agreeing to pay a rent of Rupees 5/- per month and stay there for one year after which he will remove his houses without notice. The plaintiff agreed to the said arrangement.

After the expiry of one year also he could not vacate and executed two successive unregistered kabuliyats on 15-12-45 and 15-12-47 agreeing to stay on the land by paying an annual rent of Rupees 60/-. The defendant ultimately did not vacate and the plaintiff has been unsuccessfully asking him to vacate the land since 1954 and finally on the 27th February, 1956 (14th Falgun 1362 B. S.) he served a registered notice on the defendant asking him to vacate on the expiry of 30th Falgun, 1362 B. S. There was also a demand in this notice for payment of arrear rent for three years from 1953 to 1955 amounting to Rs. 180/-. The defendant received the notice on 28-2-56 but did not comply with the same and hence the suit.

2. The defendant admitted to have executed the sale deed on 11-2-43 but stated that that was not a genuine sale but only a benami transaction to save the property from his creditors. He avers that the plaintiff was his class-mate from school and a special friend and, therefore, he in honest belief put his trust on him and made this benami transaction. He also stated in paragraph 9 of his written statement that the property in suit at the time of alleged sale was in much worse condition than it was at the time of his filing the written statement and that the defendant had "improved the property at his own costs several times". Defendant also admitted to have executed the three kabuliyats but stated that these were part of the defendant's benami sale to the plaintiff in order to give a colour of genuineness to the benami transaction. He stated that no rent was ever paid to the plaintiff and he denied to have made the various proprises attributed to him. He questioned the validity of the notice and also the pecuniary jurisdiction of the court stating that the land in suit was of the value of more than Rs. 4,000/-.

In an additional written statement filed more than a year after his first written statement, he averred that the kabuliyaats were inadmissible and illegal and as such the plaintiff's right and title are barred under Articles 142 and 144 and other provisions of the Limitation Act, even if it could not be proved that the plaintiff is not a benamidar for the defendant as alleged in his earlier written statement.

3. The learned Munsiff framed the following issues:

- (1) Whether the suit is maintainable?
- (2) Whether the suit is barred by limitation?
- (3) Whether the suit is bad for non-joinder of the defendants?
- (4) Whether the plaintiff has right, title and interest over the suit lands?
- (5) Whether the notice to quit on the defendant was valid?
- (6) Whether this court has jurisdiction to try the suit?
- (7) Whether the alleged sale of the suit land was benami?
- (8) To what relief the parties are entitled?

The learned Munsif in answering issue No. 6 held that the land in suit was of the value of more than Rs. 2,000/-, which is his pecuniary jurisdiction, but since the suit is between the landlord and tenant, he had jurisdiction to try the suit, which has been correctly valued on the basis of the annual rental of the property, which will also be the amount for the purpose of jurisdiction under S. 8 of the Suits Valuation Act. He answered the issues in favour of the plaintiff and decreed the suit with costs with regard to the plaintiff's prayer for khas possession over the suit land, but dismissed the plaintiff's claim with regard to rent.

4. The defendant took an appeal to the Subordinate Judge and there was also a cross objection filed by the plaintiff with regard to the refused rent. The Subordinate Judge set aside the decree of the Learned Munsiff and remanded the suit to him for fresh disposal by deciding the following issues, namely—

- (1) Whether there was any relationship of landlord and tenant between the plaintiff and defendant No. 1?
- (2) If so, whether the tenancy was legally determined by service of any valid notice?
- (3) Whether the defendant is liable to pay any arrear rent and if so what amount?
- (4) To what relief, if any, the parties are entitled?

It appears, the Subordinate Judge had observed first that the Munsiff had pecuniary jurisdiction to try the suit as he agreed with the finding of the learned Munsiff that the suit was by the landlord against the tenant.

5. The defendant was not satisfied with this remand order and filed a revision petition before the High Court, being Civil Revision No. 70/61, and Mehrotra, C. J. on 30-5-62 set aside the order of remand and sent back the case to the Subordinate Judge to dispose of the appeal on merits. It is, therefore, apparent that after the order in this revision, the matter was in the same position as it was after the passing of the judgment and decree by the Munsiff. It is not possible to read the judgment of the learned Chief Justice as indicating that his Lordship at all gave any decision on the points that arose for consideration in the appeal before the Subordinate Judge. The matter is, therefore, as it was when the appeal was first preferred before the learned Subordinate Judge and after the remand order of the Subordinate Judge has been set aside, the whole matter will be at large before that court in pursuance of the High Court's order in revision.

6. The learned Subordinate Judge after remand answered issue No. 6 in favour of the plaintiff by holding after appreciation of the evidence led by the parties that the value of the land in suit was not more than Rs. 2,000/-, and he fixed the value at Rs. 1,500/- both for the purpose of court-fees and for jurisdiction. The learned Subordinate Judge, therefore, held that the suit was within the pecuniary jurisdiction of the Munsiff and he treated the suit as being one for declaration of the plaintiff's right and title to the same and for khas possession. The Subordinate Judge held that the suit was maintainable and that it was not bad for non-joinder of defendants. He also held that the same was not barred by limitation. He held that the plaintiff had right and title to the suit land by virtue of the registered sale deed and rejected the defendant's plea of benami transaction. He also held that the notice given by the plaintiff was a valid notice and was duly served. He thereupon decreed the suit in plaintiff's favour by declaring his right and title to and for khas possession of the property and ordered the plaintiff to pay additional court-fees, which had since been paid by the plaintiff. He also decreed the plaintiff's claim for Rs. 180/- as arrears of rent on the cross-objection filed by him.

7. Mr. Goswami, the learned counsel for the appellants submits that the learned Subordinate Judge erred in law in interfering with the finding of the learned Munsiff, which had been earlier affirmed by his predecessor-in-office in the previous appeal with regard to the question of pecuniary jurisdiction. He further submits that the Subordinate Judge, therefore, had only one alternative before him to dismiss the appeal on his own interpretation of the plaint as a suit for declaration of right, title and khas possession on the point of jurisdiction.

The above argument is based on a misconception of the judgment of the learned Chief Justice in the Civil Revision. As noted earlier, there is no decision of the High Court with regard to the question of jurisdiction, nor about the finding relating to the value of the property. The earlier judgment of the learned Subordinate Judge having been set aside by the High Court, the reasonings and findings of the Judge in that appeal did not survive after his judgment had been set aside and the whole matter was remanded back to the same court for disposal of the appeal. The learned Subordinate Judge was, therefore, competent to rehear the entire matter in the first appeal before him.

Reading the judgment of the Subordinate Judge, it is clear that both the parties addressed the court on issue No. 6 regarding pecuniary jurisdiction of the Munsiff. The plaintiff while supporting the decree, could do so even by showing that some of the findings of the court below were wrong provided in doing so, he is supporting the ultimate decree of the court. Since the learned Munsiff held that he had pecuniary jurisdiction to try the suit on the footing that the suit was between the landlord and tenant, the plaintiff could support his jurisdiction on the basis of an argument that even as a title suit, the Munsiff would have jurisdiction to try the suit, if the property can be shown to be of the value of not more than Rs. 2,000/-. which was the pecuniary limit of the Munsiff's jurisdiction.

It is exactly this position, which appears to have been taken by the plaintiff as appearing in the judgment of the learned Subordinate Judge. The learned Subordinate Judge after appreciating the entire oral and documentary evidence, came to the conclusion that the property could not be valued at more than Rupees 2,000/- and this finding of fact cannot be interfered with in second appeal. The objection of the learned counsel for the appellants, is, therefore, not tenable in law.

8. The learned Subordinate Judge also found against the defendants on the benami plea set up by him. The learned counsel submits that the evidence of the witnesses, particularly that of Sri Telukdar and Sri Sadananda on that point were not considered in proper light. In this context, he relies upon a decision of the Supreme Court in the case of Sree Meenakshi Mills Ltd. v. Commr. of Income-tax, Madras, reported in AIR 1957 SC 49. This decision has explained the meaning of the expression 'benami'. It is observed thus:

"The word 'benami' is used to denote two classes of transactions which differ from each other in their legal character and incidents. In one sense, it signifies a transaction which is real, as for example, when A sells properties to B but the sale deed mentions X as the purchaser. Here the sale itself is genuine, but the real purchaser is B, X being his benamidar. This is the class of transactions which is usually termed as benami. But the word 'benami', is also occasionally used, perhaps not quite accurately, to refer to a sham transaction, as for example, when A purports to sell his property to B without intending that his title should cease or pass to B. The fundamental difference between these two classes of transactions is that whereas in the former there is an operative transfer resulting in the vesting of title in the transferee, in the latter there is none such, the transferor continuing to retain the title notwithstanding the execution of the transfer deed. It is only the former class of cases that it would be necessary, when a dispute arises as to whether the person named in the deed is the real transferee or B, to enquire into the question as to who paid the consideration for the transfer, X or B.

But in the latter class of cases, when the question is whether the transfer is genuine or sham, the point for decision would be, not who paid the consideration but whether any consideration was paid."

The benami transaction which is referred to by the learned counsel is of the second type. According to him, there was no sale and the transaction was a sham transaction. In order to establish this, he had to establish that there was absolutely no consideration for the sale. There is however a concurrent finding of fact of the Courts below against the defendants on this point. The Courts below have found after appreciation of the oral and documentary evidence that there was passing of consideration for the sale in question. That being the position, the plea of benami set up by the defendants falls through. It follows therefore that the plaintiff has established his title to the land in suit.

9. The next question to be considered is whether after the sale, the defendants remained in the land with permission from the plaintiff and later as his tenants. Mr. Goswami submits that Exts. 3, 7 & 8 are inadmissible in evidence and they should not be relied upon for any purpose whatsoever. It is difficult to appreciate this submission in view of the provisions of Section 49 of the Indian Registration Act. Even if a document is compulsorily registrable and is not registered, the said document may be received as evidence of any collateral transaction not required to be effected by a registered instrument. These documents therefore show the nature or character of the possession of the defendant after title had passed to the plaintiff from him. The fact that the first Kabuliya was made after six months of the sale goes to support the story of the plaintiff that the defendant had initially promised to vacate within a few months. The execution of Ext. 3 supports this statement of the plaintiff. Although therefore these documents are not admissible as lease, they would however establish the nature of at least the permissible possession of the property by the defendant. That being the position, there is no question of limitation in this case.

10. Mr. Goswami strenuously relied upon a decision of the Supreme Court in the case of Mst. Kirpal Kuar v. Bachan Singh, reported in AIR 1958 SC 199 in support of his contention that Exts. 3, 7 & 8 should not be received in evidence to show the nature of possession in this case where the defendant had already been in possession of the land. He draws my attention to the following passage at para 14 of the report where their Lordships have distinguished the case of the Privy Council in Varada Pillai v. Jeevarathnammal, AIR 1919 P.C. 44.

"In Varada Pillai's case, Duraisami had got into possession only after the petition and claimed to retain possession only under the gift mentioned in it. The petition was therefore admissible in evidence to show the nature of her possession. In the present case Harnam Kaur had been in possession before the date of the document and to admit it in evidence to show the nature of her possession subsequent to it would be to treat it as operating to destroy the nature of the previous possession and to convert what had started as adverse possession into a permissive possession and, therefore, to give effect to the agreement contained in it which admittedly cannot be done for want of registration. To admit it in evidence for the purpose sought would really amount to getting round the statutory bar imposed by S. 49 of the Registration Act." In the instant case before this Court, the documents are not relied upon for the purpose of extinguishing any right or title in the defendant. The plaintiff's right and title is based upon the sale deed which has been found to be validly executed by the defendant for adequate consideration. On the date the sale deed was executed, the defendant himself, by this deed, extinguished his right and title to the land in favour of the plaintiff who is now filing this present suit for declaration of his right and title based on that deed and for khas possession. This case is therefore clearly distinguishable on the particular facts and circumstances of the case from those that obtained in the above Supreme Court decision.

In the decision of the Supreme Court the agreement was sought to be relied upon to effect the right of the widow who had agreed in pursuance of this agreement. In this case, the plaintiff is not at all relying upon Exts. 3, 4 & 7 in order to establish his title. These documents are only an answer to the claim of the defendant to a possible plea of limitation by adverse possession. These documents are therefore clearly admissible under Section 49 of the Indian Registration Act to show the nature of possession and they are not relied upon for the purpose of effecting any right title or interest in the land. The right and title of the defendant had already been extinguished by virtue of the sale deed executed by him in favour of the plaintiff. Since these documents are unregistered, they created a monthly tenancy which has been also validly determined in this case. The principle laid down in Varada Pillai's case (supra) is clearly applicable and the decision of the Supreme Court in Kirpal Kuar's case, AIR 1958 SC 199 (supra) does not come to the aid of the appellant. The plaintiff has therefore established his right and title to the property and is entitled to get a decree for khas possession of the property on declaration of his right and title as claimed. He is also entitled to the decree for Rs. 180/- as arrears of rent.

11. Disposal of this appeal had to be delayed as I discovered that the memorandum of appeal was insufficiently stamped when considering judgment. The appellant was therefore given time to deposit the deficit court-fee which has since been made.

12. In view of the foregoing discussion, there is, therefore, no substance in this appeal which is dismissed and in the entire circumstances of the case, there will be no order as to costs in this appeal as well as in the courts below. The defendants are allowed six months' time to vacate the land.

Appeal dismissed.

AIR 1970 ASSAM & NAGALAND 80
(V 57 C 17)

S. K. DUTTA, C. J. AND
R. C. SEN, J.

Zatia and another, Petitioners v. State of Assam and others, Respondents.

Civil Rules Nos. 7 and 8 of 1969, D/-
10-4-1969.

(A) Constitution of India, Arts. 311 (2)
Proviso (c) and 226 — Satisfaction of Governor — So long as Governor acted in good faith his satisfaction cannot be determined by Court by any objective test and inquired into by it. (Para 6)

(B) Constitution of India, Art. 311 (2)
Proviso (c) (after Constitution 15th Amendment) — Mere reference to proviso in Governor's order and inappropriate application of old clause and proviso cannot show that satisfaction of Governor was obtained as contemplated by statute.

By an order made by the Governor
after the Constitution 15th Amendment, the petitioner was dismissed from service.
The relevant part of the order, instead of stating that the Governor was satisfied that in the interest of the security of the State it was not expedient to hold inquiry, stated that the Governor was satisfied under Art. 311 (2) Proviso (c) that in the interest of the security of the State it was not expedient to give to the petitioner an opportunity to show cause against the action proposed to be taken in regard to him. The petitioner challenged the order of dismissal.

Held, mere reference to proviso (c) of clause (2) of Art. 311 and inappropriate application of the old clause and the proviso, could not impliedly show that the Governor had his satisfaction regarding dispensing with the inquiry, and as the provisions of the Constitution in their true letters were not complied with in the order itself, the Governor's satisfaction in that regard was clearly not obtained. In that view of the matter the impugned order was invalid. AIR 1966 SC 740. Applied. (Paras 7 and 8)

Cases Referred: Chronological Paras
(1966) AIR 1966 SC 740 (V 53) —
1966 Cri LJ 608, Ram Manohar
Lohia v. State of Bihar 7

D. M. Sen, J. P. Bhattacharjee and
N. N. Sankia, for Petitioners; G. K. Taluk-dar, Sr. Govt. Advocate, for Respondents.

SEN, J.: The writ petition under Article 226 of the Constitution out of which Civil Rule No. 7/69 has arisen, has been filed by one Zatia. He was a constable under the Government of Assam and was dismissed from service by an order of the Governor dated the 3rd January 1969 as per Annexure '1' of the petition. It is prayed in this petition that the impugned orders passed by the Governor of Assam and the order No. D. O. 1817 dated 30-11-68 passed by the Superintendent of Police, Special Branch, Assam, Shillong dismissing the petitioner with effect from 8-11-67 should be quashed. He has also prayed for reinstatement to the post, which he was holding.

2. Mr. D. M. Sen, learned Advocate General of Nagaland appearing for the petitioner has urged that the order of dismissal passed by the Superintendent of Police was void on the face of it as no immediate effect thereon was given. We are not impressed by this contention, as everything was done in terms of the order of the Governor, although no immediate effect thereto was given.

3. The most important point for consideration is whether the order of the Governor as per Annexure '1' was passed in terms of the appropriate provision of the Constitution. It runs as follows:

"The Governor of Assam is satisfied that D. S. B. Const. Zatia of the Mizo Hills D. E. F. is unfit to be retained in the Public Service and that he should be dismissed from service.

2. The Governor is further satisfied under Sub-clause (c) of the proviso to clause (2) of Article 311 of the Constitution that in the interest of the security of the State it is not expedient to give the said D. S. B. Const. Zatia an opportunity to show cause against the action proposed to be taken in regard to him as stated above.

3. Accordingly the Governor hereby dismisses the said D. S. B. Const. Zatia from service with immediate effect."

4. It appears from the contention raised by Mr. D. M. Sen that the order of the Governor only exempts the requirement of being given an opportunity to show cause against the action proposed to be taken in regard to the petitioner and does not exempt the holding of the inquiry, as is required under proviso (c) to clause (2) of Article 311 of the Constitution. Previous to the 15th Amendment of the Constitution clause (2) read as follows:

"No such person as aforesaid shall be dismissed or removed or reduced in rank until he has been given a reasonable opportunity of showing cause against the action proposed to be taken in regard to him."

Under the 15th Amendment it was explicitly provided for in Article 311 (2) that

"No such person as aforesaid shall be dismissed or reduced in rank except after an inquiry in which he has been informed of the charges against him and given a reasonable opportunity of being

These propositions emphasize the position that no Act or Rule made under Art. 309 can modify or impinge upon the pleasure of the President or the Governor under Article 310 as qualified by Article 311 and, therefore, in cases where Article 311 does not apply, the pleasure of the President or the Governor would have a supreme overriding effect upon the tenure of a Government servant. It was also sought to be argued before the Supreme Court that Acts and Rules made thereunder were mere administrative directions and could not be enforced, and accordingly a violation of the regulations made under the Police Act would not furnish the petitioner with a cause of action. This contention was negatived. Now, in Babu Ram's case, AIR 1961 SC 751 = (1961) 2 SCR 679, the impugned order was made in exercise of the powers conferred upon the Deputy Inspector-General of Police and the Inspector-General of Police by the Police Act and the regulations framed thereunder. They were the statutory authorities to impose penalty. It was not an order made by the Governor of Uttar Pradesh. It was also a case to which Article 311 applied. In Babu Ram's case, AIR 1961 SC 751 = (1961) 2 SCR 679, the Supreme Court did not equate the Governor's pleasure with the exercise of statutory power by specified officers, but it did not make it clear that an Act of Legislature or the Rules under Art. 309 cannot impinge upon the pleasure of the President or the Governor under Article 310 as qualified by the provisions of Article 311 and were subject to the overriding power of the President or the Governor under Article 310 as qualified by the provisions of Article 311. Thus, an Act or Rules made under Article 309 can only affect the pleasure of the President or the Governor to the extent that such Act or Rules reproduce the qualifications laid down on Article 310 by Article 311. Where, therefore, Article 311 has no application, Acts and Rules made under Article 309 would be subject to the unrestricted overriding power of the President or the Governor under Article 310.

16. Mr. Singhvi, learned counsel for the petitioner, has referred to certain subsequent judgments of the Supreme Court in support of his submission that Babu Ram's case, AIR 1961 SC 751 = (1961) 2 SCR 679, has made a departure from the law as till then laid down with respect to justiciability of rules made under Art. 309 even in case where Article 311 does not apply. These cases are Motiram Deka v. North-East Frontier Rly., AIR 1964 SC 600; State of Mysore v. M. H. Bellary, AIR 1965 SC 868; and B. S. Vadera v. Union of India, AIR 1969 SC 118. We do not find it possible to read these cases in the manner in which Mr. Singhvi has invited us to do. In AIR 1964 SC 600, the appellants were Railway servants to whom Article 311 applied. The question was as to the validity of certain rules in the Railway Establishment Code, 1951, under which the appellants' services were terminated. The Supreme Court held that the rule-making authority contemplated by Article 309 cannot be validly exercised so as to curtail or affect the rights guaranteed to public servants under Article 311 (2). In AIR 1965 SC 868, the concerned Government servant was in the civil service of the State and accordingly Article 311 applied to him. His grievance was that his reversion to another department was contrary to the Bombay Civil Services Rules. The Rules applicable were those in force prior to commencement of the Constitution and which, by virtue of the provisions of Article 313, continued to be in force. The relevant passage of the judgment relied upon is paragraph 4 in which it is stated:

"In view of the decision of this Court of which it is sufficient to refer to (1961) 2 SCR 679=(AIR 1961 SC 751), it was not disputed that if there was a breach of a statutory rule framed under Article 309 or which was continued under Art. 313, in relation to the conditions of service, the aggrieved Government servant could have recourse to the Court for redress."

In view of the fact that Article 311 governed the case, this concession was rightly made by counsel. In AIR 1969 SC 118, certain Railway servants challenged their reversion. Their reversion had been ordered under the Railway Establishment Code issued by the President in the exercise of his powers under the proviso to Art. 309. Under Rule 157, the President directed the Railway Board to make rules of general application to non-gazetted Railway servants under their control. In pursuance of this rule the Railway Board framed a scheme. The question was whether the rules made under the said scheme could have retrospective effect. Paragraph 24 of the judgment was relied upon by Mr. Singhvi. It says:

"It is also significant to note that the proviso to Article 309 clearly lays down that any rules so made shall have effect, subject to the provisions of any such Act. The clear and unambiguous expressions used in the Constitution must be given their full and unrestricted meaning unless hedged in by any limitations. The rules which have to be 'subject to the provisions of the Constitution' shall have effect 'subject to the provisions of any such Act'. That is, if the appropriate Legislature has passed an Act, under Article 309, the rules framed under the proviso will have effect subject to that Act; but in the absence of any Act of the appropriate Legislature on the matter, in our opinion the rules made by the President or by such person as he may direct are to have full effect, both prospectively and retrospectively. Apart from the limitations pointed out above, there is none other imposed by the proviso to Article 309 regarding the ambit of the operation of such rule. In other words, the rules, unless they can be impeached on grounds such as breach of Part III or any other constitutional provision, must be enforced if made by the appropriate authority."

The Court held that in the absence of any Act having been passed by the appropriate Legislature on the said matter, the rules framed by the Railway Board would have full effect and if so indicated retrospectively also and that there was such indication about retrospective effect and accordingly the contention was negatived. The question for determination in Vadera's case, AIR 1969 SC 118, was the scope of the challenge which could be made to the validity and constitutionality of a rule made under Article 309 by a Government servant to whom admittedly Article 311 applied. The Court was not called upon to consider and did not consider the effect or justiciability of rules made under Article 309 in cases where Article 311 does not apply.

17. Turning now to the decisions of this High Court in O.S. Appeal No. 52 of 1956 (Bom.), Chandra Bhan Verma v. Union of India, decided on 11-4-1958, Chagla, C. J., and Mody, J., held that the tenure of office of a member of the defence service was at the pleasure of the President and any grievance in that connection was not justiciable. Following this decision, in S. Framji v. Union of India, (1958) 60 Bom LR 1302 = (AIR 1960 Bom 14), a Division Bench of this Court, consisting of Chagla, C. J. and S. T. Desai, J., held that a civil servant could not assert and enforce in a Court of law any condition of service relating to his employment unless there was an infringement of Article 311 or unless he was suing for arrears of salary. In Tara Singh Ujagar Singh v. Union of India, AIR 1960 Bom 101, K. K. Desai, J., held that Army instructions were made for the purpose of guidance of military authorities in connection with civilians employed in defence service and were only directory rules and have no binding force in themselves and do not affect the provisions of Article 310 regarding the tenure of office of persons being at the pleasure of the President or the Governor, as the case may be. In K. P. Chankerlingam v. Union of India, (1960) 62 Bom LR 1 = (AIR 1960 Bom 431), the same learned Judge held that the direct result of Article 310 is that no right of action is vested in the dismissed Government servant for a declaration that he is entitled to hold his office in accordance with the service rules applicable to him or that he can only be dismissed as provided by the Rules and in accordance with the procedure prescribed thereby, the only exceptions to this principle being the cases where protection is provided in favour of the Govt. servant in the Constitution itself. It was further held that the competent authority for making orders of dismissal can be prescribed by legislation in the shape of Acts of Parliament or State and rules made thereunder and if such orders of termination are challenged as being wrongful as against the Union or the State, the Union or the State can base its defence on the provisions of Article 310.

18. It was, therefore, submitted by Mr. Singhi that these cases were decided before the decision of the Supreme Court in Babu Ram's case, AIR 1961 SC 751 = (1961) 2 SCR 679, and that after the judgment the decisions of this Court have taken a different trend, and according to these later decisions "an infringement of rules" case did not fall within Article 311. The first case referred to was First Appeal No. 109 of 1959 (Bom.) decided on December 16, 1964/February 5 and July 1965 by K. K. Desai, J. In that case the plaintiff, who was employed in the Ordnance Depot at Sewri, claimed that there had been no break in his service and that he was entitled to be paid the salary due to him and sued for arrears of salary. The trial Court held that the suit was not maintainable since Article 311 did not apply. Before the Appeal Court it was admitted on behalf of the Government that in view of the decision of the Supreme Court in AIR 1954 SC 245, the suit was maintainable. As pointed out earlier, in Abdul Majid's case, AIR 1954 SC 245, it has been held that the doctrine of English law that every servant of the Crown receives his salary at the bounty of the Crown is not a part of the doctrine of the tenure of a Crown servant being at the pleasure of King. This decision, therefore, has no relevance to the point before us. The next case relied upon is Misc. Petn. No. 256 of 1964 (Bom.), P. Narayana Menon v. M. S. Seheran, D/-19/20-10-1965, by Mody J. In that case a cook in the 2nd Company, Southern Command, Signal Regiment, was removed from service. He contended that his removal was wrongful because the provisions of Rule 15 of the Civilians in Defence Service (Classification, Control and Appeal) Rules, 1952, were not complied with. Only one case was cited before the learned Judge, namely, Kappor Singh Harnam Singh v. Union of India, AIR 1960 Madh Pra 119, in which a learned single Judge of the Madhya Pradesh High Court held that though Article 311 did not apply to a civilian employed in the Defence Service, he was governed by Army Instructions (India), 1949, and that a contravention of the said Instructions would furnish a cause of action to such an employee. None of the Supreme Court cases till then decided nor any of the decisions of this High Court above referred to were brought to the notice of the Court and accordingly the learned Judge proceeded to dispose of the petition as if AIR 1960 Madh Pra 119, was correctly decided. It may also be noted that in Misc. Petn. No. 256 of 1964 (Bom.), the order was not passed by the President but by the Commander, Bombay Sub-Area, while in the case before us the impugned order is that of the President himself.

19. The third Bombay case upon which reliance was placed by Mr. Singhvi is Second Appeal No. 569 of 1960 D/-25-11-1966 (Bom.) decided by M. V. Paranjpe, J. In that case, a Gate Darwan in the Ordnance Factory, Bhusaval, was dismissed from service. His contention was that he was dismissed without following the procedure prescribed by the 1952 Rules. The learned Judge followed the decision of Mody, J., in Misc. Petn. No. 256 of 1964 (Bom.) and also made a passing reference to the judgment in Babu Ram's case, AIR 1961 SC 751 = (1961) 2 SCR 679 and held that the 1952 Rules had the force of law. It appears that the plaintiff in that case was Class IV servant and here again the order was not passed by the President but by some other punishing authority designated by the 1952 Rules.

20. The last judgment of this High Court relied upon by Mr. Singhvi is a judgment of a Division Bench of this High Court consisting of Tarkunde and Wagle, JJ. in First Appeal No. 95 of 1960, D/-18-12-1967 (Bom.). This was a case in which the plaintiff, who was in military engineering service of the Government of India, challenged an order withholding his increment and in any event prayed for arrears of salary which, according to him, were due to him. The trial Court held that the plaintiff being a civil employee in the Defence Department, was not entitled to seek the protection of Article 311 and that since Article 311 did not apply, the plaintiff's contentions were not justiciable. The Division Bench pointed out that the findings of the trial Court in regard to the scope of Articles 310 and 311 had no relevance to the pleas taken in the plaint inasmuch as the impugned order was not an order which related to the tenure of the plaintiff's office nor did it involve his dismissal or removal from service or reduction in rank. On the facts the Division Bench came to the conclusion that there was no statutory rule framed under Article 309 upon which the plaintiff based his claim and that any directions upon which he relied would be only in the nature of administrative directions and the alleged breach was not justiciable and accordingly dismissed the appeal. The ground upon which the judgment proceeded is the same as in Abdul Majid's case, AIR 1954 SC 245. This case is, therefore, not relevant.

21. The judgment of this High Court which has a direct bearing on the point to be decided by us is Second Appeal No. 939 of 1956 (Bom.), Jugatrai Mahinchand Ajwani v. Union of India, decided by a Division Bench of this Court consisting of Patel and Palekar, JJ. on 15-10-1962. In that case, the plaintiff, who was working in the office of the Chief Engineer, Southern Command, was charge-sheeted and ultimately dismissed by the Chief Engineer, Southern Command. It was contended that unless the pleasure of the President could be evidenced by an order of dismissal made by the President himself, the order would be bad and Article 310 would afford no answer to a suit by the dismissed servant. After considering all the relevant authorities on the point, the Division Bench pointed out that very important functions can be delegated by the Governor to subordinates under Article 154, and there was therefore, no reason why functions of dismissal, removal from service and reduction in rank of Government servants could not also be delegated by the President or the Governor. Consistently with the scheme of the Constitution, which makes the President and the Governor the executive heads, the words "at the pleasure of the President or the Governor" had been used in Art. 310. The Division Bench further pointed out that in view of the fact that in the course of the judgment in Babu Ram's case, AIR 1961 SC 751 = (1961) 2 SCR 679, the Supreme Court emphasised the fact that it was dealing with a case covered by Article 311 and it considered all these articles together, the observations in that judgment ought to be confined to cases to which Article 311 was applicable. With respect to the contention that a breach of rules or Army Instructions which provide for an inquiry before dismissal was justiciable, the Division Bench held that these Army Instructions were not statutory rules framed under any statute and did not give a cause of action to the aggrieved Government servant if they were not complied with and that even if the rules were framed under the enabling power either under Section 241 of the Government of India Act, 1935, or under Article 309, decided cases were against that contention. On merits also the Division Bench held that there was no violation of rules of natural justice inasmuch as the plaintiff had in substance admitted the charges, and the holding of an inquiry would, therefore, have been an idle formality. The matter was carried in appeal to the Supreme Court (Civil Appeal No. 1185 of 1965, Jugatrai Mahinchand Ajwani v. Union of India, D/-6-2-1967.) With respect to the first contention, Shah, J., delivering the unanimous judgment of the Constitution Bench, composed of five learned Judges, stated as follows:—

"We need only observe that the argument which was advanced before the High Court that the President alone may in his exclusive personal discretion exercise the power under Article 310 has, in our judgment, no force. By Article 73 of the Constitution the executive power of the Union extends to all matters with respect to which the Parliament has power to make laws, and by Article 77 (3) the President is competent to make rules for the more convenient transaction of the business of the Government of India, and for the allocation among Ministers of the said business. If the power to determine employment under Article 310 is exercised in the name of the President in accordance with the rules framed under Art. 77 of the Constitution, no objection can be raised to the validity thereof."

With respect to the second contention the Supreme Court held that it was not necessary to consider whether a breach of Army Instructions conferred a cause of action to the person affected thereby as they agreed with the High Court that the appellant had at no stage denied the truth of the charges made against him and, therefore, an inquiry would have been fruitless.

22. In view of the above decisions of the Supreme Court and this High Court, we do not consider it necessary to refer to decisions of other High Courts except two. In Kailashchand Ratan Chand v. The General Manager, Ordnance Factory, Khamaria, Jabalpur, AIR 1966 Madh Pra 82, a Division Bench of that High Court held that if the procedure laid down in Rule 15 of the Civilians in Defence Service (Classification, Control and Appeal) Rules, 1952, which procedure was substantially similar to that which had to be followed for giving a delinquent civil servant a reasonable opportunity as required by Art. 311 (2), was not followed and the dismissal or removal or reduction in rank was in breach of that rule, it could not be said that the order of penalty was illegal nor could the order be quashed by the High Court under Article 226 of the Constitution if Article 311 (2) did not apply. The Madhya Pradesh High Court considered various cases and, after elaborately referring to the decision of the Supreme Court in Babu Ram's case, AIR 1961 SC 751 = (1961) 2 SCR 679, observed:

"It follows, therefore, that in cases not falling under Art. 311, that is to say, in cases of persons not falling under the category of persons mentioned in Article 311 (1), the pleasure of the President and the Governor is uncontrolled and when such a person is removed or dismissed from service without complying with the provisions of any rules framed under Article 309, he has no right of action against the Union or the State, as the case may be. To say that even in cases where Art. 311 does not apply, an order of dismissal, removal or reduction in rank can be assailed on the ground of having been made in breach of a rule made under Article 309 of the Constitution is really to hold that the pleasure of the President or the Governor under Art. 310 is controlled even in these cases by the rule. The legal enforcement of the rule would be inconsistent with Article 309, and in derogation of the provisions of Art. 310 and would amount to giving to the rule-making authority contemplated by Art. 309 the power to make rules so as to affect even the powers of the President or the Governor under Article 310 of the Constitution read with Article 311 thereof. As has been stated earlier, the rule-making power under Art. 309 cannot be validly exercised so as to affect the provisions of the Constitution including Articles 310 and 311.

The view that in cases not falling under Article 311 an order of removal or dismissal cannot be assailed on the ground of having been made in breach of any rule laying down the procedure which must be followed before a penalty is imposed is supported by the pronouncements of the Supreme Court in various cases."

In the Madhya Pradesh case, the petitioner was a machinist in the Ordnance Factory, Khamaria, Jabalpur, and he was removed from service by an order of the General Manager of that Factory and not of the President. The Madhya Pradesh High Court held that to enforce Rule 15 of the Civilians in Defence Service (Classification, Control and Appeal) Rules, 1952, would be inconsistent with Article 309 and in derogation of the provisions of Article 310 and would have the effect of affecting even the powers of the President or the Governor under Article 310. A Full Bench of the Punjab High Court, in Sham Lal v. Director, Military Farms, Army Headquarters, New Delhi, AIR 1968 Punj 312 (FB), has disagreed with the view which found favour with the Madhya Pradesh High Court. The Full Bench also disagreed with the interpretation placed by the Madhya Pradesh High Court on Babu Ram's case, AIR 1961 SC 751 = (1961) 2 SCR 679. It observed that the Madhya Pradesh High Court did not notice the earlier decision of a learned single Judge of the same High Court in AIR 1960 Madh Pra 119. The Full Bench held that the view that a public servant who could not claim the benefit of Article 311 could not agitate in the Law Courts that the procedure laid down by rules made under Article 309 had not been followed and could seek relief only from departmental authorities can no longer be said to be good law in view of the Supreme Court decision in Babu Ram's case, AIR 1961 SC 751 = (1961) 2 SCR 679. The Full Bench also referred to a decision of another Full Bench of the Punjab High Court in L.P.A. No. 8-D of 1962 (Punj.), P. H. Laxminarayan v. Engineer-in-Chief, Army Headquarters, D/-23-9-1965, and to the decision of the Supreme Court in AIR 1965 SC 688, in both of which the question of justiciability of rules under Art. 309 was conceded and observed that "It is not possible to see how the concessions which were made by eminent counsel were not well founded or were based on any misapprehension with regard to the law laid down in Babu Ram Upadhy's case, AIR 1961 SC 751 = (1961) 2 SCR 679". In the Punjab Full Bench case, the petitioner was an Assistant Supervisor in the Military Dairy Farm, Ferozepur Cantonment, and he was compulsorily retired from service as a measure of punishment. The impugned order was made not by the President but by the Director, Military Farms. With great respect to the learned Judges who decided that case, we are unable to interpret the judgment in Babu Ram's case, AIR 1961 SC 751 = (1961) 2 SCR 679, as widely as the Full Bench has done. A careful reading of the judgment in Babu Ram's case, AIR 1961 SC 751 = (1961) 2 SCR 679, would seem to support the view adopted by the Madhya Pradesh High Court. The rules with which the Supreme Court was concerned in that case were rules made under the Police Act which governed Government servants admittedly entitled to the protection of Article 311. It is in this context that the Supreme Court judgment and the observations made therein are to be read. The concession by counsel, however eminent, cannot carry the matter further where the question is of constitutional prerogative. Bellary's case, AIR 1965 SC 868, was admittedly one to which Article 311 applied. The fact that the Division Bench in Kailashchand's case, AIR 1966 Madh Pra 82, did not notice the earlier decision of a single learned Judge of the same High Court cannot also make any difference. The Division Bench has considered the matter fully for itself. It was not bound by the judgment of another Judge of the same High Court sitting singly. We may also point out that the view adopted by the Madhya Pradesh High Court in Kailashchand's case, AIR 1966 Madh Pra 82, is in conformity with the view taken by our Division Bench in Ajwani's case, Second Appeal No. 939 of 1956, D/-15-10-1962 (Bom.).

23. Now, in this petition as the impugned order is made by the President and not by any statutory authority, we are not concerned with the real question before the Madhya Pradesh Division Bench and the Punjab Full Bench, namely, whether when the punishing authority is other than the President or the Governor, any breach of the rules made under Article 309, providing for procedure to be followed at disciplinary inquiry would furnish an aggrieved Government servant to whom Article 311 does not apply with a cause of action. The order in the present case is made by the President himself, and any observations in any judgment to the effect that the statutory authority must act in conformity with the requirements of the relevant statute and if not, its action would be justiciable cannot help the petitioner. Mr. Singhvi, however, contested the position that the impugned order of reversion was passed by the President. This contention cannot be accepted. In the petition, particularly ground (B) in paragraph 24, the impugned order of reversion is referred to as being an order of the first respondent. As mentioned before, the original first respondent to the petition was "the President of India" and it is only by a subsequent amendment that the description of the first respondent has been amended to "the Union of India". No point has been raised in the petition that the order, though expressed to be made by the President, was in fact not an order of the President but of the actual signatory of the said order, namely, K. Venugopalan, Deputy Secretary to the Government of India. Further, under the Constitution, unless expressly provided otherwise, acts and orders of the President are not required to be signed by the President. Article 77 (2) provides that orders and other instruments made and executed in the name of the President shall be authenticated in such manner as will be specified in rules to be made by the President and the validity of an order or instrument thus authenticated shall not be called in question on the ground that it is not an order or instrument made or executed by the President. It is admitted that Joint Secretaries to the Government of India and Deputy Secretaries to the Government of India have been authorised to authenticate orders and instruments made and executed in the name of the President. It is, therefore, not open to the petitioner to contend that the impugned order was not made by the President. In fact, it is expressly stated in the body of the order that "the President hereby terminates the services of Shri J. N. Wanchoo with effect from the date he is relieved of his duties at the N.D.A. Thereafter, Shri J. N. Wanchoo will revert to the post of Section Master, R.I.M.C., Dehra Dun, on which post he holds a lien." In this connection, the passage quoted earlier from the judgment of Shah, J., in Civil Appeal No. 1185 of 1965, D/-6-2-1967 (SC), by a Constitution Bench of the Supreme Court consisting of five Judges, is apposite. Whenever the Constitution requires that an act should be that of the President personally, it expressly so provides; for example appointments of Judges of the Supreme Court under Article 124 (2) and of the Judges of the High Court under Article 217 (1) are required to be made by the President by warrant under his hand and seal. An order of dismissal, removal or reduction in rank of an employee in a defence service or a person holding any post connected with the defence is not required to be so made. In our opinion, therefore, the impugned order was made by the President of India and was an order made in the exercise of the pleasure of the President under Article 310 and the petitioner not being entitled to the protection conferred by Article 311, any breach of the 1965 Rules is not justiciable at the instance of the petitioner.

24. Mr. Singhvi, learned counsel for the petitioner, next submitted that in any event the impugned order could be challenged on the ground that the procedure adopted at the inquiry violated the principles of natural justice and that violation of the principles of natural justice would furnish a cause of action to a Government servant even if he could not claim the protection of Article 311. In support of this submission Mr. Singhvi relied upon Makhmalal Dey v. Union of India, (1967) 2 Lab.L.J. 762 (Cal). In that case the plaintiff, who was an estimator in the Military Engineering Service, was dismissed by an order made by the Chief Engineer, Eastern Command. It was not disputed that in the disciplinary inquiry held in his case the directions contained in the Army Instructions were disregarded. The matter came in second appeal before a Division Bench of the Calcutta High Court consisting of S. K. Datta and A. C. Gupta, JJ., who allowed the plaintiff's appeal. The Court held that the Army Instructions were mere directions as they were not framed under any statute and, therefore, did not furnish a cause of action to the plaintiff. Datta, J., rested his judgment on the short ground that the order in question was not an order made by the President, since it was an order made by the Chief Engineer, Eastern Command. He held that the Courts were debarred from examining the pleasure of the President but were not debarred for examining whether in fact the pleasure had been exercised by the President or by some one who was duly authorised by the Constitution to act on his behalf. He found that the President had expressed no pleasure either way but an executive officer of the Union of India had expressed his pleasure by dismissing the plaintiff. The pleasure of the executive officer did not enjoy the immunity which had been granted to the President and that the pleasure of the President could not be delegated. It is not necessary for our purpose to make any observations on this finding. Gupta, J., while he agreed with this finding, proceeded further to hold that the order of dismissal was passed without observing the rules of natural justice. He observed:

"Sri Roy at one stage of his arguments said that making it obligatory on the enquiry authority to observe the rules of natural justice means introducing through backdoor the protection of Art. 311 to which the appellant was admittedly not entitled. I do not think this argument is sound. It is not correct to think that apart from Art. 311 one has no right to complain even if the most elementary principles of justice are disregarded. . . . Article 311 is not in the Constitution just to keep a class of persons out of the scope of application of fundamental rules of justice recognized in that Article."

With great respect to the learned Judge, we find ourselves unable to agree with these observations. Where an Act of Legislature or the rules made under Article 309 are powerless to impinge upon or override the pleasure of the President or the Governor, unless in so far as such Act or Rules give effect to the provisions of Art. 311 in cases where that Article applies, it would be startling if rules of natural justice could restrict, modify or curtail the pleasure of the President or the Governor under Article 310 when not qualified by Article 311. Rules of natural justice would only be relevant in a case where Article 311 applies for the purpose of ascertaining whether a reasonable opportunity of showing cause was afforded to a Government servant. In our opinion, it is equally not open to the petitioner to assail the impugned order on the ground that the rules of natural justice were not observed.

25. Turning to the factual aspect of the case, even on the merits we find that the petitioner has not made out any case. It is the petitioner's grievance that several provisions of Rules 14 and 15 of the 1965 Rules were not complied with. We find that in the circumstances of this case it was not necessary to do so and such non-compliance has not caused any prejudice to the petitioner. The first irregularity in the conduct of the enquiry alleged by the petitioner is that the charge-sheet was not framed by the disciplinary authority, the disciplinary authority in the present case being the President. Under R. 14(3), a charge-sheet is not required to be drawn up by the disciplinary authority but it is to be drawn up or caused to be drawn up by the disciplinary authority. Though the charge-sheet in the present case is signed by the Commandant of the Academy, the said orders dated June 29, 1966 and July 1, 1966, show that the charge-sheet was caused to be drawn up and was accepted as being such by the President. It is not the petitioner's allegation that the charge-sheet was not caused to be drawn up by the President. The ground as urged was not even taken by the petitioner either in his written statement of defence to the charge-sheet or in the oral statement made by him before the Inquiry Officer. It was for the first time taken in the amendments made in the petition. We, therefore, find no substance in this contention.

26. The second irregularity which is alleged is that no evidence was recorded in support of the charges made against the petitioner, even though the petitioner had denied the same. In this connection Rule

14(14) of the 1965 Rules is relied upon. That rule is in the following terms:—

"On the date fixed for the inquiry, the oral and documentary evidence by which the articles of charge are proposed to be proved shall be produced by or on behalf of the disciplinary authority. The witnesses shall be examined by or on behalf of the Presenting Officer and may be cross-examined by or on behalf of the Government servant. The Presenting Officer shall be entitled to re-examine the witnesses on any points on which they have been cross-examined, but not on any new matter, without the leave of the inquiring authority. The inquiring authority may also put such questions to the witnesses as it thinks fit." Now, even a cursory reading of this rule will show that the evidence which is required to be produced by or on behalf of the disciplinary authority is the evidence, oral or documentary, by which the articles of charge are proposed to be proved. The charges made against the petitioner related to making the said three representations respectively dated October 14, 1963, April 2, 1964 and July 13, 1964, in spite of being asked to desist from making such representations by the said memorandum dated September 17, 1963, communicated to him by the letter dated September 28, 1963 and absenting himself from the said Guest Night on August 21, 1964, at which by the said Academy Order No. 1081 dated August 28, 1964 all officers (service and civilians) and cadets were asked to attend and when reasons for his absence were asked for and sending the said letter dated September 21, 1964, couched in impertinent and insolent language. Thus, the only questions of fact which arose at the said inquiry were (1) whether the said memorandum dated September 17, 1963, was communicated to the petitioner, (2) whether the said representations were made by the petitioner, (3) whether the said Academy Order was in fact issued, (4) whether the petitioner was absent from the said Guest Night held on August 21, 1964 and (5) whether he wrote the said letter dated 21-9-1964. Now, both in his written statement of defence and in the oral statement made by him before the inquiry officer, all these facts are admitted. The only question which, therefore, remained was whether the sending of the said representations and the tone and the language of the said representations and the said letter and not attending the said Guest Night amounted to acts of insubordination or misconduct. The decision of this question turned upon the construction of the relevant rules and instructions and of the said representations and reply. The petitioner himself admitted that in sending the said representations he had not followed the normal channel of representation and had used the language which was not proper. He, however, sought to extenuate his conduct on the ground that all through the years he harboured an overpowering sense of grievance and that his faults were natural to a person who felt strongly for so many years that justice had been denied to him. He also sought to extenuate the language used in the said letter of September 21, 1964, on the ground that at that time he was going through a period of intense mental and emotional strain. The effect of these admitted facts and whether to accept his plea in extenuation or not were not matters of evidence. These were matters to be considered and decided by the Inquiry Officer and the disciplinary authority. This Court cannot substitute its judgment for theirs. We may, however, observe that the Academy is an establishment for the training of Defence personnel, and in such establishment the last person from whom indiscipline and insubordination can be tolerated is a member of the teaching staff. While considering this ground, it is also pertinent to note that Rule 14(10) provides that "the inquiring authority shall return a finding of guilt in respect of those articles of charge to which the Government servant pleads guilty". It is true that in express words the petitioner did not plead guilty, but the effect of his written statement of defence and his oral statement in substance amounted to an admission of guilt. It is also pertinent to note that by the said charge-sheet dated December 10, 1964, in addition to being required to submit a written statement, the petitioner was asked (1) to state whether he desired to be heard in person, (2) to state whether he desired an oral inquiry to be held, (3) to furnish the names of witnesses whom he wished to call in support of his defence, and (4) to furnish a list of documents upon which he wished to rely in support of his defence. He was also offered inspection of such documents of which he desired inspection. The petitioner did not desire any of these things. He also did not desire to take inspection. He did not even desire that an inquiry should be held. In his written statement, after admitting the charges made against him, he attempted to put forward some excuse for his conduct and on the strength of such excuse requested that the proceedings against him should be dropped. The excuse put forward by him was also not such as could either exculpate him or extenuate his guilt. In these circumstances, leading evidence to prove the charges became wholly unnecessary. Mr. Singavi, however, relying upon the decision of the Supreme Court in Calcutta Dock Labour Board v. Jaffer Imam, AIR 1968 SC 282, submitted that unless the relevant statutory provisions are complied with it cannot be said that there was a proper inquiry. That decision does not lay down the proposition in such wide terms. What was held in that case that the circumstances relied upon by the inquiry authority for not holding a full inquiry did not justify not complying with the statutory provisions. In that case certain Dock workers, attached to the Port of Calcutta and governed by the Calcutta Dock Workers (Regulation of Employment) Scheme 1951 made by the Central Government under the Dock Workers (Regulation of Employment) Act, 1948, were detained under the Preventive Detention Act, 1950. On their release from detention the Calcutta Dock Labour Board commenced disciplinary proceedings against them. No specific allegations, however, were made against them nor was any evidence led in the inquiry. Only the detention orders were produced, but no attempt made to prove the allegations made therein. Thereafter orders terminating their services were passed. It was contended, that the Board was justified in acting upon suspicion, the basis for the suspicion being the detention of the workers. The Supreme Court held that the services of the workers could not be terminated without a proper inquiry and the circumstances that they happened to be detained could afford no justification for not complying with the relevant statutory provisions and not following the principles of natural justice. This decision has no application to the facts before us. In the present case, the order passed against the Petitioner was not passed on mere suspicion as in the Calcutta Dock Labour Board's case, AIR 1968 SC 282, but on the Petitioner's own admission of guilt. The two decisions of the Supreme Court which are relevant are Jai Ram v. Union of India, AIR 1954 SC 584 and Ajwani's case, Second Appeal No. 939 of 1958, D/-15-10-1962 (Bom), referred to earlier by us in another connection. In Jai Ram v. Union of India, AIR 1954 SC 584, a Civil servant had confessed his inability to work and had asked to be retired and was consequently allowed to retire. He changed his mind subsequently and sought reinstatement alleging that an inquiry ought to have been held against him before passing the order of compulsory retirement against him. The Supreme Court observed that in view of his confessed inability to work "it would be a useless formality to ask him to show cause as to why his services should not be terminated." In Second Appeal No. 939 of 1958, D/- 15-10-1962 (Bom), the plaintiff who was in the Military, Engineer Service was examined as a witness in an inquiry against another officer. In the course of his evidence he admitted that he did commit certain gross irregularities. He was served with a charge-sheet. At the inquiry he was supplied with copies of muster-roll of labourers which he was charged with filling up falsely and of the incriminatory statements made by him as also by one Mukund Lall in the previous inquiry. These two statements were the only matters relied upon in the charge-sheet. Though in his written statement the plaintiff did not expressly admit the charges, he did not categorically state that the charges were untrue nor did he state that the statement made either by him or by the said Mukund Lall in the earlier inquiry was untrue. He also did not demand any inquiry as such. A Division Bench of this High Court consisting of Patel and Palekar, JJ. held that it would "seem impossible to contend that with his own sworn statement and that of Mukund Lall in the earlier inquiry, there could be much of inquiry. Since the statement was at no stage retracted by the plaintiff, an inquiry would have been fruitless and dismissal was justified." This conclusion was upheld by the Supreme Court (Civil Appeal No. 1185 of 1965, D/-6-2-1967 (SC)). The Supreme Court held that "the appellant never denied the truth of the statements attributed to him, and those statements established the case of the State against him. It would be difficult to hold that because the Enquiry Officer did not act strictly according to the Rules a fresh inquiry should be directed to enforce compliance with the Rules." In the present case also, since the Petitioner had admitted the charges, it would have been a mere idle formality to lead any evidence.

27. The third irregularity which is alleged is the failure to furnish to the Petitioner with a copy of the report of the Inquiry Officer and to serve upon him a notice to show cause against the penalty proposed. The purpose for which a copy of the Inquiry Officer's report is required to be furnished is set out by the Supreme Court in State of Maharashtra v. Bhalsankar Avalam Joshi, Civil Appeal No. 647 of 1966, D/-10-3-1969 = (reported in AIR 1969 SC 1302), upon which Mr. Singhal has relied in support of his submission that failure to supply a copy of the Inquiry Officer's report would vitiate the inquiry. In the Supreme Court case the respondent, who held the permanent post of Senior Jailor, Surenderanagar, and who was at the material time working as an accountant at the Rajkot Central Jail, was charge-sheeted and after the inquiry was concluded a notice was issued to him by the Inspector-General of Prisons to show cause why he should not be dismissed. No copy of the Inquiry Officer's report was furnished to him. He made a representation and thereafter by an order made by the Inspector-General of Police he was dismissed from service. In appeal the High Court held that this amounted to a denial of reasonable opportunity contemplated by Article 311 (2). The Supreme Court confirmed the decision of the High Court pointing out that by non-supply of a copy of the report the respondent was prejudiced in making a proper representation to the Inspector-General of Police who had to decide the guilt of the respondent and the punishment to be imposed upon him. The representation referred to by the Supreme Court was the representation to the second show cause notice required to be given by Article 311 (2), that is the notice to show cause against the proposed infliction of the penalty of dismissal, removal or reduction in rank. Under Rule 15 (4) (1) of the 1965 Rules, a copy of the report of the Inquiry Officer is required to be furnished to the Government Officer only when the disciplinary authority proposes to impose a major penalty. In the case before us, however, the penalty as also the mode of procedure for imposing it where the case falls under Clause 5 of the contract entered into between the Petitioner and the President, that is, in cases of misconduct, insubordination, etc., is contained in the said Clause 5. Clause 5, therefore, is a special provision in that behalf in the contract and this provision, therefore, under Rule 3 (1) (i) excludes the provisions in that behalf contained in the 1965 Rules. Under Clause 5 if the Petitioner is guilty of any insubordination, misconduct, etc., the Government has the right immediately and without any previous notice to terminate his service. By reason of the said order dated January 15, 1964 the word "termination" has to be read as "reversion to the parent department." Thus, the only penalty which could be inflicted upon the Petitioner was the penalty of reversion to his parent department and that too immediately and without any previous notice to him. Even assuming the said order dated January 15, 1964 did not have the effect of varying the contract, the provisions of the said contract would really amount to the same thing. Under the contract his services were engaged for a particular period upon certain special terms. It is that service only which could be terminated under the said contract. On the termination of his service under the said contract, the Petitioner would automatically revert to his parent department to the post of Section Master on which he held a lien. The Petitioner having in substance admitted all the charges made against him, there was also nothing for him to represent with respect to the question of his guilt. This report was also not necessary to enable him to file any appeal. The impugned order was passed by the President and there was no one, therefore, to whom the Petitioner could have appealed. Rule 22 of the 1965 Rules expressly provides that no appeal shall lie against any order passed by the President. Mr. Singhvi also relied upon a decision of the Privy Council in B. Surinder Singh Kenda v. Govt. of the Federation of Malaya, 1962 AC 322, on appeal from the Court of Appeal of the Supreme Court of the Federation of Malaya. Under Art. 135 (2) of the Constitution of the Federation of Malaya a reasonable opportunity of being heard is required to be given to a Government servant in answer to a charge against him. In that case two men were charged in the Supreme Court at Penang for uttering forged lottery tickets. The prosecution failed because it called a number of witnesses, including Police Officer, whose evidence was palpably false. The Commissioner of Police thereupon ordered an inquiry to be held. After considering the report of the inquiry, the Commissioner of Police decided that disciplinary proceedings should be taken against the appellant. The Commissioner appointed an adjudicating officer to inquire into the charges. A copy of the report of inquiry held before the disciplinary proceedings commenced was furnished to the adjudicating Officer, but not the appellant. This report contained matters highly prejudicial to the appellant. The Privy Council held that this amounted to the Court hearing evidence or receiving representation from one side behind the back of the other and amounted to a denial of natural justice. Now, the facts of that case were wholly different from the facts before us. There, the report in question was the report of a preliminary inquiry held to enable the Commissioner of Police to decide whether disciplinary proceedings should be initiated. It was not a report containing the findings of the adjudicating officer. This authority also, therefore, cannot help the Petitioner.

28. Thus, all the contentions raised by the Petitioner even on the merits must also fail.

29. In the result, we dismiss the petition and discharge the rule with costs.

Petition dismissed.

AIR 1970 BOMBAY 201 (V 57 C 34)

PATEL AND CHITALE, JJ.

C. P. Khanna, Petitioner v. V. K. Kalghatgi and others, Opponents.

Special Civil Appln. No. 1987 of 1969, D/- 10-9-1969.

(A) Co-operative Societies — Maharashtra Co-operative Societies Act (24 of 1961), Ss. 91 and 96 — Rules framed under Sections — Constitution of India, Articles 14, 19 (1) (f) — Provisions of Sections 91 and 96 and Rules under not violative of Articles 14 and 19.

Sections 91 and 96 of the Act and the rules framed thereunder prescribing special procedure and making provisions for compulsory arbitration in the disputes between a society and a third person do not in any manner offend Articles 14 and 19 (1) (f) of the Constitution. AIR 1962 SC 386, Foll. (Para 11)

What Article 14 prohibits is class legislation. It does not mean that all are entitled to equal treatment. It only means that two persons similarly situated must be treated alike. Reasonable classification for purposes of legislation and treatment is permissible. However, the conditions for the validity of such classification are that there must be intelligible differentia which distinguishes the group of persons or things from those that are left out, and, there must be rational nexus between the classification and the object to be achieved.

LM/LM/G76/69/MVJ/B

(Para 4)

Co-operative Societies could be treated as a class by themselves. Though the ideal is unselfishness, this cannot be achieved in practice. In order that such co-operative ventures must succeed, it is also necessary that such ventures be given reasonable protection in every possible manner. Thus provisions are made to see that its funds are not frittered away by providing careful supervision of its transactions and providing a procedure for early settlement of disputes. In order to ensure early settlement of disputes provisions are made for compulsory arbitration in matters connected with the business of the societies between the society and its members or its officers etc., or society and a stranger in very limited circumstances. The procedure is not so inadequate as to hold that it is unreasonable. There is a nexus between the object to be achieved in the making of classification and the provisions made.

(Paras 8, 10)

It could also not be said that because the Court is entitled to adjudicate disputes and determine the rights to property between two litigating parties Article 19 (1) (f) of the Constitution would be offended.

(Para 12)

(B) Constitution of India, Article 227 — Maharashtra Co-operative Societies Act (24 of 1961), Section 91 — Petition under Article 227 before any order made under S. 91 — Question whether reference made by Society is dispute within Act — Matter held would be properly decided under Act and not under Article 227. (Para 13)

Cases Referred: Chronological Paras

(1962) AIR 1962 SC 386 (V 49) =

(1962) 3 SCR 936, Mannalal Jain

v. State of Assam 11

B. R. Naik, for Petitioner.

PATEL, J.: This is an application which the petitioner has filed even before the Officer on Special Duty has made any order under Section 91 of the Maharashtra Co-operative Societies Act (hereinafter referred to as the Act) and referred the dispute to arbitration as required by it for arresting the proceedings. In short the petitioner wants to smother any proceedings at all before the Officer on Special Duty and wants this Court to go into the question of merits without permitting the said Officer to apply his mind to the proceedings.

2. Facts as alleged by the petitioner are as follows:

Respondent No. 5 is a member of the Society Respondent No. 4 and as such holds two flats Nos. 10 and 11 in the building of the Society. The petitioner says that respondent No. 5 agreed to transfer to him his interest in the flats, his share holdings etc., for Rs. 70,000 which he paid to him. The agreement is of March 1, 1967. They jointly gave intimation to respondent No. 4 and requested that the petitioner be admitted as member. The request was turned down. For building the flats loan was obtained from respondent No. 8 and instalments had to be paid. The petitioner paid the instalments for some time but as he was not admitted to its membership he did not thereafter pay the instalments. Respondent No. 4 therefore filed a dispute before respondent No. 1 of which notice was given by respondent No. 1 to the petitioner. In this case respondent No. 4 claims dues payable in respect of flats Nos. 10 and 11 and is filed against respondent No. 5 and the petitioner. The petitioner wants the proceedings to be quashed on the ground that this is not a dispute which can be decided under the provisions of the Act. This question cannot be decided by us. The Registrar or the officer must do it.

3. Mr. Naik, for the petitioner, however says that this is not the question that he proposes to raise. He says that he wants to challenge the vires of Sections 91 to 96 and 163 of the Act. His contention as now formulated is that the provisions for compulsory arbitration in the disputes between a Society and a third person even under limited circumstances offends Articles 14 and 19(1) (f) of the Constitution of India. In amplying this ground he contends that there is no justification for requiring compulsory arbitration in the case of Societies. The procedure provided makes it from procedural aspect a very unreasonable provision. He says that the Registrar is given an absolute and unqualified discretion under Section 91 to decide whether or not a matter referred to him is a dispute, that the dispute may be referred to nominees who may not be trained personnel and may not know law and that no particular procedure is prescribed under the Act and the rules. On the other hand, he says that in the case of other litigants who are not connected with the Society, the procedure of civil Courts with all safeguards gives a proper opportunity to the parties to litigate their cases.

4. What Article 14 prohibits is class legislation. It does not mean that all are entitled to equal treatment. It only means that two persons similarly situated must be treated alike. Reasonable classification for purposes of legislation and treatment is permissible. However, the conditions for the validity of such classification are that there must be intelligible differentia which distinguishes the group of persons or things from those that are left out, and, there must be rational nexus between the classification and the object to be achieved.

5. That in a welfare State co-operative institutions play an important part cannot be denied. Different authors define 'Co-operation' differently. Facy's definition based on socio-economic aspect is: Co-operative Society is an association for the purpose of joint trading originating among the weak and conducted always in unselfish spirit on such terms that all who are prepared to assume the duties of membership may share in its rewards in proportion to the degree in which they make use of their association (Facy, Co-operation at Home and Abroad). In Co-operation in Finland, the writer says, "A Co-operative Society is a union of persons established according to the principles of equality, number of whose members is unlimited and the purpose of which is, by the joint performance of economic acts, to improve the financial position of its members or the conditions under which they carry on their profession, by means of either self-help or self-help with Government support, provided that all profits made by the joint action shall be distributed in proportion to which each member has taken part in the business and not in proportion to the capital invested." This describes the fundamentals of a co-operative society and no wonder that in every country in the world great emphasis is laid on co-operative ventures. The provisions of the Act are oriented to achieve these objectives.

6. Under the circumstances, there is no reason, therefore, why co-operative societies should not be treated as a class by themselves. Though the ideal is unselfishness, this cannot be achieved in practice. In order that such co-operative ventures must succeed, it is also necessary that such ventures be given reasonable protection in every possible manner. Thus provisions are made to see that its funds are not frittered away by providing careful supervision of its transactions and providing a procedure for early settlements of disputes. In order to ensure early settlement of disputes provisions are made for compulsory arbitration in matters connected with the business of the societies between the society and its members or its officers etc., or society and a stranger in very limited circumstances. As we have said earlier the purpose to be achieved is to protect the co-operative movement and to see that its resources are not frittered away by wasteful litigation.

7. Under Section 91 disputes have to be referred to arbitration only in limited number of cases viz., those between a Society and (1) its office bearers, past or present, its agent or servant or nominee or their successors, (2) a member, past member or a person claiming through them and (3) a person who has been granted loan by the Society or with whom the Society has or had transactions under Section 45 and any person claiming through such a person.

Section 45 of the Act covers (1) such persons and such transactions in respect of which restrictions have been placed by the rules enacted under the Act, (2) surety of a member, past member or a person other than a member who has been granted a loan by the society, and (3) other societies or the liquidator appointed under the Act. Inclusion of the first and second set of persons and their transactions cannot possibly be objected to for the obvious reasons that if these were not protected, interested office bearers of a Society might successfully evade the provisions of the Act. So far as the third set is concerned, having regard to the scheme of the Act their inclusion also cannot be objected to.

8. We now come to the procedure to be adopted in these matters. The first thing to be considered is the question of determination by the Registrar whether there is a dispute. Section 91 (1) requires any of the parties to refer its dispute with the other to the arbitrator, and by Section 91 (3) the decision of the Registrar on the question whether a dispute exists is made final. Section 93 provides that if the Registrar is satisfied that any matter referred to him is a dispute, he has to decide the matter either himself or refer it to a nominee or a board of nominees. By subsection (3) he is given power, when complicated questions of law or facts arise, to require a party to approach a civil Court and stay the action for some time. If the party fails to approach the civil Court, he has to order hearing to proceed. The relevant Rule in connection with this subject is Rule 75. It enables the Registrar, before deciding the question, to call for any copies of documents and other statements or record. This shows that he has to apply his mind to the matter and not mechanically make an order. He has to decide whether prima facie there is any substance in the matter, whether there is any legal bar and whether that is a matter triable under the provisions of the Act. If he is satisfied on these, then he has to either decide the dispute or refer it to an arbitrator. There is a right of appeal and revision to higher officers or the Government against the order made by the subordinate officers under Section 154. Having regard to the nature of the matter to be considered this is a sufficient safeguard, since the real dispute is to be gone into fully by himself or nominee after a reference is made. It is wrong, therefore, to say that the Registrar is given uncanalised power and discretion to refer or not, the dispute to a nominee or entertain it himself. Same thing could be said of a Court when it registers or refuses to register the plaint. In actual working we have rarely seen any injustice being done, and when that happens the Government interferes and in the last resort the High Court does.

9. Now as to the procedure for actual trial of disputes. Section 92 provides periods of limitation in special cases and as to the rest provides that the limitation Act will be applicable. Under Section 94 the Registrar or his nominee is required to follow the prescribed procedure and is given power of a Civil Court for summoning and enforcing attendance of witnesses, requiring parties and witnesses to give evidence on oath and compel them to produce documents. Sub-sec. (3) gives to the Registrar or his nominee powers similar to those in Order I, Rule 10 of the Code of Civil Procedure, power to add or substitute parties and power to strike off the name of a party, and clause (d) thereof is similar to Order 2, Rule 2 of the Code. Rule 77 (1) requires the nominee to decide the dispute within two months and gives the Registrar power to withdraw the same from that nominee and refer it to another in case of delays. Rule 77 (2) requires the nominee to record the evidence of the parties and the witnesses and decide the dispute upon consideration of the oral evidence and all documents that may be produced before him. Rule 77 (3) enables him to hear a dispute ex parte if a party fails to appear upon summoning. If there are more than one nominee by Rule 77 (4) the decision of the majority is to prevail. Rule 78 requires summonses to be issued to the parties requiring their and witnesses' attendance and production of books not less than fifteen days before hearing. Rule 78 (2) provides for the mode of service of summons. Rule 78 (3) requires a return to be made by the person serving the summons stating the particulars of service. By Rule 78 (4) power is given to the officer issuing the summons, to examine the person serving the summons, and, make inquiry of proper service. Finally, Section 97 provides an appeal against the decisions in such disputes to the Tribunal. The Tribunal is constituted under Sec. 149 of the Act which consists of experienced members of the judiciary or Advocates of standing, and under the section the Tribunal has all the powers of an appellate Court under Section 97 and Order 41 in the First Schedule of the Civil Procedure Code.

10. The above examination reveals that the inquiry of the dispute is to be judicial as evidence has to be recorded and there is the safeguard of a proper appeal and of the supervision of the High Court under Article 227 of the Constitution. The procedure is stricter than that of civil Courts and it has the salutary effect of cutting down unnecessary technicalities of which plenty of advantage is taken by all concerned in all litigations in civil Courts. Experience has been that so far, Advocates of some standing were appointed as nominees. Now it seems special officers who are full-time employees are also appointed for this purpose. The disputes are heard very quickly though even there sometimes some seasoned litigants succeed in delaying the proceedings. The safeguard of appeal really ensures just decisions of the disputes. Speaking for ourselves, if such procedure is adopted in civil Courts, probably, the litigants will be more happy with quicker and satisfactory results and the present delays and wasteful expenditure could be avoided. We have been dealing with matters decided under the Act and we are satisfied that the standards of decisions are as good as, if not better, than those in civil Courts. We are not satisfied that the procedure is so inadequate as to hold that it is unreasonable. There is a nexus between the object to be achieved in the making of classification and the provisions made.

11. That an exception in favour of co-operative societies can be made has been decided by the Supreme Court in Mannalal Jain v. State of Assam, AIR 1962 SC 886. In our view, therefore, Sections 91 to 96 of the Act and the rules framed thereunder prescribing special procedure do not in any manner offend Article 14 of the Constitution.

12. A faint suggestion was made that these provisions affect the rights of the person to property and were hit by Article 19 (1) (f). This is too specious an argument to need any effective answer. The same thing happens when a decree is passed by the Court in a suit, inasmuch as the decree may direct the defendant to hand over the property to the plaintiff and pay the plaintiff certain amount. It could not be suggested that because the Court is entitled to adjudicate disputes and determine the rights to property between two litigating parties Article 19 (1) (f) of the Constitution would be offended.

13. We are not prepared to hear Dr. Naik on the question as to whether or not the reference made by the Society amounts to a dispute within the Act. It lies properly within the authority of the Registrar or Assistant Registrar, as the case may be, to decide this question. There is no reason why this Court should be flooded by this kind of applications without even offering an opportunity to the officers concerned to apply their minds to the facts and circumstances of the case.

14. We, therefore, reject the application.

Application dismissed.

AIR 1970 BOMBAY 205 (V 57 C 35)

VAIDYA J.

Kacharu Baban Kothawale and others, Appellants v. State of Maharashtra and another, Respondents.

A. F. A. D. No. 257 of 1966 D/- 11-2-1969, from decision of Dist. J. Ahmednagar, in Appeal No. 59 of 1965.

(A) Bombay Administration of Estates Regulation (8 of 1827), S. 10 — Agricultural land — Occupant not known to be living — Intestate property — District Judge merely acting on report of revenue authorities appointing administrator and directing him to take possession of lands in question — Proclamation neither issued as required by S. 10 nor published in gazette — Non-compliance of provisions of S. 10 — Order of District Judge held null and void. (Paras 8, 9, 16)

(B) Bombay Administration of Estates Regulation (8 of 1827), S. 10 — Bombay Land Revenue Code (5 of 1879), S. 72 — Agricultural lands — Tenants in possession — Person shown as occupant in record of rights, a Hindu, dying or presumed to be dead intestate — Government's right to take possession of property under S. 29, Hindu Succession Act — Effect of S. 72 Bombay Land Revenue Code — Section 72 being a provision contained in special legislation overrides general provisions of S. 10 of Regulation (8 of 1827) — Orders of District Judge appointing administrator and directing him to take possession of lands, based merely on report of revenue authorities, held null and void — (Hindu Succession Act (1956) S. 29).

Certain persons shown as tenants of agricultural land in record of rights were in possession of the lands. The person shown as occupant of the land was a Hindu. The District Judge merely acting on the report of revenue authorities that the occupant was not known to be living and the lands were intestate properties, appointed an administrator and directed him to take possession of the lands in question.

Held the orders of the District Judge were null and void. (Para 16)

The right of the Government under Section 29 of the Hindu Succession Act or under the general law prior to the Hindu Succession Act is not higher than that of an heir who can inherit the estate, subject to the liabilities and obligations of the heirs. The persons being in possession of the lands continuously as tenants, the heir would take subject to the provisions of the Bombay Tenancy and Agricultural Lands Act, 1948. (Para 11)

Further, the person presumed to be dead had merely occupancy rights in the said land, the occupancy would be governed by S. 72 of the Bombay Land Revenue Code, 1879. The effect of the section is that the occupancy rights in agricultural lands of a Hindu, Mahomedan or Budhist who dies intestate and without known heirs instead of being managed and eventually sold by the administrator appointed by the District Court is sold by the Collector and the net proceeds are made over by the latter to the administrator for credit to the deceased's estate. In short, the intention is to prevent the occupancy of persons dying intestate coming under the management of the District Court's administrator. This section being a provision contained in a special legislation overrides the general provisions of law contained in Section 10 of the Bombay Regulation VIII of 1827. All that the Collector can sell under Section 72, however, is the right, title and interest of the deceased occupant and the subordinate rights are not affected by such a sale. (Paras 12, 13)

(Observations) — When an occupant dies without heirs, his occupancy does not lapse or become forfeited or liable to resumption by Government but the case is provided for in the Land Revenue Code by provisions of Section 34 of the Maharashtra Land Revenue Code (1966) which, of course, will not be applicable to the facts of the instant case but which provides that the Collector shall take possession of the occupancy rights and may lease it for a period of one year at a time. The section in the new Act gives a power to the Collector to keep any claimant in possession of the occupancy. (Para 14)

M. V. Sali, for Appellants, C. R. Dalvi Asst. Govt. Advocate, for Respondents.

JUDGMENT: This is plaintiff's second appeal involving interesting points of law. The properties in dispute are agricultural lands survey Nos. 89 and 90 situated in village Sangavi-Surya in Taluka Parner. Survey No. 89 measures 3 acres 29 gunthas and is assessed at Rs. 5-2-0. It is a Bagayat land called as 'Malai.' Survey No. 90 measures 12 acres 23 gunthas and is assessed at Rs. 3-12-0. It is a Jirayat land known as 'Wadi'. The plaintiffs are in possession of the suit lands for a number of years. According to them, they and their ancestor have been in possession of the lands for over 60 or 70 years. One Waman Raghunath Kulkarni was shown in the record of rights extracts as the occupant of the said lands. The plaintiffs are shown in the record of rights as tenants of the said lands.

2. The Talathi of the village reported to the Taluka Magistrate of Parner that the occupant Waman Raghunath was not known to be living and the lands were intestate property. The report of the Talathis was received by the Taluka Magistrate on July 26, 1960 and the Taluka Magistrate in his turn made a report to the District Judge, Ahmednagar on October 15, 1962 purporting to act under S. 10 of Bombay Regulation VIII of 1827 and Section 58 of Bombay Act IV of 1890. The report was sent by him through the Sub Divisional Magistrate, Parner Division, Ahmednagar. On October 25, 1962, the Assistant Collector, Parner Division, Ahmednagar submitted a report to the Collector of Ahmednagar with the recommendation that the papers may be forwarded to the District Judge, Ahmednagar for further orders and the Collector, Ahmednagar in his turn on November 3, 1962 forwarded it to the District Judge, Ahmednagar for necessary action. The learned District Judge before whom the report was registered as Parner Intestate Case No. 2 of 1962 passed the following order on November 16, 1962:

"Read report of the Taluka Magistrate, Parner sent under No. WS VI 1078/62 dated 15-10-1962 regarding intestate property belonging to the deceased Shri Waman Raghunath Kulkarni of Sangawisurya Taluka Parner.

ORDER

The Nazir, Civil Court Parner, is appointed Administrator of the property under S. 10 of the Bombay Regulation VIII of 1827".

On the same day, he also issued an order directing the Nazir, Civil Court, Parner to take possession of the two lands mentioned above as the Administrator appointed by him under Section 10 of Regulation VIII of 1827.

3. Coming to know of this order on December 7, 1962, the plaintiffs made an application for review of the order before the District Judge and the said review application is still pending. On that review application, the District Judge ordered stay of the recovery of possession and I am told that the plaintiffs are still in possession of the lands in dispute. The plaintiffs also gave a notice under S. 80 of the Civil Procedure Code to the Collector of Ahmednagar and to the Nazir of the suit which they intended to file challenging the validity of the order dated November 16, 1962 passed by the District Judge. In the said notice they contended that they were in possession of the lands from the time of their forefathers for over 60 to 70 years and that they had paid the assessment every year and enjoyed the land as owners openly and without any obstruction from anybody for many years. They further stated that their names were shown as tenants of the lands and the name of Waman Raghunath Kulkarni was shown as occupant, but they did not know who Waman Raghunath Kulkarni was and his whereabouts or even whether he was living or dead. They, therefore, contended that the entry in the record of rights showing Waman Raghunath Kulkarni as occupant was a bogus entry and the village officer failed to delete it although in an enquiry made by the District Deputy Collector in the year 1945, the village officer was directed to delete the name of Waman Raghunath Kulkarni and enter the names of the plaintiffs. It was also stated in the notice that the conditions precedent mentioned in Sections 9 and 10 of the Bombay Regulation VIII of 1827 did not exist in the case at the date of the order of the appointment of the Administrator and hence the District Judge had no jurisdiction to appoint an Administrator because the properties were already in the actual possession of the plaintiffs.

4. On the basis of the said notice, the plaintiffs filed on March 6, 1963 a suit in the Court of the Civil Judge, Junior Division against the State of Maharashtra respondent No. 1 and one J. S. Jagtap, Administrator and Nazir and Clerk of the Court, Parner, respondent No. 2. On January 3, 1964, the Civil Judge, Junior Division Parner returned the plaint for presentation to the proper Court and the plaintiffs filed on January 4, 1964 the said plaint in the Court of the Civil Judge Senior Division, Ahmednagar at Ahmednagar where it was registered as regular civil suit No. 10 of 1964. In the said suit the plaintiffs prayed for a declaration that the order passed by the District Judge, Ahmednagar in Intestate Case No. 2 of 1962 was illegal, ultra vires and void and that, therefore, no person should try to recover possession of the land from the plaintiffs and the plaintiffs also prayed for an injunction restraining the defendants from taking possession of the land or interfering with the possession of the land by the plaintiffs.

5. Respondent No. 1, State of Maharashtra, resisted the suit by filing written statement Ex. 20 contending that it was not true that the plaintiffs were in possession of the lands for over 60 or 70 years as owners. They were in possession as tenants, but the fact was that the plaintiffs were in possession as tenants of Waman Raghunath till 1943-44 and after his death, they surreptitiously got their names entered in the record of rights as cultivating the lands as owners in 1944-45 though Waman Raghunath died intestate without any heirs sometime in 1943-44 and hence the lands escheated to the State Government. Defendant No. 1 further contended that the entry of the year 1944-45 showing the plaintiffs as owners did not give the plaintiffs any better title to the lands and hence the Taluka Magistrate made a report to the District Judge in accordance with the facts as observed by him and the District Judge in his turn appointed defendant No. 2 as Administrator in accordance with law and hence the plaintiffs' suit liable to be dismissed with costs. Defendant No. 2 filed a Purshis at Ex. 22 adopting the written statement of defendant No. 1.

6. On the evidence, the Civil Judge, Senior Division, Ahmednagar held that the plaintiffs proved that they were the owners of the suit lands as the plaintiffs and their ancestors were in continuous possession of the land for over 60 or 70 years without paying rent to anybody. He regarded the entries in the name of Waman Raghunath as hollow and held that there was sufficient reason in the case to believe that the plaintiffs were cultivating the lands as owners for over 60 or 70 years. He also held that there was no evidence to show existence of any person by the name Waman Raghunath Kulkarni. He, therefore, declared that the appointment of defendant No. 2 as the Administrator of the suit lands was not legal and restrained the defendants from recovering possession of the suit lands from the plaintiffs.

7. The defendants filed an appeal in the District Court at Ahmednagar. The learned District Judge allowed the appeal, set aside the decree passed by the trial court and dismissed the suit with costs. He held that the plaintiffs failed to prove their title to the suit lands and their possession for over 60 years as owners thereof, observing as follows:

"The onus lay on the plaintiffs to prove their subsisting title to the suit lands by lawful origin. They did not allege in the plaint that they acquired title to the lands by adverse possession for more than 12 years against the rightful owner Waman Raghunath Kulkarni and in absence of a pleading of adverse possession we will have to restrict ourselves to the plaintiffs' case of their title by lawful origin and their case of continuous possession for the last 60 years as owners. They did not produce any title deed to show that they or their predecessors-in-title purchased the suit lands or got them in partition. At no point of time they or their predecessors-in-title were shown as owners or Kabjedars in Record of Rights. On the other hand Waman Raghunath Kulkarni and his predecessors-in-title were continuously shown as Kabjedars in Record of Rights. But these entries which had presumptive evidentiary value were ignored by the trial court, on the excuse that the Government did not prove that a person named Waman Raghunath Kulkarni at all existed. The plaintiffs did not allege in the plaint that Waman Raghunath Kulkarni was an imaginary person or that such a person was never born and it was not their case that the entry in the name of Waman Raghunath Kulkarni in Record of Rights was in the name of fictitious person". The learned District Judge relying on the various entries in the record of rights held:

"Defendants proved beyond doubt that the lands were owned by Waman Raghunath and that the plaintiffs cultivated them as his tenants at least till his death in about 1945."

He further held that the mere fact that the plaintiffs had not paid any rent to Waman Raghunath was not sufficient to hold that the plaintiffs cultivated the lands as owners; and the fact that the plaintiffs had paid assessments of lands for some years was not sufficient to confer ownership on the plaintiffs, particularly because it appeared from some of the entries in Exs. 8 and 43 that they paid these assessments under the terms of the lease. In view of these findings, the learned District Judge concluded that the action taken under Section 10 of the Bombay Regulation VIII of 1827 by the Taluka Magistrate was proper and the order appointing defendant No. 2 as the Administrator was also legal and proper, observing:

"After the District Judge passed an order it was for the plaintiffs to put forth their claim for enabling the District Judge to decide it; but instead of doing so they made a review application. In fact there was no question of any review. Had the plaintiffs proved their claim before the District Judge, the order appointing defendant No. 2 as administrator would have been vacated. Such an order did not decide the question of title and it was for the plaintiffs to get their title established in a Civil Court".

He was, therefore, of the view that the proper remedy for the plaintiffs was to file a suit for the declaration of their title to the land and not a suit for a declaration that the order passed by the District Judge was illegal.

8. Feeling aggrieved by the said judgment and decree passed by the District Judge the plaintiffs have filed the present second appeal. It is patent that both the Courts below have not considered the proper law applicable to the facts of the case. The general law for the appointment of administrators and managers of intestate properties is contained in Chapter II of Bombay Regulation of 1827. The relevant provision in that Regulation is contained in Section 10 which is as under:

"10: First: Whenever any person dies intestate, and without known heirs, having property, the Judge, within whose jurisdiction the property is, shall appoint an administrator for the management thereof, and shall issue a proclamation in the form contained in Appendix C, calling upon the heir of the deceased or any person entitled to receive charge of the property, to attend and prefer his claim.

Second: The proclamation shall be published, and if the deceased was a resident of any district or country without the limits of the Court's jurisdiction, and the property is of the value of rupees one thousand (1,000) or upwards, the proclamation shall also be published in the Official Gazette.

Third: If any person appears and satisfies the Judge of his right to the possession of the property or any part of it as heir, executor, administrator or otherwise, it shall be delivered up to him, after deducting the necessary expenses of management.

Fourth: But, if no person appears and establishes his right, the Judge, on the 31st December next after the completion of twelve months from the appointment of the administrator, shall make a report of the circumstances of the case to the Sadar Diwani Adalat, accompanied by an inventory and valuation of the property; and it shall be lawful for the Sadar Diwani Adalat either to direct the property to continue for a further period under the management of the administrator, or to be sold by him under the authority of the court, and the proceeds to be deposited in the public treasury for the eventual benefit of all concerned."

The Regulation, therefore, requires in the first instance an administrator to be appointed and a proclamation to be issued. Thereafter the District Judge must hear objections, if any; and then, after waiting for a period of 12 months ending with 31st December, he must make a report to the Sadar Diwani Adalat which is now the High Court.

9. It does not appear anywhere on the record of this case that the proclamation was issued as required by Section 10 or published in the gazette. The District Judge appears to have merely acted on the report sent by the revenue authorities without applying his mind to the legal requirements of Section 10 and the procedure to be followed thereunder which is laid down in paragraph 264 at page 88 and paragraph 267 at page 89 of Volume I of the Civil Manual issued by the High Court of Judicature, Bombay which run as under:

"264: When an administrator is appointed under Section 10 of Regulation VIII of 1827, a proclamation in the Form contained in Appendix C of the said Regulation shall be prepared by the Nazir and issued under the signature and seal of the Judge.

267: Whenever any Magistrate is of opinion that property of intestates without known heirs should be sent to the District Court he should report direct to the Judge, in the form prescribed below in this Chapter, who in the event of his concurring with the Magistrate, will order the Nazir at once to take possession, or, in the event of his differing, will direct the property to be returned, or left with the party having original possession. (See also Section 84 of Bombay Act VII of 1951)".

10. In the present case, no proclamation has been issued as required by these provisions and yet, the administrator has been called upon to take possession. It is surprising that the village officer who made the original report has not cared to refer to the claim of the plaintiffs who were in possession of these lands and whose possession as tenants was shown in the record of rights entries. If the village officer had reported about these facts, the District Judge would not have proceeded to pass the order appointing an administrator without giving a notice to the plaintiffs.

11. Apart from these defects in the procedure preceding the order passed by the District Judge, I find that the District Judge who passed the impugned order as well as both the Courts in this case have ignored the proper principles of Hindu Law applicable to the case. Waman Raghunath being a Hindu dying without any known heirs or presumed to be dead without leaving any known heirs, defendant No. 1, the State of Maharashtra, would undoubtedly take his properties by escheat under the rules of the Hindu Law as they existed prior to the Hindu Succession Act if he died before June 17, 1956. If he died thereafter, the Government would take the property under Section 29 of the Hindu Succession Act which is as under:—

29: "If an intestate has left no heir, heir qualified to succeed to his or her property in accordance with the provisions of this Act, such property shall devolve on the Government, and the Government shall take the property subject to all the obligations and liabilities to which an heir would have become subject".

The heirs would in the present case take subject to the provisions of the Bombay Tenancy and Agricultural Lands Act, 1948 whatever be the date of death of Waman because the plaintiffs are now held to be in possession of the said lands continuously as tenants of the said lands. These aspects are not at all considered by the District Judge when ordering the administrator to take possession of the said lands. The right of the Government under Section 29 of the Hindu Succession Act or under the general law prior to the Hindu Succession Act is not higher than that of an heir who can inherit the estate, subject to the liabilities and obligations of the heirs.

12. Apart from this, there is something more fatal to the order passed by the District Judge in Parner Intestate Case No. 2 of 1962 because Waman Reghunath Kulkarni whether to be treated as dead or presumed to be dead, had merely occupancy rights in the said lands. Section 72 of the Bombay Land Revenue Code 1879 lays down as follows:

72: "If an occupant who is either a Hindu, a Mahomedan, or a Buddhist dies intestate and without known heirs, the Collector shall dispose of his occupancy by sale, subject to the provisions of this Act or of any other law at the time in force for the sale of forfeited occupancies in realization of the land revenue, and the law at the time in force concerning property left by Hindus, Mahomedans or Buddhists, dying intestate and without known heirs shall not be deemed to apply to the said occupancy but only to the proceeds of such sale after deducting all arrears of land revenue due by the deceased to the Government and all expenses of the said sale".

This section was enacted in the Land Revenue Code to enable the Collector to dispose of the occupancy of an occupant dying intestate and to stay the operation of the general law regarding the property left by persons dying intestate until the occupancy was sold and arrears due to Government secured. The effect of the section is that the occupancy rights in agricultural lands of a Hindu, Mahomedan or Buddhist who dies intestate and without known heirs instead of being managed and eventually sold by the administrator appointed by the District Court is sold by the Collector; and the net proceeds are made over by the latter to the administrator for credit to the deceased's estate. In short, the intention is to prevent the occupancy of persons dying intestate coming under the management of the District Court's administrator.

13. In my judgment, this section being a provision contained in a special legislation overrides the general provisions of law contained in Section 10 of the Bombay Regulation VIII of 1827. All that the Collector can sell under S. 72, however, is the right, title and interest of the deceased occupant and the subordinate rights are not affected by such a sale. The right, title and interest of the deceased must be sold by the Collector for what it will fetch. The Collector takes the place of the Administrator appointed by the District Court under Regulation VIII and now the Collector's duty is to realise by the sale of the deceased's right, title and interest whatever he can for securing land revenue and for the benefit of the estate.

14. When an occupant dies without heirs, his occupancy does not lapse or become forfeited or liable to resumption by Government but the case is provided for in the Land Revenue Code by provisions of Section 34 of the Maharashtra Land Revenue Code, 1966 which, of course, will not be applicable to the facts of the present case but which provides that the Collector shall take possession of the occupancy rights and may lease it for a period of one year at a time. The section in the new Act gives a power to the Collector to keep any claimant in possession of the occupancy. In view of these provisions under the Land Revenue Code, it is clear that the revenue authorities erred in reporting the intestacy in respect of the occupancy rights in the suit lands under Section 10 of the Bombay Regulation VIII of 1827 to the District Judge and the District Judge acted without jurisdiction in passing an order appointing an administrator.

15. As stated above, the review application filed by the plaintiffs is still pending before the District Judge and he may, therefore, return the report to the Collector for taking proper action under the Land Revenue Code and the provisions of the Bombay Tenancy and Agricultural Lands Act.

16. In the result, the decrees passed by both the courts are set aside and it is hereby declared that the orders passed on November 16, 1962 in Parner Intestate Case No. 2 of 1962 are null and void and it is also ordered that the defendant shall be restrained from recovering possession of the suit land from the plaintiffs under the said orders. As the grounds on which this appeal is decided are grounds not urged in the lower courts, there shall be no order as to costs. Appeal allowed.

Appeal allowed.

AIR 1970 BOMBAY 209 (V 57 C 36)

PATEL AND MADAN JJ.

M/s. Garment Cleaning Works, Petitioners v. D. M. Aney and another, Opponents.

Spl. Civil Appln. No. 1325 of 1968, D/- 3-3-1969.

Industrial Disputes Act (1947), Sections 19, 2 (p) — Pendency of industrial dispute — Settlement can be arrived at between employer and employee — Award based on such settlement will operate for such period as is agreed upon.

A settlement can be arrived at between the employer and the employees in a pending industrial dispute. Merely because a settlement is arrived at after an industrial dispute is referred to the Tribunal it does not and cannot cease to be a settlement within the meaning of S. 2(p). Even though a dispute is referred to the Industrial Tribunal, the Tribunal cannot refuse to accept the settlement made by the parties. There is no provision in the Act of 1947 which gives power to the Industrial Tribunal to veto the settlement arrived at between the parties not even similar to one under Order 23 Rule 3 Civil Procedure Code in respect of compromises.

KM/KM/F74/69/YPB/M

(Paras 7, 10)

An award is normally effective and will continue to be in operation for a period of one year, unless its operation is extended by the Government under the second proviso to sub-section (3) of S. 19. Settlement as such stands on a different footing and operates for the period agreed upon between the parties and it is common sense to suggest that that should be so even if there is an award in terms thereof. Section 19(3) which contemplates operation of an award for a period of one year is made subject to the provisions of sub-section (2) of Section 19 which says that a settlement is binding for such period as is agreed upon by the parties. An award based on a settlement must, therefore, operate as provided by sub-section (2) of Section 19 of the Act.

(Paras 6, 7)

Cases Referred: Chronological Paras
(1966) (1966) 1 Lab LJ 250 (Bom).

Ghatge and Patil Co. Employees' Union v. K. R. Powar 5

M. V. Bhatt and H. H. Madon, for Petitioners; D. S. Nargolkar with J. G. Gadkari, for Opponent No. 2.

PATEL J.: By this petition the petitioner seeks to challenge the decision of the Industrial Tribunal given on a preliminary objection in an industrial reference. The short facts leading to this reference are as follows:

2. The petitioner is doing laundry business in partnership. It employs about eight hundred workers in different departments and different branches. An industrial dispute was raised by a section of the workers regarding the scales of pay, classification, dearness allowance etc. and the said dispute was referred to the Industrial Tribunal in Reference (IT) No. 195 of 1962. A similar dispute was raised by other section of the workers of the said firm and it was referred to the Tribunal in Reference (IT) No. 12 of 1963. At this time the Union which took up the cause of the workers was the Laundry Mazdoor Sabha. Thereafter, another Union sprang up called the Bombay General Employees Association. This Association made applications for making it a party to the References. Accordingly, this Association also was made a party to the said References. The usual procedure in the Reference was followed. No other worker or Union appeared during the conduct of the References. Thereafter settlements were arrived at in both the References between the petitioner and the Unions. The settlements were signed by the employer and the representative of each of the Unions in each of the References. They also appear to have been signed by the counsel for the workmen as shown by the annexures to the present petition. By these settlements all matters which were then pending before the Tribunal including some others were settled. The settlements were filed on October 22, 1964. The Tribunal after stating the demands etc. made the following order by paragraph 4 of its award dated November 2, 1964 in Reference No. 195 of 1962:

"In the result I make an award in terms of the settlement marked as Annexure 'P', so far as it relates to the subject matter of the Reference."

Similarly, in the other Reference after reciting the demands the Tribunal says:

"At the stage of the hearing there has been a settlement between the parties and accordingly they have submitted an agreement. I accept the same."

In the result I make an award in terms of the agreement marked as Annexure 'K'."

To both these awards the agreements were annexed as required by law. The awards and the annexures were then forwarded to the State Government.

3. The present Union, respondent No. 2, which came on the scene later, by its notices terminated the first award on February 14, 1966 and the second award on May 22, 1966. Thereafter, it submitted fresh demands on October 5, 1966. These demands related to dearness allowance and increase in piece rate payment with retrospective effect. This dispute was referred to the Industrial Tribunal by Reference (IT) No. 306 of 1967.

4. The petitioner raised a preliminary objection that the settlements entered into between the parties and which became the subject-matter of the awards are binding for the periods stated in the settlements and they cannot be reopened under the Industrial Disputes Act, 1947. The Tribunal decided this contention as a preliminary objection and answered it against the petitioner on the ground that an award binds the parties only for a year. The petitioner now comes to this Court.

5. The relevant sections in this connection of the Industrial Disputes Act 1947 (hereinafter referred to as the Act) are as below:

"2 (b):— 'Settlement' means a settlement arrived at in the course of conciliation proceeding and includes a written agreement between the employer and workmen arrived at otherwise than in the course of conciliation proceeding where such agreement has been signed by parties thereto in such manner as may be prescribed and a copy thereof has been sent to an officer authorised in this behalf by the appropriate Government and the conciliation officer.

18(1) A settlement arrived at by agreement between the employer and workman otherwise than in the course of conciliation proceeding shall be binding on the parties to the agreement."

Sub-section (2) of Section 18 refers to the binding nature of an arbitration award. Sub-section (3) reads as follows:

"A settlement arrived at in the course of conciliation proceedings under this Act or an arbitration award in a case where a notification has been issued under sub-section (3A) of Section 10A or an award of a Labour Court, Tribunal or National Tribunal which has become enforceable shall be binding on

(a) all parties to the industrial dispute;
(b) all other parties summoned to appear in the proceedings as parties to the dispute, unless the Board, Arbitrator, Labour Court, Tribunal or National Tribunal, as the case may be, records the opinion, that they were so summoned without proper cause;

(c) Where a party referred to in clause (a) or clause (b) is an employer, his heirs, successors or assigns in respect of the establishment to which the dispute relates;

(d) where a party referred to in clause (a) or clause (b) is composed of workmen, all persons who were employed in the establishment or part of the establishment, as the case may be, to which the dispute relates on the date of the dispute and all persons who subsequently become employed in that establishment or part." Section 19 of the said Act reads as follows:

